

Apr 12 '62

SAN FRANCISCO
PUBLIC LIBRARY

REFERENCE BOOK

Not to be taken from the Library

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

FIFTIETH ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1954 TO FEBRUARY 1955 INCLUSIVE

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES
AND DOROTHY BROWN

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

1955

Published 1955
Printed in the United States of America

Library of Congress Catalog Card No. (6-24490)

*51
B64⁵⁰ c

839436 ✓

PERIODICAL
DEPARTMENT

SAN FRANCISCO
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

- Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist $9. American Anthropological Association, Box 71, Andover, Mass.
- Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $10. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Am Econ R—American Economic Review. Bernard F. Haley, managing ed. $6. American Economic Assn, 450 Ahnaip St, Menasha, Wis.
- Am Hist R—American Historical Review. Boyd C. Shafer, managing ed. $7.50; free to members of the American Historical Assn. Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York 11
- Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. Abel Wolman, ed. $10. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York 19
- Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. Everett C. Hughes, ed. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Taylor Cole, managing ed. $10; free to members. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Ahnaip St, Menasha, Wis.
- Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $6 (membership dues including subscription $10) American Sociological Society, 372-374 Broadway, Albany, N.Y.
- Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Thorsten Sellin, ed. $6; to members $1.25. American Academy of Political and Social Science, 3817 Spruce St, Philadelphia 4
- Atlantic—Atlantic Monthly. $6. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston 16
- Booklist—Booklist. $6. American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11
- Bookmark—Bookmark. $1. New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany 1
- Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. $5. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 36 Yonge St, Toronto 1
- Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $4. University of Toronto Press, Toronto 5
- Cath World—Catholic World. John B. Sheerin, ed. $5. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 411 W 59th St, New York 19
- Chem & Eng N—Chemical and Engineering News. $6. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Chem Eng—Chemical Engineering with Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co. Inc. 330 W. 42d St, New York 36
- Chicago Sunday Tribune—Chicago Sunday Tribune, Chicago, Ill.
- Christian Century—Christian Century. Paul Hutchinson, ed. $6.50. Christian Century Foundation, 407 S Dearborn St, Chicago 5
- Christian Science Monitor (International daily) Christian Science Monitor. $16. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston 15
- Commonweal—Commonweal. Edward S. Skillin, ed. $7.50. Commonweal Pub. Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York 16
- Current Hist—Current History. D. G. Redmond, ed. $6. Events Pub. Co, Inc, 108-10 Walnut St, Philadelphia 6
- El School J—Elementary School Journal. $4.50. Dept. of Education Publications, University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $6. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York 36
- Ethics—Ethics. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, ed. $6. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 58 E 68th St, New York 21
- Geog R—Geographical Review. $7.50. American Geographical Society, Broadway at 156th St, New York 32
- Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London WC 1 ($3.50. Leroy Phillips, 569 Boylston st, Boston 16)
- Horn Bk—Horn Book. Jennie D. Lindquist, ed. $4. Horn Book, Inc, 585 Boylston St, Boston 16
- J Geol—Journal of Geology. $7. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. Mary Hawkins, ed. $6. American Home Economics Assn, 1600 Twentieth st, N.W. Washington, D.C. 9
- J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $5.25. Journal of Philosophy, Inc, 515 W 118th St, New York 27
- J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. Albert Rees, and others, eds. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- J Religion—Journal of Religion. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Kirkus—Bulletin from Virginia Kirkus' Bookshop Service. Service basis, 38 Bank St, New York
- Library J—Library Journal. Helen E. Wessells, ed. $7. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York 36
- Library Q—Library Quarterly. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Management R—Management Review. M. J. Doohar, ed. $6. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York 36
- Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 91s. Manchester Guardian and Evening News, Ltd, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 53 East 51st St, New York 22
- Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Music Lib. Assn. Notes—Music Library Association Notes. Richard S. Hill, ed. $5; free to members. Music Library Association, Inc., c/o Music Division, Library of Congress, Washington 25, D.C.
- Nation—Nation. Freda Kirchwey, ed. $7. Nation Company, 333 Sixth Av, New York 14
- New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. H. Brown, Hubbard Hall, Brunswick, Me.
- New Repub—New Republic. Michael Straight, ed. $7. 1826 Jefferson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D.C.
- New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 32s 6d New Statesman & Nation pub. co. 10 Great Turnstile, High Holborn, London, WC 1 ($7.50 British Pub. Inc, 30 E. 60th St, New York 32, N.Y.)

- N Y Herald Tribune Bk R—New York Herald Tribune Book Review. $2.50. N Y Herald Tribune, Inc. Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York 36
- N Y New Tech Bks—New Technical Books. $1.50 N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, New York
- N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $3. N Y Times Co, Pub, 229 W 43d St, New York 18
- New Yorker—New Yorker. $7. The New Yorker Magazine, Inc. 25 W 43d St, New York 36
- Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs. $4. Institute of Pacific Relations, 1 East 54th St, New York 22
- Poetry—Poetry. $5. University of Chicago press, 5750 Ellis av, Chicago 37
- Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. Dumas Malone, managing ed. $6; free to members. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York 27
- San Francisco Chronicle—San Francisco Chronicle. Scott Newhall, ed. $24. Chronicle Pub Co, 901 Mission St, San Francisco 19
- Sat R—Saturday Review. $7. Saturday Review Associates, Inc, 25 W. 45th St, New York 36
- School & Society—School and Society. $6. Society for the Advancement of Education, Inc, 1834 Broadway, New York 23, N.Y.
- School Arts—School Arts. $5. The Davis Press, Inc, Worcester 8, Mass.
- School R—School Review. Harold A. Anderson and others, eds. $4.50. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Social Educ—Social Education. L. P. Todd, ed. $4. National Council for Social Studies, 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Social Forces—Social Forces. $5. University of North Carolina press, c/o Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore 2
- Social Studies—Social Studies. Leonard B. Irwin, ed. $3.50. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia
- Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $7. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York 3
- Spec—Spectator. 30s. The Spectator, Ltd, 99 Gower St, London, WC 1 ($7. International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)
- Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $5. Republican pub. co, 32 Cypress St, Springfield, Mass.
- Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin. $3 American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11
- Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. $5. John D. MacArthur, ed. National Theatre Arts Council, 1421 E. Main St, Saint Charles, Ill.
- Time—Time. $6. Time, Inc, 540 N. Michigan Av, Chicago 11
- Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement. 19s 6d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 640 Fifth Av, New York 19
- U S Quarterly Bk R—United States Quarterly Book Review. Joseph P. Blickensderfer, ed. $3.75. Published for the Library of Congress by The Swallow Press, Denver 10, Colorado
- Wis Lib Bul—Wisconsin Library Bulletin. $1. Wisconsin Library Bulletin, Madison, Wis.
- Yale R n s—Yale Review. Paul Pickrel, managing ed. $3.50. Yale Review, 28 Hillhouse Ave, New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Publishers' Weekly; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to a date and the last figure to the number of words in the review.

Beginning with the issue of March 1952, non-fiction titles are classified according to the standard (15th) edition of the Dewey decimal classification. When this number differs (except in length) from that used in the 14th edition, the latter is given in brackets, e.g. Baily. Gilbert and Sullivan book. 782.1 [782.6]

Publishers' Directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers March 1954—February 1955

ABBOTT, ROBERT TUCKER. American sea-shells; with il. by Frederick M. Bayer. 541p $12.50 Van Nostrand

594 Mollusks. Shells 54-5780

Descriptions, histories, and biological facts about some 1,500 varieties of seashells found in the shallow waters of the Caribbean, the Atlantic, and the Pacific oceans near North and South America. The author is associate curator of the Division of Mollusks at the Smithsonian Institute. Indexes.

Booklist 50:393 Je 15 '54

"Well worth its cost."

+ Bookmark 14:29 N '54 30w

Reviewed by J. T. McCutcheon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 23 '54 150w

Kirkus 22:286 Ap 15 '54 270w

"An authoritative and well-illustrated book."

+ Library J 79:913 My 15 '54 20w

"In addition to a systematic account of American seashells, there are many drawings, photographs and twenty four full-page color plates. A comprehensive bibliography lists references for further reading and study. Recommended for all reference collections." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1228 Je 15 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 23 '54 50w

"R. Tucker Abbott, Associate Curator of Mollusks, United States National Museum, has spent a good part of his professional life answering the questions fired at him by baffled shell collectors. He has learned what the collector's problems are and has set out to solve them in this large, encyclopedic volume. . . The 300-odd line drawings are superb and the color plates and half-tones—the work of Frederick M. Bayer, also of the United States National Museum—are probably the best shell pictures to be published since Rutherford Platt's memorable pictures appeared in 1949 in The National Geographic." James Poling

+ N Y Times p15 My 30 '54 230w

ABERNETHY, THOMAS PERKINS. Burr conspiracy. 301p $6 Oxford

973.48 Burr, Aaron. U.S.—History—Constitutional period, 1789-1809 54-6907

A history of the conspiracy spearheaded by Aaron Burr, which attempted to separate the western part of the United States from the eastern. The plans were made in the winter of 1806. Bibliography. No index.

"This last word on one of the great dramas in our history would have been vastly improved with the inclusion of a few maps and perhaps with a summary of previous findings in the controversy. But until new evidence is discovered, which seems unlikely, the spinners of theories regarding the great American mystery must turn to Abernethy's competent and scholarly volume for the facts which mark their point of departure." J. W. Silver

+ — Am Hist R 60:127 O '54 700w

Reviewed by R. J. Graf

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 1 '54 280w

"Mr. Abernethy has set himself an illusive labor of research in trailing Aaron Burr through all the tangle of plots and intrigues that, he maintains, brought the half-fledged American Union to the brink of premature dissolution. Burr was a past master at covering up his tracks. The deeper one burrows into his subterranean movements the more confusing become their ramifications. However, it is not Burr and his 'conspiracy' that are the real interest of this work, but rather the light that is thrown upon the America of Louisiana Purchase days. Mr. Abernethy is able to show in graphic detail the full impact of that quick, million-square-mile deal upon the modest seaboard community." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 27 '54 600w

Current Hist 27:64 Jl '54 130w

"Mr. Abernethy's fresh and independent investigation of Burr's doings and intentions between 1804 and 1806 has long been known to be under way, and its appearance at this moment when the United States is being surfeited with the spectacle of political investigations in which charges of treason are loosely bandied about is more than appropriate." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 30 '54 950w

"Some of the most damning documents, those from the Spanish and British archives, were not available to the United States Government at the time of Burr's trial at Richmond before Chief Justice Marshall. Most of the evidence was previously known to scholars, but no one before Mr. Abernethy has walked so sure-footed through the tangled maze of plots, intrigues and double-dealing that marked every wakeful moment in the busy lives of Burr and his accomplices." R. B. Morris

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 25 '54 1000w

"Mr. Abernethy has joined himself with those who believe in Burr's treasonable designs, though he admits that the evidence is to a large extent unclear, susceptible of differing interpretations, and that much of it cannot be taken at face value. . . The author has diligently collected all the known facts and set them forth in as reasonably continuous a story as their complexity admits. He has, however, not taken sufficient pains to separate those which can be termed first-hand evidence and those which have little or no probative value. . . If the reader is diligent enough, however, to winnow fact from surmise or malice, by a close attention to the supporting footnotes, he has here spread before him enough material to come to his own conclusions, as the author intends, or to confess, as this reviewer is compelled to do, that the verdict of 'Not proven' which the Richmond jury ultimately brought in is still the only fair one." Nathan Schachner

Sat R 37:18 Jl 10 '54 800w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 90w

ABERNETHY, T. P.—Continued

"Professor Abernethy, perhaps in an effort to make his readers take the episode seriously, tells it in a concise and colorless prose that goes far towards making the whole thing seem as sordid as it doubtless was. Unfortunately the recital leaves the reader as puzzled as ever about the men involved in it... But if Professor Abernethy leaves us unsatisfied on this score, he has at least cut free from the partisan pleading which dominates most of the classic accounts of the episode. Though he makes no question of Burr's guilt, he gives us the record with ■ detachment that seldom falters and allows us to nourish as best we can, from the facts, our astonishment, indignation, or disgust." E. S. Morgan

+ — Yale ■ n s 44:150 autumn '54 480w

ABRAHAM, GERALD ERNEST HEAL, ed.
Handel; a symposium 328p $6 Oxford

780.81 Händel, Georg Friedrich 54-8770

Offers the views of eight critics on the life and works of Handel. "The book begins with a short chapter on 'Handel the Man,' by Percy M. Young. This is an impressionistic sketch rather than a condensed biography. It is followed by the richest chapter, that on 'The Operas,' by Edward J. Dent... Julian Herbage's chapter on 'The Oratorios' justly claims the greatest length... The other chapters include 'The Church Music' and 'The Orchestral Music,' by Basil Lam, 'The Songs and Chamber Cantatas,' by Anthony Lewis, 'The Keyboard Music,' by Kathleen Dale, and 'The Chamber Music,' by John Horton. More intrinsically interesting is Mr. Abraham's final chapter, his own brilliant discussion of 'Some Points of Style.'... The materials for a revival are all accurately described in William C. Smith's 'Catalogue of Works,' and the book is handsomely rounded off with ■ chronology, a bibliography, and an index." Sat R

"Gerald Abraham's latest compilation dealing with the works of individual composers continues the high standard he has set in his five earlier volumes... By far the most provocative essay in the book is the editor's contribution. This first-class style analysis of the composer's creative process discusses the use of borrowed materials from the composer's own works and those of others, the dramatic elements in the operas and oratorios, and his many contributions to the grammar of music—melodic, harmonic, rhythmic, and orchestral. Abraham's study serves also to unify the essays of the other contributors." J. M. Cooper-smith

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:461 Je '54 850w

"It is fair to lament that only students, avid record-collectors, and some adventurous choral societies really know Handel as other than the composer of 'Messiah,' the 'Water Musick,' the 'Largo' from 'Serse,' and the so-called 'Harmonious Blacksmith.' Gerald Abraham's symposium supplies stimulating accuracies and reasoned weighing of the huge repertoire of other music, now mostly unheard, which truly reveals Handel as a master musician of the very first rank... May this book fall into the right hands, those capable of casting a deciding vote for a Handel renaissance!" Herbert Wein-stock

+ Sat ■ 37:28 Ap 24 '54 800w

"The contribution which makes this book ■ necessity for all Handel-lovers is the last, the long-awaited catalogue of Handel's works by that doyen of Handel scholars, Mr. W. C. Smith, formerly of the British Museum. This life-time's work gives us badly needed information on publication, manuscripts, librettists and later editions. The catalogue is ■ masterly work, and the rare omissions of ■ Spanish song or ■ few harpsichord manuscripts cannot detract from the merit of compiling this hand-list from such puzzling and complicated material."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p119 F 19 '54 1500w

ABRAHAM, PETER. Tell freedom: memories of Africa. 370p $4 Knopf

B or 92

54-5266

An autobiography of a colored author describing his childhood and youth in the slums of Johannesburg.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:81 S '54 270w

Booklist 51:38 S 15 '54

"The astounding quality of Tell Freedom is the lack of bitterness of the author. Peter Abrahams, after enduring experiences that would make most of us hateful and venomous, emerges as a man full of compassion and warmth... Oddly, the very compassion in pain which ennobles his humanity weakens his art. For this is writing something less than great; it is a child talking, a child who has retained his innocence because he has allied himself with the dream phantasies of life; and the degree to which he curbs his tense indignation reduces his literary power." D. M. Friedenberg

+ — Commonweal 60:563 S 10 '54 900w

"A book that combines the emotional appeal of a Paton story with vivid, frank actuality, and sheds important light on Africa. To those who remember his Path of Thunder and Wild Conquest with keen delight, this will have special significance."

+ Kirkus 22:357 Je 1 '54 280w

"Recommended for all libraries." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:1394 Ag '54 90w

"The writing is strong and graceful; but perhaps Mr Abrahams relies too much on dialogue, which he can hardly have remembered verbatim, and which, however conscientiously reconstituted, gives an air of fiction to a book which has otherwise all the marks of the authentic." P. J. M.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 27 '54 320w

"Peter Abrahams' book, the story of his life until he left Africa to go to England, is a beautifully written, moving, revealing story. It adds an essential dimension to the African picture, for the African of color, either in the Union of South Africa or in the rest of the continent, rarely speaks with such forthrightness and literary talent." M. J. Herskovits

+ Nation 179:154 Ag 21 '54 550w

"Tell Freedom is an engaging book without a moment of weariness; yet it is not quite successful. The fictional integument is terribly thin, and that seems to have confused Mr. Abrahams. His distinctive quality is a lyrical treating of emotion." Giles Romilly

+ — New Statesman ■ Nation 47:808 Je 19 '54 260w

"To the rapidly growing literature that aims to describe and interpret South Africa, Peter Abrahams contributes a book of permanent value." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p1 Ag 8 '54 700w

"How Peter managed to get [to England] is his own dramatic story. What he took with him, what allowed him not to fear for his future, was the talent that went to make this moving and beautiful book, a talent shaped by one of the three priests who 'whenever I used big words or made clumsy and almost meaningless sentences, sent me to the Bible. Read the Bible if you want to see how good English should be written.' 'I read the Bible,' says Peter Abrahams, 'and I saw.' In 'Tell Freedom' there is not one big word, not one clumsy sentence." James Stern

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 8 '54 1050w

New Yorker 30:153 S 11 '54 120w

"Not since Paton's 'Cry the Beloved Country' has there been such an enormous and detailed range of discriminating reporting as in this book." Roi Otley

+ Sat ■ 37:10 Ag 14 '54 500w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 350w

ABRAHAM, WILLIAM MILLER. Imperial waltz. 308p $3.50 Dial press

Elizabeth, consort of Francis Joseph I, emperor of Austria—Fiction 54-7125

A romantic novel based on the early life of the Empress Elizabeth of Austria. It begins with Elizabeth as an innocent young Bavarian princess; covers the early years of marriage to Franz Joseph; the interlude with Count Andrássy; and closes with her determination to aid in the re-establishment of an independent Hungary.

Booklist 50:400 Je 15 '54

"The author develops contrasting themes of sudden brilliancy in beauty alongside the gradualness of decay, and succeeds in making believable the altruistic devotion of Franz Joseph to his empress, along with his profane turning to an alluring mistress for consolation." Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 4 '54 360w

"Mr. Abrahams, who is excellent in describing occasions of state, in painting costumes and customs, is rather pedestrian in the projection of the subjective. Yet the novel remains an interesting one—a tribute to the intrinsic fascination of the theme and Mr. Abrahams' ability to document, though not to dramatize, it with colorful conviction." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 1 '54 550w

"Mr. Abrahams' Elizabeth is a heroine in the hearts-and-flowers tradition. But she does keep opening windows to let in fresh air." A. F. Wolfe

N Y Times p24 Je 6 '54 270w

"Mr. Abrahams investigated and documented all evidence around his Empress, but he keeps it in the background. He writes prose about a beautiful woman in the sense that a poet writes poetry about her. His story is a triumph of love in more than the baroque manner." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 15 '54 420w

ABRAMS, MEYER HOWARD. Mirror and the lamp; romantic theory and the critical tradition. 406p $7.50 Oxford

801 Romanticism. English poetry—History and criticism 53-7616

"The major concern of this book is the English theory of poetry during the first four decades of the Nineteenth Century. The author's purpose or intention is 'to pose and answer questions in terms of the relation of art to the artist.' In order to do this, he organizes a frame of reference which consists of four elements: The artist's product; the artist himself; the relation of the product to nature or to what Mr. Abrams considers a better word, the universe, and finally, the effect of the product on the reader, listener or spectator. Moving from Aristotle to writers of the present day, Mr. Abrams analyzes the principles of romantic criticism against this framework." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

"No history of criticism with such analytical depth and acuteness as this one could be written without making some such sacrifices either to its historical or to its philosophical purposes. The book is so rich in thought that it is invaluable for students of the romantic movement and indeed of the whole theory of criticism. I regard it as one of the most distinguished achievements of American literary scholarship of our day." T. M. Raysor

+ Mod Philol 51:281 My '54 1150w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 O 18 '53 160w

"This is a perceptive and learned survey of the subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:416 D '53 240w

"For serious students of English romanticism, [this book] will be of special value. Professor Abrams' theme is adumbrated in the title of his masterly treatment of romantic theory and the critical tradition... Especially detailed and informative is the examination of the eighteenth-century background of romantic theory; and the study is carried far enough forward to include the modifications introduced by such early Victorians as Carlyle, Mill, and Keble. The handling of German influences seems rather less satisfactory." E. D. H. Johnson

+ — Yale R n s 43:298 winter '54 750w

ACEBES, HECTOR. Orinoco adventure; il. with photographs by the author. 281p $3.95 Doubleday

980 [918] Orinoco river and valley. South America—Description and travel 54-5367

"Hector Acebes had such an insatiable wanderlust that his parents permitted him to tramp the South American jungles alone at the age of 14 to get it out of his system. This only whetted the author's appetite for more treks which covered most of the ground reported in two recent books, Amazon Head Hunters and Tigreiro. The author's great contribution almost became a trip to the headwaters of the Orinoco which was interrupted by the interference of the local museum officials after he had started." Library J

Booklist 50:317 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 7 '54 270w

"As in all books dealing with primitive peoples, there are some distasteful moments in Mr. Acebes narrative. But his simple, unpretentious prose and good-humoured approach are soon bounding along to some new and less grim adventure. And his pictures are excellent documentaries of the little-known peoples and territory of Hidden America." R. M. Hallett

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 15 '54 500w

"Delightful raconteuring with features to draw the amateur anthropologist and the naturalist and adventure-minded stay-at-homes."

+ Kirkus 22:24 Ja 1 '54 240w

"This has some excellent pictures of local village and town life. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:200 F 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by E. P. Hanson

Sat R 37:21 Je 26 '54 240w

ACKERKNECHT, ERWIN HEINZ. Rudolf Virchow: doctor, statesman, anthropologist. 304p il $5 Univ. of Wis. press

B or 92 Virchow, Rudolf Ludwig Karl

53-12172

"Most of the readers of this Journal will recall from the days when they studied biology, the name of Rudolf Virchow as the founder of the science of cellular pathology. The anthropologists, who play an important part in formulating public health programs for undeveloped areas, remember his contributions to the science of anthropology. Even more significant to most of us, however, was his leadership in the field of sanitation. . . . As a member of the Prussian Parliament, from 1861 until his death in 1902, he led in the battle for sociological and sanitary reform. . . . All these aspects are discussed by Dr. Ackerknecht in his account of the life of one of the greatest leaders of that liberal German thought that illumined the last quarter of the nineteenth century." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliography. Index.

"As medical historian and anthropologist the author does not try to analyze speculatively either Virchow's character or his wide yet often forgotten influence: both are described factually and illustrated economically. Hence this biography is a model for all students in biological or social science, first on how courageously and co-operatively a great man works and, second, on how to write a difficult book so that it will be read." J. L. Angel

+ Am Anthropol 56:932 O '54 480w

ACKERKNECHT, E. H.—Continued

"This study of Rudolf Virchow is a contribution of unusual interest. . . The author has so skillfully portrayed each of the roles that Virchow played, in terms of the contemporary life of his time, that this volume constitutes a valuable contribution to the literature on modern European history." B. J. Olson

+ Am Hist R 60:178 O '54 140w

Reviewed by C.-E. A. Winslow

Am J Pub Health 44:114 Ja '54 200w

"Professor Ackerknecht comes from the same province in Germany as Virchow. . . Faced with the task of reducing Virchow to ordinary dimensions Professor Ackerknecht has wisely chosen to follow the dictum of Virchow himself, to wit: 'Brevity is the best guarantee for being read.' The actual text runs to 250 pages. Within these dimensions the author has very ably contrived to give something more than a birdseye view of the life and work of this astonishing man." Ashley Montagu

+ Sat R 37:37 Ja 9 '54 600w

"Dr. Ackerknecht's book is thoroughly, but unobtrusively, documented, and by its very nature and contents is geared to a variety of readers; it will be appreciated by all of Virchow's professional colleagues, by historians, and by all who wish to gain insight into the quality of greatness."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:1 Mr '54 240w

ACKERMAN, EDWARD AUGUSTUS. Japan's natural resources and their relation to Japan's economic future. 655p il $25 Univ. of Chicago press

333.7 Japan—Industries and resources. Natural resources 53-12889

"In this revision of a work originally done for the Natural Resources Section of SCAP, Professor Ackerman analyzes Japan's position in regard to food supply, energy sources, and raw materials, and makes suggestions for integrated resource management. Illustrated with many excellent photographs, maps and graphs." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 32:345 Ja '54 30w

"The book will certainly be of great value to all interested in the Japanese economy. The statistical tables, which embody a mass of figures concerning many branches of Japanese production, will be in themselves most welcome to Western students of Japan, while Mr. Ackerman's lucid exposition of the facts takes the reader easily through much intricate detail. . . The book is lavishly produced—with numerous excellent illustrations, maps and charts. But so it ought to be—for twenty-five dollars. This excessively high price may deprive many serious students of access to it, and that is a pity." G. C. Allen

+ Pacific Affairs 27:78 Mr '54 1000w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:206 Je '54 240w

ACKOFF, RUSSELL LINCOLN. Design of social research. 420p $7.50 Univ. of Chicago press

307.2 Social science research 53-12546

"According to Ackoff, 'in this book I have made an effort to provide a (not the) methodology of social research. That is, I have tried to raise to consciousness each type of decision that can arise in the course of research and suggest methods by which these decisions can be made and criteria by which these decisions can be evaluated' (p. vii). The book is based on a general point of view that scientific research consists of 'controlled inquiry' into problems involving choice between alternative courses of action." Am Soc R

"Ackoff's book is not the best of its kind, but it is one of the best, and anthropologists can consult it with profit." J. W. Bennett

+ — Am Anthropol 56:934 O '54 250w

"A number of points of inconsistency or lack of clarity occur. . . It is also unfortunate that the author has included some contributions of his own which would be more appropriate in a book on newly developed and specialized techniques than one on basic principles. . . In spite of such limitations, which are perhaps inevitable in any work that attempts to depart from the beaten trail, this book has made a notable contribution to bridging the gap between recently developed theories in mathematical-statistics and the numerous techniques conventionally used in social research without adequate theoretical or experimental evaluation." J. A. Jahn

+ — Am Soc R 19:633 O '54 900w

Reviewed by D. O. Price

Social Forces 33:91 O '54 480w

ADAMS, CHARLES STANHOPE. Hunting crows year round. 101p il $2.95 Macmillan (N Y)

799.24 Hunting. Crows 53-13340

Advice and tips on shooting wild crows in every season of the year, spring, summer, autumn, winter, with discussion on use of blinds and decoys. Based on the assumption that shooting crows is good sport—the crow a true game bird and ideal flying target.

Booklist 50:254 Mr 1 '54

"This is a refreshing, well written book that will help a novice to enjoy the pleasures of crow hunting." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 13 '53 130w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 78:2103 D 1 '53 30w

"There is nothing else quite like this sport, available to hunters, as the title indicates, all year. Adams provides enough hints to help anyone who is interested in getting an even break against one of nature's smartest birds." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 13 '53 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:67 Mr '54

ADAMS, CHARLOTTE. Easter idea book, 192p il $3.50 Barrows

394.268 Cookery. Handicraft 54-5375

Contains recipes for Lenten meals, for Easter Sunday breakfasts and dinners, and for parties for grown-ups and for children. The second half of the book contains ideas for Easter gifts—things to sew, crochet, paint, etc. again for both grown-ups and children.

Booklist 50:311 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 11 '54 20w

ADAMS, LEONIE (MRS WILLIAM TROY). Poems; a selection. 128p $3 Funk

811 54-6356

A selection from the author's earlier books of verse, with an added group of more recent poems.

Booklist 50:415 Jl 1 '54

"It is a work of modest proportions but one of high significance in the history of American letters." Wallace Fowlie

+ Commonweal 61:224 N 26 '54 2200w

"The selection emphasizes the late W. R. Benét's claim, that she is 'the finest metaphysical poet now writing in this country.'" G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 70w

"Miss Adams's poetry is a difficult labor. Intensely compact, intensely intellectualized, and rigorously ascetic, it comes true, but it does not come easy. The matter, as she writes in 'Sundown,' is sanctified, 'dipped in a gold stain.' It seems doubtful that there can be a wide audience for Miss Adams's gold stain, but that there will always be a group of discerning and enthusiastic readers seems certain." John Ciardi

+ Nation 178:445 My 22 '54 700w

"Leonie Adams writes a highly wrought, intensely finished mature poetry. It is something like some early Pre-Raphaelite verse, but it is most in my opinion, like Muslim poetry. That is, its tooling and refinement of texture is impeccable and elaborate at once, but for me, at least, it inhabits a remote emotional region that, with the best intentions in the world, I find it very difficult to discover, let alone reach. This is anti-modern poetry with a vengeance." Kenneth Rexroth

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 4 '54 300w

"The first half of the book savors of the bittersweet wisdom of maturity. The second, and by far the larger part, presents a selection from Miss Adams' two previous volumes; but since she has always been a severe and delicate poet, there is little here suggestive of youthful work. . . The sensitivity is apparent in her delineation of the finest shades of feeling, whether in response to the natural scene, to a relationship with others, or to the private drama of the self." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Times p6 My 30 '54 500w

"Miss Adams, like Miss Moore, has affiliations with poetry of high periods of the past; in her case the tie between Jacobean drama and seventeenth-century English lyricism is close. She has moments of cousinship with Webster and Tourneur, with Vaughan and Traherne, and her later poetry is so charged with meaning that it sometimes slips out of syntax, in the manner of the later Mallarmé. . . Poems such as 'Companions of the Morass,' 'For Harvest,' 'Grapes Making,' and 'The Runner with the Lots' spring from and are indications of a poetic endowment as deep as it is rare." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 30:75 S 4 '54 280w

"Miss Adams has been called the 'poet of light' and her light is of the heart. Her poetry is more delicate than Miss Bogan's, though it still is much tougher than that of the English Romantics with whom she is identified on the dustcover of this collection. In a sense she is a stricter writer than Miss Bogan, for she really does not let much of her own emotion show through the voices she uses. Yet the balance of her poetry is heavily on the side of the heart." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 18 '54 90w

"There are, indeed, poems in the volume that stir and satisfy me. But in many other poems her evenness of tone verges, for me, upon monotony; her ideas and images melt into one another without leaving traces in my memory, and the effect of her lines is gently soporific." B. R. R.

+ — Sat ■ 37:26 J1 3 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. L. Martz

Yale R n s 44:305 winter '55 260w

ADAMS, RAMON FREDERICK. Six-guns and saddle leather; a bibliography of books and pamphlets on Western outlaws and gunmen. 426p $12.50 Univ. of Okla. press

016.36414 Outlaws—Bibliography. Crime and criminals—Bibliography. Frontier and pioneer life—West—Bibliography 54-5939

"Bibliography of books and pamphlets on the West's best/worst gunmen and outlaws. . . With its extensive annotation, it is also a one-volume mother lode of references for the historian and the writer of western stories. Adams does not include county histories and, generally, fiction (though he has a few examples of penny dreadfuls, etc). He exposes distorted history, legend and fiction posing as history and evaluates the 1132 works cited as to reliability. There's a good index by title and by name of bandit, peace officer, etc." Library J

"Will take its place on this writer's shelf alongside J. Frank Dobie's Guide to Life and Literature of the Southwest. All large libraries will want, as will aficionados of Western Americana." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:1312 J1 '54 140w

"Mr. Adams points out that his compilation is primarily the work of a book-collector and is slanted towards his fellows in the craft, or science or art, as the case may be. It is this that gives the work its greatest value. Because of his background knowledge of the field, and it is a vast one in both time and distance, Mr. Adams can give the distillations he has made 'between contemporary truth and subsequent legend.' In so doing, he clears up a lot of clotted nonsense perpetrated by those who, in Gene Rhodes' words, 'did research each in the other's book.'" W. H. Hutchinson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 8 '54 650w

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Wagons to the wilderness; a story of westward expansion; il. by Norman Guthrie Rudolph. 182p $1.50 Winston

54-5066

Story of a thirteen-year-old boy who joined Captain Mabbitt's trading expedition, bound for Santa Fe in 1822. The adventures along the way are described to interest pupils in grades six to eight.

Booklist 51:20 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:115 F 15 '54 100w

"Fresh exciting material." Sonia Wennerblad

+ Library J 79:1236 Je 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by G. A. Woods

N Y Times p22 Ag 22 '54 30w

ADELSON, DOROTHY. Roughing it on the Rue de la Paix. 247p $3 Crowell

944.36 [914.436] Paris—Social life and customs 54-5525

A humorous account of an American divorcee trying to make her way in post-war Paris, hampered by a limited budget.

Booklist 50:338 My 1 '54

"Dorothy Adelson's story about her Paris is as fast moving and human as a good novel, with just enough deference to the superior charm of the old city to keep Paris, not Miss Adelson, as the heroine." Maureen Daly

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 14 '54 270w

Kirkus 21:810 D 15 '53 120w

"Though the language is Harper's Bazaarish one can't help warming to the author. . . Highly recommended for medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:452 Mr 1 '54 80w

"She records her difficulties with tenderness and compassion—after all, who wants a world given over exclusively to modern efficiency?—and in besting or compromising with them, she learned a lot about France and the French—in fact, came close to turning French herself." Robert Lewis

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 28 '54 450w

AESOP. Fables; sel. and ed. by Laura Harris; il. by Tony Palazzo. 91p $2.50 Garden City bks.

398 Fables 54-12820

"A large book containing 44 of the fables aptly illustrated with handsome crayon drawings and printed in large type. Grades 3-5."

Booklist

Booklist 51:157 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:678 O 1 '54 40w

"Recommended." O. R. Way

+ Library J 79:2493 D 15 '54 70w

"At last we have an Aesop really comprehensible to younger children. . . There is plenty of space for Mr. Palazzo to present his big, lively, expressive creatures. The bright colors, the story-action carried across the double pages, the naïveté of the homely peasant people, will amuse children as will the humor of the end papers and the design on the board binding." L. S. Bechtel

AESOP—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p16 N 14 '54 290w

"The drawings, in color, are big, bold, sprawling and lurid, and just right for the fables with their bold, simple and ironic morals."

+ N Y Times pt2 p46 N 14 '54 40w

AGA KHAN. See Sultan Muhammed Shah

AGETON, ARTHUR AINSLEY. Jungle seas. 339p $3.75 Random house

54-5786

"Action, romance and salvation in the South Pacific are all part of Lt. Jerry Doyle's life as the U. S. S. Hale and later the Willie carry him from port, to battle stations and convoy. Not at ease over his passing affair with the Admiral's daughter, confused between married life in the Navy or being married to the Navy as a career, he cannot be wholly a part of the destroyer world until, in Noumea, he finds the promise of an answer in Eugenie Beaucœur and awakes to the need for integration through a Catholic priest." Kirkus

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 21 '54 300w

"A seriously pondered book in which the matter overshadows the manner."

Kirkus 21:795 D 15 '53 240w

"The tone and theme both suggest James Michener and the book will appeal to similar tastes. Recommended for public libraries." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:204 F 1 '54 140w

"It is truly unfortunate that the admiral just hasn't got his land legs under him ashore. For the idyll of Jerry and Eugénie is soggy with sentimentality. It is a mirage of love, the sort of dream a sailor might conjure up on a moonlit night in peaceful times somewhere in the South Pacific." Alden Whitman

N Y Times p27 F 14 '54 500w

"In his scenes of action, in his setting forth of battle plans, Admiral Ageton writes of what he knows best and what he seems most to love. Here, the reader feels, we are getting it, seeing the shape of the larger strategy and the rigors exacted of those who must conform to it. These things are seen and understood, by Admiral Ageton and by his reader, and they satisfy. Yet there are far too few such passages. . . Unfortunately, Admiral Ageton merely raises the problems and then abandons them, returning perfunctorily at moments to them that the reader may know they are still there." L. O. Coxe

— + Sat R 37:18 F 13 '54 550w

AGLE, MRS NAN (HAYDEN), and WILSON, ELLEN JANET (CAMERON). Three boys and a mine; il. by Marian Honigman. 122p $2 Scribner

54-8782

The triplets Abercrombie, Benjamin, and Christopher, this time visit an anthracite mine and learn about coal mining. For grades two to four.

Booklist 51:46 S 15 '54

"Small boys will find plenty of action, funny conversations, and interesting mining information in this fine, easy reading book." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 S 26 '54 130w

"[The story is] told simply, yet with adequate detail and lively conversation, for younger readers." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:329 O '54 100w

Kirkus 22:484 Ag 1 '54 90w

"This convincing, attractive, durable book is recommended for third and fourth grades." N. S. Zipf

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 80w

"The story combines much humor, plenty of action, and information about mining well chosen on the eight to ten level. There's a fire engine race thrown in for good measure. Every page is full of the brisk talk that helps to lure on the eyes of younger readers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 S 12 '54 160w

"This is a simple little book, pleasing and popular."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 5 '54 100w

AHNSTROM, DORIS N. Complete book of helicopters. 160p il $4.95 World pub.

629.1335 Helicopters

54-8173

"Ahnstrom's book combines lightly told history, descriptions of specific helicopters and accounts of the many uses to which helicopters have been put." Library J

Booklist 51:76 O 15 '54

"It is interesting, easy to read, and lavishly illustrated. Unfortunately it contains no index." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2217 N 15 '54 50w

"The author covers his subject thoroughly and always interestingly, hovering for suitable periods over the most important phases of helicopter development and the multiple uses of the whirling aircraft, and making quick, adept descents into technicalities only when necessary." B. K. T.

+ N Y Times p28 D 12 '54 150w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 28 '54 190w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. Collected poems 895p $10.50 Oxford

811

53-9180

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by M. Avison

Canadian Forum 34:92 J1 '54 420w

"It is difficult, at the start, to understand why Aiken has never developed into a true modernist in any large or original sense. A close examination of his poetry shows that his tone and diction have retained a flavor of that late romanticism, more French than English, that on the one hand sought to dissolve words into music and on the other continually posed unanswerable questions to the universe. Aiken has, it is true, been able for brief periods to disentangle himself from these tendencies, but the musical flow and the philosophic incertitudes keep coming back."

New Yorker 30:130 Mr 20 '54 160w

"While in his subtle and brilliant short stories, as in the novels, especially A Heart for the Gods of Mexico, he is a psychologist constructively and dramatically, using his insight into human—and animal—behaviour to present his observations from a point outside his characters as well as from within, in his verse he is rather the analyst, significantly weaving together the dreamlike associations that are known as free. This does not mean that he shares anything with the surrealists; his writing has nothing of that fragmentary automatism. However frail and evanescent the moods and relations may often be, he works with the conviction of some monistic harmony and towards a significance that is, in its way, absolute."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p104 F 12 '54 2000w

"Covering a span of forty years of work by one of the most important poets in the United States, this volume merits wide acclaim. Conrad Aiken antedated most of his contemporaries in his explorations into the human psyche, but because his poems were written in a melodious, traditional style they did not shock nor startle his generation by their newness, and so were not singled out for special notice at the time of their publication. Now he is recognized as a poet who can be both traditional and modern, lyrical, and philosophical. This collection, containing poems long out of print, has the impact of a new book; it gives the contemporary reader a chance to discover and evaluate an impressive body of work."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:54 Mr '54 200w

ALBRAND, MARTHA, pseud. See Loewengard, H. H. F.

ALCOHOLIC to his sons; as told to Henry Beetle Hough. 245p $3.50 Simon & Schuster 616.86 Alcoholism 54-1633

"Henry Beetle Hough's book is a rather bold venture. He attempts to translate into first-person terms another man's agonizing descent into the world of uncontrollable drink, and the beginnings of his regeneration. Fortunately Mr. Hough, editor of The Vineyard Gazette at Martha's Vineyard, has the understanding and professional skill to carry it off." N Y Times

Kirkus 22:180 Mr 1 '54 130w

"The friend who asked that his story be written, Mr. Hough, and the publishers have each performed a commendable public service. Recommended for high school, public, college and university libraries." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:857 My 1 '54 190w

"The psychological roots of Pete's drinking problem do not emerge as clearly as one could wish. The scientists tell us that the most difficult cases of alcoholism grow out of psychological disorder of some sort. Pete evidently had no such disorder. Just what it was that started him off is hazy. Nevertheless, this is a worthy book that should be useful in promoting understanding of a serious and widespread malady." R. G. Whalen

+ N Y Times p12 My 23 '54 400w

"A thought-provoking book."

+ New Yorker 30:91 Je 26 '54 140w

"What useful purpose is performed by such a book as Mr. Hough's? It lacks the glamour, the popularity appeal, the lurid depths, the dramatic heights of the autobiographies. It lacks the frank revelation of personality which makes the autobiographies particularly appealing. Yet even in its anonymity it may perform the same general kind of function which the Roth and Brokenshire books do. It not only tells for all who will read it the story of descent and ascent, but it tells of the lessons learned." Joseph Hirsh

Sat R 37:18 Ag 7 '54 340w

ALDEN, JOHN RICHARD. American revolution, 1775-1783. (New American nation ser) 294p 11 maps $5; text ed $3.75 Harper

973.3 U.S.—History—Revolution 53-11826

The second volume in the New American nation series. This study of the Revolution is based on American and British sources, and the interpretation of the military and political aspects gives more than the customary space to events in England. Bibliography. Index.

"Obviously it is unreasonable to assess some forty-odd yet-unpublished volumes on the basis of the one or two which by chance appear first. For whatever it may be worth, however, my prognosis for the series, based on a reading of Professor Alden's American Revolution, is favorable. My prediction for this particular volume is that it is destined for a long and useful life. It is soundly organized, lucidly written, cogent in analysis, judicious in interpretation, accurate and wide-ranging in scholarship." F. B. Tolles

+ Am Hist R 60:118 O '54 800w

Reviewed by R. L. Hilldrup

Ann Am Acad 294:185 Jl '54 450w

Booklist 50:236 F 15 '54

Reviewed by Avery Craven

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F 21 '54 470w

"A book for the scholar and adult, it deals predominantly with the military campaigns, but highlights coincident political and economic developments which played their part in the war and its outcome." Josephine Ripley

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 30 '54 450w

"It is a well informed chronology of events, traditional in its interpretations but highly readable and exhibitiv of succinct and imaginative use of source material."

+ Kirkus 21:810 D 15 '53 190w

"Recommended for special collections, college and university libraries." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:552 Mr 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 11 '54 130w

"The only criticism which might be made of his work is that he has given relatively too much emphasis to military operations, which occupy more than half the book, and has not allotted enough space to the political and social changes brought about by the Revolution and to the conflict between the conservative and the democratic elements in American society. Otherwise this account of eight of the most crucial years in American history can be highly recommended as an accurate, comprehensive and well written narrative, based on the most recent research and invariably showing good judgment in its expressions of opinion." H. B. Parkes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p27 My 16 '54 440w

"Mr. Alden has written the best short account of the War for Independence that is presently available." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Times p3 F 21 '54 1050w

"The battle accounts are well documented and illustrated with detailed maps. They are also colorfully written." Richard Johnston

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 14 '54 300w

"The chapters on the 'home front' cover the topics that should be covered in such work, but they are for the most part based on secondary works. Good though such works are, one misses the informed judgments and stimulating interpretations to be found in the chapters on military history where the author has centered his original research. The non-military aspects of the Revolution are quite as exciting and at least as important as the military. Apparently the editors of the New American Series do not plan to give them the same attention which I, at least, think their importance warrants." Merrill Jensen

Sat ■ 37:15 F 27 '54 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 21 '54 500w

"A concise history of the War of the American Revolution, this book is at all times lively, clear, pointed, and interesting."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:170 Je '54 280w

Wis Lib Bul 50:71 Mr '54

ALDERMAN, CLIFFORD LINDSEY. To fame unknown. 360p $3.95 Appleton

54-10706

A historical novel based on the last phase of the French and Indian war. The hero is Esek Warren of Northampton, who is snared by a scheming widow, and goes thru most of the war before his innocence is established.

"A long-flowing, easy mannered prating, this covers much territory in many areas, and compact plotting, in a satisfactory and workmanlike manner."

+ Kirkus 22:596 S 1 '54 190w

"The threads of the two love stories are ably and excitingly woven against a background alive with the military, social and economic conflicts of the period."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 28 '54 300w

ALDERMAN, C. L.—Continued

"The chief trouble with 'To Fame Unknown' is that it has all so clearly been worked up. It lacks depth and drive; it observes a popular fashion but it does not issue from personal fire. One wonders whether James Wolfe, for all that he was known to fame, was not Mr. Alderman's real story; he takes the stage briefly but he dominates it entirely." C. L.

— + N Y Times p37 N 21 '54 270w

"Mr. Alderman's writing in the historical novel field has been compared with that of Kenneth Roberts, and although there are some points of difference in style and treatment, Mr. Alderman is certainly developing into a close contender for the top honors which Mr. Roberts holds in this field. It appears that Mr. Alderman's good work is based to a considerable extent on his painstaking research, without which no writer can hope to be convincing in the historical sphere." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54 470w

ALDRIDGE, JAMES. Heroes of the empty view. 428p $3.95 Knopf

54-7193

"Gordon, the principal hero of the 'empty view,' is a strange, unhappy, inspired Englishman, who takes up the cause of a tribal revolt in the [Arabian] desert and almost succeeds in leading it to victory. But after a first brilliant campaign he is forced to return to England, and there—like Lawrence, with whom he vehemently but not very convincingly denies kinship—he can find no situation large enough to fit him. Instead, he is expected to rescue his unworldly family from their perplexities. Plunged into a worse perplexity of his own, he wonders whether he may find a solution in politics or in love." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 51:41 S 15 '54

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 15 '54

550w

"Gordon's search for purity is only symbolic of what the author says; perhaps he finds the answer in something which is not exclusively, romantically, paralyzingly impossible. If so, he does not tell, which is good. The answer he would have would not be my answer as his arguments are not my arguments. But I am grateful that he has written this fascinating book, overburdened with rationalization (presenting a hero whom no one could like), but a book which is complex, compassionate, and serious." William Pfaff

+ — Commonweal 60:634 O 1 '54 750w

"This is definitely a book for these times. Difficult to read, for Aldridge still is oddly mannered and tends to overwrite, the end result is worth the effort."

+ Kirkus 22:344 Je 1 '54 190w

"Recommended to medium and large public libraries." W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1399 Ag '54 110w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 My 11 '54

120w

"James Aldridge has steadily advanced in literary size with each of his books and 'Heroes of the Empty View' should rank him well to the fore among young writers with something more to offer than technical brilliance and entertainment." Edgar Snow

+ Nation 179:234 S 18 '54 1150w

"Spiced though it is with brisk observations on history, politics and human society, the novel is thoroughly romantic in spirit. . . James Aldridge is at his best with clear-cut characters like the 'stiff-eyed' English general with the disciplined mind, and the array of chieftains, from the native aristocrat to the paramount sheik who for cash will side with anybody. But Gordon, the divided man of principle, is a hazier character." Curtis Lubinski

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 8 '54

450w

"The framework of the story is simple: what gives it its peculiar distinction is the phenomenal complexity of Gordon-Lawrence's mind and the brilliant sketches of the subordinate characters. . . There is richness here, and the broad sweep of the desert. The story is told compulsively, the ideas leaping at a dazzling pace across the page. Excellent."

Richard Cargoe

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 8 '54 800w

"Gordon's dream is splendid, but he is not big enough to express it, and not human enough to cause the reader to share his heartbreak."

New Yorker 30:80 Ag 28 '54 140w

"This provocative novel is written with authoritative knowledge of men, machines, and politics. Ned Gordon dies, as he has lived, in the ferment of current history. But his argument, sometimes eloquent, sometimes hysterical, for the preservation of primitive life and tribal culture, is as romantic as St. Pierre's 'Paul and Virginia.'" Walter Havighurst

+ — Sat R 37:16 Ag 7 '54 800w

"[The hero] this mixture of Bulldog Drummond and Father Brown, talking like a bad book, posturing and orating on behalf of 'un-corrupted man,' is only worse than his fellow-characters in that there is so much more of him. They all posture and orate. They all talk like a bad book." Kingsley Amis

— Spec p626 My 21 '54 180w

"In spite of the rather stiff and mannered nobility of their attitudes Mr. Aldridge's characters spring fully to life, so that, whatever reservations one may feel about the implied moral, the terms in which it is conveyed are vivid and convincing."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p293 My 7 '54

450w

ALEXANDER, DAVID. Murder points a finger. 269p $2.50 Random house

53-9709

Detective story.

"Unique and cleverly baffling." Drexel Drake
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 3 '54

120w

Kirkus 21:599 S 1 '53 70w

"A sober detective puzzle about a cop who leaves a dying message by arranging fingerprint cards. If you haven't solved it on page 13, you might as well stop reading detective stories." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p48 N 8 '53 30w

"Answer to the crypt seems glaringly obvious, cutting down mystification so that the corny writing stands out painfully. C minus."

L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 20 '53

80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:71 Ja 23 '54 20w

ALEXANDER, DAVID. Terror on Broadway. 243p $2.75 Random house

54-6649

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 4 '54

20w

Kirkus 22:251 Ap 1 '54 50w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 8 '54

150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p15 Je 27 '54 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 25 '54

40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:31 Jl 10 '54 20w

"Written in a language that bears a deceptive resemblance to English but is actually Broadwayese."

Time 63:114 Je 14 '54 100w

ALEXANDER, HARTLEY BURR. World's rim; great mysteries of the North American Indians; with a foreword by Clyde Kluckhohn. 259p $4.75 Univ. of Neb. press
970.1 [970.62] Indians of North America—Rites and ceremonies 53-7703

A work dealing with the philosophical meanings the author found in his intensive study of Indian ritual ceremonies and dances. The author, who died in 1939, was a teacher of philosophy in American colleges, and a student of the art and mythology of the American Indian. This book has been prepared for the press by his son.

Booklist 50:163 D 15 '53

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 21 '54 50w

Reviewed by Angie Debo

N Y Times p14 N 8 '53 380w

"For anyone who wishes a good, readable technical introduction to the spiritual side of the Indian, this is the book." A. N. Chamberlin
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 27 '53 50w

"A beautifully written book which reveals a wealth of symbolism, of rich religious feeling, and a majesty of expression in which myth is lifted into philosophy. Many will doubt some of the philosophical interpretations, but few anthropologists will quarrel with the thesis of the fundamental likeness of human minds."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:70 Mr '54 210w

ALEXANDER, HOLMES MOSS. Tomorrow's air age; a report on the foreseeable future. 248p $3 Rinehart

629.109 [629.13] Aeronautics—History 53-9243

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Current Hist 26:317 My '54 90w

"Throughout, readers of the book will find it easy to follow the author. They are sure to be fascinated by what is bound to happen in the air in the next few years." B. K. Thorne
+ N Y Times p12 Mr 21 '54 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 31 '54 160w

"In 'Tomorrow's Air Age' Mr. Alexander tries hard to rein in his imagination. He assures us that this lively and readable book is 'factual, not fantastic; observation, not imagination; specialized reporting . . . not special pleading.' What he has to say, if not fantastic in the literal sense, is certainly astounding. Moreover, his predictions are made for the very definitely foreseeable future. Very little that he reports is purely conjectural." Kendall Smith
+ Sat R 37:21 F 6 '54 700w

ALEXANDER, WILFRID BACKHOUSE. Birds of the ocean; a handbook for voyagers; containing descriptions of all the sea-birds of the world, with notes on their habits and guides to their identification. new & rev ed 366p il $7.50 Putnam

598.2 Waterbirds 54-8706

"In this edition 'an attempt has been made to correct errors, and to add information bringing it up to date, without any essential alteration of its style and arrangement.' Preface. Same number of plates as in first edition." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1928.

Booklist 51:86 O 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 30w

ALEXANDROWICZ, CHARLES HENRY. International economic organisations. (London institute of world affairs. Lib. of world affairs) 263p $6 Praeger

338.91 Economic policy. International co-operation 52-13105

"A survey of the principal economic institutions which have been established since the First World War." Foreign Affairs

"Unfortunately, the book has many shortcomings, which a carefully edited reissue could overcome. Most serious is the complete omission of the repercussions of the Korean invasion (although unconnected post-Korean developments like the European Payments Union are discussed). . . . The organization of the book could be improved considerably, too. Although the emphasis is on the organizational structure of each agency, there are many short asides—often at irrelevant places—on general principles inferred from these individual studies. . . . Despite these minor defects, the book should serve as a compact introduction to the subject, and as a guide to the reader interested in learning more about the agencies discussed." Edward Marcus
+ — Am Econ R 43:983 D '53 1000w

Foreign Affairs 32:156 O '53 10w

ALFRED, WILLIAM. Agamemnon [verse play in four acts]. 88p $3 Knopf 812 53-9486

A four-act play in verse, based on the Greek tragedy of Agamemnon.

"A fine play, with a few moments of really high distinction." Henry Rago
+ Commonweal 61:259 D 3 '54 400w

"This rewriting of the tragedy has distinction, though why it is called Agamemnon when most of the important speeches are put in the mouth of Clytemnestra, and the pivotal scenes revolve around her, it is hard to say. It is even harder to say what the author intends to add to this more than twice told tale in his careful and elaborate version."

Kirkus 22:428 Jl 1 '54 140w

"Highly recommended for drama and poetry collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2337 D 1 '54 20w

ALLEN, DERYCK NORMAN DE GARRS. Relaxation methods. 257p il $7.50 McGraw

512.8 Relaxation methods (mathematics) 52-12349

"Relaxation (in the sense used in this book) is a relatively new computational technique which has fairly wide applications in the solving of complex problems in physics and engineering. Several books have already been published on it, but all have paid chief attention to the mathematical theory. In contrast, this book is devoted entirely to how to apply the method in various types of problems, beginning with the solution of linear algebraic equations and going to the solution of partial differential equations in three dimensions." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"As a practical introduction to the field, the book will have interest for graduate engineers and scientists whose work involves the solution of equations." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1320 Jl '54 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:43 My '54

ALLEN, DEXTER. Jaguar and the golden stag. 340p $3.75 Coward-McCann

54-6047

The romantic story of the young Prince Nezahual, emperor of Anahuac in fifteenth century Mexico. Aided by a captive Aztec prince and his pet jaguar, Nezahual had to win his throne from his ambitious uncle before he was able to rule his people.

Booklist 50:450 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 13:237 Jl '54 30w

"A brilliant first novel" O. D. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 15 '54 190w

"A sensitive understanding of a people, a race, a psychology keeps this from the rut of synthetic historical fictionalizing."
+ Kirkus 22:293 My 1 '54 230w

ALLEN, DEXTER—Continued

"The book has a lyrical quality, unusual in historical novels, which lifts it above the mundane and almost into the realm of pure fantasy. Interesting background material." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 79:1050 Je 1 '54 90w

"An excellent piece of work by a young writer who certainly appears to love his period and can therefore make it come alive."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 25 '54 200w

"In the end, Nezahual is triumphant in both love and war. But by this time the narrative has become of such shimmering indistinctness it doesn't seem to matter greatly. The poetic imagery is the thing. Herein lies a gold mine of reading enjoyment for those sensitive to the feel of words." Henry Cavendish

+ — N Y Times p14 J1 18 '54 470w

"Mr. Allen has written a lush, often over-ripe book, full of color and sound. Sometimes his extravagant descriptions almost overpower his story. Unless the reader has a large appetite for this sort of thing, he may become surfeited." R. R. McD.

San Francisco Chronicle p18 J1 18 '54 180w

"The writing is excellent, and the physical descriptions truly evoke the vanished Aztec world. There are, however, one or two psychological anachronisms. The real Neza-huapilli joined Montezuma's uncle, Ahutizotl, in the bloody 1476 Oaxaca raid and with his own hands tore out his share of the hearts of the 20,000 sacrificed victims. This made him a true Aztec chief. It is difficult to imagine Mr. Allen's somewhat more attractive Neza-hual performing so primitive and gory, yet so characteristic, an act." T. C. Chubb

+ — Sat R 37:13 J1 '54 550w

"One of the most engrossing and exquisitely wrought recent fictional journeys into the past is offered readers by Dexter Allen's 'Jaguar and the Golden Stag.'" Richard McLaughlin

+ Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 280w

ALLEN, DURWARD LEON. Our wildlife legacy. 422p il $5 Funk

333.78 [799] Wildlife, Conservation of 53-10792

An introduction to American ecology, by a wildlife biologist. It provides a study of the basic principles of wildlife conservation in the United States, and an examination of what has been done to maintain and build up our "wildlife legacy." Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:311 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:131 Mr '54 30w

"As an account of what is happening to America's great natural resources, it is perhaps the most timely and up-to-date currently available. It is a book that merits wide study and an even wider audience, for the author's goals are such as will profoundly affect the well being of our nation. Wildlife resources and management principles have never been more clearly set forth." August Derleth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 24 '54 220w

"Here is a sound and much needed exposition of the way to preserve a great national asset." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 F 16 '54 420w

"For sportsmen, nature lovers." J. E. Brown

Library J 79:384 F 15 '54 90w

"In recent years, there have been many books to tell us this. A lot of books about the Rape of the Land have shouted or wheedled or statisted at us. But there has remained room — room and great need — for a quiet, thorough, sturdily sensible book . . . a massively fact-stuffed book but readable, an eloquent book but not hysterical. Dr. Durward Allen, wildlife expert for twenty years and biologist of the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior, has prepared a fine one." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p6 Ja 31 '54 500w

"Here is a book by a tough-minded man who knows both the field and the literature, who has firm, well-based opinions, and isn't afraid to speak out. Before we get into the substance of the book, however, it may be pointed out that it is full of overtones and implications that any wise historian or sociologist should be aware of. . . The only writer to equal him in tolerance, knowledge and sound opinion was Aldo Leopold." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 24 '54 600w

"A first-rate book, written with candor, clarity, and conviction."

+ New Yorker 30:129 Mr 27 '54 140w

"His facts are simply stated and his interpretations of these facts so logically explained and overwhelmingly documented that the thinking reader will be convinced it is high time that gross mismanagement cease and a sound, realistic policy of wildlife management be adopted before our wildlife legacy is found only in zoological gardens and museums. The thoughtful reading of this book by every sportsman, naturalist, outdoor writer, nature lover, educator and legislator as well as State and Federal conservation workers should help to make intelligent management of our wildlife resources possible in the years to come."

A. C. Smith

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 F 14 '54 700w

"If the book can be criticized, it is in the superfluity of examples and case histories which at times obscure the meaning of the point in question. The heavy documentation, although all interesting, is not all essential."

A. S. Leopold

+ Sat R 37:23 Ap 10 '54 800w

ALLEN, DURWARD LEON. Pheasants afield. (Sportsman's bookshelf) 128p il pa $1 Stackpole co.

636.59 Pheasants

"Discusses the habits and management of the pheasant in North America. This pamphlet is packed with information on the 'ringneck'—its origin, introduction, food and feed and enemies, breeding and care." Springf'd Republican

"Excellent little paper-backed handbook, authoritative, clearly written." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:66 Ja 1 '54 20w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 13 '53 20w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p10C D 20 '53 60w

ALLEN, FRED. Treadmill to oblivion; with drawings by Hirschfeld. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 240p $4 Little

B or 92 Radio programs 54-11132

The book begins with 1932 when Fred Allen went on the air with his first radio show. In his usual wry commentary he tells the story of his experiences with advertising executives and sponsors; describes how his program grew; and discusses the work that went into the writing of the show. The book ends with June 26, 1949—the last day of The Fred Allen Show.

"It brings to us selections from his most memorable programs, framed in a running commentary which shows that Mr. Allen can be as amusing between book covers as on the air and that he has relished committing to print his devastating observations about the radio business—the only profession in which the unfit could survive." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:92 D '54 600w

Booklist 51:149 D 1 '54

"Despite the apparent bitterness, this book reveals Allen at his sardonic best. So long as he writes books like this, there will be no oblivion for Fred Allen. Perhaps the best is yet to come—in books and criticism." Larry Wolters

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 31 '54 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

Kirkus 22:623 S 1 '54 170w

"This is a brilliant book about the stage and radio by one of the great comedians of our time. . . . Delightfully and humorously written, it will have wide public appeal and so is recommended highly for paid circulation as well as for radio and television collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2096 N 1 '54 60w

"Fred Allen is just about the wittiest man alive and, since it's almost impossible to write about that wacky business without getting laughs, this is a very, very funny book. If you're a Fred Allen fan, just go buy it, if you're not, you shouldn't be reading this anyway." John Crosby

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 7 '54 650w

"A gay and caustic book, rich in anecdote." Richard Maney

+ N Y Times p4 N 7 '54 1000w

"He has rescued from his files some of the best routines from his scripts and inserted them into a tart, lively narrative, in which he describes the background of the show, the actors and joke writers who helped him make it the funniest on the air, and the network and agency men—those multiple thinkers and compulsive meddlers—who all but drove him crazy."

+ New Yorker 30:152 D 18 '54 200w

"The best thing about the book is the way it reflects its author. Because Fred Allen, more than any radio comedian who ever tackled the treadmill, is worth reflecting in print. We have a Voice of America (in caps) but for nearly two decades Fred Allen was the voice of America as it is—dry, skeptical, witty in the traditional American style, sharp and to the point exactly as Finley Peter Dunne's 'Mr. Dooley' was, all but the Irish dialect." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 8 '54 550w

Reviewed by Bernard Kalb

Sat R 37:31 N 6 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 110w

ALLEN, GEORGE CYRIL, and DONNITHORNE, AUDREY GLADYS. Western enterprise in Far Eastern economic development: China and Japan. 292p maps $4.50 Macmillan (N Y)

338 China—Industry and resources. Japan—Industry and resources. Investments, Foreign 54-2001

"Professor Allen and Miss Donnithorne—in a volume to be followed by a similar study of Malay and Indonesia—trace the course in China and Japan of the Western enterprise upon which much of the modern economic life of both countries has been built." Spec

"The section on Japan is the better analysis of the two. It is written with more sympathy and with much more understanding than is the Chinese section. This difference is probably due to the senior author's more intimate knowledge of Japan." J. E. Orchard

+ Ann Am Acad 294:160 Jl '54 400w

"Pleasantly free from the clichés that accompany so much writing on this subject."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:631 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank

Pacific Affairs 27:269 S '54 1200w

Spec p372 Mr 26 '54 50w

"The scope of the book, by two highly qualified political economists, is narrow. It does not wander from its aim, which is to describe nothing more than the beginnings of Western enterprise in China and Japan, the local conditions that moulded the nature of this association between East and West, and the impact made by the injection of Western business men on an outmoded industrial and commercial life. But it does, within these self-imposed limitations, go into everything with great thoroughness and in depth. It must be rare for such a work to have so much painstaking and precise research behind it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 26 '54 750w

ALLEN, JERRY. Adventures of Mark Twain. 359p il $4.50 Little

B or 92 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne

54-6873

A biography of Mark Twain made up of real life episodes in fictional form interspersed with excerpts from letters, and other biographical material. Index.

Booklist 50:418 Jl 1 '54

"Delightfully informal biography of the well-loved American humorist."

+ Bookmark 13:215 Je '54 30w

"Altho biografies of Mark Twain are already almost innumerable, Miss Jerry Allen has had the temerity to write another. It is a pleasure to note that she has made a worthwhile contribution. Except for a few minor details and two hitherto unpublished photographs, she adds little to our scholarly knowledge of Mark Twain. But she has succeeded in producing what is probably the most readable biography of him yet written." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 23 '54 450w

"Miss Allen's well studied biography has the flavor, and in spots the form, of fiction, with occasional stretches of imaginary conversation. It is easy and fascinating reading, but also solid and well documented biography." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:978 Ag 18 '54 230w

"Miss Allen writes well. Only occasionally does she force interest, try to beat with words, not with the underlying fire that should burn behind them. This is an interesting popular account of Mark Twain's rich life." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 19 '54 600w

"If this market is not yet saturated this will offer an absorbed and devoted portrayal, which is also lively reading."

+ Kirkus 22:179 Mr 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1052 Je 1 '54 110w

"There is a good deal of paraphrase in Miss Allen's pages, not only from Mark Twain but also from other writers. I must make it clear that I am not criticizing her for this; she could not have written her kind of book without it, and though there are places where I think she is wrong. . . . I regard her method as a legitimate one and consider her to have used it conscientiously. If her book is mosaic work, it is mosaic work that is alive. . . . The general reader will find this one of the most readable of all books about Mark Twain." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Sat R 37:15 My 29 '54 650w

"Those who cherish fond memories of discovering Mark Twain for themselves (there's a few of us left in scattered institutions) will enjoy Miss Allen's sprightly book, which includes not only generous helpings of nostalgia from the more familiar stories and travel books, but lesser known material from collections of letters and speeches and the dozen or so books that throw a sharp focus on segments of Mark's life. The new biography is not exactly formal, but neither is it superficial, the main idea apparently being to yield the floor to Mark when he said it better." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Je 1 '54 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:133 My '54

ALLEN, MERRITT PARMELEE. Wilderness way; decorations by Larry Toschik. 246p $2.75 Longmans 54-6159

"Laurent Delair newly arrived in New France, chose to follow La Salle in his search for the mouth of the Mississippi. The ways of the wilderness, entirely new to Laurent, were learned only after much physical and mental hardship." Library J

Booklist 50:345 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 10w

"The story of LaSalle's journey down the Mississippi is told by this practiced hand in sturdy narrative befitting the toughness of the times and the precarious life of the voyageurs." + Kirkus 22:4 Ja 1 '54 140w

"Highly recommended." V. K. Fitch + Library J 79:788 Ap 15 '54 80w

"The story moves sluggishly, for the most part, through a succession of disasters and disappointments. It ends, however, in a rush of action. Incidents of backwoods brutality are not omitted, but these are balanced by the tough joviality of the French boatmen. Sorely missed is a map of the area covered." G. A. Woods

N Y Times p22 Ap 18 '54 210w

ALLEN, ROY GEORGE DOUGLAS, and ELY, J. EDWARD, eds. International trade statistics. 448p $7.50 Wiley 53-12096

382 Commercial statistics
"Reflecting the knowledge and experience of twenty-five contributors from the United States, Canada, and England, each dealing with a highly specialized aspect of international trade statistics, this book embodies the first detailed analysis of the characteristics, and the adequacies and inadequacies, of the statistics of the world's trading countries. An important purpose of the book is to assist students and users of trade data in finding their way through the maze of varying national recording procedures." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"Fills a definite need. Recommended." Paul Wasserman + Library J 78:2031 N 15 '53 110w

"Although not without considerable value to men of practical affairs, the book is intended primarily as a needed guide and reference work for specialists in the field." + U S Quarterly Bk R 10:75 Mr '54 220w

ALLEN, T. D., pseud. of TERRY D. ALLEN and DON B. ALLEN. Troubled border. 275p $3 Harper 54-6007

McLoughlin, John—Fiction

"Like most historical novels, this one can be interesting even to the reader who does not happen to have much knowledge of history. In this case, the spotlight is on the history of the Pacific Northwest, and [is concerned with] the fictionalized account of the life of John McLoughlin, chief factor (superintendent) of the Hudson's Bay Company at Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River." Library J

Booklist 50:419 Jl 1 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p36 D '54

+ Kirkus 22:244 Ap 1 '54 110w

"A good introduction to the history of the region. The book has an abundance of action. . . Reasonably accurate historically, and rather well written, this novel can be recommended for all libraries." Clarence Gorchels + Library J 79:982 My 15 '54 150w

"Terry and Don Allen—a husband-wife team writing under the initials 'T. D.'—know the old Northwest and what made it tick. The description of The Company and the native tribes squares well with history. But some of the personages in the book are too much all black or white." Richard Neuberger + N Y Times p20 Je 27 '54 500w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 90w

Wis Lib Bul 50:179 Jl '54

ALLEN, VICTOR LEONARD. Power in trade unions; a study of their organization in Great Britain. 323p $5 Longmans 54-3378

331.88 Trade unions

In this study of British trade unions, "Part I examines the democratic principle in trade unions and illustrates the importance of their voluntary nature; it shows how checks are imposed on the use of power, how discipline is imposed on members and under what conditions and with what consequences compulsory trade unionism operates. Part II begins with an analysis of written union constitutions, presented in tabular form and described, in subsequent chapters, under the headings of policy-making, powers and functions of executive bodies, and union leadership. This last section fills a gap in our knowledge of leadership generally and shows the qualifications of union leaders, where they are drawn from, how they are selected and trained and what provisions there are for dismissal." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Although the facts presented on trade union constitutional practice will be less interesting to readers here, the book merits serious attention by American students of union administration." Harry Stark

+ Am Econ R 44:996 D '54 700w

"This book gets off to a bad start with a general discussion of the role of the trade union, based on the short-sighted premise that trade union interests can never conflict with those of society at large. The book improves when Mr. Allen gets into his subject of trade union government." Sheila Eastman Canadian Forum 34:117 Ag '54 220w

"Recommended for college libraries and public libraries with large labor collections." D. K. Oke

+ Library J 79:2104 N 1 '54 170w

"Mr. Allen has little advice to offer to Union leaders. Nevertheless this is a book which they and the general reader should certainly read. It is moderate in tone, scholarly in argument and explores a great mass of new territory. The limitations, however, of any attempt to cover the affairs of no fewer than 127 Unions in 300 pages are obvious." Peter Shore + New Statesman & Nation 47:604 My 8 '54 850w

"Leaving aside the deterrent effect of a rather tedious and repetitive style, Mr. Allen's terms of reference are too limited and his opinions too timid to make this mass of information more than occasionally useful to the general student of trade unionism. It would probably not tell an experienced trade union leader much that was new to him. On the other hand, the book is a valuable store of information for reference, even if that was not its prime intention. It could also be recommended to a university student with a purely academic interest in the subject or, as one of a list of books, it might be useful to someone who wanted to form a trade union."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p342 My 28 '54 600w

ALLEN, WILLIAM EDWARD DAVID, and MURATOV, PAVEL PAVLOVICH. Caucasian battlefields; a history of the wars on the Turco-Caucasian border, 1828-1921. 614p il maps $14 Cambridge 947.9 Russo-Turkish wars. Russia—History. Turkey—History 53-12839

"This is a history of the four Russo-Turkish Wars fought in the Caucasus during the past century. It is based largely on Turkish and Russian sources—staff histories, military journals and memoirs—and on English, German, and French studies of particular campaigns. The main theme is the history of the defence of eastern Anatolia, from the end of the Napoleonic wars to modern times. The authors briefly relate their accounts of the campaigns to the general history of Russia's drive to the Mediterranean, and to the wider problems of Middle East strategy." Publisher's note

"The reviewer can truthfully say that he has read carefully every page of the work, yet he has not been able to discover a single error in a statement of facts, or even in the reading of proofs. What is lacking in this noteworthy book, a book that is based fundamentally upon both Russian and Turkish sources, is interpretative sections and the projection of the sort of insights and conclusions which delight historians." F. S. Rodkey

Am Hist R 59:715 Ap '54 220w

"Of interest largely to the military specialist; little politics or diplomacy."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:515 Ap '54 20w

"A scholarly book written by an Englishman and a Russian, both with excellent qualifications for the work." M. P. Price

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 12 '54 250w

"A history such as this could probably have been produced only by specialists on Russia and on Turkey working in partnership. This was provided, but Muratoff died three years ago, leaving Mr. Allen to complete the task alone. An enormous task it must have been. The work is of vast length, strictly military and backed by only a thin political exposition, and it goes into minute detail in its description of movement and fighting. It is tough and exacting reading, and there is often a feeling that it might have been made livelier. Yet it is a great achievement."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p631 O 2 '53 550w

ALLER, MRS DORIS. Handmade rugs; il. by [the author] (Sunset craft bks) 95p $3; pa $1.75 Lane pub. co.

746.7 Rugs

53-10325

"Contains step-by-step instructions, is lavishly illustrated with both drawings and photographs showing each process and also the finished product in many cases. Altogether 25 separate projects are outlined—hooked rugs, braided rugs, woven rugs, knotted rugs, etc.—and there are general chapters introducing the reader to the craft, suggesting materials (old clothes, often), color, design and care and cleaning." San Francisco Chronicle

"A Sunset self-instruction manual for the beginner, and another successful one, clearly written and thoroughly illustrated." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 29 '53 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 24 '54 90w

"Excellent illustrated, and pleasing in format, this new book has clear down-to-earth explanations of several processes used in making handmade rugs."

+ School Arts 53:47 Ja '54 110w

ALLER, LAWRENCE HUGH. Astrophysics; the atmospheres of the sun and stars. 412p il $12 Ronald

523 Astrophysics. Stars—Atmospheres

53-5711

"A college textbook written by an associate professor of astronomy at the University of Michigan. It is introductory to the subject but is intended for students and other readers who have acquired some background in physics and elementary astronomy. A considerable range of data on the solar and planetary atmospheres is combined with descriptions of the instrumental techniques whereby such data are obtained and by examples of the related mathematical computations. The treatment is full enough to make the book useful to graduate scientists other than specialists in astrophysics who wish some knowledge of the field. Well-chosen, annotated bibliographies of both books and papers are included in the chapters." N Y New Tech Bks

"Rather high level, but essential in well developed collections on astronomy."

+ Library J 79:921 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Techs Bks 38:65 S '53

"Students and research workers in astrophysics and related fields such as radio-wave propagation have felt keenly the need for just such a reference textbook as Professor Aller's work now supplies."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:365 S '53 240w

ALLFREY, PHYLLIS SHAND. Orchid house. 223p $3 Dutton

54-5057

"The scene of this exotic novel is a mansion on a Caribbean island. The actors include the Master of the Manor—who is also an addict to drugged cigarettes; his long-suffering wife; and the three grown daughters who come home for a holiday. How these visitors work to restore their father to a normal way of life is the dramatic substance of the tale." (N Y Times) The narrator is Lally, a book-taught, English-speaking Negro.

Booklist 50:320 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:15 Ja 1 '54 180w

"Reads easily. Character drawing good. Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 79:449 Mr 1 '54 150w

"Mrs. Allfrey's story has both charm and grasp. But her spoken spokeswoman is a bit of a worry: what earache, what keyhole inflammations, such devotion implies!" Norman Shrapnel

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 17 '53 200w

"Written with great restraint, this novel evokes the beauty and pattern of Island life, while gently unfolding its story of decay."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 4 '54 170w

N Y Times p23 Mr 14 '54 240w

"The 'Orchid House' has great charm and atmosphere, and the character of Lally herself is moving and memorable. The author's distinction of style, the poignance and simplicity of Lally's telling of the story overcome to a large extent the occasional weaknesses of the plot. It is a first novel of considerable accomplishment and promise." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:20 Mr 20 '54 600w

"It is a vivid piece of story-telling, touched now and then with poetry." R. D. Charques

+ Spec p158 Ag 7 '53 130w

"Mrs. Allfrey conveys very well a sense of a tolerant, languid society full of visual beauty but lacking any inner resources or power of resistance to evil; perhaps in her next book she may find a more lively story to put inside this framework."

Times [London] Lit Sup p473 Jl 24 '53 80w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY (MRS P. YOUNG-MAN CARTER). No love lost. 224p $2.75 Doubleday

54-7842

Two stories of suspense: The patient at Peacocks Hall, and Safer than Love.

Kirkus 22:276 Ap 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 29 '54 170w

"Like 'Deadly Duo' in 1949, this pair (despite glints of entertaining writing) lies closer to soap opera than to Miss Allingham's more serious crime fiction." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p11 Jl 11 '54 40w

"Nice stuff. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 8 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:41 Jl 24 '54 20w

ALLIS, MARGUERITE. Brave pursuit. 312p $3.50 Putnam 54-5475

The third novel in a trilogy about the lives of various members of a pioneer family in Ohio. Constitution Field, the only daughter in the family, was determined to get an education, even though it meant defiance of her father. The story traces Connie's seven-year struggle to gain her desires. The earlier volumes in the series are: Now We Are Free, and To Keep us Free (Book Review Digest, 1952, 1953).

Booklist 50:450 J1 15 '54

"The story is conventional, with more than a few long reaches of coincidence. But the background, full of period flavor and detail, shows the length and breadth of Ohio in the yeasty years after the War of 1812." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 5 '54 360w

"Recommended for small library purchase."

F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:1309 J1 '54 90w

"Marguerite Allis has written in story form a compendium on the status of women in the early nineteenth century as well as a vivid picture of life in the new state of Ohio. Her spirited and innocent bluestocking makes a charming heroine."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 12 '54 1600w

Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 100w

ALLPORT, GORDON WILLARD. Nature of prejudice. 537p $7; text ed $5.50 Addison-Wesley

157 Antipathies and prejudices 54-5626

"Dr. Allport presents one of the first surveys of group prejudices. For the past ten years the author has devoted himself principally to research on this problem, and this book sums up his findings and conclusions. He discusses these with emphasis on the social, legal, and economic aspects of the problem, stressing above all else the deeper psychological causes of hatred and conflict." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Allport's approach is eclectic, and therefore it is not possible to characterize the book as having a distinctive point of view. It does have a certain peculiar quality, which the author reveals unintentionally. While I find it difficult to characterize this quality, I can convey something of its flavor by labelling it 'naturalistic.' Prejudice is presented as a natural phenomenon, as an inevitable manifestation of human nature. . . In a book as long and on such a difficult subject as Allport's, mistakes are bound to occur." A. M. Rose

Am Soc R 19:608 O '54 800w

"Professor Allport's book may render sovereign-principle theorists more sensitive to factors which they have overlooked. Social scientists and practitioners will welcome its humane concern with eliminating existing prejudices among human groups." Muzafer Sherif

Ann Am Acad 295:171 S '54 550w

Booklist 50:290 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 14:55 D '54 30w

"A brief statement of the content of the work can, at best, only hint at the richness of materials, the systematic character of their organization, and the remarkably warm, yet controlled and objective style of the author, whose moral concern is evident on every page but is never allowed to distort the scientific description and analysis of the data at hand. The book can be used as a text, but it will almost surely also find its way into discussion groups and even to the general reader. If it reaches the general reader it may well change his attitudes not only toward race relations but toward social science as well." W. L. Kolb

+ Social Forces 33:90 O '54 410w

ALMOND, GABRIEL ABRAHAM, and others. Appeals of communism. 415p $6 Princeton Univ. press

335.4 Communism—History 54-9015

"Based on an extensive program of interviewing former American, British, French and Italian Communists, this book attempts to answer such questions as 'Why do people join the Communist party?' 'What happens after they have joined?' and 'Why do some of them leave?' Mr. Almond presents the American Communist party as a refuge for neurotics and foreign-born and first-generation Americans. In his final chapter, he offers a critique of American policy toward the Communist problem." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"All of this puts a reviewer in a quandary. One's normal reaction would be to criticize The Appeals of Communism because it uses the pretense of a statistical approach to arrive at conclusions which for the most part are obvious. But, on the other hand, one's trust in the ability of people to recognize the obvious has become somewhat soured these days. From this point of view, I hope that this book has a wide, wide circulation." Michael Harrington

+ Commonweal 61:22 O 8 '54 650w

"Recommended." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1827 O 1 '54 190w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 3 '54 70w

"With all its limitations the approach to communism exhibited in this volume is infinitely preferable to the demagogic exploitation of the theme for domestic political purposes with which we are too often regaled. It is additional evidence that in the scientific literature about communism, American scholars have made the most notable contributions." Sidney Hook

+ N Y Times p3 S 19 '54 1350w

Reviewed by Martin Ebon

Sat R 37:13 O 9 '54 650w

ALTMAN, GEORGE, and others. Theater pictorial. 320p $10 Univ. of Calif. press

792.09 Theater—Pictorial works. Theater—History 53-11249

"A history of world theater as recorded in drawings, paintings, engravings, and photographs." (Subtitle) It concentrates on the building and methods of staging and mounting plays, and on scenes from plays, although there are some pictures of actors. The period covered is from earliest times to 1950. Contains a list of notes and credits and an index.

Booklist 50:198 Ja 15 '54

"Many lovers of pictorial art will revel spontaneously in the many rare and beautiful pictures presented without even stopping to consider that they are here only means toward an end. My only criticism of consequence is that picture and text do not always get together; occasionally one is even left wondering which of the author's remarks the picture is supposed to illustrate." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 15 '54 150w

"Recommended for theatre and art collections of size." George Freedley

+ Library J 78:2222 D 15 '53 20w

"A refreshing book because it presents 516 pictures, 100 of which have never been reproduced before, and 150 of which have not been reproduced in an English textbook. The editors have wisely restricted the use of pictures for earlier periods already made familiar in many textbooks and have drawn on fresh material to illustrate theater in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. . . This fine and valuable book will be widely used in college courses. There is none better." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 13 '53 650w

+ Theatre Arts 38:13 Ag '54 100w

AMACHER, RICHARD EARL, ed. Franklin's wit and folly. See Franklin, B.

AMBROSE, KAY, and FRANCA, CELIA. Ballet-student's primer; a concentrated guide for beginners of all ages [Eng title: Beginners please!]. 80p il $2.50 Knopf

792.8 Ballet

54-8756

"This concise book of instructions offers advice to students and parents of students of all ages and ambitions, whether they view ballet as vital to their lives or an interesting hobby. The chapters are illustrated with many clear diagrams and drawings and, covering the field of instruction from costume to stage manners, give a sharp view of ballet from the point of technique. Beginners' classes, barre exercises, centre practice, adage, sur les pointes, these are the stages familiar to anyone with a smattering of information about ballet, and as for the steps in between, arabesques, pirouettes, entrechats, they are there too." Kirkus

Bookmark 14:29 N '54 20w

"Although it is a small book, every possible particle of space is used, even down to the inside of the front and back covers. By sticking to absolutely basic particulars Kay Ambrose has made this book universal in its application." W. Michener

+ Canadian Forum 34:93 J1 '54 350w

"A well rounded manual."

+ Kirkus 22:560 Ag 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:2460 D 15 '54 20w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p10
N 14 '54 10w

"This gay little book of balletique is wickedly witty, and shows up through caustic line drawings the mistakes the young dancer may make. Once seen, no student worthy of the name will be caught perpetrating such poses." R. J. Woody

+ N Y Times pt 2 p16 N 14 '54 80w

"It is entirely practical and puts the stress on hard work, beginning with exercises at the barre and going on to the first steps in ballet. Teachers of ballet need not worry. Miss Ambrose is not trying to supplant them. She seeks only to give a general idea of the sequence and purpose of a normal preliminary ballet class. The work will appeal to an audience larger than students only—to the people who make up a typical audience at a ballet performance, artists, photographers, columnists and general connoisseurs." D. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 24 '54
320w

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF MANAGEMENT, INCORPORATED. Manual of excellent managements, 1954. (V 1) 96p $20 The institute, 125 E. 38th St, N.Y. 16

658 Industrial management. Corporations

"This is a list of 348 companies (out of 4,000 considered) whose management practices were studied by the American Institute of Management and found to be 'Excellent Managed.' The bases for appraisal center on 10 factors which comprise the audit rating table: economic function, corporate structure, health of earnings growth, fairness to stock-owners, research and development, directorate analysis, fiscal policies, production efficiency, sales vigor, executive evaluation. An explanation of each category and the questions considered under each one are included. Four arrangements of the list are given: alphabetical, classified by industry, geographical, and by AIM rating points." Library J

Chem ■ Eng N 32:1267 Mr 29 '54 30w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:1061 Je 1 '54 180w

AMERICAN LEGION MAGAZINE. American legion reader; fiction, articles, humor, cartoons; sel. by Victor Lasky. 499p $4.95 Hawthorn bks.

810.8 American literature—Collections.
Short stories—Collections 53-11496

"Concentrating less on entertainment and more on the serious side of life, Victor Lasky has compiled [this anthology] from fiction and non-fiction that have appeared in the American Legion Magazine. These selections are woven around the themes of war, patriotism, and the menace of Communism." Sat R

"Victor Lasky has reaped a rich harvest of stories, articles, cartoons, and humor for this excellent anthology." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 29 '53
500w

"This anthology differs from other anthologies in that Victor Lasky, who did the selection, apparently was concerned chiefly with getting a representative list of authors rather than with literary merit." Luke Carroll

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p11 D 13 '53
450w

"Editor Lasky, who has selected the items between these covers and supplied a lively running comment, has been inclusive in his taste, within the limits of his magazine's overall policy. As the partial list of contributors may indicate, there is far greater variety here than meets the eye at first glance... This is an impressive potpourri, and one that contains stimulation for almost any taste—including the stimulation to argue, which is, after all, the best sign of national health." William Du Bois

N Y Times p42 N 15 '53 450w

Sat R 36:35 D 5 '53 40w

AMERICAN peoples encyclopedia; a comprehensive modern-minded reference work; Walter Dill Scott, chairman of the editorial bd; Franklin J. Meine, ed.-in-chief. 20v il col il maps $179.50 Spencer press

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 52-1676

"The American Peoples Encyclopedia is distributed in the United States exclusively by Sears, Roebuck and Company. The 1948 edition of The American Peoples Encyclopedia was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin April, 1949, and since then has undergone a process of continuous revision. According to the publishers, 'The most important of these revisions were the editorial changes for the 1952 revision... the revision has been systematic through the entire set and also by subjects through the various volumes.'... 'The first purpose of the editors has been to compile a comprehensive, modern-minded, attractive encyclopedia having maximum utility for the home, school, office, and library. The aim of The American Peoples Encyclopedia is to give the reader information most important and useful in daily life—whether the reader be a student in high school, a parent with question-asking children, a farmer who grows the machine worker's food, a mechanic who makes the farmer's machines, a modern career woman, or a professional man.' Introduction." Subscription Bks Bul

"The 1952 printing of The American Peoples Encyclopedia has, as the publishers state, been extensively revised to incorporate corrections and much recent information, without changing the character of the work... For public and school libraries with limited funds and for libraries desiring a supplementary reference set, the 1952 printing of The American Peoples Encyclopedia is recommended as a moderately priced, useful, although not exhaustive work. The price of sets available to individual purchasers, however, is considerably more than when the encyclopedia was last reviewed... In the light of such increases The American Peoples Encyclopedia, while still a useful work, can no longer be recommended as a moderately priced set for home use."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 24:57 O '53 2000w

AMERICAN POLITICAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION. American state legislatures; report of the Committee on American legislatures [ed. by] Belle Zeller. 294p $3.50 Crowell

328.73 Legislative bodies 54-5503

"This scholarly survey is a report of the Committee on American Legislatures of the American Political Science Association. It examines the main aspects of our state legislatures and makes a large number of recommendations which are in accord with current trends of thinking. The committee was favorably impressed with unicameralism and legislative councils, which it appraises in some detail. The report recommends, among other things, smaller memberships with better pay, simplified committee systems, improved records, annual sessions, better legislative aids organized as a single service, improved executive-legislative relationships, and legislative leadership through such devices as joint policy committees." Nation

AMERICAN POLITICAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION—Continued

"It is to be hoped that this report will be carefully studied. Dr. Zeller is to be congratulated for her part in this work. She will probably be happy if only some of the recommendations are adopted. Not all of them can be, but it is urgent that something be done soon about state legislatures." R. V. Peel

+ Ann Am Acad 296:172 N '54 550w

Booklist 50:311 Ap 15 '54

"The volume is not light, but is illuminating reading. The serious student will find it difficult to lay down and will find a second or third perusal of increasing value. And for the citizen who takes his citizenship to heart, the report will startle as well as inform." Stafford Derby

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 8 '54 450w

Nation 178:389 My 1 '54 140w

The AMERICAN WEEKLY. My favorite true mystery; a collection by the world's foremost crime writers; ed. and with an introd. by Ernest V. Heyn. 272p $3 Coward-McCann 364.1 Murder. Crime and criminals

53-8885

"36 short accounts of some of the more spectacular or intriguing crimes enthusiasts have committed. The list of authors reads like a who's who of the mystery story world, including such notable professionals as Erle Stanley Gardner, Ellery Queen, Mignon Eberhart, Leslie Ford, Hugh Pentecost and a number of others not so well known but with a nice flair for blood. Most of the crimes have been featured in newspapers within recent years, and all of the articles have appeared in the American Weekly, a Sunday paper supplement." Springf'd Republican

Kirkus 21:728 N 1 '53 80w

"Most of the cases are uncommonly interesting ones although very few of them seem to have had more than perfunctory consideration from their writers and all of them are crammed into rather fewer pages than allow for more than summary treatment. Only occasionally, as when Miss Lawrence recalls the dully shrewd Annie Sutherland Buchanan (Newark, 1895) is there any distinction of manner." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 24 '54 220w

"A few of the authors have done surprisingly well under the limitations. Ellery Queen adds fact crime to his countless fields of conquest with colorful but solid accounts of the William Desmond Taylor and Joseph Elwell cases; Eric Ambler, in a longer piece than most, offers an interesting discussion of the disappearance of diplomats Burgess and Maclean, and Erle Stanley Gardner presents lively conjectures on England's extraordinary (and still unsolved) time-capsule murder of 1945. But most of the articles are at least inadequate, when not actually inaccurate." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p26 Ja 17 '54 270w

"By and large, these are a pretty sad lot. Now and then you'll find, among the 36, one that has some substance, some quality, even in the cut-down form in which they are told. But in general these pieces were hardly worth putting into book form." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 23 '53 650w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:39 Mr 6 '54 20w

"A really excellent collection." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p10D Ja 17 '54 170w

AMES, DELANO L. No mourning for the matador. 190p $2.50 Washburn

53-11355

Detective story.

"The detective plot is pretty weak, but most of the people are rewarding and the bars are superb." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p48 N 22 '53 30w

"Jane and Dagobert Brown are in Barcelona, somehow involved in the problem of who slipped the reefer to the popular torero, and dealing with a group of characters who all turn out to be rather improbably related. The motive is even thinner, but if you don't mind that you may be happy. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 13 '53 50w

"Setting agreeable, manner sprightly, cast confusingly abundant." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:39 Mr 6 '54 20w

AMES, MRS EVELYN (PERKINS). My brother bird; pictures by William Pène du Bois. 125p $2.75 Dodd

Birds—Legends and stories 53-11805

Story of Smoky, an ordinary New York pigeon, hatched on a Park Avenue window sill. When he lost his mother the Bennetts adopted him, took him to Long Island with them, and Smoky was a member of the family as long as he lived.

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

"There is rare beauty in the writing and in the author's feeling for Smoky and for the human characters. She is a poet and a few of her poems are included within the story. That seems to me the only flaw in an otherwise perfect book—the poems are not needed; Smoky's story is complete and full of poetry without them. A book for adults to share with any child from eight on." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:172 Je '54 110w

"A distinguished and beautiful story of a family's experience in having a pigeon for a pet." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:781 Ap 15 '54 70w

"[The] story is all true, and is beautifully written and illustrated." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 28 '54 220w

"Mrs. Ames writes of birds with an observation which is both precise and poetic, and with an intensity of feeling which somehow never quite verges on sentimentality. Her story—or rather, memoir—has a quality which will remind adults of Gustav Eckstein's 'Canary.' It is not, of course, for the child who demands fast action or a formal plot, but for thoughtful readers it will be an unusual and illuminating experience." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 28 '54 200w

"Never sentimental, Mrs. Ames writes with great sympathy and understanding of children and animals. And with considerable humor. Mr. du Bois has caught the personalities of the four children and the free spirit of the pigeon in his sensitive illustrations." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:64 My 15 '54 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:141 My '54

AMIS, KINGSLEY. Lucky Jim. 256p $3.50 Doubleday

54-5356

"Jim Dixon, Mr. Amis' protagonist, is an amiable and irreverent opportunist who has found himself, after the war, in the improbable role of an instructor in medieval history in a minor British college. . . The academic life is sketched in a kind of hilarious hatred through Dixon's eyes. For him it is no more than ■ running duel with his superior, Professor Welch, a continual speculation as to whether he will be dropped at the year's end or continued on probation for another year. He is trapped in the social orbit of the Welches, whom he loathes, and it is upon the Professor's set that Mr. Amis concentrates his fire." N Y Times

Booklist 50:239 F 15 '54

"Absolute anglophiles may find this gay and sportive but the average American reader could dismiss it as an arid intellectual exercise."

Kirkus 21:746 N 15 '53 160w

"Although this is a brilliantly and preposterously funny book, Mr Amis has yet to learn the art of climax. Professor Welch's madrigal week-end, the college ball, and the final catastrophic lecture fail to reach the high peaks of comedy." Patricia Hodgart

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 F 2 '54 240w

"Lucky Jim is an extremely interesting first novel, and parts of it are very funny indeed: the episodes of the bed-burning and Jim's public lecture, for instance, mount to the complexity and tension of certain passages in the Marx Brothers' films or in the paper-hanging act one still sees from time to time in pantomime. And Mr. Amis has an unwaveringly merciless eye for the bogus. . . Mr. Amis is a novelist of formidable and uncomfortable talent." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:136 Ja 30 '54 550w

"'Lucky Jim' is a very clever book in a very English fashion. There will be readers who will be highly amused at Kingsley Amis' talent for shaping words and situations and people into a laughter-inducing pattern and there will be readers who, while admitting his talent, will think it wasted on an accumulation of trivia."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 25 '54 260w

"Written with the cool, detached, sardonic style which is the trademark of the British satirical novelist, 'Lucky Jim' is funny in something approaching the Wodehouse vein, but it cuts a bit deeper." Edmund Fuller

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 31 '54 400w

"A highly unusual first novel by a young English writer who is endowed with, and in control of, more than his share of talent, humor, and human sympathy."

+ New Yorker 30:116 Mr 6 '54 220w

"Mr. Amis writes without clichés or awkwardness, a virtue the best English writers today seem unable to avoid. 'Lucky Jim' isn't a great book or a probable best seller. It is only a first-rate novel that will continue for some time to appeal to those who think human nature shows up even in the universities. And the author, Kingsley Amis, promises a lot more than he has as yet fulfilled." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 37:20 F 20 '54 360w

"There are one or two weaknesses in the book. A tendency towards caricature in the minor characters sometimes throws the perspective out for a page or two, and Jim's ultimate benefactor arrives on the scene too early and too obviously in that rôle. But these are unimportant. What matters is that Mr. Kingsley Amis has written a very funny, very human first novel. He will write many more." John Metcalf

+ — Spec p132 Ja 29 '54 500w

"Mr. Amis has enough understanding of the importance and mechanism of social comedy to make his book not only very promising but also extremely enjoyable in its own right."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 12 '54 420w

AMREIN, MRS VERA R. Sudden voyage; il. by Frederick Henning. 218p $2.75 Harcourt 54-8578

Three children spending a summer on Long Island are given a sloop by their father. They have strict orders not to go sailing alone, but a severe storm makes them break rules, with exciting results.

Booklist 51:137 N 15 '54

"The children are sufficient fascination. Just to listen to them and look at them is enough. Mrs. Amrein, whose sailing technique is well-comely accurate, has provided us with a story as fresh and acceptable as a burst of sunshine on a March morning. I wish the Russians would translate it and see what American youngsters are like." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 11 '54 160w

"Realistically written, this has the humor and homeliness that makes the adventure believable."

+ Kirkus 22:681 O 1 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '54 60w

ANDERSEN, HARTVIG. Dark city; a true account of adventures of a secret agent in Berlin as told to [the author]. 314p $3.50 Rinehart

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Germany—Berlin. World war, 1939-1945—Secret service 54-5397

"Here is an account of the last days of the Nazi regime in Berlin prior to its fall. The account has been written by a Danish newspaper man for the O. S. S. officer whose story it is. Aage Schmidt (or Smith) was a member of the Danish underground, who, after the breakup of his particular unit in Denmark, joined the O. S. S. in Sweden to train secret agents." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:316 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:130 Mr '54 30w

"For all the simplicity and matter of factness of his presentation, 'The Dark City' speaks eloquently of the courage and determination that all the Aage Schmidts brought to their valuable work in behalf of the United States." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 14 '54 400w

Kirkus 21:781 D 1 '53 170w

"This account is in a relatively low key, with a good fringe of sense in his descriptions of Berlin being battered. . . However, the bestiality of the Russians when they come is vividly recounted. Recommended for those who like such reminiscences." Karl Brown

Library J 79:200 F 1 '54 90w

"The most interesting and important part of this narrative is what happened in Berlin after its capture by the Russians. The story of the life in Berlin, the cowering in basements of the civilian population, the breakup of German resistance, the utter hopelessness of the city's atmosphere, make fascinating, depressing reading."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 21 '54 360w

"This one has the ring of truth. In any case, read as fiction or non-fiction, this secret agent was a very good Stockholm traveler." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 21 '54 600w

"His account of his escape from his Allies, the Russians, who refused to believe a word he said, is without much doubt one of the most grimly fascinating, and instructive, cloak-and-dagger nightmares that have come to us so far."

New Yorker 30:158 Ap 24 '54 140w

"It would have been wonderful reading if Smith had told more, not only of his own experiences but about the secret agent system itself and perhaps some of what happened to other agents. Perhaps he couldn't, and anyway the end of the war came very soon. But there is also the latter part of the book which, in its way, is even more interesting, though on a slightly different theme."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 25 '54 650w

Reviewed by H. M. Champness
Spec p409 O 1 '54 270w

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Crooked colt [il. by the author]. $2 Macmillan (N Y)
Horses—Legends and stories 54-12607

A story of a colt with crooked legs that, with loving care, grows up to be strong enough to run as fast as the other colts and of a little girl who befriends him, when her brothers and sisters laugh at him.

Booklist 51:179 D 15 '54

"If you liked Anderson's 'Blaze' stories you'll delight in this." Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54 60w

"A heart rending and utterly beguiling picture story by the loved author artist." + Kirkus 22:634 S 15 '54

"Recommended for 6-8-year-olds." M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 79:2490 D 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p14 N 14 '54 20w

"Almost every little girl these days would give her kingdom for a horse. But she'll settle for a horse story; and if it has to do with a weak little fellow, unlike other colts, it will gain her sympathy. In this story the colt is unusually small and weak." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times pt 2 p42 N 14 '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 14 '54 70w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 30w

ANDERSON, DILLON. Claudie's kinfolds. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 277p $3.75 Little 54-11124

"In his first book, 'I and Claudie,' Dillon Anderson, a Texas lawyer, introduced not only two zany characters, Clint Hightower and Claudie Hughes, but his own brand of bred-in-the-cactus American humor. Now, in his second book, 'Claudie's Kinfolds,' he continues the delightfully mad adventures of these two gentlemen of the road." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:151 D 1 '54

"Amiable."

+ Kirkus 22:545 Ag 15 '54 140w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 O 24 '54 180w

Reviewed by Ben Crisler
N Y Times p37 N 21 '54 300w

"How Claudie is billed as a man of distinction, how he and Clint travel irresponsibly through Texas in a trailer, how these itinerants then meet some momentary disappointments in the drollery of Mr. Anderson's tale. Fortunately it is unforced humor, for Mr. Anderson writes sympathetically, even a little enviously of situations involving a small-time rogue and his stooge." W. H. Kittrell
+ Sat R 37:17 D 11 '54 230w

ANDERSON, LADY FLAVIA JOAN LUCY (GIFFARD). Ancient secret; in search of the Holy Grail. 288p il $5 Harper
398.22 Grail [53-39507]

An inquiry into the literature and legends of the Holy Grail. "Her original theory is that the Holy Grail was a globe which, when filled with water, refracted the sun's rays to create fire, while the sacred flame was the sword Excalibur. The Arthurian legend goes back to Druidic mysteries which long antedated the Christian era, and which were widespread in Europe and derived from the ancient East. These mysteries were in very ancient times associated with Glastonbury and Wookey Hole, and the latter is held to be the original Hades, with the Axe as the River Styx and the stalagmite Witch of Wookey as the original Prosperpine." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"Lady Flavia Anderson has given us a fascinating, original, and fanciful book. . . All this worked out with extreme skill, and the wide reading and brilliant linking of legends and rites by the authoress will impress every reader." H. H. Rowley

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 13 '53 450w

"Is there anything remarkable or new to be said about the Grail legend and its sources that was not said? Lady Flavia Anderson has written such a book: her thesis is entirely new, and carries conviction as being both plausible and imaginatively rich. Lady Flavia's theory is essentially simple and concrete; a single inspired guess illuminates so much material that it is hard to believe that she is wrong." Kathleen Raine

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:640 N 21 '53 900w

"Lady Flavia's book is recommended only to those who enjoy this sort of wide-ranging loony speculation and can suspend disbelief almost indefinitely."

New Yorker 30:174 O 23 '54 180w

"A striking and penetrating study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p109 F 12 '54 700w

ANDERSON, HERBERT S. How to carve characters in wood [prepared] in collaboration with Al Paul Theil. 77p il $2.50 Univ. of N.Mex. press

731 Wood carving 53-13399

"Ranch-hand 'Hank' Anderson, who has evidently found that carving pays more than cowpoking, claims there's nothing to it. And he presents photographs of his work to prove the point. Step-by-step instructions are given, covering the selection of the proper kinds of wood, the knives that are needed, techniques, painting and staining the completed figures." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 50:235 F 15 '54

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 31 '54 120w

ANDERSON, OSCAR EDWARD. Refrigeration in America; a history of a new technology and its impact; published for the Univ. of Cincinnati. 344p il maps $6 Princeton univ. press

621.56 Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery 52-13148

"A history of the development of the technology of refrigeration in the U.S. and its impact on American industry, agriculture, and economic leadership, which will be of interest not only to the historian, the sociologist, and the economist, but also to the general reader." Booklist

"This book is a thoughtful and well-written contribution to the history of technology and its impact on American life." R. O. Cummings
+ Am Hist R 59:730 Ap '54 150w

"A comprehensive, scholarly, documented study that should be of considerable value to the student of technological history, economic history and social change." J. B. Gittler

+ Am J Soc 59:595 My '54 200w

Booklist 49:369 J1 15 '53

"Very interesting and informative account."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:495 D '53 240w

ANDERSON, ROBERT WOODRUFF. Tea and sympathy. 182p il $2.75 Random house 812 54-6174

Text of a play which opened on Broadway on September 30, 1953. The scene is a New England preparatory school. The play is concerned with a boy falsely accused of homosexuality.

Booklist 50:218 F 1 '54

"Highly recommended for drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:560 Mr 15 '54 30w

"Deftly and tastefully constructed drama." William Hogan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 23 '54 60w

ANDRADE, EDWARD NEVILLE DA COSTA. Sir Isaac Newton. (Brief lives) 140p $1.75 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Newton, Sir Isaac [54-11191]

A "brief biography" aimed at young readers, by an English authority on the subject, author of Isaac Newton, in the Personal portraits series (Book Review Digest 1951).

"The account of Newton's life is economical and attractive; the famous anecdotes are joined with broad historical knowledge to give a living picture of the man. Newton's importance, however, lies in his intellectual achievement, not in his fascinating character. Professor Andrade expounds the nature and the meaning of this achievement with admirable lucidity."

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:447 Ap 8 '54 240w

"E. N. da C. Andrade, a leading British physicist and historian of research, writes simply and with keen scientific insight." J. P. + Sat R 37:20 Ag 21 '54 330w

"The book will be read with pleasure by scientifically-minded fourteen-year-olds, and by any adults who do not mind being written down to." Stephen Toulmin

Spec p444 Ap 11 '54 320w

"Limited though his space is, Professor Andrade has shown Newton in his setting, and has particularly made clear what he owed to Copernicus, Kepler and Galileo. He has even found space for an analysis of the anecdotes, and in particular has shown that the story of the dog Diamond destroying years of work cannot be true. The only point that may be missed by a reader is a study of Newton's views on absolute space and time in the light of relativistic theories. No one except Professor Andrade could have written a biography so admirably succinct and complete."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p93 F 11 '54 650w

ANDREWS, FRANCES M., and LEEDER, JOSEPH A. Guiding junior-high school pupils in music experiences; il. by Joe Smith. 372p $4.75 Prentice-Hall

780.72 Music—Instruction and study 53-10164

"According to the preface the aim of the book is to hold 'steadfast to the purpose of supplying materials and methods that may be put to practical use. Discussion of educational theory and philosophy has been limited to the extent necessary for the clarification of controversial issues and the furnishing of background information.'" Library J

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 78:1539 S 15 '53 90w

"Probably the greatest contribution this book will make is to aid in developing an understanding of the importance of the General Music Class. Means of obtaining a great variety of activity within the program, even with limited materials, are quite fully discussed. The chapter on teaching aids, with the list of materials presented, will prove valuable. The materials listed are alone almost worth the price of the book. The weakest section of the volume is that devoted to instrumental music, but even here there are ideas that should bring about better teaching. This book should be in the hands of every teacher who works with adolescents and should be used in college methods classes." E. E. Beach

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:475 Je '54 320w

"This is an unusually useful book for teachers in the critical area of the junior high school. . . It should be mentioned that use of the book need not be limited to teachers in junior high schools, for teachers of this age group in other school setups will benefit from its many helpful suggestions. The book is heartily recommended to the attention of teachers in fields other than music and also to administrators." V. H. Talley

+ School 62:309 My '54 750w

ANDREWS, FRANK EMERSON. Attitudes toward giving. 145p $2 Russell Sage

361.01 Charity. Money-raising campaigns 53-11804

"The author, long a staff member of the Foundation, provides in this volume an indication of public attitudes toward fund solicitations. Based on a limited number of personal interviews with a cross section of givers from every social stratum, the writer probes such factors as motivation for giving, reaction to different appeal techniques and attitudes toward specific charitable agencies." Library J

Reviewed by G. J. Heidt

Am J Pub Health 44:945 Jl '54 360w

Reviewed by A. D. Ross

Am Soc R 19:511 Ag '54 300w

"Few aspects of life in the United States are more fundamental to 'our way' than the nation-wide network of voluntary health and welfare agencies. If they are to survive, their fund-raising methods must reflect both the most scientific and the most acceptable techniques of solicitation. Attitudes Toward Giving is not the final piece of research needed to insure this important objective, but it is a substantial contribution to it." A. D. Bouterse

+ Ann Am Acad 293:186 My '54 400w

Booklist 50:252 Mr 1 '54

"A sound volume on a subject in which the literature is extremely limited." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:210 F 1 '54 130w

ANDREWS, ROY CHAPMAN. All about whales; il. by Thomas W. Voter. 148p $1.95 Random house

599.5 Whales—Juvenile literature, Whaling—Juvenile literature 54-7001

"In order to study the strange habits of all kinds of whales—humpbacks, porpoises, sulphurbottoms, devil fish, gray, sei, and many others—Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, noted scientist and explorer, traveled for eight years to the remote parts of the world and into all of the seven seas. 'All About Whales' is his book-length report of this study." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 51:20 S 1 '54

Reviewed by John Lewellen

Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 14 '54 50w

"Any boy or girl from nine or ten up who loves the sea should have this." L. S. Bechtel + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p28 N 14 '54 50w

"The Andrews name on a book is a guarantee that it will be both interesting and authentic. This book is no exception and is highly recommended for the young reader who likes his facts in story form and full of excitement as well."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '54 80w

"Exciting, fascinating. . . This is truly an Allabout Book. It will interest boys and girls from the age of ten to fourteen and older." L. W. R.

+ Sat R 37:84 N 13 '54 150w

ANDREWS, ROY CHAPMAN. Beyond adventure; the lives of three explorers. 244p $3.75 Duell; Little

920.9 Akeley, Carl Ethan, Peary, Robert Edwin 54-8303

Biographical sketches on the careers of Robert E. Peary and Carl Akeley, and an autobiographical sketch of the author. It is the author's intention to show that they were men "impelled by a resistless drive that will not be denied."

Bookmark 14:29 N '54 20w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1492 D 8 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:572 Ag 15 '54 180w

ANDREWS, R. C.—Continued

"Andrews writes more fascinatingly of others than of himself but it's good writing even in the latter case. For all libraries; may need heavy duplication in public libraries." R. P. Bartolini

+ Library J 79:1885 O 15 '54 90w

"Mr. Andrews presents, in succinct and readable form, the outline of what each of these three accomplished. He also makes plain what the accomplishments cost in terms of physical and nervous exhaustion, and how a single misjudged word or act could jeopardize success."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 5 '54 280w

New Yorker 30:154 D 18 '54 180w

"All three men were scientists, originators, pioneers on journeys beset by hazard and hardship, suffering and frustration. Fascination with the unknown, Andrews makes clear in his book, was the force that drove them to new places where life was dangerous and richly adventurous."

+ Springf'd Republican p3C O 17 '54 100w

ANGLE, PAUL MCCLELLAND, ed. By these words; il. by Edward A. Wilson. 560p $5.95 Rand McNally

973 U.S.—History—Sources 54-10616

"Great documents of American liberty, selected and placed in their contemporary settings." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 51:103 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:29 N '54 30w

"The book is distinguished from many similar collections by nine important legal documents, not readily accessible, that pertain to freedom of the press, racial equality in state education, the right of political opposition, and resistance to executive use [or misuse] of the military power. . . . The collection suffers from two defects. Mr. Angle says it was made to exemplify 'the growth of democratic government and the evolution and defense of individual liberty.' Why, then, has he included South Carolina's justification of secession and Jefferson Davis' inaugural message of February, 1862? . . . The second defect is the overweighting of the collection with recent documents of doubtful relevance to Angle's two themes." C. F. Nettels

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 10 '54 550w

"This is good collateral reading in American history for students, and good reading for anybody for the cultivation of intelligent patriotism." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1399 N 17 '54 350w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 24 '54 250w

"Good for regular and young people's collections and will have some general reference use in the library." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 79:2449 D 15 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 28 '54 50w

"A handsome volume that should be useful in school and public libraries. If most of its contents are both familiar and available in other anthologies, perhaps they cannot be too familiar or too easily accessible. By restricting his selection to official documents, Mr. Angle has produced a book which he himself admits is 'often something less than exciting reading,' but all the statements here included are important and admirable." David Donald

+ N Y Times p30 O 31 '54 700w

"A simple idea has produced an excellent anthology. . . . This is a splendid way to begin or encourage an interest in the story of our common heritage." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 21 '54 170w

ANGUS, HENRY FORBES. Canada and the Far East, 1940-1953; issued under the auspices of the Canadian Institute of international affairs and the Institute of Pacific relations. 129p $3.50 Inst. of Pacific relations 327.71 Canada—Foreign policy 53-13495

"[A study] of the factors involving one country's interest in the Far East since the outbreak of World War II. The author, head of the Department of Economics, Political Science and Sociology at the University of British Columbia, does a good job of explaining recent Canadian nationalism, Canada and the United Nations in the Far East, the peace settlement with Japan, trade policies, economic assistance, and Canadian opinion about the Far East." Current Hist

"All in all, the book is a brilliant analysis from a strictly Canadian point of view of the principles of Canadian policy toward East and Southeast Asia. It is not without dull pages and sections. But that dullness is not the author's fault; for never since Arthur Meighen's insistence on the abrogation of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance has the Far East been one of the primary concerns of Canadian external policy." Ping-ti Ho

+ — Am Hist R 60:192 O '54 480w

Am Pol Sci R 48:588 Je '54 40w

Reviewed by M. G. Lawson

Ann Am Acad 296:206 N '54 200w

"Dr. Angus' obvious concern with brevity also accounts for two other minor flaws of the book: occasionally he condenses his material so thoroughly that the general reader may not fully grasp the implications, and the treatment of the Indo-Chinese problem appears to me to be too cursory. His excellent discussion of some of the more vital aspects of colonialism might have been used to indicate a desirable Canadian policy towards the acute problem of the nationalist movements within the French Union. The critical comments made above do not detract seriously from the real worth of Dr. Angus' study. They may perhaps be no more than an indication of a difference of interests between the author and his reviewer. Canada and the Far East 1940-53 is an excellent book." John Meisel

+ — Canadian Forum 33:280 Mr '54 850w

"It is a pleasure to read the crisp, incisive sentences of Professor Angus, so genuinely alive in comparison with much of the turgid stuff that flows from the presses. The subject itself is not of electrifying interest but the author proves that a good writer can hold the reader's interest whatever the topic. . . . The book constitutes another convenient survey of our present international position." A. R. M. Lower

+ Canadian Hist R 35:154 Je '54 600w

"An interesting study. . . . Many of those in the United States puzzled about Canada's reactions to some of our Far Eastern policies will find much in this slim work to make the opinions of our northern neighbors more understandable."

+ Current Hist 26:255 Ap '54 90w

"This is a lucid and definitive account. . . . Recommended for purchase by college and larger public libraries." W. B. Ready

+ Library J 79:552 Mr 15 '54 130w

ANIMAL kingdom; the strange and wonderful ways of mammals, birds, reptiles, fishes and insects; ed. by Frederick Drimmer. 3v il 2.062p $17.50 Greystone

590 Animals

53-11687

"This imposing work, illustrated with ninety-two pages of photographs, twenty color plates and more than five hundred drawings, runs to something over two thousand pages. It is intended, say the publishers, to take the place once occupied by Woods' 'Natural History.' . . . Written by seven specialists all holding important posts, at either the American Museum of Natural History or The New York Zoological Society instead of by one clergyman-naturalist, it ought to be, and it certainly is, a good deal more authoritative. Yet the comparison is not inapt because the intentions of the two works are essentially the same: to provide a readable, largely non-technical survey of the whole world of animal life. And there is no modern work which does just that." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"A comprehensive, up-to-date compilation of scientific information. . . The text is concise, accurate without sounding too scientific, popular in approach. . . This bids fair to take the place of the long term standard Woods' Natural History, out of print for some thirty years."

+ Kirkus 22:604 S 1 '54 170w

"Obviously the various authors have been chosen not only for their technical competence but also because they can write simply and clearly with a sympathetic understanding of what the layman will find interesting. . . Such a work may be used to read through, to browse about in, or for 'looking things up.' All these uses it will serve admirably, and I have submitted the last to a severe test by pulling names at random out of the air and then going to the extensive index." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 3 '54 1050w

"In the opinion of many, a comprehensive treatise on the animal kingdom should properly stand with the Bible, a dictionary, encyclopedia and a good cookbook in every modern home. Probably this is the one to occupy such space in the family reference library." Donald Carlisle

+ N Y Times p7 S 12 '54 750w

"An attempt to trace the origin, evolution, and contemporary aspect of all the multitudinous creatures with whom we visibly share the earth. Presented in three huge volumes, totalling some two thousand pages and illustrated with nearly eight hundred photographs and drawings, many in color, the work is almost as imposing in its physical bulk as in its scope."

+ New Yorker 30:191 N 6 '54 240w

ANSLINGER, HARRY JACOB, and TOMPKINS, WILLIAM F. Traffic in narcotics. 354p il maps $4.50 Funk

614.3 [178.8] Drug habit. Drug trade 53-6984

"An authoritative and comprehensive study by the U.S. Commissioner of Narcotics and an attorney who was formerly chairman of a New Jersey legislative commission to study narcotics. . . Factors stressed are international control, compulsory treatment of addicts, and stringent penalties for traffickers. Additional useful features include a model uniform narcotic drugs law, and a glossary of terms." (Booklist) Index.

"A semi-official statement on the nature of the narcotics problem and appropriate methods of dealing with it. It cannot be recommended as a source of information on the subject, for fact and fancy are inextricably intertwined throughout the exposition, and many important items of fact are never mentioned at all. Space does not permit detailed documentation, but those familiar with the literature will recognize many omissions and distortions. The book should, however, become a standard source for those interested in studying this country's official ideology on the narcotics question." H. S. Becker

— Am Soc R 19:644 O '54 300w

Booklist 50:272 Mr 15 '54

"Widespread publicity given the narcotic problem in recent years has struck terror in the hearts of parents, and many well intentioned but often ill conceived programs of action have been initiated. There has been a crying need for authoritative information which will aid in keeping the problem in its true perspective. Such data will be found in [this] book." V. W. Peterson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 10 '54 400w

Reviewed by Helen Henley

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 8 '54 700w

"A sober survey of addiction and the many areas which it affects, largely for a professional market."

Kirkus 21:689 O 1 '53 150w

"There are legal texts and a glossary of terms used in the traffic, most of them of underworld origin. The work is well indexed, too. On the other hand, it is not light reading. It will be useful to the student of sociology, to law enforcement officers and to legislators, but it's not the kind of thing to curl up with for an afternoon of good cheer." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p31 Ap 11 '54 300w

"The subject is presented from the law-enforcement point of view, and little attention is given to the divergent approaches to the narcotics problem suggested in recent years by some social scientists. The general reader, desirous of informing himself on the basics of drug addiction, may well resort to this book which, incidentally, has an abundance of case material."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:252 Je '54 180w

ANTHONY, EVELYN, pseud. See Stephens, E.

ANTHONY, KATHARINE SUSAN. Susan B. Anthony: her personal history and her era. 521p il $6 Doubleday

B or 92 Anthony, Susan Brownell. Woman suffrage 54-8919

This biography of one of America's most famous women, an early militant suffragist, describes not only Susan B. Anthony herself, but her family beginnings in England and America, and her many friends in the battle for women's rights. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:105 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:55 D '54 40w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 10 '54 400w

"A valuable contribution to our understanding of a period teeming with reforms." R. M. Pratt

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 24 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:519 Ag 1 '54 260w

"A restrained but definitive life of one of the most important reform leaders of the 19th century. . . The Woman Suffrage movement is well presented for the modern reader and the young historian who would know an era. For all libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1819 O 1 '54 130w

Nation 61:389 O 30 '54 160w

"One of the virtues of this book is that it gives an adequate account of Susan's ancestry and family, a remarkable group of people with a will almost as strong as hers and an idealism almost as great. . . Miss Anthony has written a solid and often diverting volume, in spite of the many pages unavoidably given to chronicling arguments that seem petty now and train trips that seem merely exhausting." Paul Engle

+ New Repub 131:22 N ■ '54 850w

"Miss Anthony is a formidable subject for a biography. Miss Katharine Anthony's courage is to be praised. So is, as always, her achievement. She is a superb biographer, careful and reasonable in her research; clinical of approach, yet warm, sensitive, and emphatic; and so greatly talented in the writing that the time she spends in preparation, between books must almost be begrudged." E. H. Smith.

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 O 10 '54 700w

"Katharine Anthony has rendered a service in introducing modern Americans to an American of the nineteenth century whose vigorous activity and effective leadership have helped to make us what we are today. The biography is a monument to the detailed and careful research we have learned to expect from the author." M. M. Horton

+ N Y Times p22 O 10 '54 900w

ANTHONY, K. S.—Continued

"The author has written excellent biographies of several famous women—among them Catherine the Great, Marie Antoinette, and Louisa May Alcott—but here she may have made a mistake. The book is long and conscientious, but because of the very qualities that made Susan B. Anthony the estimable, high-minded woman she was, it is dull."

— + New Yorker 30:164 O 16 '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 5 '54 400w

"Katharine Anthony's 'Susan B. Anthony' gives back dignity to the historic crusade for women's rights as a landmark in the worldwide struggle for human rights and democracy. Reading of Susan's trial and conviction in 1873 for having asserted the right of a citizen (female) to vote, we begin to realize the debt women owe this selfless pioneer for a world they take for granted." H. B. Woodward

+ Sat R 37:20 O '54 1100w

ARBER, MRS AGNES (ROBERTSON). Mind and the eye; a study of the biologist's standpoint. 145p $3 Cambridge

570.1 Biology—Philosophy [54-1624]

"A statement of the place of biology as science and the method or steps by which a biologist carries on research. About half the book is concerned with an analysis of five stages of the biologist's work, i.e. selecting a research problem, compiling and interpreting facts, testing hypotheses and communicating results." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Recommended for all large public, college and university libraries." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:452 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Even if Mrs. Arber had not revealed that she has been studying plant morphology for more than half a century, and attempting to clarify her ideas on the processes of scientific argument of the past twenty years, her pages would give ample proof of a clear mind and mature erudition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p139 F 26 '54 750w

"As a biologist, I found the book immensely thoughtful and stimulating. I look forward to getting the reactions of friends in philosophy and literature whom I hope to persuade to read it. Maybe they will call it naive; but, if so, I think it is the naivete of great and simple and clear thinking." Marston Bates

+ Yale R n s 43:633 summer '54 950w

ARBUTHNOT, THOMAS SHAW. African hunt. 269p il $3.95 Norton

799.2 Hunting—Africa 54-8411

Describes a hunting trip in Africa in 1927. The author was a Pittsburgh doctor, aged fifty-six, and his companions were two young Leland Stanford students.

Booklist 50:337 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 30w

"The English language contains many words that bring pictures to the mind so distinctly they can be termed picture words. Dr. Arbuthnot's vocabulary embraces so many picture words he has no difficulty in writing a word picture of Africa that pleases the mind and stimulates the imagination." Mason Warner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 21 '54 370w

Kirkus 22:26 Ja 1 '54 220w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1520 S 1 '54 20w

"'African Hunt' is a dish well spiced with humor and well served. Its components are unusual." R. C. Andrews

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 28 '54 800w

"There have been many African-hunt books done, by professionals and amateurs, but this one ranks well up on any list." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap '54 600w

Reviewed by H. C. Adamson

Sat R 37:12 Jl 10 '54 360w

"It appears that about everyone who has gone big-game hunting in Africa feels compelled to write a book about his experiences; this is one that can be skipped without compunction." J. J. N.

— Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 250w

ARD, WILLIAM. Don't come crying to me. 214p $2.50 Rinehart

54-5649

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:276 Ap 15 '54 70w

"Mr. Ard allows Timothy an odd muddle of tight ethics and loose mouth, leaving him absurdly flammable when any babe . . . juggles into view. But Ard does manage a sort of jet-propelled narrative which will probably keep you a little too breathless to be able to complain about incidental absurdities." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 4 '54 200w

"William Ard continues to display an economy and originality rare (and vastly welcome) in the hard-boiled field." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 90w

"All the action you'd want, and lively reading." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 8 '54 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:41 Jl 24 '54 20w

ARGOW, WENDELIN WALDEMAR WIE-
LAND. Case for liberal religion. 155p $2.50
Antioch press

230 Liberalism (religion) 54-6800

"A re-examination and re-affirmation of liberal religious beliefs. The author feels that a defeatist spirit is poisoning religion in America, that the 'old liberal emphases—on clarity and directness, on optimism and hope, on the possibility of progress, on reason, on man and nature—have been supplanted by their opposites; and it is to combat this that he has written this book." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) No index.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25 '54 40w

"Presents the case convincingly." J. W. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 180w

ARGYRIS, CHRIS. Executive leadership; an appraisal of a manager in action. 139p $2.50
Harper

658.312 Executives. Industrial management. Leadership 53-11827

"This evaluation of a manager's performance as a leader in his organization gives his concept of the job, the supervisor's ideas on his work, and the research worker's analysis of both." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by Melville Dalton

Am Soc R 19:803 D '54 650w

Booklist 50:272 Mr 15 '54

"The book 'Executive Leadership' has developed the unique procedure of taking the industrial manager right into the plant and dealing with actual problems. It is directed at practicing executives and should be helpful to those interested in understanding leadership, since the book is based upon actual studies in this field. Without mincing words or covering up the issues, it lays bare why in some instances a manager is successful and why in others he is not." H. C. Kenney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My '54 380w

Library J 79:906 My 15 '54 50w
 Springf'd Republican p3D D 27 '53 300w
 U S Quarterly B2 R 10:228 Je '54 160w

"Even the general reader will find this ■ rewarding study, which can be applied to ■ community organization as well ■ to industry."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:25 Ja '54

ARISTOPHANES. Lysistrata; an English version by Dudley Fitts. 132p $3.50 Harcourt 882 54-6389

A new translation of the Greek play, Lysistrata by Aristophanes, which deals with a woman's way of ending a war.

"This is a rather sorry attempt to bring the war-bride skit of Aristophanes into modern dress."

— Kirkus 22:256 Ap 1 '54 100w

"Recommended for all drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1407 Ag '54 20w

"Dudley Fitts has gone for 'faithfulness' rather than 'strictness,' with the result that his Lysistrata comes through as ■ powerful experience in English. As ■ non-reader of Greek I had previously known the Lysistrata only in two feeble translations that may have caught the words but certainly missed the force, the tragedy, and the great roaring bawdiness of Aristophanes. With this rendering by Fitts I have found the play for the first time, an experience in delight." John Ciardi

+ Nation 178:525 Je 19 '54 550w

"The Lysistrata deserves understanding and skillful treatment, and this it has happily received at the experienced hands of Dudley Fitts. He has taken greater liberties than in his versions of tragedy, but this is as it should be. He has stripped down, rather than embroidered, and made his lines carry their own commentary." Moses Hadas

+ N Y Times p7 My 1 '54 550w

ARMOUR, RICHARD WILLARD. Light Armour; playful poems on practically everything; il. by Leo Hershfield. 118p $2.75 McGraw 811 54-9705

A collection of 119 short poems with a light touch, selected from the author's work from 1942 to 1954.

Booklist 51:101 N 1 '54

"If you have his other books, you'll want 'Light Armour.' If you haven't, this is ■ fine introduction." A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54 120w

Kirkus 22:472 Jl 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p14 O 3 '54 350w

"As with any other collection of verse, let alone one as good as Mr. Armour's, each reader will find the ones that hit him where he lives. In this Guided Miscellany, almost everyone should discover at least a half-dozen special pets and any number of others that run a close second." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 11 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 120w

ARMOUR, TOMMY. How to play your best golf all the time; il. by Lealand Gustavson. 151p $2.95 Simon & Schuster 796.352 Golf 53-1580

"A brilliant golfer in his day—Armour won most of the world's major tournaments—and acclaimed as an uncanny teacher, he has created ■ model of enlightenment and simplicity, a virtue not shared by most instructional books. He gives specific yet easily understandable information on down-to-earth questions as how to see the ball, how most golfers ruin their game, how to go around in thirty putts, and the easy way to get out of ■ sand trap." Sat R

"An excellent book by the famous champion. Simply told, cleverly illustrated. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 78:1431 ■ 1 '53 10w

"It is much the best thing of its kind to come along in years and deserves the popularity currently being lavished on it." Al Silverman

+ Sat R 36:26 Je 20 '53 230w

"Younger professionals tend to publish ■ textbook after winning a tournament. Mr. Armour's book is all the better for his having scorned until now the suggestion that he should write it." Frank Littler

+ Spec p660 My 28 '54 300w

ARMSTRONG, CHARLOTTE. Better to eat you. 247p $2.75 Coward-McCann 54-5797

Mystery story.

Kirkus 21:804 D 15 '53 50w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart

Manchester Guardian p4 S 14 '54 60w

"It's all pretty transparent and mechanical for the author of Mischief." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p12 Mr 28 '54 70w

"Miss Armstrong's blending of romance and complex villainy is accomplished in a professional manner, but the book is ■ far more conventional effort than her excellent works called The Unsuspected and Mischief."

+ — New Yorker 30:135 Mr 13 '54 160w

"If you can swallow the improbability, it's exciting enough. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 1 '54 60w

"Slightly goofy." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong

Spec p378 S 24 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 1 '54 60w

ARMSTRONG, LOUIS. Satchmo; my life in New Orleans. 240p il $3.50 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Jazz music 54-9628

Louis Armstrong's own story of his childhood in New Orleans, his first attempts at playing jazz, and his arrival in the "big time."

Booklist 51:105 N 1 '54

"The real fascination of the book lies in its extraordinarily candid portrayal of the facts of life in a 'Back o' Town' New Orleans Negro slum of the early 1900s, and of the normal activities of a socially abnormal class, living out its precarious days and nights in and around the legally protected and thriving oasis of organized immorality called Storyville." R. G. Peck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 10 '54 350w

Kirkus 22:607 S 1 '54 200w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:2336 D 1 '54 100w

"Armstrong has taken music in the ardent New Orleans tradition all around the world, but not the least of his achievements is his brief remembrance of things past." Wilder Hobson

+ N Y Herald Tribune B1 R p4 O 17 '54 400w

"In ■ fall when we are going to have to get hep to all sorts of slick, obviously ghosted autobiographies, usually with an equally obvious axe to grind, it is refreshing indeed to dig at least one unpretentious, rough-hewn, honest-to-hadness memoir. Cleveland Amory

+ N Y Times p7 O 10 '54 800w

New Yorker 30:165 O 16 '54 100w

Reviewed by R. J. Gleason

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 31 '54 750w

ARNHEIM, RUDOLF. Art and visual perception; a psychology of the creative eye. 408p il col il $10 Univ. of Calif. press

701.15 Art—Psychology 54-6467

"In this book [Professor Arnheim] systematically applies to the understanding of art the results of scientific inquiry into the process of seeing, particularly as formulated by the gestalt psychologists who hold that we know reality by creatively projecting meaning into whole configurations of details, rather than by mechanically recording visual details that are later put together by reason. It would be equally correct to state this the other way around, for such is the dual nature of the book, and say that Professor Arnheim's is a systematic attempt to illustrate the process of seeing by means of art." San Francisco Chronicle

"In a brief review it would be impossible to indicate the extraordinary richness of ideas and the fecundity of artistic theories contained herein, the appositeness of the plates and marginal figures, and the fullness of the bibliography. Without any doubt, however, this is one of the most outstanding books on artistic creation to be issued in recent years, and it is highly recommended for acquisition by public libraries and art collections." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1401 Ag '54 140w

"His argument is so densely woven that it calls for considerable application on the part of the reader. All the same, the author manages to make the book fascinating, too, and anyone seriously interested in art should find it well worth the ten dollars it costs."

+ New Yorker 30:175 O 23 '54 200w

"A welcome addition to the growing shelf of books that bridge the gap between art and science as methods of understanding man and his world. Professor Arnheim is at home in both painting and psychology." Ernest Mundt

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 3 '54 750w

ARNOLD, LEWIS, pseud. See Evans, D.

ARNOLD, MATTHEW. Poetry and prose; ed. by John Bryson. (Reynard lib) 800p $4.75 Harvard univ. press

821 A54-8893

These selections cover all aspects of the author's works: prose and poetry, essays and letters. The volume contains a brief introduction, a chronological table displaying the chief facts and dates of the author's life, and bibliographical notes on all the works included.

Booklist 50:454 Jl 15 '54

"To have presented so much of him in one handsome volume is an achievement." D. A. Robertson

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:608 My 8 '54 900w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 13 '54 40w

"Is it sanity to call a solid book containing true excellence a lovely book? The word lovely is precisely what I want to apply to the volume, Matthew Arnold, Poetry and Prose, edited by John Bryson. . . I don't think Arnold ever spoke or wrote an unintelligent or inhuman word. It is a lovely book." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p18 My 16 '54 120w

"John Bryson's edition of 'Matthew Arnold: Poetry and Prose' should help to broaden the base of the renewed popularity of a truly eminent Victorian." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 37:35 S 25 '54 20w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Tillotson

+ Spec p400 Ap 2 '54 2150w

"Mr. John Bryson's sound selection from Arnold's prose and verse in the Reynard Library should give younger readers to-day a chance to make up their minds whether, in their response to Arnold, they side broadly with Lytton Strachey or with contemporary admirers of Arnold like Mr. Trilling, Mr. Tillotson and Mr. Willey. Admirably selected though the book is, it might, however, at a purely textual level, have been a little more carefully edited. . . Mr. Bryson's choice of material and his sane and sensitive introduction, heavily outweigh such flaws."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p168 Mr 12 '54 2700w

Times [London] Lit Sup pxxiii Ag 6 '54 2600w

ARNOLD, OREN. Golden chair. 288p $3.75 Elsevier

"[The story is told] through the lips of Sidney Hale, a thirteen-year-old boy whose many relatives looked with pride and affection on Grandfather, the wise, easy-going, kindly head of the family. Grandfather's methods of running a grocery store and spearheading a political campaign for a friend make some of the most amusing pages of the salty book. Sidney and his fifteen-year-old cousin Christine not only are involved in these pursuits but play major roles in the romance of their cousin, Bud, a wounded war veteran." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:108 N 1 '54

Kirkus 22:458 Jl 15 '54 190w

"The folksy, conversational tone and the easy flow of the narrative enhance the quality of the writing. The pride and love which Sidney has for his family impart character. Altogether, a warm, affectionate portrait of a very natural family. Recommended for general library collections." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:2102 N 1 '54 120w

"The book succeeds admirably in recreating a time of life and a way of life as seen through the eyes of a boy."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 14 '54 170w

ARNOW, MRS HARRIETTE LOUISA (SIMPSON). The dollmaker. 549p $5 Macmillan (N Y)

54-9223

"The mother is the central figure of the novel, 'The Dollmaker' of the title, Gertie Nevils, a woman of the Kentucky hills. Discerning, sensitive, courageous, she is without education but is endowed with understanding and will. She is endowed, too, with the gift of carving, the creative power to shape true figures from wood. . . She wrenches herself from the Kentucky earth to join her husband in his war-time job in Detroit. The remaining four-fifths of the novel is a merciless portrayal of the impact of the city upon the family." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:213; 320 F 1 '54; Ap 15 '54

"Striking, powerful novel."

+ Bookmark 13:185 My '54 40w

"This is a harrowing tale completely unrelieved by one positively joyous occasion or a single scrap of humor." S. Lambert

Canadian Forum 34:94 Jl '54 180w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:382 Ag '54 550w

"The Dollmaker' is not an easy book to read. Its conversation is all in mountain dialect or in one of the variations of English spoken by the polyglot inhabitants of the Detroit 'alley.' But the book has vividness and terrific reality. It is a book to make one think, but what each reader takes from it may depend upon what he or she takes to it. Some will find 'The Dollmaker' a story of the strength of the human heart against the bitterest odds. Some will find it a bitter tale of man's inhumanities to man. Everyone will find it deeply sincere and moving." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 18 '54 700w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 8 '54 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

Reviewed by Jean Holzauer

Commonweal 60:349 Jl 9 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:131 F 15 '54 250w

"An important new American novel. . . Frank, but never offensively so. Highly recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 130w

"This is a novel of extraordinary power, creating for the moment a world more real and immediate than the reader's own, extending the limits of our understanding of character, and unafraid of coming to grips with the major themes of the integrity of personality, the corrosive influences in modern society, and the tragedy of the defeat of the human spirit." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 25 '54 1100w

"If 1954 produces more than one or two other novels with the power and compassion of this superb work, it will surely be a banner literary year. Ten days after a first reading of 'The Dollmaker' its strength and glowing richness of character and scene remain in the memory; it is hard to believe that anyone who opens its pages will soon forget the big woman and her sufferings as traced in Harriette Arnow's long, heavily packed masterwork." H. T. Kane

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 25 '54 550w

"Although Mrs. Arnow tries very hard to introduce a triumphant note into the final pages of her story, it remains a depressing picture of human defeat and bewilderment, and it is much too long."

New Yorker 30:119 My 1 '54 120w

"A novel of fine literary quality." Isabel Stradley

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '54 120w

"A few years ago Harriette Arnow won an enthusiastic audience with her novel, 'Hunter's Horn.' Good as that was, her new one 'The Dollmaker', a solid, long, big novel in every sense of the word, tops it in sympathy, and in sheer power. It is the work of a mature and splendid talent." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 7 '54 600w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Sat R 37:12 Ap 24 '54 650w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 500w

ARNY, MRS MARY (TRAVIS). Seasoned with salt. 230p $3.50 Westminster press

B or 92

54-9399

The daughter of a New Jersey clergyman has written this story of her life, and that of her family. The center of the story is the house called Tongueslip, where part of her childhood was spent.

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:55 D '54 30w

"A minister's daughter has written an enchanting book of family life, a heartwarming book in which laughter and tears succeed each other."

+ Kirkus 22:626 S 1 '54 220w

"It is reassuring, in these confused times, to read of a family who, even today, find time to savor the good life, to enjoy each other. . . Recommended for general library collections."

E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:1819 O 1 '54 130w

ARON, RAYMOND. Century of total war. 379p $5 Doubleday

909.82 World politics. Twentieth century 54-5714

"Author, distinguished French historian and journalist of the younger generation, was editor of La France Libre, resistance paper in London, during war and has several excellent books on contemporary affairs and on philosophy of history to his credit. In present volume he analyzes shrewdly some of political, economic and ideological forces at work since early years of 20th century; discusses some of crucial problems of our time, such as East-West tension, welfare state, and ponders question whether Cold War is preparation or substitute for total war." Library J

"Among the many recent books dealing with the world situation Aron's work is outstanding. It is a book that will prove valuable both to the specialist and to the informed general reader." J. S. Schapiro

+ Am Hist R 60:68 O '54 700w

Booklist 50:338 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 28 '54 240w

"It is not a book meant to cheer the reader. It does not promise that everything will work out all right by itself. It does not forecast that the Kremlin will change its views or aims. . . But the author does not think that a war between the East and West is inevitable—if the people justly want to avoid total war, time must be the stake," he warns." E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 24 '54 750w

Current Hist 26:318 My '54 150w

"Though writing in the first instance as a Frenchman to Frenchmen, M. Aron's very thoughtful and incisive analysis is of universal interest."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:668 Jl '54 40w

"To one lay reader his logic seems convincing and his warnings against a negativism and skepticism, with compliance at its roots, seems soundly timed. His thesis will not be accepted without some resentment here for he argues that America is greatly at fault, both in World Wars I and II and the Cold War as well, that we must assume more realistic attitudes towards the economic necessities of the Asiatic nations and our European allies."

+ — Kirkus 22:31 Ja 1 '54 180w

"Thought-provoking book, valuable even where it is not convincing, highly recommended for college and larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:378 F 15 '54 150w

"His plea is for limited war. His anti-Marxist, pro-American, and anti-neutralist predilections preclude a plea for peace or co-existence. He demolishes communism anew and vindicates United States policy anew, obviously without weakening the former or resolving the contradictions of the latter. His message is not original. But it is well put and will stimulate some useful rethinking among those who like this type of intellectual cuisine."

Nation 178:339 Ap 17 '54 200w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 48:544 O 30 '54 120w

"Raymond Aron is one of the relatively few publicists who can write about current events without losing his head, his temper, or his sense of decency. . . There is an extraordinary amount of comment on our world, always interesting and often penetrating, packed into this only moderately long book. Mr. Aron is very firmly indeed on the American side."

Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 14 '54 1000w

"M. Aron's analysis of America's world role and foreign policy is both acute and sympathetic. He is, indeed, one of the rare French intellectuals who has the courage to be publicly and outspokenly pro-American in France, a country where it is nowadays fashionable to ridicule the United States." S. K. Padover

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 14 '54 1100w

"Aron writes with incisive clarity; he is not only a scholar but a first-rate journalist and commentator on the contemporary scene. . . With brilliant logic Mr. Aron demolishes widespread legends like those about the nature of imperialism or of the atomic age. . . It is the strength of Mr. Aron's book that it makes good sense." Hans Kohn

+ Sat R 37:12 Mr 13 '54 1350w

Reviewed by Jules Menken

Spec p320 S 10 '54 1000w

ARON, RAYMOND—Continued

"In his latest book the virtues that we associate with M. Aron's work are very visible. He examines both the causes of our present difficulties and dangers and the panaceas that are offered. For him the great political and economic fact of modern life is the impact of war, the fact that each war grows out of its predecessor but is more wasteful, more demoralizing and more pointless. . . A most brilliant and most timely book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p651 O 15 '54 1100w

"Mr. Aron is well informed about things American and a shrewd observer of American diplomacy in action. He does not dissimulate his sympathies for the American people and their purposes, which he acclaims as worthy of the best in Western tradition. . . His epigrammatic style enlivens his treatment of complex issues. Wise and witty, Mr. Aron carries gracefully the burden of his scholarship. More important still in this time of fear and confusion, he is forthright and loyal. He abides by the values he champions."

Robert Strausz-Hupé

+ Yale R n ■ 43:617 summer '54 1200w

ARONIN, JEFFREY ELLIS. Climate and architecture. (Progressive architecture lib) 304p il $12.50 Reinhold

729 Architecture

53-9171

"The object of this book is to acquaint architects, architectural students, engineers, city planners, builders, present and prospective home owners, and others—especially those in North America—with the demands and phenomena of the large—and small-scale climate, known respectively as the macroclimate and the microclimate; and to inform them how to apply this knowledge to the design and orientation of buildings and towns. The purpose is not to discuss the use of different materials and their weathering qualities, except in a general sense." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 39:3 Ja '54

"The only negative criticism that can be leveled against Mr. Aronin's book is the unhappy parallel it suggests with similar objective reports on scientific color research and architecture, or socio-economical factors in town planning. All these projects are based on the premise that man's approach to shelter is rational. . . The practical value of Mr. Aronin's work, therefore, lies not in its charts and diagrams, impressive as they are, but in the pictorial record of actual architectural examples of blatant climatic ignorance and ingenious climatic response. With a sound decision for the constructive rather than the critical mission of the writer, Mr. Aronin has brought together a wide range of climatological planning, from a well-oriented California doghouse to the new capital of the Indian Punjab, Chandigarh." Sibyl Moholy-Nagy

+ Sat R 37:16 F 20 '54 950w

ARTHUR, MRS JULIETTA K. How to help older people; a guide for you and your family; with an introd. by Wilma Donahue. 500p $4.95 Lippincott

362.6 Old age

54-5597

A handbook covering many aspects of the guidance of and planning for older people. Partial contents: Old age is not a disease; Financing old age; To work or not to work; Preparing the old for change; Homes for the aged; pros and cons; What to do with the mentally ill; Where to turn for help. Index.

"The book is easy reading, testimony to the author's skill as a writer. It is replete with interesting anecdotes and examples of both failure and success on the part of individuals and families. While fascinating, these at times seriously distract attention from the sound principles they are intended to illustrate and appreciation of the logical development of the author's thesis." O. A. Randall

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1472 N '54 330w

Booklist 51:4 ■ 1 '54

Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 20w

"The book is not a builder upper that tells how jolly old age is. The author gets down to brass tacks in discussing the tensions and frustrations in the tug-of-war between generations. This is a sincere work that offers guidance to puzzled families and misunderstood oldsters."

Marion Carey

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 7 '54 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 My '54

"Somewhat repetitive, but a sound aid."

+ Kirkus 22:182 Mr 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Karl Brown

Library J 79:853 My 1 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:203 O '54

ASAD, MUHAMMAD, originally LEOPOLD WEISS. The road to Mecca. 400p il $5 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Converts, Mohammedan 54-8643

"Muhammad Asad is a man of two worlds. Born Leopold Weiss into a middleclass Jewish family in Austrian Poland at the turn of the century and coming to young manhood amid the economic, political, and spiritual uncertainties of central Europe following the first World War, he became, a quarter of a century ago, Muhammad Asad, and in the course of time a Moslem authority on Islamic law and representative of Pakistan at the United Nations. His book has for its narrative frame an account of a journey which he took late in the summer of 1932 from the Iraq-Saudi Arabia frontier across the desert to the Moslem holy city of Mecca." Sat R

"Muhammad Asad has written an absorbing book which should sharpen our respect for the original message of the Koran. But he has failed to make a persuasive case for his belief that Islam can again become a dynamic cultural challenge to the West." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:95 O '54 550w

Booklist 51:145 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:358 Je 1 '54 210w

"Written with great sensitivity, it is a personal document of considerable importance, in a day and age when an understanding of the Islamic point of view is of significance to the Western World. In the direct tradition of outstanding books written by Europeans who have been attracted to the Arab personality and the Arab way of life. An unusual, and perhaps a unique book. Should be purchased by most large libraries, and by any library wishing to add an item of first-rate literary distinction." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 79:1394 Ag '54 150w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 48:752 D 4 '54 180w

"Intensely interesting and moving book."

S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 Ag 15 '54 1150w

"Not since Freya Stark has anyone written so happily about Arabia as the Galician now known as Muhammad Asad." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 15 '54 950w

"Muhammad Asad has risen to prominence in the Arab world (he was until recently Pakistan's Minister Plenipotentiary to the United Nations), and his adventures since his hadj will undoubtedly be the subject of another book. This one is compelling as a literary, if not as a religious, work."

+ New Yorker 30:141 S 25 '54 230w

"Muhammad Asad loves the desert and has an eye for its grandeur and its austere beauties. But he has endured its harshness as well. No reader will soon forget his account of his suffering from thirst as, lost from his single companion, he wandered for three days in its apparently limitless reaches. . . To many hammock-ensconced Americans, his book will appeal primarily as an absorbing tale of travel and adventure. Others will find their chief interest in its revelation of a man's search for religious certainty." P. L. Hanna

+ Sat R 37:9 Ag 14 '54 1250w

ASH, BERNARD. Silence for his worship.
392p $3.95 Knopf

54-5261

The life story of Arthur Saunders, from the time when he was left an orphan in late Victorian London, through the years of his rise to affluence as head of a haulage concern, to his respected old age when he became "His Worship."

Booklist 50:419 J1 1 '54

Kirkus 22:13 Ja 1 '54 190w

"Ash's portrayal of Victorian London's poor and slums is unforgettable. Although occasionally sentimental, the story pulsates with a refreshing spirit of hope and confidence in humanity. Strongly recommended for general public." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:770 Ap 15 '54 150w

"This bulky life history of the fortunes of an orphan boy in nineteenth-century London runs down badly about halfway through—at just about the point, in fact, where the orphan turns the corner into the road that leads him quite rapidly to success and riches. It is a self-consciously pathetic book, saved to some extent in the beginning by its eventfulness but falling, after the money begins to roll in."

+ New Yorker 30:157 Ap 24 '54 90w

"A story of financial success is always absorbing, even when Cinderella is represented by a male, and Silence for His Worship is a promising first novel. . . Unfortunately, Mr. Ash has a dislike for the Victorians, just because they behaved in such a laughably Victorian manner; he is continually holding up the story to laugh at ■ bustle or a top hat."

Times [London] Lit Sup p297 My 8 '53 160w

ASHMORE, HARRY SCOTT. Negro and the schools: foreword by Owen J. Roberts. 228p $2.75 Univ. of N.C. press

371.974 Negroes—Education

54-10392

"[The book] is written, as designed by its sponsors, without advocacy of either side on the eve of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, on the issues of segregation in the public schools in five communities in South Carolina, Virginia, Kansas, Delaware and the District of Columbia. The Ashmore Project originated at the suggestion of Southerners. The financial grant for its implementation was made to the Fund for the Advancement of Education by the Ford Foundation. . . The research was done by forty-five highly competent scholars, mostly Southerners, whose work was directed and summarized by Philip Hammer and his associates, all of whom are Southerners." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:391 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Rol Ottley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 4 '54 480w

Reviewed by R. L. Hunt

Christian Century 71:640 My 26 '54 800w

Kirkus 22:360 Je 1 '54 150w

"An extremely readable and informative book." Floyd Hunter

+ Nation 178:467 My 29 '54 800w

"A sober and honest account of American achievements in this difficult field."

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:450 O ■ '54 200w

"Will in all likelihood become an historic educational document. . . The brilliant synthesis of the many facts, factors and forces was written by Ashmore as the culmination of this project which was itself an adventure in co-operation." F. P. Graham

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 23 '54 1800w

"The reader who is looking for a partisan argument on one side or the other of the highly controversial public issue had better not read this book. Anything from it that might be used as an argument for or against racial segregation in the schools would have to be taken out of context. The reader who is looking for information about ■ vital educational and sociological situation, dispassionately but authoritatively presented, can hardly afford not to read it. . . The 'decision-makers' will find this book helpful and easy to read."

L. S. Huston

+ N Y Times p3 My 16 '54 550w

"The author, a Southerner himself, has done an admirable job of synthesis, with no visible trace of bias but with a few wholly understandable traces of defensiveness. He reports on segregation in Northern, as well as in Southern, classrooms; on the progress that has been made in the South over the last half century; and, in another chapter that contains some pleasant surprises, on the treatment of Negroes in Southern universities. A valuable book, and, of course, a very timely one."

+ New Yorker 30:136 Je 5 '54 140w

"Bolstered by thoughtful observations and new perspectives, Mr. Ashmore calmly presents the facts, the inequalities, the waste and the low standards of education in the South. And then, toward the end, his book suddenly takes a turn: Mr. Ashmore ceases to be a competent journalist who summarizes scholarly data and becomes instead an amateur sociologist with nostalgic overtones of the Old South." G. E. Arnstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 23 '54 420w

"Easily the most important volume recently published in the field of education is Harry S. Ashmore's 'The Negro and the Schools.' It is also eminently readable. Especially timely in view of the United States Supreme Court decision of last May 17, which outlawed segregation in the nation's public schools, it is a historical record of more than one hundred years of dual education which has drained the strength of the South's educational system. Many non-Southerners may also read with surprise of the prevalence of school duality outside the South—in practice if not in theory."

Terry Ferrer

+ Sat R 37:28 S 11 '54 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 300w

ASHTON, HELEN (MRS ARTHUR JORDAN). Footman in powder. 248p $3 Dodd

54-8498

A novel about life in England in the time of King George IV. The narrator is Jem Wyatt, ■ royal servant, who began as a pantry boy at Brighton in 1786, and retired as a page (the rank above footman) in 1831. During his years of service he served the Prince Regent, Princess Caroline, and Princess Charlotte of Wales, while his wife was maid to the daughters of King George III.

Booklist 51:62 O 1 '54

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 Ag 15 '54 410w

"If Miss Ashton's novel lacks the power to resurrect human beings, it still does much to exhume the forgotten charm of Brighton. Here is a summoning of all the old Regency enchantment lying buried under textbooks and the weight of the season's trippers." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p29 O 3 '54 270w

New Yorker 30:80 Ag 28 '54 40w

"In all her work Miss Ashton has shown ■ distinguished mind and what, for want of ■ better word, I may call distinguished susceptibilities. She is able to see her characters as they are, without reference to any desire that they might be otherwise. The result is that she has here succeeded almost completely in an extraordinarily difficult task. For five-sixths of her novel she has her foreground and background figures beautifully in perspective, keeping the outlines of Jem and Elizabeth clear but unstressed, and letting them be the window-frame that gives on the glittering, baroque panorama. Only at the end does the scene get overcrowded." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p565 My 1 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 120w

ASHTON, HELEN—Continued

"The technical detail, describing the duties of the various grades of royal menials, is continually absorbing; though the hero is a dull dog, happy in his work because he has been born with the soul of a lackey. As an example of the historical novel which is rather a painless introduction to genuine history than a study of psychology or a chronicle of adventure, this story cannot be faulted."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p277 Ap 30 '54 650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:209 O '54

ASHTON, SIR LEIGH, and GRAY, BASIL.

Chinese art, new rev ed 366p 144pl $9 Beechurst press

709.51 Art, Chinese

54-10547

"First American edition though book was published in England in 1935. Map, chronology and then chapters on each dynasty, carrying the reader from 3000 B.C. to 1912 A.D. Each chapter takes various arts into account. Bibliography has not been brought up-to-date. Authors are respectively, Director of the Victoria and Albert Museum and Keeper of Oriental Antiquities at the British Museum." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1516 S 1 '54 40w

"Sculpture is given an adequate representation, always with splendid examples, but perhaps wisely, in view of the dedication of the book to the amateur d'art the authors have avoided the more recondite aspects of style and iconography. The sections on painting are particularly useful for American readers, since so many of the examples chosen are exhibited in our great public collections. It is only in the selection of certain illustrations that a serious criticism of the writers' judgment can be made." Benjamin Rowland

+ — Sat R 37:18 Jl 31 '54 750w

ASIMOV, ISAAC. Caves of steel. 224p $2.95 Doubleday

54-5418

A combination of detective story and science-fiction.

Booklist 50:322 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p36 D '54

Kirkus 21:803 D 15 '53 90w

"By far Asimov's best long work to date, and a perfect fusion of two highly stimulating forms of entertainment." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 7 '54 120w

"Here is an unusually exciting and engrossing detective story set in a science fictional background convincingly worked out." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 7 '54 140w

"Really accomplishes something various science-fiction writers have been trying to do for a long while—it tells a first-class detective story in terms of a future and very advanced technology. Even his robots are completely believable, and the cleverest distinction is drawn between their emotionlessness and the very real emotions of the humans involved." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:15 Ag 7 '54 80w

ASTRUP, MRS HELEN, and JACOT DE BOINOD, BERNARD LOUIS. Oslo intrigue; a woman's memoir of the Norwegian resistance [Eng title: Night has a thousand eyes]. 237p il $3.50 McGraw

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Norway. World war, 1939-1945—Secret service

54-9706

A young English woman, whose Norwegian husband went down with his ship in the early days of World war II, is the heroine of this book. She was drawn into the Norwegian Underground, got mixed up with some Germans in Norway, and finally escaped to Sweden after a Gestapo raid.

Booklist 51:103 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:29 N '54 30w

Kirkus 22:553 Ag 15 '54 250w

"The book can be read as a good thriller or as a record of personal experience touched by a naïveté which somehow contrives to enhance its authenticity." D. A. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 16 '53 270w

"This is no cops-and-robbers story. It is neither so terrifying nor so difficult for an outsider to accept. Large portions of this book deal with common, everyday problems and these touches add a great deal of realism and conviction to some of the weird incidents in Mrs. Astrup's hectic tale." Peter Blake

+ N Y Times p39 O 17 '54 260w

"There is more than just adventure to this. For one thing, you get a very good picture of the inside operation of a typical resistance movement. For another, you are shown the German way of dealing with the resistance. . . Finally, there is the very clear reflection throughout of a thoroughly good person—a brave and charming woman who chanced her life on the side of freedom when she didn't have to." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 28 '54 550w

Reviewed by P. N. Cinis

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 110w

ASWELL, MRS MARY LOUISE (WHITE), ed.

New short novels, by Jean Stafford [and others]. 188p $2.75; pa 35c Ballantine

Short stories—Collections

54-6477

An anthology of four long stories. Contents: A Winter's Tale, by Jean Stafford; The Willow, by Elizabeth Etnier; The Gentle Season, by Clyde Miller; Ride Out, by Shelby Foote.

"The publishers rate a warm tribute for giving the novella a well-deserved break; their courage has resulted in a book of fiction that is truly distinguished."

+ Atlantic 193:88 Ap '54 170w

Booklist 50:297 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 21 '54 140w

"These new short novels make an excellent quartet of their own. The publishing experiment this book represents is to be applauded and should be repeated." P. F. Quinn

+ Commonweal 60:19 Ap 9 '54 1000w

"For the discerning reader, these stories, disconsolate as they may seem, have both taste and talent."

+ Kirkus 22:10 Ja 1 '54 160w

"In bringing to print these four stories, of difficult length for ordinary publication, Mrs. Aswell, an able and experienced editor, earns our gratitude. It is to be hoped that this may be only the first of such volumes." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Mr 14 '54 700w

Reviewed by Hortense Calisher

N Y Times p5 Mr 14 '54 450w

"The first three novels in the collection are by writers whose talent, though certain, can hardly be estimated from the work they show here. . . The fourth novel is by Jean Stafford, a commanding writer whose poise, intelligence, and devastating humor turn her story of a long-ago love affair into a small, but complete and steady illumination. Mrs. Aswell has written a short, well-pointed introduction to this interesting volume."

+ — New Yorker 30:114 F 20 '54 120w

"It is certainly to be hoped that this quartet, and other such collections, will help solve the difficult economics of the nouvelle. Too long for frequent periodical publication (such recent exceptions as 'The Old Man and the Sea' and 'The Ponder Heart' come immediately to mind, of course), too short individually to provide books for the penny-wise public, the form has, it must be remembered, produced such classics as 'Death in Venice' and 'Daisy Miller.' Properly encouraged, it may produce more. Even if these in the present collection are not necessarily in that class, they are certainly stories you would not have liked to miss." L. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 8 '54 410w

"Miss Aswell is a good editor-critic. The authors she has selected possess in common only the fact that they are Americans, and are good storytellers and conscientious craftsmen. All four of these short novels deserve to be widely read, and it is quite possible that none of them would be in print were it not for the present ambitious and worthwhile publishing venture." William Peden

+ Sat R 37:17 Mr 6 '54 700w

"Ride Out, by Mississippi Novelist Shelby Foote, is actually an elongation of a Satevepost story about the tragic end of a dedicated Negro jazz trumpeter. Sincere, but derivative and commonplace, it probably should not have been included in the first place. But the other three provide a session of good reading for less than the price of a light breakfast."

+ Time 63:100 F 15 '54 650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:135 My '54

ATHERTON, LEWIS ELDON. Main street on the middle border. 423p $6 Ind. univ. press 977 [917.7] Cities and towns—U.S. 54-7970

"Jumping off from a title reminiscent of Sinclair Lewis and Hamlin Garland, Lewis Atherton presents what may be called a social history of the Middle Western small town from the Eighteen Sixties to the present. The first half of his book is nostalgic with the vision of sweet girl-graduates on commencement platforms, the sound of bats at Fourth of July ball games and the mingled but reassuring smells of general stores. The second half considers what may be called the decline of the small town as the result of the growth of cities and constantly improved transportation." (N Y Times) Index.

"In spite of its thoro treatment of life in the small town, there is too much dependence on generalizations about a 'middle class code' and the tendency of individuals to thrust out of their 'several layers' of culture is not emphasized enough. But the book is a rewarding one, crammed with accurate details and an obvious devotion to the subject." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 21 '54 300w

"Although the research here is obviously exhaustive, the reconstruction is not slowed by the detail on which it draws and the study has more than a regional or reference value."

+ Kirkus 22:654 S 15 '54 210w

"Though of major interest for historian and American literature specialist, the book is readable and will have general appeal. Recommended for all large public, college, and university libraries." J. R. Willingham

+ Library J 79:2205 N 15 '54 120w

"Mr. Atherton is neither a Chamber of Commerce booster nor a social satirist, nor yet a sociologist, though he flirts with the latter idea toward the end of his book. . . He is, rather, a annalist setting down with honesty what the Middle Western town was like, balancing the sense of belonging it gave its people with the relentless pressures toward conformity, the good heart of the village toward those it could understand, and its cold inhospitality to the creative arts." Gerald Carson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 28 '54 1000w

"The first half of the book is the better reading. . . The second half is less readable, and less generally satisfactory, seeming to totter a little under the weight of the material. . . The native who has never left, though he has difficulty in seeing how his country is distinctive, still knows the country best of all. Such a one is Mr. Atherton, and to his lifelong experience he has added the knowledge gained by much research. He has thus been able to produce what is, in spite of its limitations, a basic work, and even its limitations may be considered those of its region and thus illuminating." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p6 N 14 '54 900w

ATKINS, JOHN ALFRED. Art of Ernest Hemingway; his work and personality. 245p il $4.50 Roy pubs.

813 Hemingway, Ernest

54-5877

A British critic's evaluation of Hemingway's personality and his writing style. No index.

Booklist 50:376 Je 1 '54

"Mr Atkins shows how hard it must be to attempt any full-dress study of Hemingway and manage to keep the temperature down to a desirable level. He has useful things to say, but the truculent and wayward manner gets as irritating as Mr Atkins seems to expect, almost to hope, that it will be." Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 1 '53 250w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

New Repub 131:19 N 15 '54 270w

"Mr. Atkins, a new critic, comes fresh from the reading of the whole of Hemingway and has this advantage over the critic and general reader; he brings out the intensity of Hemingway's application to his art but he is far too breezy and uncertain a writer, too jaunty and pretentious, to make a solid book. He admires, he makes good points, but they are lost in a disorderly, personal and ingenuous work and he writes in a slovenly fashion." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 45:43 Ja 10 '53 1000w

"A reader who can overlook its lack of organization will find it occasionally illuminated by original insights and interpretations. Since some of the best things in it are speculative asides on life and literature one gets the feeling that Mr. Atkins' forte is the causerie rather than the long critique." Milton Rugoff

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 6 '54 50w

"The Art of Ernest Hemingway' is bright, witty, well-intentioned, frequently perceptive. Yet it is likely to strike most American readers as essentially a hand-me-down, porcelain-egg kind of study. There is much brooding over the thought of others, some light skipping from roost to roost. But Mr. Atkins never seems to discover the vertebral structure which would give his work life, purpose, and critical dignity." Carlos Baker

+ Sat R 37:14 My 29 '54 700w

"Some of his comments are shrewd. . . But the final impression that he leaves with us is still fragmentary. His method of approach, too, is a curious compound of the over-familiar and the clinical."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p122 F 20 '53 210w

ATKINSON, ORIANA (TORREY) (MRS JUSTIN BROOKS ATKINSON). Manhattan and me; drawings by Hirschfeld. 267p $3.50 Bobbs 974.71 [917.471] New York (city)—Description 54-6501

An anecdotal, informal book about New York by the wife of the drama critic of the New York Times. "An odds-and-ends collection, it includes fragments of history, notes on where to buy what, and several chapter essays on special aspects of Manhattan—a paean of well-justified praise for the Public Library with its stone lions; a sarcastic note on the replacement of The Aquarium by sterile concrete; a warmly affectionate recollection of the author's youth in Greenwich Village." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Booklist 50:378 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 20w

ATKINSON, O. T.—Continued

Reviewed by Maureen Daly

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 16 '54
220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 My '54

"Mrs. Atkinson can write a book about New York that ranges far and rummages deep and says, incidentally, some pretty rough things about our town. Some pretty funny things, too. All of them, the rough and the funny, have the ring of truth, because whether she's pointing out how scandalously we waste water or speculating as to which New York drama critic (other than Mr. Atkinson) it would be best to be cast away with on a desert island, she knows what she's talking about." Frances Lindley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 23 '54
350w

"The next time they lay the cornerstone of one of our skyscrapers they won't have to waste a second puzzling over whether a subway token or a ticket to the World's Series should be sealed inside. If they simply slip in a copy of 'Manhattan and Me' the problem of the time capsule will be neatly solved." Wayne Andrews

+ N Y Times p6 My 9 '54 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 29 '54
650wATTLEE, CLEMENT RICHARD. As it happened. 312p il $5 Viking

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-7570

"A true autobiography, a relatively brief personal account of how the course of his life looks to him now that he is in his seventies. It is not a history of his times, not a collection of his state papers, not even—for it is not detailed enough—his memoirs." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"To the general reader this autobiography will reveal much about its author and the nature of British socialism. The straightforward and unadorned narrative suggests an unassuming man, but one with a great deal of wisdom and practical common sense. . . . To anyone familiar with recent British history or with Roy Jenkins' biography of Attlee, however, this book will be disappointing. Much space is allotted to conventional matters such as early life and school, while important events get very casual treatment." C. F. Brand

+ — Ann Am Acad 295:189 S '54 400w

"As It Happened is a perfect reflection of its author's public personality. Completely colorless and unimaginative, completely without style, the book manages to make a favorable impression on the sympathetic reader probably for much the same reasons as those which have endeared Clem Attlee to the British voters. Through a thick curtain of modesty, one glimpses a thoroughly decent man; a down-to-earth idealist; a statesman whose sometimes outspoken verdicts on men and events show that there are an astute mind and a resolute will behind the good gray facade." C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 194:85 Jl '54 80w

Booklist 50:418 Jl 1 '54

Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 20w

Reviewed by P. W. Fox

Canadian Forum 34:161 O '54 700w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 27 '54
340w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 18 '54
650w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons

Commonweal 60:251 Je 11 '54 800w

Current Hist 27:61 Jl '54 150w

Foreign Affairs 33:166 O '54 50w

"The very understatement and lack of histrionics is integral to the telling, and should be recognized even though it may limit and define the scope of reader interest."

+ Kirkus 22:259 Ap 1 '54 260w

Reviewed by E. M. Oboler

Library J 79:853 My 1 '54 90w

Nation 179:56 Jl 17 '54 270w

"The contrast with the voluminous, full-flavored, often deeply moving record Sir Winston Churchill has left of himself, is unavoidable. As writing, Churchill's memoirs are of a piece with the writings of Burke and Macaulay, with a touch of Milton the prose writer. Attlee's autobiography suggests rather the tradition of the quieter nineteenth-century novel, the sensitive, serious kindly world of Victorian reformers, the world of Trollope, perhaps, but without even Trollope's not very deep-dyed villains." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 23
'54 650w

"Any man who has played so important and intimate a part in the shaping of contemporary history should have much to tell about the dramatic and historic events and personalities of the past three decades. Unhappily, Mr. Attlee, who confesses that he is regarded as a 'laconic' speaker, is an even more laconic writer. In this autobiography, he reveals no important secrets, and sheds little light on the personalities of his time. He tells where his destiny took him, what he saw and whom he met, but he rarely takes the reader into his confidence about what he thought." Raymond Daniell

N Y Times p6 My 23 '54 650w

"Mr. Attlee's autobiography is a quiet, even-tempered book, with nothing stylish about it, that covers a great deal of history and provides fairly candid portraits of many of the history makers."

New Yorker 30:119 Je 12 '54 160w

Reviewed by B. E. Brown

Pol Sci Q 69:479 S '54 300w

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Sat R 37:16 Je 5 '54 650w

"Many of his comments on people suffer from this tightness of language, but there are passages in the book—notably his evocation of school days—in which the delights of memory have been conveyed vividly to the reader. In a sense, therefore, this is a slight book, but it contains clues to an elaboration of the picture of Mr. Attlee's character and mode of thought that has already been given by others; and it explains something of the Labour Party which he has led now for over eighteen years." Francis Boyd

+ — Spec p501 Ap 23 '54 600w

"Through its very understatement it is an affirmation of the remarkable qualities which have justified as well as created a unique career; it is the portrait of a man who, in adversity as well as in triumph, contemplates life with a serenity which more than once has steadied a hysterical world."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p242 Ap 16 '54
850wATTWOOD, ADELINE. Treasure of the Incas. 218p $3 Houghton

53-8531

A tribe of Peruvian Indians share the knowledge of the location of the treasure of the Incas. When word of this gets around misfortune falls on the tribe. Iloma, the heroine, loses her fiancé and her father, and finally her own life, because of the greed of the Teniente.

Booklist 50:185 Ja 1 '54

Reviewed by Warren Beck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 14 '54
290w

Kirkus 21:719 N 1 '53 130w

"A well-written though meaningless tale with little in the way of either characterization or plot to recommend it. The one saving grace is the wealth of detail on the customs of the Incan Indian tribes. Unnecessary." M. S. Byam

+ — Library J 78:2212 D 15 '53 60w

"Strange, puzzling and magnificently brooding novel." E. L. Acken

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 17 '54
850w

"If Mrs. Attwood had been content to call it a legend some small grace might have accrued to her book. But she garnishes it with all the trappings yet none of the logic of realism." Harry Sylvester

N Y Times p23 Ja 17 '54 250w

"This is in outline a moderately simple plot. What suggests that the author has the makings of a novelist is the way she fleshes out the bare bones of her story. Here you will find a really remarkable realization of the life of the Peruvian Indian, say three centuries ago or so. . . Here, too, you will note the author's preoccupation—one that always concerns the good novelist—with the problems of good and evil." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 14 '54 600w

"Its plot is wanton and barbaric enough for inclusion as a colorful anecdote in Prescott's history of Peru. . . It is to be regretted, because Mrs. Attwood demonstrates that she is quite comfortably able—while writing the first two thirds of the book—to create compelling mood and character. Only when the exigencies of an absurd denouement can no longer be postponed does successful illusion collapse under the weight of extravagant incident." Nicolas Monjo

+ — Sat R 37:51 Mr 13 '54 250w

ATWATER, MRS. MARY (MEIGS). Byways in hand-weaving. 128p il $8.50 Macmillan (N Y) 745.52 Weaving 54-7961

"Practical techniques for the enjoyable production of 'handsome and useful articles' are explained by an expert who adds a chapter on the uses of handicraft in occupational therapy. Numerous diagrams and photographs, eight in full color." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 30w

"This book brings together weaves suitable for narrow articles such as bands, belts, girdles, and the like. Although some of the designs have been published in pamphlets or in periodicals, many are printed here for the first time. The examples are taken from ancient and primitive peoples from widely scattered areas. Mrs. Atwater has made a valuable contribution to the hand-weavers of today in her study and analysis of these textiles and her adaptations for the present-day weavers." L. E. Smith

+ J Home Econ 46:420 Je '54 300w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1316 Jl '54 20w

AUBREY, EDWIN EWART. Secularism a myth; an examination of the current attack on secularism. (Colgate-Rochester divinity school. Ayer lectures, 1953) 191p $2.50 Harper

211 Secularism 54-6900

"The word 'secularism' has become a rallying cry for religious forces, much as paganism was in the early Christian church, or 'the infidel' in the Middle Ages, or popery in seventeenth-century Protestantism. . . In these pages I shall try to set forth and to sustain four theses: (1) The current attack on secularism has become so diffuse as to be very misleading, and the issue needs to be redefined. (2) The history of Christianity has in fact been characterized by repeated influence from secular quarters in such fashion that the proposed dissociation of the church from culture would be fatal to the development of Christianity itself. (3) On the other hand, there have been spiritual values in secular movements which Christianity cannot claim to have originated and which should, in plain justice, be acknowledged. And (4) in the light of these considerations we need a new strategy which is at once humbler and bolder, less plaintive and more responsible." (Pref) Indexes.

Booklist 51:31 S 15 '54

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1240 O 13 '54 1050w

AUBREY-FLETCHER, SIR HENRY LANCELOT, 6th bart (HENRY WADE, pseud). Gold was our grave. 311p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12921

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:600 S 1 '54 50w

"Quite unworthy of recent new and revived Wade novels." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p40 N 7 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 5 '54 100w

"Leisurely but nice." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 10w

"An excellent mystery which is painstakingly solved by Scotland Yard but which, instead of leading to a conviction that would not satisfy the reader, is solved by a happy expedient which provides the double satisfaction of a genuine 'police' solution and the escape of the blackmailer's victim."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p293 My 7 '54 100w

AUBREY-FLETCHER, SIR HENRY LANCELOT, 6th bart (HENRY WADE, pseud). Too soon to die. 201p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

53-13506

Detective story.

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

Kirkus 21:749 N 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman Nation 45:305 Mr 14 '53 120w

"Here once again is Mr. Henry Wade and (once again) in very good form. . . Mr. Wade has arranged a curious mixed set of sympathies and distastes, notably well suited to his subject and he plays them with composed detachment. The consequence is an absorbing examination of skulduggery." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 24 '54 130w

"The adroit Inspector Poole and a convincingly conceived murderer combine to make this a model of the leisurely but wholly absorbing crime novel." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 Ja 24 '54 150w

"Mr. Wade's plot is ingenious and, as far as a non-Briton can tell, sufficiently plausible, and his book may easily entertain those whose tastes run to complex, if rather bloodless, puzzles."

+ New Yorker 30:136 Mr 13 '54 140w

"Some brilliant work on character and motivation satisfies the reader's desire for justice. The end, however, can't surprise him—the drawback of most inverted mysteries." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p29 F 14 '54 90w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:34 Mr 27 '54 20w

"It's a well planned and excellently written story." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 50w

AUCHINCLOSS, LOUIS (ANDREW LEE, pseud). Romantic egoists. 210p $3 Houghton

54-5984

"Eight stories are collected in this volume. They are all told by the same first person narrator, Peter Westcott; and the varying in substance they are unified by their common concern with individuals against the crowd, and by their reflection of the narrator's own possibly limited but acutely thoughtful views of life and man. Indeed, these stories add up to something like a sketchy novel in which the central character is the story teller." Chicago Sunday Tribune

AUCHINCLOSS, LOUIS—Continued

"These stories felicitously combine exact and telling observation with acute psychological insight. The Romantic Egoists is among the half-dozen works of fiction I have most enjoyed this year." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:83 J1 '54 320w

Booklist 50:380 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 20w

"The writing is modest, precise, and beautifully controlled. In every story, close to the end, there is an effect similar to that of a light's being quietly turned on to illuminate in fine, warm clarity these chosen aspects of the world of Peter Westcott." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 16 '54 350w

Kirkus 22:213 Mr 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 S 7 '54 130w

Reviewed by Mary Scrutton

New Statesman & Nation 48:449 O 9 '54 210w

"If Mr. Auchincloss does not admire all his romantic egoists, he understands them and succeeds in making them understandable. His writing is polished, his humor is mature, and through deliberate understatement he places his oblique accent where it belongs." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 6 '54 300w

"This volume reveals Louis Auchincloss as a writer of unusual brilliance. In it he combines a Henry Jamesian knowledge of upper-class New York society with an economy of style, an alertness of eye, an artful disarming modesty reminiscent of the stories of Christopher Isherwood." James Stern

+ N Y Times p4 My 16 '54 550w

New Yorker 30:136 Je 5 '54 80w

"Without moralizing, Mr. Auchincloss points out essential moralities; he has both ironic wit and sympathy, and he is, in addition, the master of a clean, cultivated, articulate literary style which, in a day when much that is careless and slipshod passes in the name of realism, is an esthetic delight." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:35 J1 10 '54 270w

"The Romantic Egoists has a strict social framework and a convinced social standpoint. Once again I find the creed most distasteful. Mr. Auchincloss is an arrogant neo-aristocrat and his convictions make him, I think, cocksure, lacking in compassion, and, on occasion, deficient in good taste. Nevertheless, he is a very clever and subtle student of human social behaviour in the widest sense and one is led from one story to another by the unity of mood and viewpoint to a very rewarding total effect which goes far deeper than any subtle momentary flash or exact recapture of evanescent sensibility." Angus Wilson

+ Spec p401 O 1 '54 130w

"The author has succeeded in presenting the conflicts of his eight romantic egoists as a uniform piece of work, although each chapter originally was published as a short story. But what is more important, the author also has presented a good argument against the insistence for uniformity of opinion and behavior, that the unconformist may be exasperating, stubborn, idealistic, foolish or courageous, but he is needed by society if only as a point of reference." A. G. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 300w

Wis Lib Bul 50:136 My '54

AUCLAIR, MARCELLE (MRS JEAN PREVOST). Little friends of Jesus; tr. from the French; il. by Mary Gehr. 93p $2 Regnery

232.9 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 54-4688

"Well known author of adult books and editor of a French magazine, Marcelle Auclair has written this distinctive children's book about the life teachings of Jesus." Commonweal

+ Commonweal 61:201 N 19 '54 30w

"Of books for Catholic children an attractive one for the 6 to 10-year age group is 'The Little Friends of Jesus.'" H. G. Jefferson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 28 '54 30w

AUDET, JAMES HENRY. Rap sheet; my life story, by Blackie Audett; foreword by Gene Lowall. 284p $4 Sloane

B or 92 Crime and criminals—U.S. 54-10085

"Blackie Audett told his story to a wire-recorder operated by a Denver newspaper man, Gene Lowall, who did nothing to lessen the effectiveness of the author's engaging lingo. Bootlegging, alien smuggling, train robbery, bank robbery, payroll snatching and a series of fabulous escapes keep this book moving at a breath-taking pace. The bitter tragedy of Blackie's life is enough to dissuade any impressionable youth who might be tempted to emulate Audett, for he is back in Oregon State Prison shackled by a cancer more escape-proof than walls and bars." N Y Times

Kirkus 22:463 J1 15 '54 210w

"Fast-moving but monotonously repetitive book." Louis Barron

Library J 79:1583 S 15 '54 130w

"Tolerant readers will probably hold still for a dash of 'romancing' in Blackie's recital. There is an incredible episode, for instance, in which he and his partner stick up a bank for nine thousand dollars and see that 'every nickel' is anonymously donated to an orphanage." Frank O'Leary

+ N Y Times p16 S 19 '54 300w

"In substance the author has told a reasonably credible tale, bristling with good humor and garnished with enlightening highlights of the code by which professional outlaws live. He leaves no doubt in the reader's mind that 'honor among thieves' is a solid quality in the higher echelons as it is an empty pretense among those common crooks 'hedge-hopping' on the lower levels from thievery to legitimate employment and back." Frank O'Leary

+ Sat R 37:19 S 25 '54 850w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 500w

AUDSLEY, JAMES. Book of ballet; il. by Grace Golden. 64p $1.25 Warne

792.8 Ballet 54-11426

"History of the ballet with the contributions various countries have made to it is followed by discussions of the 'white' and other classic, as well as modern, ballets. There are brief chapters on the making of a dancer and the language of ballet." Horn Bk

"In spite of rather poor bookmaking, this is worth buying because Mr. Audsley presents the material as one interesting picture, not simply as scattered bits of information." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:433 D '54 40w

"Recommended for older boys and girls and adults." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 79:1409 Ag '54 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p10 N 14 '54 20w

AUERBACH, ERICH. Mimesis: the representation of reality in western literature; tr. by Willard R. Trask. 576p $7.50 Princeton univ. press

809 Realism in literature. Literature—History and criticism 52-13152

"Erich Auerbach begins his study of mimesis or the imitation of life in Western literature by examining famous episodes in Homer and the Bible. He concludes by analyzing passages in Virginia Woolf and Proust. And his examination includes Tacitus, Petronius, St. Augustine, St. Francis, Dante, Boccaccio, Rabelais, Montaigne, Saint-Simon, Goethe, Schiller, Balzac, Stendhal, Flaubert and Zola, among many others." N Y Times

"Its author is a professor—a meticulous, erudite one, long accustomed to wedging each mosaic in its proper place. And the writing is not at all blurred by the common occupational disease of academic astigmatism. . . . This is criticism in the finest modern European tradition, in the 'linguistic' tradition of men such as Vossler, Spitzer, Croce, Castro, for whom Europe is a constant interrogation whose literature is ever to be questioned anew, insistently. Erich Auerbach has written in that tradition and fittingly, like most of his spiritual predecessors, in exile. It is a staggering act of love." Serge Hughes

+ Commonweal 59:454 F 5 '54 800w

"In examining significant figures in Western literature Professor Auerbach demonstrates a remarkable knowledge of history, sociology, politics, literary criticism, and philology. Passages in foreign languages are given in the original and in English translation. One hopes that future editions will be enlarged to include notes, references, and a complete index. Recommended to all serious students of literature and to public and university libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:143 Ja 15 '54 130w

"It is impossible to read 'Mimesis' without learning something new and valuable about each of these authors. Indeed the compass and the richness of the book can hardly be exaggerated. This is true too of the originality of Mr. Auerbach's critical method, which is at once encyclopedic and microscopic, combining the disciplines of philology, literary criticism and history." Delmore Schwartz

+ N Y Times p40 N 29 '53 800w

New Yorker 30:92 Je 26 '54 120w

"Erich Auerbach is a great critic; his book, 'Mimesis,' is a great work of literary criticism (perhaps the best that I have read in the last ten years), and it is thoroughly Alexandrian in spirit." William Barrett

+ Sat R 37:21 Mr 20 '54 600w

"It is a great thing in a book that it should be interesting. Professor Auerbach's has many virtues, but the one most constantly present to a reader is this old-fashioned one. . . . Part of one's pleasure lies in the fact that here is a carefully critical volume which shows no reverence for the stupidly good and which yet is able to arrive at page 407 before one meets a sentence conceived in antipathy." Rosemond Tuve

+ Yale R n s 43:619 summer '54 1500w

AUGUR, HELEN. Zapotec. 279p il $4.50 Doubleday

972.7 [917.2] Zapotec Indians. Oaxaca, Mexico (state) 54-5174

A popularly written account of the ancient and more recent past history and way of life of that region of southern Mexico, centering in Oaxaca.

Booklist 50:416 Jl 1 '54

"Readers with any interest in antiquity or anthropology will welcome Helen Augur's 'Zapotec.' . . . Miss Augur is sensitive and meticulous in her personal observations and research of these Indian people." Mason Warner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 30 '54 280w

"Miss Augur has done a penetrating and affectionate job in bringing to life the people and the history of the valleys of Oaxaca, once the center of the most advanced Indian civilization." R. M. Hallett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '54 700w

"A fruitful approach to a fascinating research area."

+ Kirkus 22:258 Ap 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1599 S 15 '54 60w

"More profound books on the Isthmus have been written, and others will doubtless appear, but 'Zapotec' is both charming and worth while. It will have wide appeal whether or not the reader contemplates a visit to this land of enchantment." Harry Tschopik

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 30 '54 750w

"The travel portions of the book are the most engaging. The author fell in love at first sight with Oaxaca, both capital city and state, and from there journeyed up and down the mountains to remote highland villages, to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, and to the Olmec land of Vera Cruz. . . . The author's style and tempo change as she tries to recapitulate all that is known and conjectured about the high Central American civilization of which Monte Alban is so splendid a monument. Impressions yield to exposition, exposition to argument, and argument to speculation. . . . Here, it seems to the reviewer, Miss Augur is entering into fields outside the scope of her own keen powers of observation." B. D. Wolfe

N Y Times p7 My 23 '54 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 20 '54 700w

Reviewed by J. M. Flagler

Sat R 37:32 Ag 7 '54 150w

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 600w

AULAIRE, MRS INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D'. Animals everywhere. [24p] $2 Doubleday

54-5904

"Originally issued in 1940 as a piece which unfolded to form a two-sided panorama, these appealing pictures of animals in various climates from the tropics to the arctic are now published in regular book form with simple running commentary on what the animals do and the sounds they make. Because there are several animals to the page small listeners will need some initial help with identification. Ages 3-6." Booklist

Booklist 51:23 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:11 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 17 '54 110w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 170w

"Animals Everywhere is a good title for this simple yet comprehensive picture book sure to interest Children Everywhere." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:325 O '54 140w

"Double star for this, one of the nicest books the gifted D'Aulaires have given us."

+ Kirkus 22:431 Jl 15 '54 100w

"A must for homes, schools, public libraries." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 79:1659 S 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 19 '54 110w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times pt2 p47 N 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 120w

Reviewed by R. H. Viguers

Sat R 37:26 D 25 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:215 O '54

AURANDT, PAUL HARVEY. Autumn of liberty, by Paul Harvey [pseud]; arrangement by John M. Pratt; introd. by John L. Lewis. (Hanover house bk) 192p $2 Garden City bks.

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. Liberty

54-5422

A collection of the author's broadcasts in which he seeks to arouse Americans to the danger of the loss of liberty in this country.

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 7 '54 500w

AURANDT, P. H.—Continued

"Mr. Harvey is quite good at the metaphor and the simile and the catch-phrase. Some of them in 'Autumn of Liberty' are worth remembering." R. M. F.

+ Springfield Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 80w

AUSTIN, JAMES C., ed. Fields of the Atlantic monthly: letters to an editor, 1861-1870. 445p $6 Huntington lib.

B or 92 Fields, James Thomas. Atlantic monthly (periodical)

"The Atlantic Monthly is nearly a century old. As the first successful American magazine to rely mainly on native authors and to pay them adequately, it has rightly drawn the attention of every literary historian. In the present volume James C. Austin, a member of the English Department at Ohio University, draws upon the hoards of manuscripts in the Huntington Library, and in public and private collections in New England, to document the Atlantic's formative years under its second editor, James Thomas Fields." N Y Times

"Dr. Austin is a sound critic with a gift for characterization, and I am very glad that these vigorous, unevasive letters were made available for his authoritative interpretation." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 193:78 Mr '54 550w

Reviewed by L. L. Walker

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54 650w

"Some material is cited as fact when it is not at all clear that it is factual. . . These details are regrettable but they do not impair the value of the volume as a whole. For here emerges the story of one of the greatest of American magazines under one of the ablest of its editors. This history Professor Austin has sensed clearly and we are indebted to him for it. We are indebted also to the publishers for putting such excellent material in so excellent a format." W. S. Tryon

+ New Eng Q 27:262 Je '54 550w

"These letters have a fascinating story to tell of Boston in its Golden Age, and by weaving them into a series of personal relationships and by the skill of his own direct, fairminded interpolation, Dr. James C. Austin has drawn the portraits of a famous literary circle and allowed us to share in the success and failures, the exhilaration and the occasional disappointment, of the man who presided over it." Edward Weeks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p1 Ja 31 '54 1600w

Reviewed by Delancey Ferguson

N Y Times p20 Ja 17 '54 650w

"It is not only a sound biographical narrative, but a beautiful reflection of the literary life of that time, in great part through the letters that passed between Fields and those who wrote for him. . . To get the true feel of Dr. Austin's panoramic flow of great names and the whole literary picture of the Sixties, you have to read his book. . . It should be the ideal gift for many a solid older reader who, acquainted with the names (and, surprisingly enough to many a younger one, even with the writings) of the early Atlantic contributors, will enjoy every word of Dr. Austin's text." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 21 '53 750w

U ■ Quarterly Bk R 10:147 Je '54 240w

AUSTIN, MRS MARGOT. William's shadow; il. by [the author]. 43p $1.75 Dutton

54-9308

William was a woodchuck who woke up from his long winter's nap very hungry. His animal friends tried to keep him in bed by supplying him with lots of food, but William escaped and went out to search for more food and saw his shadow anyway! Then came the surprise.

"Margot Austin writes easily and her black and white sketches of the little animals are charming, if slightly monotonous in their sameness." E. S. D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 90w

Kirkus 22:529 Ag 15 '54 80w

"The casual, colloquial style of the brief text and the breezy nonsense of the drawings may not rate high as literature or art, but they have that true, child-like quality, in their special humor and simplicity, which has won this author-artist her wide following. Fat little William, just waking up in spring, is just as appealing as Gabriel Churchkitten, Growl Bear and all her other heroes." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 7 '54 140w

"The ending is amusing and the black-and-white pictures of roly-poly William in a dotted nightshirt are delightful." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times pt2 p38 N 14 '54 90w

AUSUBEL, NATHAN. Pictorial history of the Jewish people; from Bible times to our own day throughout the world. 346p 11 maps $5 Crown

296 Jews—History

52-10777

"One volume history of the Jews from earliest recorded times to the present. The volume, broken up into units, first covers the questions of who and what the Jews are, then proceeds to a developmental history, continues to discuss the world breakdown of various segments, considers the cultural breakdowns, and finally brings the history up to date with latest developments in the setting up of Israel." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 13:81 Ja '54 20w

"There are, of course, some statements that can be charged with being incorrect and some assertions biased, such as his 'Jewish Influence on Christianity' [p81]. But also there are many interesting, isolated facts which even to the well informed will be fresh and fascinating. The final pages, which deal with the modern state of Israel, are of a special value." Louis Binstock

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja ■ '54 300w

"Good for supplementary school reading as well as for general consumption."

+ Kirkus 21:516 Ag 1 '53 100w

"The entire volume is profusely illustrated. Will serve as an excellent reference work on the Jews and will be useful in both reference and circulation departments. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 78:1521 S 15 '53 120w

"Mr. Ausubel's text is a fluent but superficial narrative, without noticeable insight or originality in its point of view. The pictures, which are presumable justification for the book, are for the most part too small to show their real character or serve a useful end; too many of them are unidentified, and too many more are poorly identified or identified to no purpose. . . When contrasted with Mr. Ausubel's talents and industry, both of which are considerable, and with the publisher's intentions, which were of the best, the book is a needless disappointment." Marvin Lowenthal

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 7 '54 300w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p22 D 6 '53 60w

Wis Lib Bul 50:62 Mr '54

AVALLONE, MICHAEL. Dead game; a novel of suspense. 207p $2.75 Holt

54-5891

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:84 F 1 '54 60w

"A lost diary by Edgar Allan Poe adds to private eye Ed Noon's troubles; and the story moves at as fast a clip as Noon's previous adventures, with more coherence and less crude excess—and an infectious love for baseball most suitable to the present season." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p27 Ap 4 '54 60w

"After mad flights of fancy in his first books, Mr. Avallone is nearer to earth with this yarn." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 18 '54 50w

"Slaphappy but lively." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 30w

AVELINE, CLAUDE. Fountain at Marlieux; tr. from the French by Peter Green. 208p $3 Roy pubs.

[54-36801]

Detective story.

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
— N Y Times p39 O 31 '54 20w

"Intensity, characters and color of background have been well preserved in this translation." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 N 28 '54 40w

"Suspense is well managed, the pace is sensitive, and the people are alive. Only the occasional creaking of the mechanism weakens our belief. Mr. Peter Green's translation is smooth and convincing." L. A. G. Strong

+ — Spec p378 S 24 '54 70w

"The whole book is fairly surprising in its mixture of raciness and violence, sentimentality and piousness. Most surprising of all is that anyone should have thought it worth translating, so much does it run against the trend of recent French writing."

Times [London] Lit Sup p605 S 24 '54 60w

AVERILL, ESTHER HOLDEN. Jenny's birthday book [il. by the author]. [32p] $2; lib ed $2.50 Harper

54-6589

Another picture-story book about Jenny Linsky, the shy little black cat from Greenwich Village. This time Jenny's friends have a picnic in the park to celebrate Jenny's birthday. For ages four to seven.

Booklist 51:46 S 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 17 '54 100w

Commonweal 61:205 N 19 '54 20w

"A new Jenny Linsky book is always a delight, but this one is a special surprise—full picture-book size with illustrations in four colors." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:426 D '54 160w

"A real comedy of manners, the formal little commentary and expertly static pictures have an effortless high humor."

+ Kirkus 22:579 S 1 '54 90w

"It's a lovely gift for cat, kitten or child. Miss Averill's unique ability to get the essence of catness never fails. The gay, flowery setting, the cleverly simplified city details, make this just right for the look and listen age. They will quite agree to the three candles on the birthday cake: but we feel that by now Jenny surely must have lived several sets of nine lives, and wish her many, many more."

L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p11 S 12 '54 200w

"Here are none of those problems of cowardice, shyness or selfishness which Jenny always solved in such an unpretentious manner that they were full of meaning for young children. . . Younger children who are meeting

Jenny for the first time may miss the associative pleasure of references to characters in other books, but they cannot miss the general air of festivity and well-being." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 S 19 '54 110w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 30:202 N 27 '54 60w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe
San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 50w

AVERY, HELEN M., and NYE, FRANK WILSON. Clubwoman's book. 303p $3.95 Holt
367 Women's clubs 54-5458

Information on the organization, programs, and techniques of women's clubs. Index.

Booklist 50:290 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 10w

"A book that should be in every woman's club library, for it has the unique combination of the historical and philosophical background of the woman's club movement in all its ramifications, and a practical how-to-do-it approach on every aspect of club operation."

+ Kirkus 22:97 F 1 '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:129 My '54

AYER, ALFRED JULES. Philosophical essays. 289p $4.50 St Martins

192 Philosophy 54-4542

"Twelve essays, four of which concern questions of logic and metaphysics; three, moral philosophy or ethics; and five, the theory of knowledge. The collection is inspired by the belief that philosophical problems can be solved by the process of logical analysis." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 15 '54 40w

"Eighteen years have passed since Mr. A. J. Ayer published, at the age of twenty-six, his Language, Truth and Logic, and the study of philosophy in England has never been quite the same since. . . Mr. Ayer writes more guardedly in his new book. . . He is still, more or less, of the same mind about philosophy, he still writes with the same wonderful lucidity, he can still unhorse his critics with the utmost economy of argument; but his new book is not, like his first, aggressive and dogmatic. . . So one way and another it looks as if the philosophical extremist of eighteen years ago must now be counted a moderate; but in saying this I hope I shall discourage no one from reading this distinguished and important book." Maurice Cranston

+ Spec p94 J1 16 '54 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p596 S 17 '54 1450w

AYMAR, GORDON CHRISTIAN. Yacht racing rules and tactics; diagram photographs by the author. 143p $6 Van Nostrand

797.14 Yacht racing 54-6273

"A completely re-written edition of this valuable elucidation of yacht racing rules, with decisions of the Appeals Committee of the N.A.Y.R.U. on important points. Fully illustrated by photographs of models, and actual photographs." Library J

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 10 '54 60w

Kirkus 22:90 F 1 '54 160w

"Basic for sporting collections." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1520 S 1 '54 30w

AYME, MARCEL. Magic pictures; more about the wonderful farm; tr. from the French by Norman Denny; pictures by Maurice Sendak. 117p $2.50 Harper

54-6336

Continues the story of the two little French girls, Delphine and Marienette, begun in The Wonderful Farm (Book Review Digest 1951). Here as before the animals talk and help the children outwit their very realistic father and mother. For ages 6 to 10.

Booklist 50:363 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 J1 4 '54

30w

"Mr. Aymé's imagination has invented delightful conversations, especially between the wolf and the girls, and wonderful scenes of children and animals playing together." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:171 Je '54 90w

+ Kirkus 22:109 F 15 '54 130w

"Rather a long drawn out blend of realism and fantasy, but will be of interest to some children in grades 4, 5, and 6." M. B. Snow

Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 60w

"It all happens in France, and the scene offers the essence of French farm life. But the little girls could happen anywhere." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 16 '54 320w

"If these [adventures] are a shade less brisk and economical and the moral implications a whit less sly than in the earlier book, they are still comic and winning. . . Maurice Sendak, who also illustrated The Wonderful Farm, again provides a series of wry and eloquent drawings that are entirely happy with the text." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p26 My 2 '54 260w

"The crisp and ingenious fun is thoroughly Gallic, and its spirit is perfectly caught by Mr. Sendak's fetching drawing." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:208 N 27 '54 50w

"That the life of a French farm is often hard creates the tensions which set off the absurd situations that arise between the children, their parents, and their animals. Only a writer with a vein of poetry in him could have created this touching children's world. Norman Denny's translation is sensitive and able." Maria Cimino

+ Sat R 37:60 My 15 '54 230w

Time 64:88 Ag 9 '54 80w

AYME, MARCEL. Secret stream; tr. from the French by Norman Denny. 223p $2.75 Harper

53-11828

"Marcel Aymé's 'The Secret Stream' is the turbulent drive toward bestiality and violence which, according to Aymé, lives in middle-class man who stifles it in the interests of position and respectability. 'The Secret Stream' is the story of a particularly ugly sex crime committed by an irreproachable man whose position in the community makes it possible for him to evoke serried-ranks protection from the dominant class." N Y Times

"'The Secret Stream' is not the best introduction to one of modern France's most popular and skilled writers, perhaps because it is even more innately French than some of his other books. Its satire and its humor are less like a brilliant fireworks display than in some of the others; the children do not seem so irresistibly the essence of childhood; the book seems slow in getting started and its plot pattern diffuse. Or, perhaps, the rather dull translation by Norman Denny makes it seem less characteristically Marcel Ayme than his tales usually seem." Fanny Butcher

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 7 '54

500w

"One of those small, effortless, highly polished masterpieces which afford the reader the maximum of enjoyment." Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 13 '53

120w

Reviewed by Honor Tracy

New Statesman & Nation 45:240 F 28

'53 120w

"In resolving his plot, in bringing the scales of justice into balance, Aymé runs to the bizarre and fantastic. The emotional pressure that drives Marguet into committing this sex-obsessed murder, he makes understandable; but the compulsion which forces the man into making an ignorant, frightened boy his accomplice after the act is questionable. Possibly it is psychologically sound in the grim field of the psychotic; possibly, also, it is Aymé's intention to accent the intellectual helplessness of a man strangled by his desires." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 7 '54

550w

"The masterful construction in Aymé's work—so good you're almost unaware of it—here places the burden of proof on an intelligent 12-year old boy. . . Having built his devastating yet seldom openly factious case against the 'solid citizens,' Aymé lets true justice triumph in the end. The instruments of the town's redemption are the boy, police sergeant Maillard, and Troussequin. The author's savage animus, tempered by mastery of his craft, sweeps the reader along. Aymé, by sheer brilliance, makes of this essentially sordid plot a splendid social divertissement." Frances Keene

+ N Y Times p5 F 7 '54 600w

"M. Aymé makes this a very dull tale indeed. He has missed nothing obvious, and he has disclosed nothing that we might not have expected. His rich, respectable people are sly and pompous, his poor working-class people are sly and frightened, and his children and good-for-nothing slum people are sly and derisive without being amusing."

— New Yorker 29:100 Ja 30 '54 120w

"Marcel Aymé is a polished writer; his ironic sense is always operating; he is witty; he can be outrageous and make the reader like it. But some will wonder if he couldn't have done this tale of a bizarre murder at not much more than half the length and not only preserved its ironies and its wise perceptions and understandings, but made a far sharper and more effective affair of it in the end." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 16 '54

550w

"The murder story is told unconvincingly, the search for the murderer does not allow for much mystery since everything was clear to the reader from the outset. The victim never appeared alive in the story and arouses little interest. As to the notary, he is even more mechanical and conventional than such middle-class notables are likely to be. The book is redeemed by a fine grasp on concrete details of everyday life, by a vivid style, by moments of hilarious satire and of cordial sympathy with all truants and outlaws, vagabonds and prostitutes. But it is on the whole a perfunctory affair and a very moderately successful attempt at comedy." Henri Peyre

+ Sat R 37:13 F 6 '54 900w

"Perhaps only a Frenchman could write a book in which such diverse elements as light-hearted gaiety, deep pathos, bawdy wit, political connivance, sharp business practices, and a sordid murder mystery are all blended with a skill that results in a smooth-flowing, cohesive story. Marcel Ayme has done it, in 'The Secret Stream.'" H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '54 180w

"The thread of this dry, dispassionate satire hangs on the question: Will the murderer be caught? He is, but that hardly matters. What does matter is Novelist Aymé's picture of provincial life. It is the prototype of a stock cliché of French humor, and has begun to yellow a bit with age. Although expertly composed and amusing in spots, it is trivial and slightly out of focus."

Time 63:105 F 8 '54 500w

"M. Aymé has no illusions whatever regarding the behaviour of adolescents and does not mince his words in describing their habits. His chief skill is in presenting the general picture of small-town life, and conveying that peculiarly French combination of good nature and irritability in everyday dealings. The translation is good."

Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 6

'53 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:72 Mr '54

B

BABCOCK, DONALD CAMPBELL. New England harvest. 80p $2.75 Ind. univ. press 811 53-10026

A collection of poems by an American poet, who teaches philosophy at the University of New Hampshire.

Booklist 50:219 F 1 '54

"Highly recommended." Herbert Cahoon
+ Library J 78:2220 D 15 '53 80w
Nation 178:136 F 13 '54 60w

"The themes are small, the techniques wanting. There is, nevertheless, warmth and wit in New England Harvest, and one senses behind the poetry a genuine personality." Galway Kinnell

+ — Poetry 84:163 Je '54 600w

BABCOCK, FREDERIC. Hang up the fiddle. 320p $3.95 Doubleday

54-9833

The story of a friendship between two boys of different classes. Peter was the son of a Nebraska minister; his friend Duffy was another Huck Finn, with a beautiful voice. Duffy saved Peter's life, and the friendship based on that grew. During Peter's high school days the boys drifted apart, but when Duffy was falsely accused of murder Peter tried to help him, and after one bad break, succeeded. The time is the early years of the century.

Booklist 51:62 O 1 '54

"The whole pace and tension of the novel pick up remarkably when the nostalgic boyhood details are over and the story of Peter's struggle of conscience begins." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 12 '54 210w

"A novel, by the well known critic, has a firm base and is honest in its derivation and intentions."

+ Kirkus 22:451 J1 15 '54 120w

"Here, written in a style as real and as unpretentious as smalltown, everyday life, is the sympathetic story of the growing up of a minister's son in Nebraska forty years ago... 'Hang Up the Fiddle' is chiefly Peter's book—and Nebraska's. For none of the lesser characters is very strikingly realized, and nothing else in the novel is quite so compelling as Peter—from his early boyish rages to his almost-grown-up vacillations and impulsive moral strengths—in process of finding himself." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 19 '54 370w

"A good and honorable novel, 'Hang Up the Fiddle'; it will engage and delight a great many readers. It has perhaps a couple of doubtful touches. The romance between Pete and his childhood friend Ginny, while pleasant, seems to need further development and integration into the main current of the story. And Pete himself, not yet old enough to vote when the book ends, sometimes appears a bit precocious in his accomplishments. Yet this apparent precocity may be only a misjudgment of mid-century upon early-century potentiality." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p5 S 12 '54 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 8 '54 500w

"It is in the very close of the book that the story wavers and loses some of its otherwise consistent effectiveness. Peter is regretfully forced to make a crucial decision, in support of his idealism, that is technically outside the law and somewhat inconclusive. This reservation is minor when weighed against the vividly authentic evocation of many facets of American character." Edmund Fuller

+ — Sat R 37:32 O 9 '54 320w

BACON, DAISY SARAH. Love story writer. 172p il $3 Hermitage

808.3 Authorship. Fiction—Technique

54-9260

"Daisy Bacon, who has been at various times the editor of True Love Stories, Love Story Magazine and Detective Story Magazine has written a book of advice for would-be authors of romantic fiction. . . Miss Bacon emphasizes an important, though old, saw that every writer must know his market. It is one of the hardest things of which to convince beginning authors, but one of their most necessary tools." Springfield Republican

"General public libraries should value Miss Bacon's anecdotal (albeit too brief) manual, for it is a 'rare' book on a difficult subject. Having edited the top-ranking, weekly Love Story Magazine for 20 years, she is uniquely qualified to reveal to the neophyte many technical items concerning typewritten manuscripts. She has integrity—she can offer no 'magic formula' to writers." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1394 Ag '54 210w

Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 80w

BADGER, GEOFFREY MALCOLM. Structures and reactions of the aromatic compounds. 456p $11.50 Cambridge

547.2 Aromatic compounds

54-3317

"Essentially a reference survey of the fundamental scientific knowledge of the aromatic compounds. It is an integration of results obtained from the first attempts to elucidate the structure of benzene down to very recent investigations of the aromatic 'double' bond. Particular attention is given to knowledge bearing on structure, behavior in chemical reactions and optical activity. References are given to the source articles, and the names of the authors of cited literature are assembled in the author index. The level of treatment assumes considerable education in chemistry, hence the book will be most useful to such readers as graduate students, college teachers and graduate chemists engaged in research." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:2639 Je 28 '54 30w

"A very compact presentation of what is known about the interrelations of the electronic and molecular structures, properties, and reactions of the aromatic compounds. . . The book is valuable for organic chemists who are teaching or engaged in basic research." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1895 O 15 '54 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:51 J1 '54

BAGBY, GEORGE, pseud. See Stein, A.

BAILEY, JEAN. Rod's dog; il. by Sidney Quinn. 191p $2.50 Abingdon

54-3332

A twelve-year-old city boy is left by his parents in a small Kansas town. Rod resents the fact that he has been left and assumes a superior attitude toward both animals and humans. In this story for grades five to seven the influence of a fine dog on a youngster is described.

Booklist 51:67 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 10w

"Boys who want a dog story, a baseball story, or a how-to story should read this one." B. J. Russell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 14 '54 150w

"Honest and steady."

+ Kirkus 22:362 Je 15 '54 110w

"Recommended for grades 5-7." Eleanor Hawley

+ Library J 79:2493 D 15 '54 110w

"Not recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

— Library J 79:2494 D 15 '54 110w

BAILEY, LIBERTY HYDE, and LAWRENCE, GEORGE HILL MATHEWSON. Garden of bellflowers in North America. 155p il $5 Macmillan (N Y)

583.57 Campanula 53-13312

"A definitive book of these rewarding flowers', much neglected by gardeners. Written from manuscript notes compiled in 1939-44 by the venerable dean emeritus of horticulture at Cornell University." (Bookmark) Index.

"Bears all the marks of his reliability and scholarship."

+ Bookmark 13:135 Mr '54 40w

"A definitive book on bellflowers."

+ Kirkus 21:617 S 1 '53 100w

"Dr. Bailey's emphasis is on the background and wide variety of bellflowers rather than their culture. His pages will prove a boon to those flower gardeners who like to know what lies behind their favorite flowers and enjoy assembling choice kinds not commonly found in amateur cultivation."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My 2 '54 120w

"Mr. Bailey describes the culture of bellflowers in his own garden. A key to their general and the usual taxonomic descriptions is supplemented with fifty full-page line drawings, the work of Mrs. Elizabeth Bruckmeyer of Cornell. There is also a useful key to the species of Campanula cultivated in North America. The book will thus be useful to taxonomists, students, and gardeners in general as a worthy contribution from a distinguished horticulturist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:237 Je '54 240w

BAILEY, RALPH, ed. Landscaping plans for small homes; plans by Nelva M. Weber; il. by Sigman-Ward. (Hanover house bks) 128p $2 Garden City bks.

712.62 Landscape gardening 54-7133

"Suggests some 90 individual plant groupings and 30 representative landscape schemes which may be readily adapted to beautify the home landscape. Illustrated." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:232 Jl '54 20w

"Most home-owners will find their problems solved in one or more of the groups. Sketches of the gardens, with excellent planting keys, make this an easy guide to use." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 23 '54 90w

BAIN, BERNARD E. My one hundred children, by [the author] with Dale Kramer. 210p $3 Simon & Schuster

362.73 Presbyterian Home, Lynchburg, Virginia. Children—Charities, protection, etc. 54-9810

Dr Bain, head of a Presbyterian children's home in Lynchburg, Virginia, writes about the daily life at the home, and the activities and characters of the different types of children.

Booklist 51:122 N 15 '54

"Dr. Bain, whose guidance is warm and wise, provides a quiet perspective of this small community."

+ Kirkus 22:525 Ag 1 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 14 '54 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 28 '54 110w

BAINTON, ROLAND HERBERT. Hunted heretic; the life and death of Michael Servetus, 1511-1553. 270p il $3.75 Beacon press

B or 92 Servetus, Michael 53-10320

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by M. P. Gilmore

Am Hist R 59:914 Jl '54 650w 300w

"With admirable directness of style and manner Professor Bainton tells the story of the remarkable Servetus, a figure whose career baffled his contemporaries as it does us. . . Professor Bainton has told his story well and again demonstrates his pre-eminent qualities as historian, biographer, and writer. Although he writes of the sixteenth century, his pages offer a constant challenge as we face modern problems and should make us ponder long his concluding admonition that 'the story of Calvin and Servetus should demonstrate for us that our slogans of liberty need continually to be thought through afresh.'" G. C. Boyce

+ Ann Am Acad 293:192 My '54 360w

Booklist 50:237 F 15 '54

"A scholarly study of persecution and martyrdom."

+ Bookmark 13:103 F '54 30w

"Perhaps it is because he has studied his subject at first hand from the documents instead of repeating the earlier biographers, as they repeat one another, that Professor Bainton gives little indication of the previous history of the study of Servetus, from Allwoerden in 1727 onwards. His bibliography largely ignores the earlier authorities. The illustrations are a great help. They are chosen, according to Professor Bainton's custom in his other books, from old woodcuts; but he ought to say where they first appeared, not merely give the titles of modern books from which he has borrowed them. Many people will no doubt approve of his parallels between Servetus and the modern situation (the final words of the book are about Hiroshima), but others will feel that a history book need not be turned into a tract. However, this book is so fresh and good that it is to be hoped that Professor Bainton will write a really detailed and definitive life of Servetus." H. L. Short

+ — Hibbert J 52:210 Ja '54 420w

"An impartial, illuminating portrayal of the famous sixteenth-century heretic Servetus, his associates, and his times, has long been a desideratum. Professor Bainton has now filled the need with extraordinary thoroughness. Of particular interest are the chapters which deal with Servetus as an editor and as the physician who discovered the pulmonary circulation of the blood."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:148 Je '54 240w

BAK, BØRGE NIELSEN. Elementary introduction to molecular spectra. 125p il $2.90 Interscience

535.84 Spectrum analysis. Molecules

A54-8871

"This book presents a brief survey of the field to the beginning student and to the non-spectroscopists interested in molecular spectroscopy. After an introductory discussion of the fundamentals of the measurement and theory of spectra, the author deals more specifically with the research possibilities, the origin, and the types of information concerning molecular structure and thermodynamic properties that are obtainable, from microwave, infrared, and visible-ultraviolet spectra." Chem Eng

"The book is written for biologists, chemists and chemical engineers. They are expected to learn enough about modern spectroscopy from both the theoretical viewpoint and to some extent from the experimental angle, so as to enable them to use modern spectroscopic investigations as a tool in the solution of their own problems. When the complexity of modern quantum theory of molecular structure and spectra is considered, it seems difficult to believe that scientists from other fields can obtain much benefit from a study of this book. . . On the other hand, the compact nature of this volume may well interest the expert who might use it as a quick reference book. There are a number of awkward phrases which, however, do not detract from the intended meaning. There are very few misprints. The physical appearance and the printing of the mathematical formulas are excellent." George Glockler

Am Chem Soc J 76:3866 Jl 20 '54

"This contribution to the field should serve well the purpose for which it was intended."
C. M. Martini

+ Chem Eng 61:354 J1 '54 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:29 Mr '54

BAKAL, CARL. Filter manual; including the filter dictionary; all il. by the author unless otherwise designated. 136p pa $3 Camera Craft

771.3 Photography—Ray filters

"A handy reference book on the use of light filters in photography. The main text is arranged alphabetically with the information presented under short topics. . . The paragraphs of information are supplemented by more than twenty tables. The book will be useful to advanced amateur photographers." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 78:2223 D 15 '53 70w

"It is certainly crammed with information about filters and how to use them. Mr. Bakal has arranged his material so that it is very easy to use as a handy reference guide."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 160w

BAKER, CHARLOTTE (MRS ROGER MONTGOMERY). Venture of the Thunderbird. 243p il $3 McKay

54-9564

An account of the adventures of two brothers from Virginia who attempt to pay their dead father's supposed debt by trading with the Indians of the Northwest, as well as other trading ventures. The time is 1800. For ages twelve to sixteen.

"Food for thrills if not for thought."

Kirkus 22:118 F 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:715 Ap 15 '54 20w

"Inspired by research on the early China trade, and using her special knowledge of the coast Indians, Miss Baker's ambitious project makes a long, unusual story for older boys, with backgrounds seldom if ever before used in such a tale." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune BK ■ p12 My 16 '54 250w

"To come to the last page and find that there is no answer is discouraging, especially since with pruning the story could have easily been told in one not-too-long book. Portions of the narrative are undeniably stirring and there is much background information on period and places that is genuinely interesting, but the author fails to realize fully the dramatic possibilities of her material." L. T. Bulman

— + N Y Times p14 My 30 '54 220w

BAKER, JOHN FLEETWOOD. Steel skeleton; 2v; v 1, Elastic behaviour and design. 206p il $8.50 Cambridge

624.18 Steel construction

[54-3769]

"The first of two volumes which together will constitute a major contribution to the engineering design of steel frame-structures. In them will be presented an organized and rather full summary of the work of the British Steel Structure Research Committee and other British organizations including the Welding Research Council and the Engineering Laboratory of Cambridge University. This work has been based on actual experimental investigations of modern steel building frames, and its purpose has been to formulate practical design methods for such frames that would exploit more fully the properties of steel as a structural material. In the present volume approximately half of the space is devoted to describing the experimental investigations, including those made on actual buildings, and the other half to a detailed presentation of new design methods." N Y New Tech Bks

Eng N 153:316 O 7 '54 140w

"A treatise of major importance." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1320 J1 '54 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:62 J1 '54

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Nickels and dimes; the story of F. W. Woolworth; il. by Douglas Gorsline. 134p $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Woolworth, Frank Winfield—Juvenile literature 54-9621

The life story of F. W. Woolworth who got his start in storekeeping as an unpaid handyman in a dry goods store, and rose to wealth as the founder of the "five and ten" stores. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 51:89 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Vernon Ives

Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by M. J. Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 60w

"Though Woolworth, and his world, are idealized here, with little real feeling for personality, this nevertheless has its tributary value."

Kirkus 22:490 Ag 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by H. S. McEntee

Library J 79:2499 D 15 '54 90w

"Certain boys will enjoy this American success story, and perhaps it will find a wider audience, for certainly, as purveyors of merchandise, the familiar red-fronted stores are better known to millions than, say, Saks Fifth Avenue. The illustrations are by Douglas Gorsline, a distinguished artist." L. G.

+ Sat R 37:87 N 13 '54 180w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 120w

BAKER, ROBERT ANDREW. Help yourself to better mail order. 366p il $5.50 Printers' ink pub. co, inc, 205 E. 42d st, N.Y. 17

659.133 Mail order business 53-13279

"A Guidebook, offering basic principles of mail order advertising and written by a practitioner of considerable experience. In 4 parts; the first section, about half the book, deals with concepts; part 2 is a collection of articles reprinted from Printers' Ink; part 3 is a selection of outstanding mail-order ads selected by leading advertisers; part 4 is a working text of key questions, ideas, checklists, and so on." Library J

Booklist 50:197 Ja 15 '54

"Recommended." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:210 F 1 '54 80w

BAKKEN, HENRY HARRISON. Theory of markets and marketing. 362p $6 Mimir Pub. Inc, Box 2002, Madison, Wis.

658.8 Marketing

53-11046

"This book presents an analytical and historical treatment of markets. A 'market' is defined as 'an institution designed to facilitate the transfer of legal rights and titles to ownership in goods, services, and properties.' With this definition as a foundation, the author builds a stimulating analysis of the structure, purposes, functions, and characteristics of markets. He draws on materials in the fields of economic history, law, and institutional economics. In addition, he spices the work with his own mature reflections on the actual workings of markets." J Pol Econ

"While the book may find no adoption as a marketing text and may make little impression upon marketing theorists, portions of it may be profitably read for its institutional economic analysis. And the chapters on primitive and tribal trade, pagan commerce, and medieval fairs are perhaps the best writing on these subjects to appear in many years." Robert Bartels

+ Am Econ ■ 44:200 Mr '54 600w

Booklist 50:92 N 1 '53

BAKKEN, H. H.—Continued

"Professor Bakken presents markets as an essential and highly desirable price-making mechanism. It is to be hoped that in a subsequent study he will bring his training and experience to bear on the problem of the decline of markets in the United States and the steps which should be taken if we are to preserve this important institution." V. A. Mund

J Pol Econ 62:80 F '54 150w

BALANCHINE, GEORGE. Complete stories of the great ballets; ed. by Francis Mason; annotated selection of recordings by Jacques Fray; drawings by Marta Becket. 615p $5.95 Doubleday

792.8 Ballet 54-5364

"Containing the stories of more than 100 ballets that are in the repertoires of companies performing in the United States. Photographs, drawings. Notes, glossary, list of recordings, reading guide, index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:293 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 20w

"Dipping at random thru the stories of the ballets, I found just about what I expected, expert information, sometimes a touch of illumination. But don't swallow the whole as gospel." Claudia Cassidy

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 14 '54 350w

"Balanchine's handling of the synopses is uneven. In the narrative ballets, particularly those of other choreographers, he goes to great lengths and into great detail. In his own plotless ballets he leaves out everything that makes them live—possibly in order that audiences may discover the life-sparks for themselves." Margaret Lloyd

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '54 440w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

"With all its parts, this is a veritable and valuable fount of general information about ballet for anyone with the least liking for the art."

+ Kirkus 22:29 Ja 1 '54 130w

"This is a valuable reference book for the inquiring student, the busy radio or television producer and the simon pure balletomane. Highly recommended for ballet, dance and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 50w

"In a work of such size and of such scope, it is not surprising that the editor has overlooked a minor error or two and it is certain that some will grumble about omissions or inclusions in the roster of ballets described or in the list of significant events, but the truth of the matter is that here, inescapably, is a dance book of great importance, important to a parent whose child says 'Take me to the ballet' and important to the dance scholar still willing to learn from a master." Walter Terry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 14 '54 650w

"His book is probably the most valuable and informative one of its kind ever published in this country. There are really several books here. The stories of the ballets occupy the major section. Then there is a level-headed chapter on how to enjoy ballet. There also is a brief history of ballet and an excellent chronology." Rosalyn Krokover

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 7 '54 800w

"Toward its last fifty or sixty pages 'Balanchine's Complete Stories of the Great Ballets' offers a document of unique interest. It is like spending a long placid afternoon with George Balanchine, hearing him asked many questions, and afterward being able to remember all his answers. . . . The major portion of the book describes the stage action of about a hundred ballets danced here recently by local or foreign companies, and of some others. Here Balanchine often provides better publicity for other choreographers than for himself. The book is abundantly illustrated, has interesting historical pages, and other features. It has been edited with imagination by Francis Mason." Edward Denby

+ Sat R 37:18 My 15 '54 800w

BALCH, GLENN. Indian saddle-up; il. by Robert Frankenberg. 210p $2.50 Crowell 53-8407

A story of a tribe of Plains Indians in the early eighteenth century. The hero is a young Indian boy with a twisted foot, who is, nevertheless, the one to bring a great boon to his fellows, the first horse.

Booklist 50:208 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Vernon Ives

Chicago Sunday Tribune p50 N 15 '53 150w

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 11 '54 190w

+ Horn Bk 30:101 Ap '54 90w

Kirkus 21:585 S 1 '53 130w

"Exciting, full of action and suspense, with good characterization. Animal behavior well described. Recommended for grades 6-8." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 79:72 Ja 1 '54 80w

"The boy, Twisted Foot, becomes a vivid hero, and the description of early Indian ways is well woven into the action. When the boy captures the stallion and brings him to his tribe, it is the first time they have seen a horse. Good reading for ages ten to fourteen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 27 '53 70w

BALCHEN, BERNT. Next fifty years of flight; as visualized by [the author] and told to Erik Bergaust. 214p il $3 Harper

629.1 Aeronautics 54-6293

"Technical problems and their solution according to present aeronautical progress are interestingly presented as based on Balchen's own experience as a pilot. Illustrations, maps. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:445 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 13:234 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 27 '54 600w

"Fascinating reading which is conservative but exciting prophecy of tomorrow's world." + Horn Bk 30:360 O '54 80w

"Readers not previously conditioned by the writings of such men as Ley and von Braun, may regard many of his predictions as bordering on the fantastic, but viewed in the light of present-day progress they make considerable sense. Recommended for all general collections." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:1312 Jl '54 160w

"The book has been written in the form of answers to questions asked by Mr. Bergaust, who is technical correspondent for Norway's largest newspaper, and the author of manuals used by the U.S. Air Force. While this literary device tends to become somewhat tedious toward the end, it does make highly technical explanations clear to the layman interested in speed and aviation progress." H. L. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 18 '54 550w

New Yorker 30:79 S 4 '54 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 29 '54 550w

"This enthusiastic book is fully illustrated by photographs, drawings, and diagrams." T. E. Cooney

+ Sat R 37:29 Jl 24 '54 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:174 Jl '54

BALD, FREDERICK CLEVER. Michigan in four centuries; line drawings by William Thomas Woodward. 498p $4 Harper

977.4 Michigan—History 54-8934

Comprehensive history of the state from prehistoric times to 1950. The author is teacher of Michigan history at the University of Michigan and assistant director of the Michigan Historical Collections of the University.

"The book is enriched with scores of photographs which grafically portray the contrasts of Michigan past and present, and with a generous number of drawings. At $4 it is the book bargain of the year." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 12 '54
250w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 19 '54
20w

BALDWIN, FAITH. Widow's walk; variations on a theme. 84p $2.50 Rinehart

811 54-7923

"A collection of seventy sonnets and lyrics, written during the summer of 1953 after the death of the author's husband, a tragedy which shattered her emotionally and spiritually." Sat R

Booklist 51:36 S 15 '54

"The poems range in quality; some have dignity while others fall prey to sentimentality and superficiality and versification. A rich complaint which may appeal to the lonely who want to weep, whether or not they know why."

Kirkus 22:358 Je 1 '54 60w

"These poems are the tragic report of an overwhelming loss and they are superior in expression to many such testaments of sorrow. . . The author has not hesitated to give voice to every phase of her loneliness. By her depiction of the small things of everyday that heighten the sum total of grief, she has succeeded in making her readers share, to the full, her agony." Laura Benet

N Y Times p18 S 12 '54 470w

"A moving record of a woman's agonized struggle to accept, to understand, and to reconcile herself with the terrible fact of loss. 'Widow's Walk' will speak for, and to, many who have faced such grief." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 37:27 S 18 '54 300w

BALL, ELSIE. George Washington, first president; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 127p $1.50 Abingdon

B or 92 Washington, George—Juvenile literature 54-8122

A brief biography of George Washington, beginning with his eleventh year and ending with his death. For ages seven to eleven.

"Good elementary factual content plus on-the-scene narration make a companionable and evenly balanced biography of Washington."

Kirkus 21:788 D 15 '53 80w

"Not as well written as Judson's George Washington or Foster's book of the same name, but will satisfy the child who wants a 'thinner' book than Judson's and better print than Foster's. For grades 5-8 or could be used for remedial reading in junior high. Recommended for collections that need additional material on Washington." Edna Rose

+ — Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 70w

"Although satisfactory for beginners, this volume falls short of the warmth and excellence of the studies by Genevieve Foster and Jeannette Eaton." G. A. Woods

+ — N Y Times p28 F 14 '54 60w

BALL, WILLIAM WATTS. The editor and the Republic; papers and addresses; ed. by Anthony Harrigan. 209p $5 Univ. of N.C. press

973.91 U.S.—Politics and government
South Carolina—Politics and government 54-12391

"William Watts Ball, the vigorous editor of The Charleston News and Courier, who died in 1952 aged 83, was, in his own state, the most influential journalist of his time. For nearly sixty years his paragraphs of pungent prose flavored the columns of South Carolina newspapers. . . William Ball was no part of that 'New South' of Hodding Carter, Jonathan Daniels and Ralph McGill. Charleston he embraced with the dedicated passion of the up-countryman; and always, he stood squarely in the tradition of that earlier, great up-countryman, John C. Calhoun. Like Calhoun, Ball believed in republicanism, not democracy. . . It is as a political philosopher that his challenging essays are here presented, ably edited with a vivid biographical introduction by Anthony Harrigan, a newspaper man who worked for Ball." N Y Times

"The papers and addresses presented in this volume Ball prepared for special occasions. They have a part in the shaping of the Republic and are highly deserving of permanent preservation." W. W. Cunningham

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 28 '54
450w

"Mr. Harrigan has done valuable service in bringing forth the essence of this individualist who became a legend even in his own South Carolina, and so stubbornly breasted the main-streams of his time." M. L. Coit

+ N Y Times p48 O 17 '54 550w

Reviewed by R. S. Brooks

Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 200w

BALMER, EDWIN. In His hands. 276p $3.50 Longmans

54-6665

A young doctor falls in love with a girl who is ill with an incurable disease, altho only a few people know it. The doctor discovers the evidence, but goes on with his plans for the marriage in spite of opposition, relying on his religious faith to carry him thru the difficult situation.

Booklist 50:341 My 1 '54

"Ennobling as much of this experience may be, the really dreadful writing would indicate that the ultimate sacrifice is more probably the reader."

Kirkus 22:83 F 1 '54 70w

"In less practiced hands than those of Mr. Balmer, himself an old hand at fiction writing and editing, a theme with such intense emotional overtones might easily have become mawkish and oversentimental. But he handles it with such restraint and feeling that the reader cannot help developing a genuine sympathy for the doctor and his problem." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 18 '54 340w

BALTHASAR, HANS URS VON. Thérèse of Lisieux; the story of a mission; tr. by Donald Nicholl. 288p $3.50 Sheed

B or 92 Thérèse de l'Enfant Jésus, Saint 53-9807

"The life and teachings of St. Thérèse of Lisieux. Mr. von Balthasar, a Swiss theologian, sees Thérèse as the great symbol of 'engaged' theology who did what Luther tried to do—bridge the gap between the God of the philosophers and the God of Abraham and Jacob. Thérèse was born of noble parentage at Avila in Old Castile, in 1515. A nun of the Carmelite order she died in 1582 and was canonized in 1622." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Notes; no index.

"This superlative book is to the sentimental type of literature on St. Thérèse as a clean wind from the mountains is to the cloying exhalations of a hothouse. The author is not interested in the sweet nothings that have been written and spoken about 'the Little Flower.' His subject is nothing less than to bring a great saint before us in all her grandeur and purity." Edward Barry

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 11 '54
290w

"[A] bald summary cannot do justice to the richness and variety of the exposition, everywhere illustrated not only with the writings of Thérèse herself but also with apt quotations from writers one would superficially suppose to have no concern with her problems—Dostoevsky and Rilke. The author seems to have been well served by his translator." Alban Baer

+ Commonweal 60:45 Ap 16 '54 600w

BALTHASAR, HANS—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p15 Mr 14 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My ■ '54 100w

"Dr. von Balthasar's cool and clear study is an interpretation, but an interpretation based on a complete mastery of the relevant literature and documents. Most of the time Thérèse is allowed to speak in her own words. In a Life, so high a proportion of quotation might hold up the pace. In a work of interpretation it not only offers the necessary guarantee of accuracy but establishes the proper relation between life and mission, personality and teaching. What she said and wrote is simply provided with its background and against that background the portrait stands out firm and convincing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup px Ap 30 '54 1100w

BANKS, RICHARD. Mysterious leaf; il. by Irene Haas. 51p $2.50 Harcourt

54-8527

"Plot centers around three muddled-headed professors, a mysterious little girl, the leaf she leaves with them and their search for her. It all turns out to be an allegory of the seasons, with moments of humor and beauty for the 6-10-year-olds, or adults." Library J

"This engaging little whimsy has both humor and suspense, altho the climax may seem rather subtle to matter-of-fact young readers. The pictures are charming." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 100w

"Gently rarefied, this may not excite but it has an innocent charm and suspense."

Kirkus 22:633 S 15 '54 110w

"This little fantasy is not everybody's meat, but to the magic-minded who like style as well as action, it will have a special appeal. Drawings by Irene Haas are delicate, humorous, and in keeping." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:2253 N 15 '54 60w

"The collegiate background of the story derives from the author's position as associate director of the Yale University News Bureau, and the illustrations have a quaint air that fits the tale admirably." E. S. R.

+ Sat R 37:74 N 13 '54 90w

BANNING, ROBERT, pseud. See Wheelwright, J. B.

BANNON, LAURA MAY. Hat for a hero; a Tarascan boy of Mexico; pictures by [the author]. [48p] $2.75 Whitman, A.

Children in Mexico 54-9939

"Pablo is a small Tarascan Indian boy of an island fishing village in Mexico's beautiful Lake Patzcuaro. He longs for a man-style hat, but is always in mischief and on market day earns not one centavo for his family. However, when a fierce bull goes after his little sister, he proves the fortune telling bird right, by showing great courage." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 51:179 D 15 '54

"Miss Bannon's own visit to the island inspired this colorful picture book, with its exciting story and warm interpretation of a picturesque people who live as they have for centuries." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 90w

"Not important, except as various facets of Indian life, day by day, are pictured through the steps of the story."

Kirkus 22:725 N 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by A. B. Martin

+ Library J 79:2494 D 15 '54 70w

"For children, Pablo himself and all the animals will be appealing, for they are painted with skillful realism and humor." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p8 N 14 150w

"Woven skillfully into Pablo's story is the daily life of his ancient fishing village on Lake Patzcuaro. The writing is simple, rhythmic and direct. Black and white pictures alternate with soft colors. Occasionally they are too prettified and sentimental, but they are decorative and catch the glow of dawn on the lake, the drama of market day and the friendliness of Pablo's family." E. M. Graves

+ — N Y Times pt2 p36 N 14 '54 120w

BARBER, EDITH MICHAEL. Short cut to etiquette; with drawings by Doug Anderson. 125p $2 Sterling

395 Etiquet

53-13432

An up-to-date etiquette book for teen-agers and their mothers, with chapters on Introductions and greetings; Appropriate dress; Etiquette of hospitality; Etiquette for public places; Public conveyance manners; Traveling; The smoking, alcohol and driving problems; First dates; Weekend invitations; Telephone technique; Etiquette of the engagement and wedding, etc. Index.

Booklist 50:207 Ja 15 '54

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 24 '54 180w

BARBER, MRS ELSIE MARION (OAKES). Jenny Angel. 226p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12160

The life story of a beautiful female evangelist whose life began in the slums of Boston, and ended, after years of spectacular success, in a lonely death in California.

Kirkus 22:405 J1 1 '54 180w

"Queer novel for this author to write. Recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:1511 S 1 '54 50w

"The author does a thorough behind-the-scenes job on the mission life, Jenny's road tour revivals, her big shows at the Temple. Over all, the novel has a slick-paper polish that will keep the readers flipping the pages." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p11 S 5 '54 320w

"Aimee Semple McPherson haunts the book without ever inhabiting it; in fact, no one inhabits it. It is all a matter of gears, grease, wheels, and determination." Charles Lee

— Sat R 37:58 S 11 '54 230w

BARBER, RED, pseud. See Barber, W. L.

BARBER, WALTER LANIER. Rhubarb patch; the story of the modern Brooklyn Dodgers; pictures by Barney Stein; words by Red Barber. 121p $1.50 Simon and Schuster

796.357 Brooklyn, New York, Baseball club (National league) 54-3538

"Like all Gaul, the Brooklyn Dodgers can be divided into three parts—the Larry MacPhail, Branch Rickey and Walter O'Malley eras. That's the way 'The Rhubarb Patch', a memory book with words by Red Barber and pictures by Barney Stein, tells the story of the modern Brooklyn Dodgers." N Y Times

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 22 '54 40w

Reviewed by G. A. Woods

N Y Times p13 Ag 8 '54 160w

BARBET, PIERRE. Doctor at Calvary; the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ as described by a surgeon; tr. by the Earl of Wicklow [Eng title: Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ]. 178p il $3 Kenedy

232.96 Jesus Christ—Crucifixion 54-5015

"An attempt to describe the effects on Jesus' body of the injuries he suffered when nailed to the cross. The author is a French specialist in archeology and Scriptural studies as well as a medical doctor. He has done extensive research for this work in many fields, from the theological writings of antiquity to the latest technological discoveries." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Highly recommended for the larger libraries and relevant special collections." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 79:623 Ap 1 '54 160w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 7 '54 40w

BARBETTE, JAY. Dear dead days. 213p $2.50
Dodd
53-8401

Detective story.

"It is all a sample of forced growth from its gratuitous prologue on past, a great deal of assorted wrangling and determined emotionalism." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 20 '53 80w

"Nice spirit, sound plotting and story-telling." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 1 '53 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat 36:71 S 12 '53 20w

BARBI, MICHELE. Life of Dante; tr. and ed. by Paul G. Ruggiers. 132p $3 Univ. of Calif. press

851.15 Dante Alighieri 54-6466

The first English translation of Barbi's life of Dante, published in Florence in 1933. The text is arranged in four parts: The life of Dante Alighieri; The minor works; The Divine Comedy; and The reputation and study of Dante. Bibliographical note. Index.

Christian Century 71:1304 O 27 '54 170w

"This most concise and most authoritative biography of the greatest poet of Christianity is finally available in English, in the translation of Paul G. Ruggiers, Associate Professor of English at the University of Oklahoma. Michele Barbi's study is exemplary, because it combines into an organic whole an exposition of the unquestionable facts of Dante's life and a critical appraisal of his works." Paolo Milano

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 4 '54 360w

"[The] biography has been written by a man completely in sympathy with his subject; but there are faults in this, for this biography has been written not from the point of view of the average reader interested in literature, but from the point of view of a man who has spent a major portion of his free time studying Dante. The result, then, is a work which, despite its merit, will have little appeal for the general reader." A. N. C.

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 23 '54 350w

BARDIN, JOHN FRANKLIN. Christmas comes but once a year. 241p $3 Scribner

54-5913

Story of a small boy's last Christmas on earth, celebrated early because his family knew he would not live. The tension of the ordeal was finally relieved when the eyes of Jamey's parents were opened to some of the mistakes of their marriage.

Booklist 50:277 Mr 15 '54

"Mr. Bardin handles his sad little story well. Except for the dying child himself—who has a rather unconvincing saintly precocity—the characters are not sentimentalized in any way. They are extremely ordinary people, considered with compassion as they react, often badly, to the extraordinary circumstances in which they find themselves. The end, the author manages to make perfectly believable."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 28 '54 250w

Wis Lib Bul 50:136 My '54

BARKE, JAMES. Well of the silent harp; a novel of the life and loves of Robert Burns. 351p $3.75 Macmillan (N Y)

Burns, Robert—Fiction 54-12292

"Last in the author's five volume fictional chronicle, Immortal memory, of the life of Robert Burns. Some incidents are sketched in so briefly that parts of the volume read like a synopsis but as in previous volumes the conversations in Scottish dialect again give the best characterizations of Burns, his family, friends, and enemies." Booklist

Booklist 50:442; 51:14 Jl 15 '54; S 1 '54

Canadian Forum 34:72 Je '54 110w

"Though this volume lacks the lyrical charm of the first in the series, The Wind That Shakes the Barley, it adds the final stroke to the portrait of Robert Burns as the world too little knew him, with his friends and family." M. A. Brody

Cath World 180:238 D '54 220w

"Some fairly barren abstract discussions are introduced, disguised as conversations. It is regrettable that the novel should fall so far short of the admirable clarity and directness of Burns' own statements in both his poems and letters. And one is moved by this diffuse fifth volume to wonder whether the cycle could not profitably have been compressed into three volumes, or perhaps even one." Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 5 '54 360w

Reviewed by W. W. Cunningham

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 16 '54 450w

"The love affairs in 'The Well of the Silent Harp' are tepid, and there is a deal too much conversation with heroines like Clarinda and Chloris, and with Maria Riddell, but the scenes between Willie Nicol and his 'Dear Christless Bobbie' are sharp and salty. Mr. Barke gives a fresh and plausible turn to the Rape of the Sabines which led to the 'letter from Hell,' and he sketches Dumfries and Burns' friends and neighbors there with an easy hand. Jean Burns continues to be his favorite character next to Robin." R. T. Fitzhugh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 S 5 '54 500w

"This final installment, like its four predecessors, has the strong Scottish sense of reality. It's sturdy, old-fangled writing, with the strong smack of cottage, byre and howf in it. The many who love Burns can find him here in some of the coarseness which gave substance and reality to the beauty of which he sang. The whole forms a warm, full-blooded account of a truly warm and full-blooded man." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p6 S 5 '54 600w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p85 F 5 '54 60w

BARKER, SIR ERNEST. Age and youth: Memories of three universities; and, Father of the man. 2v in 1 347p $3.40 Oxford

B or 92 A54-486

"Sir Ernest Barker presents his autobiography under the title Age and Youth with the sub-title 'Memories of Three Universities.' The title explains its structure since it comprises two separate parts: the first and larger, his adult experiences as a scholar; the second and smaller a reprint of the earlier story of his climb up the Victorian educational ladder from cottage to college. The subtitle explains its contents: for the theme of part one is a record of the author's life as university teacher, scholar, and administrator. Of his domestic life and of the social and political background of his activities he tells us little. Part two is dramatic; part one is reflective." Manchester Guardian

BARKER, SIR ERNEST—Continued

"This is a delightful book which any man in his old age might be proud to write but would find hard to emulate, for it bears throughout the stamp of a distinctive personality." A. B.

+ Canadian Forum 34:117 Ag '54 300w

"A captious reader of this book might, in his less genial moments, criticise its author for excessive resort to classical and literary allusions. They occur, sometimes two and three deep, on almost every page. A touch of malice might even inspire him to chaff the author for the unaffected gusto with which he records laudatory references to himself. But it would doubtless be a case of malice inspired by envy, for which of us would not like to have said about us the things which have been said by persons of the highest eminence about Sir Ernest Barker? And the fact remains that the book would have lost nothing by condensation. But with that, criticism is silent." Mary Stocks

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 1 '53 450w

"The new material which forms the major part of the autobiography describes his life teaching modern history as a Fellow of three Oxford colleges, his years in administration as Principal of King's College, London, his work as Professor of Political Science at Cambridge, and, finally, his various activities since his retirement, for example as visiting professor at Cologne. Superficially it is simply the record of an uneventful and distinguished academic career. It becomes a very good book partly because of the way it is written, which is informal and discursive, but scarcely ever simply anecdotal as academic autobiographies so often are. Partly its merits lie in the character that emerges." Eric James

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:649 N 21 '53 750w

"The historian may be forgiven for hoping that this autobiography will survive, for in an amiable, conversational way it etches academic men and memories of societies too easily lost or submerged in more pompous or precious recollections." J. B. Brebner

+ Pol Sci 69:313 Je '54 600w

"Sir Ernest Barker confesses somewhere that he would gladly have joined a society for the promotion of recklessness in conversation. Yet his book, which is presented as 'conversation,' not autobiography, gives little indication that he would have been a very active member. With one or two glowing exceptions, when he cannot prevent his robust north-country humour from breaking through, his conversation is on the level of talk at high table rather than gossip in the common room." Eve Crosland

+ Spec p616 N 20 '53 500w

"Part I, he insists, 'is not an autobiography. It is only a conversation.' A good many readers will prefer the autobiography, and ask themselves whether any other don has done anything quite so good in its kind as Father of the Man. But to Sir Ernest, the story of his youth is, we are made to feel, a second best. Better is growing old beautifully, and talking so as to be worth listening to. Certainly in Part I Sir Ernest is well worth listening to. . . . If anything could make this book better, it would be a fuller index of proper names. Men of note are mentioned in the text, and forgotten in the index."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p758 N 27 '53 1200w

BARKER, MELVERN J. Little island star. [30p] col il $2.75 Oxford 54-7764

Picture-story about a small boy who lived on an island, and near a lighthouse. The light from the lighthouse was Tommy's friend and he made a song about it. For ages 3 to 6.

Kirkus 22:109 F 15 '54 50w

"Author's large three-color illustrations will be enjoyed by all." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 79:780 Ap 15 '54 60w

"It is hard to pinpoint the qualities that make one picture book a favorite and allow another to gather dust on the nursery shelf. Much hinges on sparking the fancy with humor, on suspense and imaginative phrasing—elements overlooked by Mr. Barker. His story never quite leaves the ground. . . . The book has some good, splashy land and sea scapes." M. L. Krupka

N Y Times p24 My 23 '54 110w

BARKER, RALPH E., pseud. See Swartout, J. M.

BARKLEY, ALBEN WILLIAM. That reminds me. 288p il $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government 54-10775

Reminiscences of the "Veep" covering his whole life, but with the preponderance of the space devoted to his forty-seven years in public service. Photographs. Index.

Booklist 51:174 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:29 N '54 10w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 21 '54 600w

Christian Century 71:1521 D 15 '54 170w

"Barkley has frank but friendly words about the men who sought, and won or lost, big office, and his book adds many illuminating as well as sweetening chapters to Twentieth Century political history. One of the best of the political autobiographies."

+ Kirkus 22:622 S 1 '54 200w

"The author's account of his long and distinguished career in politics is told with modesty, frankness, much wit, and not the slightest trace of bitterness. . . . America's beloved 'Veep' has written a thoroughly delightful book—a book which records events great and small in the life of Mr. Barkley and of the state and nation he has served so long and so well. . . . Highly recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:2096 N 1 '54 140w

"One of the sunniest autobiographies we have seen in many a long day, though Alben Barkley tells some of the oldest jokes in the history of folklore. But some of them—not all, but a good many—have the quality of the finest chestnuts in that they improve with age, and when aptly applied are more effective than the sharpest new wisecrack." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 7 '54 800w

"Mr. Barkley writes two glowing chapters, perhaps the warmest in his book, on the accomplishments of the Wilsonian years. . . . Also, Mr. Barkley is not one to sharpen his writing with the pointed pen. As Mr. Democrat, he will lambast Republicans en masse in the best traditions of campaign oratory, only to take time out for fulsome tributes to the late Senators Taft and Vandenberg." Jay Walz

+ N Y Times p5 N 7 '54 1100w

"An autobiography and, considering the author's eminence and experience, a remarkably shallow one. He and his collaborator, Sidney Shalett, have tried to be breezy at all costs, and this book probably contains more anecdotes than any other political biography ever written. (Many of the jokes are pretty good, too)." New Yorker 30:222 N 20 '54 150w

"His honors, disappointments, and humor are all interwoven in his informal and entertaining autobiography, 'That Reminds Me.' But when the Barkley story and stories have all been told it is the memory of many incidents that illustrates the Barkley 'honor' that lingers. And it is from this viewpoint that his famous 'break' with FDR over the tax bill veto emerges as the high point of his career." Jack Steele

+ Sat R 37:40 N 20 '54 900w

BARLOW, EDWARD ROBERT. Management of foreign manufacturing subsidiaries. 223p $3.50 Harvard univ. Division of res. 658 Industrial management. Corporations 53-12293

"A study of some of the problems involved in the management of manufacturing branches of United States corporations located in foreign countries based largely on the Mexican operations of 17 such companies. Main attention is focused on the major relationships between the parent corporation in the United States and the foreign units—organization, supervision, ownership, and executive personnel." (Library J) Index.

"The material presented in this study is admitted to be exploratory by the author. There were not sufficient examples or a wide enough geographic area involved to warrant definite conclusions. Although the study is limited in scope, it is interesting, well organized, and a pioneering effort in the field." J. F. Mee

+ Ann Am Acad 295:167 S '54 420w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:629 Ap 1 '54 150w

"Owing to the limited physical area considered, the study admittedly falls short of answering the detailed questions of the wide gamut of manufacturers having good prospects of profitable operations abroad. But it does outline the potentialities of direct investment abroad. Also, though drawing largely on the experience of practical business, the presentation should appeal also to students of international affairs generally."

+ — U S Quarterly ■■ ■ 10:207 Je '54 240w

BARLOW, WAYNE BREWSTER. Foundations of music. 274p il $3.25. Appleton

781 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 53-8987

"Professor Barlow of the Eastman School of Music offers his answer to that perennial challenge: how to teach college students who are not music majors to listen actively to music; and it appears to be one of the best—well organized, meaty content and frankly a text book. An able, imaginative teacher to use it is implied. An introduction to many musical styles, including contemporary ones, is included." (Library J) Glossary of musical terms. Index.

Booklist 50:255 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:557 Mr 15 '54 40w

"The music appreciation book is often the outcome of experience in teaching this subject. Mr. Barlow's experience has resulted in a good book, well adapted to the needs of that heterogeneous group of college students who elect the course in Music Appreciation—students whose musical backgrounds vary from several years of 'music lessons' to mere chance exposure." Doris Silbert

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:466 Je '54 420w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER, ed. Perpetual war for perpetual peace; a critical examination of the foreign policy of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and its aftermath. 679p $6 Caxton ptrs.

327.73 United States—Foreign policy. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 52-11874

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This volume edited by Dr. Barnes is a provocative and forceful statement of the 'revisionist' point of view. But the book might have been sounder and more convincing if the authors had applied the same standards of historical criticism to evidence favorable to their thesis as they applied to evidence which conflicted with their thesis; if they had been less determined to select their evidence only from the anti-Roosevelt portion of the record; if they had more clearly emphasized limitations and conflicts of evidence; and if they had clothed more of their interpretations in the humble garb of hypotheses rather than in the royal robes of unimpeachable truths." W. S. Cole

Am Hist R 59:961 Jl '54 600w

"The reviewer believes that the book might be more effective if the collaborators did not virtually extinguish the light they seek to throw on our recent foreign policy in clouds of invective and streams of abuse." F. M. Russell

Ann Am Acad 292:157 Mr '54 430w

"This is a particularly useful volume for the general reader who seeks an introduction to some of the best representatives of the revisionist viewpoint. The writers are men whose competence cannot be validly challenged, but viewpoint and interpretation are always properly subject to lively debate." G. W. De Armond

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 5 '54 650w

Foreign Affairs 32:673 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '54 180w

"There is little new by way of facts or interpretation in the volume, for the charges made here have all been stated more fully before by most of the same writers. The essays have the trappings of scholarship, but they lack the moderation, balance, good temper, and humility usually associated with the seeker after truth."

— U S Quarterly Bk R 10:88 Mr '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:23 Ja '54

BARNETT, JAMES HARWOOD. American Christmas; a study in national culture. 173p $2.95 Macmillan (N Y)

394.26 Christmas. U.S.—Social life and customs 54-12566

"This is an interpretative study of the Christmas festival celebrated in contemporary United States. . . Though it offers information and explanations of modern holiday customs and behavior, it does not pretend to advance an inclusive theory to account for the origin and development of Christmas in this country. . . This book is a pioneer effort in the sociological study of American holidays." (Foreword) Contents: Christmas in the making; The social role of Santa Claus; Christmas in church, family, and school; Exploiting a festival; Social aspects of Christmas art; The cult of Christmas. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:122 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:429 Jl 1 '54 120w

"This book will be of little help to the librarian looking for Christmas ideas, but should be of continuing service as part of the social history of this country. Recommended." Julia Sabine

+ Library J 79:2208 N 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:31 D 4 '54 50w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 140w

BARNEY, MRS HELEN (CORSE). Green rose of Furley. 247p $3 Crown

53-9968

The romance of a Quaker girl during the Civil war days. Susan's father's farm was a station on the Underground Railroad and a part of the novel describes the workings of the system.

Booklist 50:167 D 15 '53

"Full of action tho it is, 'Green Rose of Furley' is not a clear advance upon the author's earlier and more plausible 'Fruit in His Season'. Reading it, however, is good, clean fun, if not a satisfaction of one's most rigorous critical requirements." A. C. Ames

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 17 '54 370w

BARNEY, H. C.—Continued

"In spite of the misfortunes of war and slavery the total effect of this book is cheerful. Coincidence is rampant! Recommended for light reading." J. L. Ross

+ — Library J 78:2027 N 15 '53 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 25 '54 110w

"Miss Barney has done a remarkable job of weaving the traditional spirit of the Friendly Persuasion into the historical background of the Civil War." A. F. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p56 D 6 '53 210w

BARNHART, CLARENCE LEWIS, ed. See New Century cyclopedia of names

BARNHART, JOHN DONALD. Valley of democracy; the frontier versus the plantation in the Ohio valley, 1775-1818. 338p $5 ind. univ. press

977 Frontier and pioneer life—U.S. Ohio valley 53-10020

A study stemming from the author's interest in the work of F. J. Turner, promulgator of the thesis that American democracy was in large measure the result of frontier experiences. The author's particular field in this book is the Ohio Valley expansion. Professor Barnhart is chairman of the History department at Indiana University. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:256 Mr 1 '54

"Recommended for students of history and democracy." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 78:2025 N 15 '53 210w

"The author is at his best in studying the make-up of the various state constitutional conventions and in analyzing the nature and origins of those constitutions. Informative tables are provided, indicating the number of original sections and the sources of those portions copied from other state constitutions. In painstaking detail Professor Barnhart traces the economic conditions and geographical backgrounds of the delegates as he moves from state to state at its formative stage. . . . Several omissions mar the work." C. C. Cole

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:154 Mr '54 550w

"John D. Barnhart, who in 'Valley of Democracy' presents a careful study of the conflict between farmers and planters in the Ohio Valley, 1775-1818, concludes that Turner's interpretation of Western state-making is still essentially the sound interpretation." J. M. England

+ Sat R 37:36 F 27 '54 290w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:28 Mr '54 300w

BARR, ALFRED HAMILTON, ed. Masters of modern art. See New York. Museum of modern art.

BARRAGAN, MAUDE. John Howard Payne, skywalker. 376p $3 Dietz

Payne, John Howard—Fiction 54-1679

A biographical novel based on the life of John Howard Payne, the nineteenth century actor, playwright, and play adapter: the author of Home, Sweet, Home.

"Relatively inexperienced, apparently, in the art of the novel, the late Maude Barragan attempted one of the trickiest of all: the life of a well-documented figure. . . . It is a pity that the conversations of Washington Irving, the Lambs, Mary Shelley et al seem so awkward and the forward movement so jerky. To make matters worse, the type dances before the eyes—something to do with spacing more than anything else, I judge." C. K. Miller

Library J 79:1592 S 15 '54 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 30 '54 60w

BARRELL, JOSEPH. Philosophical study of the human mind. 575p il $6 Philosophical lib.

130 Philosophy. Psychology 54-10938

"Joseph Barrell believes that the abnormal mind cannot be understood without first understanding the normal mind. Thus nine chapters of 'A Philosophical Study of the Human Mind,' is devoted to the normal mind with a single lengthy chapter on 'Maladjustment and Psychosis.'" San Francisco Chronicle

"Although professing to be scientific in foundation and philosophic in intent, this volume makes very hard reading, and this reviewer got the impression that the scientific basis of the volume comes from the 'popular' version of science, while the philosophy erected upon it is highly speculative." J. A. Torres

Ethics 65:75 O '54 170w

"Professor Barrell has avoided technical language for the most part and adds considerable interest through frequently quoting and citing characters from English and American novels and poems as well as actual case histories." A. C. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 10 '54 100w

BARRETT, FRANKLIN ALLEN. Worcester porcelain. 53p il col il $6.50 Pitman

738.2 Pottery [53-2637]

"Marks of Lund's Bristol and Early Worcester, 1750-1760 and the later marks, 1785-1862, plus keys to marks, bibliography, and index, prepare the reader for the study of clear photographs and four plates in color of jugs and teapots, plates and figures of durable and outstanding English ware." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p31 S '54

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1059 Je 1 '54 30w

"Collectors and others interested in these matters can have no better guide than this new book in the Faber series of ceramic monographs. The author summarizes concisely and readably the findings of a host of earlier investigators. . . . Readers may perhaps ask why the author should have adopted a new name, that one of the proprietors, Lund, for the early Bristol factory; it was known to contemporaries as Lowdin's China House and, to avoid confusion, it would be better to retain the name 'Lowdin's Bristol' for its productions."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p426 Jl 3 '53 750w

BARRINGTON, LOWELL. The deserter. 249p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

54-10659

Story of two young Americans whose lives had been wrecked by an incident in the fighting in North Africa. Tom Corey had served eight years in an Army prison for desertion, Frederick Page was a psychological case hidden away on his family's estate in California. The mystery of what had happened in Africa is only gradually revealed.

"The drama here is at an external level but is not an exploitation of flamboyant elements." Kirkus 22:273 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Technically the novel is sound, being well constructed and well written. Diverting hot weather fare, recommended for general library collections." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:1315 Jl '54 130w

"This is a most unusual story in many ways. The author shows his playwrighting experience in the way he delineates the background of the story without holding it up. It is interesting every second." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 27 '54 450w

"The reader alternates from being deeply concerned to being startled. He fervently hopes Mr. Barrington can manage to knot all his loose ends. He can. 'The Deserter' is a great piece of suspense writing." Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p20 Je 27 '54 350w

"This story is thoughtful and honest, but Mr. Barrington shows more understanding of his hero's problem than of his heart, and the result is an undeniably mediocre piece of work."

— + New Yorker 30:90 Je 26 '54 50w

Reviewed by John Haverstick
Sat R 37:38 Ag 7 '54 330w

BARRON, MILTON LEON. Juvenile in delinquent society. 349p $6.75; college ed $5 Knopf 364.3 Juvenile delinquency 52-5081

"The book is designed primarily for use as a text in courses on juvenile delinquency and criminology. It may also be used to supplement other texts and readings concerned comprehensively with social problems and social disorganization or social pathology. Part One represents an effort to define delinquency not only as a social problem but as a unique concept. A statistical profile of delinquent acts is presented, along with a summary of the known characteristics of delinquents. The dynamics of delinquency are also considered, with special reference to the business cycle and the cycle of war and peace. Part Two is a survey of the major kinds of etiological thought and analysis regarding juvenile delinquency. Part Three is a discussion of societal reactions to delinquency, ranging from detection and detention, and the juvenile court, to the various types of disposition and treatment of cases and, lastly, delinquency control and prevention." (Pref) Index.

"This new text by Professor Barron of The City College has some things to commend it. It is clearly and interestingly written; it is fairly comprehensive; and it has a frame of reference as indicated by the title. I am afraid, however, that in trying to avoid 'sins of omission' the author has fallen into 'sins of commission'. . . It is too bad, after the tremendous amount of work which must have gone into this book, that the total product could not have been more satisfactory." H. A. Weeks

— + Am Soc R 19:637 O '54 750w

Booklist 50:335 My 1 '54

"Intended as a textbook, this is a highly satisfactory summation of the present status of juvenile delinquency research that should find favor not only with students of the problem but with the serious reader as well. For larger libraries." Leon Crain

+ Library J 79:767 Ap 15 '54 80w

BARRY, COLMAN JAMES. Catholic church and German Americans. 348p il $6 Bruce pub.

301.45 Germans in the U.S. Catholic church in the U.S. 53-9930

A study of "German national consciousness in its relation to American Catholicism and as it existed among German Catholics in the United States" (p. 12-13). The story begins with 1800 and is brought down to the 1920's. Index.

"This study takes an honorable place in the family of scholarly works upon European migration to America." R. P. Fogerty

+ Am Hist R 59:388 Ja '54 650w

"Father Barry's account of the magnificent contribution made by German-speaking Catholics to the Church in this country and to the nation itself, is based upon his long and careful study of source material in archives on both sides of the Atlantic. He has packed his book with fascinating descriptions of great churchmen."

+ Cath World 178:75 O '53 320w

BARTH, KARL. Against the stream; shorter post-war writings, 1946-52. 252p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

230 Christianity

54-2880

A collection of translations into English of some of Karl Barth's shorter writings written between 1946 and 1952. They are lectures, talks and occasional papers, dealing mainly with political issues, but the base is always Barth's unyielding Christianity. Bibliography of Barth's work in English. Index.

Reviewed by I. G. Whitchurch

Ann Am Acad 295:186 S '54 550w

"Recommended for the large library and for those with religious collections." Paul von Khrum

+ Library J 79:542 Mr, 15 '54 140w

"One of the most enlightening sections is the verbatim report of discussions with students in Budapest; there are difficult discussions on Church and State, but all the papers show Barth endeavouring to bring his theology and his Christian faith to bear upon harassing political issues." W. G. Robinson

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 30 '54 140w

"In this little volume are collected some of Barth's writings from 1946 to 1952. They make good reading, particularly for a modern American—these political utterances of an orthodox Christian for whom the literal acceptance of the gospel of Christ is the cornerstone for social action." Waldo Frank

+ Nation 179:494 D 4 '54 850w

"The book is well translated by the late Mrs. E. M. Delacour and Mr. Stanley Godman, and the editor, Mr. R. G. Smith, is aware of the difficulties that they have had to face. Dr. Barth's style is not easy. It pounds parenthetically along as though the writer were determined that everything must be said at once and if possible not merely on the same page but in the same sentence. Yet when he addresses young people on their inheritance and responsibility he surprises the reader by his lucidity, and prompts the wish that he had always such an audience in mind."

Times [London] Lit Sup pxiii Ap 30 '54 460w

BARTLETT, NORMAN. Pearl seekers. 312p il $5 Coward-McCann

639.41 Pearl fisheries

54-12385

"An anecdotal history of the Australian pearling trade, from its violent beginnings in the eighteen-sixties with the discovery of the great beds off the desolate western coast, to its present degeneration into a workaday business of gathering shell for buttons." New Yorker

Booklist 51:125 N 15 '54

"Absorbingly dramatic, informative book. Fine illustrations."

+ Kirkus 22:574 Ag 15 '54 170w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:2462 D 15 '54 90w

"Much the best chapters are those dealing with the 'willy-willys' and the hurricanes and the actual conditions in which the divers work. There is, too, an absorbing account of the perennial raids made by Japanese pearling luggers on the lonely coasts of north Australia. . . The book suffers from too many photographs of mediocre quality, and the failure of the map to include many place names mentioned in the text." Alan Morehead

+ — N Y Times p7 O 17 '54 310w

"An excellent job. Many fine photographs and an end-paper map."

+ New Yorker 30:221 N 20 '54 140w

BARTLETT, VERNON. Struggle for Africa. 246p map $3.95 Praeger

960 Africa—Race question

53-11083

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The work is intended for the average reader, uninformed about recent developments and unfamiliar with the rich variety of African

BARTLETT, VERNON—Continued
ways, European colonial policies and their emergent blends in the 'struggle for Africa.' Repeatedly Bartlett warns us that 'this is not a book for the specialist,' and the reviewer for a technical journal must heed such warning. Here then, is an interesting journalistic account, a kind of British preview of John Gunther's still to come Inside Africa. Nevertheless the anthropologist is bound to notice that obsolete and erroneous notions of the nature of culture will dog the best intentioned observer's view of a new and alien cultural scene." J. V. Murra

+ — Am Anthropol 56:938 O '54 600w

Reviewed by C. R. Lovell

Am Hist R 59:672 Ap '54 210w

"Mr. Vernon Bartlett, the well-known British journalist, has written a book which may be warmly commended. The bulk of the book is concerned with 'black' Africa and its many problems. . . . The weakest part of Mr. Bartlett's book is that dealing with French Africa. . . . But notwithstanding minor criticisms, Mr. Bartlett's book should be read as a valuable contribution towards a better understanding of Africa." G. F. Engholm

+ Ann Am Acad 293:211 My '54 380w

"The reader could not reasonably wish for a more simply written, informative one-volume account of contemporary Africa than this book which comes from a distinguished journalist formerly associated with the London Times as foreign correspondent, and with the News Chronicle as editorial advisor." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 178:475 Mr '54 330w

"Although Bartlett's descriptions are lively and quite accurate, it is not likely that a person who has studied Africa closely will derive great benefit from this book—it is, and admittedly so, superficial. The physical and economic bases of many African problems, often as intransigent as the political problems, and with an important bearing on them, are seldom mentioned, and even the political accounts are frequently highly sketchy in historical and cultural background. The book, then, is largely reportorial, and analytical only to a minimal degree." W. A. Hance

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:144 Mr '54 650w

"This tour of human Africa is of value to the general reader, but he cannot achieve it without some strain, because the author arrives at his judgments by subtracting from a perfection he might hope to find, rather than by the more encouraging path of adding up the merits he does find. This and his maintenance of impartiality between African, Indian and European opinions by means of equal blame give the book a sense of negativeness." A. E. T.

+ — Spec p26 Ja 1 '54 180w

BARUCH, BERNARD MANNES. Philosophy for our time; with an introd. by Buell G. Gallagher, and a foreword by Thomas L. Norton. 49p il $2 Simon & Schuster

901 Civilization, Modern 54-4178

"This book consists of four lectures, given by author before the Bernard Baruch School of City College, entitled: 'The Dominant Yearning of Our Time,' 'Making Economic Weather,' 'Man's only Freedom,' and 'Where the Frontier Still Lives.' They are a kind of confession—the ideas and ideals of the last sage in the world of business and government." Library J

Booklist 51:128 N 15 '54

"It will take but an hour to read this brief condensation of a lifetime of Baruch thinking, but out of it will be gained a thought progression that is bound to stir the careful reader for many, many hours—perhaps until he has absorbed some of those qualities that have made Mr. Baruch one of the greatest men of our times." Mary Hornaday

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 650w

Kirkus 22:461 J1 15 '54 180w

"In our confused times such straightforward and well-founded advice is refreshing and healthy. For all public libraries." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 79:1395 Ag '54 110w

"Mr. Baruch surveys the current American scene with a keen eye, spells out his criticism without flinching and reaches the conclusion that since a democracy is everybody's, everybody must assume a measure of responsibility for its well-being. One may no doubt assume, without undue optimism, that this dose of uninhibited reflection did the audience at the Baruch School of Business a sizable modicum of good. Now we shall hope that a larger public will find in these trenchant pages if not a reason for doing penance, then at least a summons not to confuse the superficial with the essential or to use names as blankets with which to hide a chronic fondness for intellectual siestas." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 22 '54 600w

BARZUN, JACQUES MARTIN. God's country and mine; a declaration of love spiced with a few harsh words. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 344p $5 Little

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American 53-6262

"A discussion of two linked problems: what is right with America (especially as seen against the background of European and of highbrow American criticism) and what is wrong with America as seen in terms of the promise of American life and the frequent distortion and less frequent betrayal of that promise." N Y Times

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:74 My '54 600w

Booklist 50:317 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:157 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 28 '54 400w

"In the main this is a book which is the outcome of much study, profound observation, and a clear desire to help exorcise those aspects of American life which have gone awry. It is a volume which cannot fail to contribute toward a better understanding of America and its future." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 700w

"His reflections on American life are those of an alert and highly contemporary mind, looking out on God's country and finding it, on the whole, good. His vantage point is not atop an ivory tower, but on one of steel, glass, and stone in the New York skyline. An interesting view is to be had, of course, but one still too limited and local for the vast subject at hand." P. F. Quinn

Commonweal 60:121 My 7 '54 800w

Foreign Affairs 33:160 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:50 Ja 15 '54 200w

"Everyone will gain from a reading of this." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:445 Mr 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by George Dangerfield

Nation 178:446 My 22 '54 900w

"Is there anything, pro or con, still to be said about 'the American way.' Offhand one would guess 'no.' Nevertheless, Mr. Barzun plunges in and comes up with a book fresher and more stimulating than one would have believed possible." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 21 '54 1050w

"Lively and wide-ranging book. . . . As a veteran reader of books about the United States, I cannot recall one that has quite this character. Mr. Barzun, a native-born Frenchman, is a naturalized American citizen; he is Professor of History at Columbia. As a defender or a critic of American life, he is no respecter of persons, traditions or the most generally accepted platitudes. He has no sacred cows and his book will startle, infuriate, enlighten and rejoice different types of readers." D. W. Brogan

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 21 '54 1350w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill

New Yorker 30:131 My 22 '54 360w

"Mr. Barzun reminds us that examination should always be conducted with 'the double vision,' if possible. 'God's Country and Mine' is a penetrating inquiry; its recommendation, much oversimplified, is that we must temper our brashness, accept our times, avoid cant, and remember that social good 'will fester, unless it is distributed as widely as possible.'" Lewis Vogler

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 18 '54 480w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Sat N 37:15 Mr 20 '54 450w

Reviewed by Richard M'Laughlin

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 320w

Time 63:102 Mr 29 '54 280w

Wis Lib Bul 50:132 My '54

BASHFORD, G. M. Tourist guide to Mexico. 304p il $4.50 McGraw

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel 53-12439

"A general guidebook with information on accommodations, sights, and things to buy. Automobile tourists will appreciate the planned tours with highway guides and data on local repair shops for various U.S. makes of automobiles." Booklist

Booklist 50:416 Jl 1 '54

"Well-organized volume."

+ Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 40w

Kirkus 22:144 F 15 '54 190w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1598 S 15 '54 60w

"'Considering everything—people, scenery, architecture,' says G. M. Bashford, 'Mexico has more to offer the tourist than any other country in the world.' His book goes a long way toward making that broad statement credible, for a more thoroughgoing and painstaking piece of work would be hard to find."

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 160w

BASIC everyday encyclopedia; prepared by the Reference department of Random House, inc, under the editorship of Jess Stein. 574p $1; de luxe ed $2.95 Random house

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 54-7800

"People, places, and things in one big alphabet. No pronunciation. More up-to-date, more modern in tone, and in many instances surprisingly more detailed than the Columbia-Viking." Library J

"Excellent for a book of its size and scope on leading personalities in modern literature, music, movies and chess, not so good on radio or journalism. . . . It's basic; it's everyday; it really is an encyclopedia; and at a dollar it's a best buy, though at $2.95 you'd better stop and consider. More for the home than for the library." Louis Barron

Library J 79:2332 D 1 '54 210w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 31 '54 250w

BASSO, HAMILTON. View from Pompey's Head. 409p $3.95 Doubleday

54-10767

A New York lawyer goes back to the Southern town of his birth to investigate a literary claim. The situation is complicated by the renewal of his old friendships, but in time he manages to clear up the mystery of the disappearing funds, and settle some of his own difficulties too.

"A loquacious, unhurried, pleasant-toned story. . . . This is a good case; the relations between Page and his senior partner, Mr. Barlowe, are well drawn; their deductions give us something to work on, and the hue and cry would be absorbing if the author really gave it a chance. But again and again he cools off our interest in the suit with long—interminably long—interruptions in which 'Sunny' Page relives his boyhood in Old Pompey." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 194:88 N '54 450w

Booklist 51:108 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:34 N '54 30w

"The chief weakness of this very readable book is that marvelous and sustained technique is wielded over matter of little substance. Mr. Basso's book is civilized and remarkably deft, but he has not measured up to his theme in the manner of a Thomas Wolfe or even of a J. P. Marquand." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 180:231 D '54 320w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 24 '54 450w

Reviewed by E. W. Foell

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 16 '54 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Reviewed by William Pfaff

Commonweal 61:195 N 19 '54 850w

"His best book, and one that seems to sum up what he has been saying in the others. He has achieved the unification of past and present, a stream of the psychology of the Old South into the New, reaching out tentacles to strangle, to forbid escape."

+ Kirkus 22:546 Ag 15 '54 200w

"Mr. Basso is at his heartiest best, writing a relaxed prose shot through with mature wit, telling phase, and keen analyses of situation and character. No wonder the Literary Guild chose it. Highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1889 O 15 '54 90w

"In 'The View From Pompey's Head' Hamilton Basso makes use of the novel of suspense with enormous success, and the novel of character with fair success, to hold the reader's attention while he writes a third kind of novel. This is the novel of ideas, which alone, however instructive it might be, could not be depended upon to hold the reader's attention at all." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 24 '54 800w

"There are few more characteristically American themes than that of the man who goes from the town to the city to seek his fortune and finds that he has left a part of himself behind. And there have been few writers, since Thomas Wolfe opened it up in his vital, intense and wordy way, who have handled it so deftly and entertainingly as Hamilton Basso in 'The View From Pompey's Head.'" John Brooks

+ N Y Times p1 O 24 '54 1100w

Reviewed by Macalister Jones

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 31 '54 700w

"Hamilton Basso's new novel is his most impressive book to date. A long, mildly ironic, and deliberately discursive work, it weaves two of his favorite subjects, the subtle social distinctions of a small Southern city and the subtle questions of reputation and standing in New York literary and publishing circles. . . . There is nothing like the authority behind the picture of the literary world that there is behind the picture of the society of Pompey's Head. The effect is not that the two are alike, but that the literary world looks mighty peculiar from the point of view of Pompey's Head, and vice versa." Robert Cantwell

Sat R 37:15 O 23 '54 950w

Reviewed by S. L. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 900w

BASTIN, HAROLD. Freaks and marvels of insect life; drawings by Jane Burton; foreword by Frederick Laing. 248p $3.75 Wyn

595.7 Insects

54-11364

"An introduction to entomology with more than ninety illustrations and diagrams. The text is geared to the layman, describing first the structure, development and classifications of insects and then the more extraordinary attributes and characteristics of six-legged creatures." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

BASTIN, HAROLD—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 28 '54
40w

"His book contains a wealth of detailed information about insects presented in non-technical language. It is illustrated with a number of excellent photographs and drawings marred only by the inclusion of several posed photos of obviously dead specimens indicated in the captions as active living insects." A. C. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 28 '54
180w

"To get the best out of this book, the reader will perhaps need a somewhat wider knowledge of entomology than Mr. Bastin has allowed for. . . It is a pity, also, that Mr. Bastin did not choose a simpler style of writing—one more appropriate to a popular work. These however, are minor criticisms and do not seriously detract from the value of a book that has been carefully and ably put together. The author is well known as an expert photographer of natural history subjects. He includes many beautiful photographs of insects as well as interesting phases of their life histories."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p349 My 28 '54
320w

BATCHELOR, JULIE FORSYTH, and LYS, CLAUDIA DE. Superstitious? here's why! il. by Erik Blegvad. 129p $2.25 Harcourt

398.3 Superstition 54-8566

The authors consider some popular beliefs, customs and charms against evil, delving into their origins, and point out truths and fallacies. For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 51:89 O 15 '54

"An absorbing small volume. . . This is the kind of reading you end up quoting." M. B. K.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 14 '54
110w

"Good introductory material."
+ Kirkus 22:490 Ag 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck
Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 140w

BATE, NORMAN. Who built the bridge? a picture story. [45p] $2.50 Scribner

54-8783

A companion book to the author-artist's Who Built the Highway (Book Review Digest 1953). The Big Sleepy was such a turbulent river that Old Bridge began to fear he would be washed away. After all, he was a hundred years old. This book describes the building of New Bridge in text and pictures.

Booklist 51:67 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:11 O '54 30w

"A perfect companion to 'Who Built the Highway?'" Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 7 '54
150w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon
Christian Science Monitor p17 D 9 '54
170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"Fine for early grades."
+ Kirkus 22:482 Ag 1 '54 70w

"This story is told with a minimum of words and very lovely pictures. It has a poetic quality. Recommended for all libraries." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 79:1659 S 15 '54 80w

"Boys of about five to nine will love the names of all these machines, trucks, boats, barges and parts that help make a big bridge. It is a construction story simplified for beginners, but kept on a plane which will please the engineer fathers who share it with their sons. It will also delight those pre-reading boys who build with blocks large or small at home or at kindergarten." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 19 '54
150w

"It isn't often that an author can dramatize as static a subject as a bridge without stepping over the boundary between logic and drivel. Norman Bate is one of the exceptions. . . Although this is a companion volume to 'Who Built the Highway?' Mr. Bate does not simply repeat the pattern of the first book—but varies it with refreshing ingenuity." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p38 O 10 '54 180w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 30:207 N 27 '54 50w

"Here is good information, but more than that, an interesting story. The large brush drawings show the building of the bridge step by step. A book for fathers and sons to read together." Mildred Phipps

+ Sat R 37:84 N 13 '54 110w

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST. Feast of July. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 246p $3.50 Little 54-8288

Bella Ford, a young English girl, is left with a child to bear as the result of a summer romance. She swore to kill the man responsible and started out to walk to where she thought he lived. On the way she lost her child and was helped by a kindly family until her long illness was past. Then, just as real happiness was beginning for her, the first man reappeared and trouble began again.

"Modest in its compass, The Feast of July is a finely wrought tale which unfolds with a sharply individual accent a familiar drama of the human heart." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:99 O '54 270w

Booklist 51:62 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 30w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 21 '54
300w

"H. E. Bates, always a scrupulous and reticent stylist, brings a certain charm and tender mercy to a simple tale of simple people."
+ Kirkus 22:410 J1 1 '54 210w

"Highly recommended." Karl Brown
+ Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Patricia Hodgart
Manchester Guardian p4 O 12 '54 60w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson
New Statesman & Nation 48:590 N 6
'54 70w

"Certainly, 'The Feast of July' is one of the best of H. E. Bates' novels. . . What captivates most in this novel is the sheer evocative quality of the writing. Mr. Bates has brought to life not only his men and women but the sounds and sights of a rural England of years ago. Here and there in this book a human situation by word or deed may for an instant stretch credulity, but never the landscape, the shimmering water, the soft air, the trees, the naked poverty of the winter fields and the heavy fields of summer." Gene Baro
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 S 19 '54
420w

Reviewed by James Stern
N Y Times p5 S 19 '54 550w

"Mr. Bates, who writes with a determined and unswerving pathos, seems to feel that the quality of vulnerability alone is enough to make a person worth writing about. Perhaps he finds vulnerable people more positive than others find them. Or perhaps he believes that vulnerable people have chosen to be just that and nothing else—a choice he apparently considers an ennobling one. In either case, it is too bad that he is not able to induce his reader to share any of the enthusiastic pity and sympathy he so obviously feels for his characters in their sad predicaments."

New Yorker 30:146 S 18 '54 150w

"The structure of this story is dramatic and effective. . . The story is full of hardships and is richly dramatic. It ends with melodrama and partial tragedy, arising out of Bella's commonplace past—commonplace in the eyes of others, but never commonplace to the protagonist, ■■ the author skilfully makes clear. It is not, however, in the least depressing. One can read this book as a social study, as a plain novel, or as both, with satisfaction." Oliver LaFarge

+ Sat R 37:17 S 18 '54 500w

"The trouble with The Feast of July, a tale of a betrayed girl and her relations with the various members of the family who befriended her, is just that not enough happens most of the time, and if human relations are to be investigated they had better manifest themselves in what happens between characters. And yet one cannot reject a novel that does one part of its job so well, that depicts country scenes so attractively and precisely." Kingsley Amis
+ — Spec p534 O 29 '54 150w

"The Feast of July' is the most perspective and tender of Mr. Bates' many novels, and it is also the most mature." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 420w

"As always Mr. Bates writes with extreme sensitivity to the changing moods of the countryside. . . Mr. Bates's characters, too, are well drawn, but the very facility with which he spins his story puts a gloss between his perception and ours that prevents us from becoming deeply concerned in their fate. Also one is inclined to suspect that Mr. Bates is more interested in moods than in people, and this, too, removes some of the reality of his characters."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p685 O 29 '54 500w

Wis Lib Bul 50:209 O '54

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST. Nature of love. 217p $3.50 Little

54-6866

Three novellas: Dulcinea; The grass god; The delicate nature. The first two are scened in England; the third in Malaya.

Booklist 50:400 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 4 '54 250w

Kirkus 22:132 F 15 '54 160w

"The style is exquisite and somehow right for each of the tales and the characterizations excellent. Highly recommended for all fiction collections." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:770 Ap 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 S 11 '53 120w

"There is sometimes a feeling of cinema in Mr. Bates's most cunning effects. I do not mean anything bad exactly. There are intense thrills, painful and tear-causing situations—here are men and women suddenly caught by love, caught on the wrong foot, unable either to deny or, having admitted, to succeed." Giles Romilly

New Statesman & Nation 46:292 S 12 '53 200w

"For those who have not yet read Mr. Bates' work, this volume is an excellent introduction to a superb storyteller." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 30 '54 380w

"Mr. Bates' drama moves too fast; the characters live on the page, but there are moments when one's credulity is strained." James Stern
N Y Times p4 My 23 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:134 My 22 '54 80w

"The first story, 'Dulcinea,' is something of a tour de force. . . The story is a neat, credible triangle with a credible, tragic ending. The other two stories are also on the tragic side, but less deeply so, since in neither does the central situation contain mutuality of love or equally sustained desire. The protagonists move in a sort of formal dance; the reader does not feel that truly great passion is present. He also knows, and feels that the main character should know, that from the outset the affair has no future. . . 'The Nature of Love' is grown-up writing for grown-ups, the work of a real craftsman." Oliver La Farge

+ — Sat R 37:13 My 15 '54 600w

"Three stories, very different in weight, but identical in texture, all of them withdrawing from feeling. The heart of them is as clammy as wax. Something central that beat strongly in The Purple Plain and, muffled but still there, made Deal Life memorable has got lost. . . And the waxwork feeling stretches over page after page of brilliantly worked dialogue and narrative. Were Mr. Bates not such a nearly-great writer it would be irrelevant (let alone ungrateful) to say this. But unless warmth comes and acceptance comes, it is hard to see how the final flowering, of which he has given such bursting promise, can be achieved." John Metcalf

Spec p338 S 25 '53 500w

"Mr. Bates writes more than correct English, he composes beautiful prose; but the three short novels published together as The Nature of Love suffer from an identical weakness. Love at first sight is a fairly common accident, extremely distressing to the person so afflicted; but that two people should fall in love with one another at first sight, as happens in each of these stories, is beyond common experience. Yet its pictures of the English countryside, and of the Malayan jungle, make this a book to be read."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 18 '53 70w

BATES, JOSEPH D. Spinning for fresh water game fish; il. with drawings by Jack Murray and with photographs. 254p $5 Little

799.1 Fishing

54-8320

"Bates is well established as an authority on spinning. His latest book is a technical description of spinning rods, reels, lines, knots, lures, floats, with chapters on casting and spinning, where and how to use this tackle. Illustrated with line drawings and halftones." Library J

"His standards for selection and notes on purchasing should be of practical use while his own experience on the fine points and niceties of this sport will attract every addict."

+ Kirkus 22:566 Ag 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:2336 D 1 '54 30w

"Joe Bates, long known for his expressive devotion to fly-fishing, does a definitive job of evaluating the newest of angling techniques: spinning." Nathan Aleskovsky

+ N Y Times p28 D 5 '54 90w

"Will add to the growing fund of knowledge-that-came-from-experience about a form of fishing relatively new to America." Jack Pegues

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 5 '54 90w

BATTISTINI, LAWRENCE HENRY. Japan and America; from earliest times to the present. (Asia bk) 198p maps $3 Day

327.73 Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Japan 54-5881

"The author looks back over the hundred years that have passed since Perry opened up Japan and forward to the future of the relationship between Japan and America. He deals with the problems of Japan's 'security forces,' of rearmament, of economic survival." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Selected bibliography. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 48:589 Je '54 20w

Booklist 50:350 My 15 '54

Foreign Affairs 32:682 J1 '54 10w

"Recommended to all libraries." H. P. Linton
+ Library J 79:445 Mr 1 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune p15 Mr 14 '54 70w

"This work, by a Japanese specialist who served in the occupation of Japan and is now a lecturer at a Japanese university, possesses the advantages and disadvantages of extreme

BATTISTINI, L. H.—Continued

brevity. It compresses a good deal of useful information, many important dates and facts into a small readable book. On the other hand it is obviously impossible to deal adequately with all aspects of American-Japanese relations within the limits which the author has set for himself." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — Pacific Affairs 27:174 Je '54 800w

BAUER, MRS HELEN. California gold days. 128p il maps $3 Doubleday

979.4 California—Gold discoveries 54-5900

Informally written history of the California Gold Rush days by the author of California Mission Days and California Rancho Days (Book Review Digest 1951, 1953). For grades 5-8.

Booklist 50:456 Jl 15 '54

Kirkus 22:339 Je 1 '54 120w

"Recommended for grades 5-8 where additional material on that subject is needed." Edna Rose

+ Library J 79:1324 Jl '54 40w

Reviewed by Richard Johnston

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 14 '54 200w

BAUMAN, HANS F. S., ed. Eight European artists, photographed and ed. by Felix H. Man [pseud]; with original contributions by the eight artists; introd. by Graham Greene and Jean Cassou. 240il 32 col il $15 British bk. centre

709.03 Art, Modern. Artists [54-14709]

"The names: Georges Braque, Marc Chagall, Fernand Leger, Le Corbusier, Henri Matisse, Henry Moore, Pablo Picasso, and Graham Sutherland. . . The book is divided into eight sections—one for each artist—each of which contains: reproductions of each artist's statement about art, in holograph, as well as in printed versions in French, English and German; some of the most beautiful photographic color prints ever made of artists—by themselves, with their works, and in their studios; plus candid black and white shots of artists at luncheon with other artists, artists teaching student artists, artists with their children and an artist (such as Henry Moore) in a foundry, lovingly shaping the bronze casting of one of his sculptures." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 19 '54 90w

"A handsome volume but a frustrating one. . . Eight monographs might serve a better purpose than this unwieldy and expensive tome." A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:2332 D 1 '54 100w

"It is to the utter glory of photography that not only art but also the people who produce it can at last be preserved for posterity. One can see, for example, in this book how the poetically dreamy expression of Chagall in full color is transmitted into full color in his paintings. The plasticity and simplicity of Matisse, the man, and Matisse, the artist; the spacial functionalism of Leger and Le Corbusier, the artists and the men; the abstract elegance of Braque and the unpredictability of Picasso—they are all here, as mirrored in themselves and in their works." R. H. Hagan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 31 '54 800w

"What emerges from these photographs is a sense of wide scale and easy living: sunlit terraces and gardens and balconies; large, clean, orderly studios; graceful conversation and effortless concentration. All this is accurate enough. These men are at the top of their profession. . . Mr. Man has all too entirely turned these artists into country gentlemen. For three things, however, we must be grateful, and they make this book worthwhile. First, for all the documentation; it is valuable to be taken beyond doors most of us cannot pass. Second, for Graham Greene's remark, in his preface, that it is possible 'that the so-called obscurity which is supposed to attach to these artists is really our inability to recognize gaiety, enjoyment, freedom.' And third, because these photographs amply demonstrate that still today artists are men of a certain size—strong, active, vigorous and supremely healthy." Robert Goldwater

+ — Sat R 37:17 D 18 '54 650w

"Eight European Artists has been laid out with care and taste; the typesetting is elegant, and the production admirable—for instance, this book lies flat wherever it is opened. The work of Felix Man constitutes the strongest claim to date that colour photography—in the hands of someone who is both a master of technique and an artist in feeling—can yield results, truthful and harmonious in themselves, which are also accurate reflection of a great painter's work." Tom Hopkinson

+ Spec p623 My 21 '54 750w

"Mr. Man has never succeeded in getting so much as a glimpse of [the artist's] real life in the studio or the home, and his would-be intimate documentary records are nothing but trivial 'stories,' such as one often finds in the less distinguished pictorial weeklies. His qualifications for his self-chosen assignment are nowhere stated, but he does not seem to be aware that nothing in his book is either interesting or novel."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Je 18 '54 700w

BAUMANN, HANS. Caves of the great hunters; tr. by Isabel and Florence McHugh. 158p il $3 Pantheon bks.

571.7 Caves—Juvenile literature. Rock drawings and paintings—Juvenile literature 54-7066

Presents the story of the four boys who discovered the caves of prehistoric man in southwestern France, describing their experiences, and the paintings found in the caves. For ages eleven to fifteen.

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 30 '54 170w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 180w

"Rewarding for adventurous readers for whom this will open new doors. Distinguished in illustration and bookmaking." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:186 Je '54 160w

"An outstanding book! . . . Adults interested in art would like it, too. I recommend it highly."

+ Horn Bk 30:357 O '54 80w

"Not the least part of the story are the fascinating conjectures about prehistoric man and the deep artistic and spiritual appreciation of his work. An unusual book, profusely illustrated with fine reproductions of the paintings."

+ Kirkus 22:156 Mr 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:721 Ap 15 '54 60w

"This fascinating, true, absorbing little book was written by a Bavarian author who explored the caves of France and Spain after the war, and had for guides several of those original discoverers. . . The bookmaking is exciting, intelligent and beautiful." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54 360w

"Some of this may be a little abstract for readers who would naturally be attracted by the fictional form and juvenile tone of the early part of the narrative, but taken as a whole the book is a spur to both the intellect and the imagination. Handsomely designed, it is generously illustrated with drawings after the originals." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '54 200w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

New Yorker 30:222 N 27 '54 70w

"Children will read this book as a good adventure story and will get at the same time a lively introduction to art and archeology. It is worthy of its fascinating subject in every respect. The translation is good; it reads like an original." M. C.

+ Sat R 37:64 My 15 '54 210w

"While written in a style suitable for young people, this interesting book should be pleasing to many adults also. It is well translated into English by Isabel and Florence McHugh, and is liberally illustrated with reproductions of the cave paintings, some in black and white and others in color." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:143 My '54

BAUR, JOHN IRELAND HOWE. American painting in the nineteenth century; main trends and movements. 59p il $3.25 Praeger
759.13 Painting, American. Paintings, American 53-9521

A brief survey of the trends of American painting from 1800 to 1900. The text is expanded from a catalog written to accompany an exhibition of paintings sent to Germany in 1953. Painters born after 1850 are not included.

Booklist 50:273 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by J. W. Lane
Cath World 179:78 Ap '54 100w
Kirkus 22:89 F 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 79:1591 S 15 '54 30w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 My 16 '54 30w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 4 '54 170w

"Though [the author] was originally writing for a foreign audience, the propagandist never supplants the historian. Of necessity, in the space at his disposal, he concentrates upon incisive characterization rather than discursive analysis of trends and influences. . . Mr. Baur is at his best in his enthusiasms—for example, his characterization of Raphaelle Peale, whose still-life he finds more profound than those of the presently fashionable Harnett; and his descriptions of the penetrating psychological realism of Eakin's portraits. Such descriptions underline the usefulness of this short survey of 'main trends and movements.'" Robert Goldwater

+ Sat R 37:58 Ap '54 750w

BAUR, JOHN IRELAND HOWE. George Grosz [research by Rosalind Irvine] published for the Whitney Museum of American art. 67p 118il 2 col pl $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

759.13 Grosz, George 54-802

Survey of the life and work of this German-American artist. Illustrated with reproductions of his works, showing the satirical drawings of his youth in Germany, and his later American work. Catalog of the Grosz exhibition. Chronology. Selected bibliography.

Booklist 50:318 Ap 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 21 '54 40w

"Mr. Baur, formerly curator of painting and sculpture at the Brooklyn Museum and now curator of the Whitney, has made a searching analysis of the conditions and motivations of the artist's life and work. It goes well beyond the primary purpose of a text for the catalogue of the retrospective exhibition, and makes an important contribution to contemporary art chronicles. The forty reproductions are well chosen to cover phases of the artist's work." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 14 '54 320w

"Baur traces the artist's entire career with great sympathy and insight, documents each step of his development against its background, and generally provides a highly informative critical guide. One of the most important features of the book is its 41 magnificent plates, two of which are in color." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap '54 200w

BAUS, HERBERT MICHAEL. Publicity in action. (American series of public relations bks) 355p $4.50 Harper

301.152 [301.154] Publicity 54-8935

"The author describes the various written, spoken, and visual media now used for publicity purposes, and gives numerous good and bad examples from current practice. According to him, honesty is the best policy in all public relations, and he adheres scrupulously to that dictum in presenting this comprehensive guide to his chosen profession." (Library J) Includes a chapter on publicity for television. Index.

"This book is so well planned and written that it can serve as both a reference tool for the practicing publicist and as an introductory text for the student. . . Recommended for general purchase." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 79:1306 J1 '54 90w

"It is probably as practical, as thorough a work on publicity as you'll find around." R. M. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 140w
Wis Lib Bul 50:206 O '54

BAXTER, WALTER. Image and the search. 314p $3.50 Putnam

54-5481

"When Robert Middleton was reported missing in action by the RAF in W.W.II, his beautiful and wealthy wife Sarah commenced a blind search for him, for herself and for some meaning to life. After a trial of promiscuity in London, her numb desolation led her to the Spanish coast where his plane had disappeared. Finally she sailed for India to the shellac plantation that had produced her family's wealth these last hundred years. There, thanks to Father Depuyt and Johan, she sustained the shock that hurled her back to life." Library J

Kirkus 21:803 D 15 '53 160w

"Compassionate, moving novel that needs reading before purchase by the small public library." F. A. Boyle

Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 N 6 '53 130w

"The Image and the Search' has a quality of intent that should acquit Mr. Baxter of any suspicion that, in certain passages, he has engaged in the modern virtuosity of finding new things to be outspoken about. That the novel will shock some readers is likely, but its deep exploration of sexuality, culminating in an almost apocalyptic perception of India, is achieved with a seriousness that makes Mr. Forster's praise at least understandable." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 14 '54 550w

"Despite the somber respect paid them, these are cardboard characters who move and speak only through the author. They are explained, described, analyzed and commented upon; but they do not breathe. Instead of human warmth and humor, we get coy nonsense and contrived vulgarity." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 4 '54 330w

"The subject is one that might have achieved considerable interest, but in Mr. Baxter's callow embrace it gains nothing."

New Yorker 30:126 Mr 20 '54 100w

Reviewed by Nicolas Monjo
Sat R 37:19 Ap 3 '54 250w

"I have looked in The Image and the Search, refusing to be put off by its dreadfully jejune opening, for an unambiguous stamp of truth or imaginative truth, and have found instead the extreme of emotional susceptibility to shock and a desire to shock in return. . . The Indian scenes are much the best in the book—the descriptive writing here momentarily catches fire—but for the rest Flaubert found it unnecessary to tack on metaphysical glooms and mystifications to the figure of Emma Bovary."

BAXTER, WALTER—Continued

R. D. Charques

— + Spec p492 O 30 '53 260w

"Mr. Baxter's taut, muscular, controlled prose is wasted on such shoddy material. Only when he is writing about the sights, sounds and smells of India does he capture the distilled essence of the beauty and warmth he claims his heroine is searching for." Richard M'Laughlin

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 290w

— Times [London] Lit Sup p737 N 20 '53 180w

BEALE, HOWARD KENNEDY, ed, Charles A. Beard; an appraisal, by Eric F. Goldman and others. 312p $4.50 Univ. of Ky. press

B or 92 Beard, Charles Austin 53-5517

"A memorial to Charles Beard in the form of critical essays by former students, associates, and friends who by no means always agreed with him, especially in foreign policy, but who nevertheless respected him for his scholarship, profundity, and wide range of influence. In this group effort they appraise Beard as a personality, historian, political scientist, reformer, and teacher. A complete bibliography of Beard's writings heightens the value of this well-balanced portrait of an influential thinker and teacher." Booklist

"A good deal of overlapping and duplication, as well as a very marked unevenness in quality, was inevitable in a work such as this. Outstandingly good are three essays: Richard Hofstadter on Beard and the Constitution, Max Lerner on Beard's political theory, and Arthur Macmahon on Beard as a teacher." R. E. Burke

+ — Am Hist R 60:116 O '54 650w

Reviewed by R. E. Spiller

Ann Am Acad 296:173 N '54 400w

Booklist 50:339 My 1 '54

Reviewed by C. P. Nettels

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 18 '54 350w

"Twelve competent and expert opinions are not enough to give us back our beloved Charley Beard, our truest and therefore our most fallible American. The group of appraisals is so excellent, a reviewer hesitates to appraise them severally. Yet one may be pardoned for singling out Howard K. Beale's 'Charles Beard, Historian.' Few men have ever presented in a thick volume so complete a picture of a great man." Alvin Johnson

+ New Repub 130:20 My 3 '54 550w

"The twelve contributors are not united in any partisan defense of Beard's views. What unites them in their endeavor is a respect for Beard the scholar, an admiration for Beard the public man and a common affection for a great human being. . . . If anyone is contemplating the repudiation of Charles Beard and what he stood for, let him first compare the record disclosed in this volume with the timidity and conformity of the present day and then ask himself what should be repudiated." C. V. Woodward

+ N Y Times p9 S ■ '54 800w

BEAR, ELIZABETH. Better flower arrangements for home and exhibition. (Books for better living) 120p il $1.50 Laurel pubs. 635.96 Floral decoration 53-8464

The author, a blue-ribbon winner, judge, and instructor gives step-by-step advice on all types of flower arrangements, from those for the dining room table to those for the exhibition hall.

Booklist 49:296 My 15 '53

Wis Lib Bul 49:255 N '53

BEARD, JAMES ANDREWS. Fish cookery; drawings by Harry O. Diamond. 460p $4.95 Little 641.6 Cookery (fish)

54-11122

"James Beard has undertaken to write about the entire subject of fish as found in our coastal and inland waters and has given it the usual delightful, methodical and complete Beardless treatment. Starting with a stern warning never to overcook fish, he imparts the know-how for buying fish, cleaning it, saucing, stuffing and cooking it and, finally, for choosing the French, German, American or Italian wines that will best compliment the final proud product. Following these basic directions are essays about and recipes for some ninety kinds of fish." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 51:125 N 15 '54

"Lucullan collection of recipes, none of which demand too fussy a hand or palate."

+ Kirkus 22:516 Ag 1 '54 120w

"Illustrations and index make this easy to use." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:2452 D 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon

N Y Times p26 N 28 '54 120w

BEARD, MARY (RITTER) (MRS CHARLES AUSTIN BEARD). Force of women in Japanese history. 196p $3.75 Public affairs press

396 Women in Japan. Japan—History

53-10839

"These sketches of female influence in the history of Japan were prepared by a native research committee in Tokyo in the years 1935-1939. The material was to have formed a section in a monumental encyclopedia of women, projected for publication in Vienna before the war. Beginning with the Sun Goddess and the legends surrounding her, the sketches include numerous empresses who are said to have ruled in Japan during the 4th to the 10th centuries. These are followed by court ladies of influence, by women important in the arts, in contacts with the West, and in the recent changes in the Japanese social order." Library J

Reviewed by L. M. Young

Am Hist R 58:718 Ap '54 300w

"Mrs. Beard has chosen to present the sketches with only a minimum of linguistic editing; consequently the reader may find them somewhat awkward in style and not a little opaque. The pieces are decidedly uneven, with some of them engaging in voluminous and often irrelevant detail, while others are broader in scope and more incisive in content." J. W. Bennett

+ — Ann Am Acad 292:216 Mr '54 290w

"This book should be of much interest to any reader who rejoices in the rise of women to their rightful place of influence. It presents an excellent companion to Mrs. Beard's significant book A Force of Women in History and to the other all-too-meager books and pamphlets on this subject for all countries. The first part of this book reads a bit tediously, but the latter part is truly inspiring, especially to one who witnessed the position of women in modern Japan before democracy burst forth." A. M. Clark

+ J Home Econ 46:346 My '54 300w

Reviewed by J. M. Kitagawa

J Religion 30:307 O '54 200w

"There is a wealth of condensed information but the lack of an index limits the book's value as a work of reference. Recommended for large libraries and where there is a demand for a supplementary book on Japanese history." B. B. Libaire

Library J 78:2100 D 1 '53 160w

"Mrs. Beard has accomplished her enormous task with competence and scholarship."

+ Nation 178:16 Ja 2 '54 380w

"The volume is thoroughly enjoyable, as well as being an excellent original contribution. Mrs. Beard and the others responsible for this project are to be commended." C. C. Montgomery

+ Social Studies 45:231 O '54 500w

BEASLEY, CHRISTINE. Democracy in the home; il. by Martha W. Sauber. 242p $3.50 Assn. press

301.42 [392.3] Family. Children—Management 54-9442

"This book attempts to clarify the basic concepts of democracy and to offer some practical and down-to-earth methods of applying these concepts of family living. The author has attempted to draw materials from a number of different disciplines—psychology, psychiatry, group dynamics, philosophy, and sociology—in an effort to present an integrated approach to the dynamics of family living. Efforts have been further directed toward making the suggested techniques meaningful and practical by using real-life family incidents as illustrations." Pref

"Dr. Beasley, a professor of child development and family relations at the University of Tennessee, presents material which is primarily suited for parents and for students in introductory courses in family relations at the college level. However, teachers at the secondary level will do well to include sections of this book in their family relations units. . . Although this book does not purport to present new facts, several sections represent treatments which are unparalleled in the popular literature." James Walters

+ J Home Econ 46:605 O '54 200w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 150w

BEATON, CECIL WALTER HARDY. Glass of fashion. 397p il $7.50 Doubleday

391.09 Fashion. Costume 53-10653

A pageant of fashion and the life of the people who wore the costumes of changing taste during the last fifty years. Illustrated by 146 line drawings by the author. Index.

Bookmark 13:127 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 17 '54 600w

"The versatile Mr. Beaton who has photographed most of the world's 'greats' is also known as a painter and designer for stage, ballet, motion picture and interior decor. Nimble with the pen as well as with brush and camera, his 'The Glass of Fashion' will undoubtedly entertain and inform the sophisticated general reader and spark discussion among fashion experts." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 7 '54 750w

Kirkus 21:654 S 15 '53 180w

"This has more than snob appeal and may be added to any collection that can afford it!" K. T. Willis

+ Library J 78:2025 N 15 '53 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Lane

New Statesman & Nation 48:21 Jl 3 '54 1100w

"Since modern civilization has proven so conclusively that it will not work, let us at least be thankful it has been so pretty. And that Cecil Beaton was around to record it. Having been a close friend of Cecil for many years and a close follower of his work, my personal reaction to the book is one of amazement over the growth of his talents, both as an artist and a writer. Cecil was already witty and his eagle eye has always caught every nuance of everything. But the record he has put down, this time, goes far beneath the surface." Anita Loos

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 Ja 10 '54 600w

"It is a jumbly book, composed roughly of one part history of fashion to two parts history of himself, with a heaping teaspoonful of his friends and relations, and a dash of bitters (by leaving them out) of his enemies. All this is gently stirred, so that it will not bruise feelings, and it is served with 146 of Mr. Beaton's own line drawings—drawings which, incidentally, vary all the way from the excellent to those which look ■■ if he had decided, wisely, not to finish them." Cleveland Amory

+ — N Y Times p10 Ja 10 '54 850w

New Yorker 29:100 Ja 16 '54 40w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 21 '54 550w

"Though autobiographical in tone, 'The Glass of Fashion' is essentially a work of social history, made entertaining by the author's flair for vivid characterization and revealing anecdote, and abundantly illustrated by his vigorous drawings." Lloyd Morris

+ Sat R 37:11 Ja 16 '54 1700w

"Because of his subject matter, Mr. Beaton's book is unsatisfactory. His purpose was more serious than tinsel and rag time, but it was just these that he had to write about. Yet he has done it, of course, with charm and elegance, and will certainly beguile you." Jenny Nasmyth

Spec p28 Jl 2 '54 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p468 Jl 23 '54 700w

BEATON, CECIL WALTER HARDY, il. Persona grata [text] by Kenneth Tynan. 99p $5 Putnam

927 Actors and actresses. Authors 54-8464

Eighty noted personages of stage, art, and literature are here brought together by Cecil Beaton, photographer, and Kenneth Tynan, the English drama critic. Not all are represented by photographs, while others have more than one photograph.

"The Photographs are Beaton's, of course—clear and beautiful. But the text is Tynan's—fresh, witty, sophisticated, cleverly drawn characterizations." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 21 '54 350w

"For caviar and champagne palates."

Kirkus 22:89 F 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1591 S 15 '54 40w

"Parades celebrities with a smartness that will please some a good deal more than others. It lacks any sense of proportion. The text is high-spirited, high-speed journalism with occasional thrills and wastes of damp squibs. Mr. Beaton's photographs on the whole deserve better, though he has failures of taste and wit, and even—elementary, this—stiff postures not so intended." G. W. Stonier

+ — New Statesman & Nation 46:803 D 19 '53 100w

"In writing about these chosen people, Kenneth Tynan's prose sometimes cackles rather than crackles; Cecil Beaton's photographs are superb." Leo Lerman

N Y Times p5 Jl 18 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:135 Ap 3 '54 60w

Reviewed by Henry Hewes

Sat R 37:18 Jl 17 '54 120w

"The total effect is not meant to be very serious and is all the better for that. The only trouble arises when Mr. Tynan has to contribute a few lines—for the sake of the accompanying photograph, too good to omit, perhaps—about a personage of whom he clearly knows little at first-hand, or little worth saying at second-hand."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p814 D 18 '53 370w

BEATTIE, JANET. In came Horace; pictures and calligraphy by Anne Marie Jauss. [30p] $2 Lippincott

54-5590

Pictures and story tell about the little old man and the little old woman and their cat Horace. The neighbors thought the couple needed a watch dog, but Horace soon attended to that. For ages ■ to 8.

BEATTIE, JANET—Continued

"This funny, dramatic story, with its repetitive theme and catchy verses, is one small children will love to have read aloud to them. With its clever pictures, fitting amusingly into the text, done in calligraphy by the artist, it is fun for the whole family." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 23 '54 150w

+ Kirkus 22:151 Mr 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:696 Ap 15 '54 60w

"The fun of this little black and white picture book lies in its spirited style, in the way the cat's fury grows with each meeting with a dog, and in the clever integration of pictures with the text, which is done in calligraphy by the artist. Children of five or six who hear it read will be amused as they are at the plots of old folk tales." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 16 '54 220w

"The humor of the plot has variety in the telling; the story occasionally drifts into rhyme and key words and phrases are outlined in bold oversize letters. Spirited black-and-white line drawings romp in and out among the words, bridging the gap between picture books and straight narrative." M. L. Krupka

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 14 '54 160w

"The black-and-white drawings and calligraphy by Anne Marie Jauss give emphasis and rhythm to the text. Some pages are overcrowded, but the humor of story and illustrations will delight little children." F. L. S.

+ — Sat R 37:58 My 15 '54 230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:139 My '54

BEATTY, HETTY BURLINGAME. Droopy. 26p il $2.50 Houghton

53-10991

Pictures and story about a stubborn mule who learned a good lesson the day he saved Joe from drowning. Ages four to eight.

Booklist 50:345 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 9 '54 100w

Horn Bk 30:91 Ap '54 80w

Kirkus 22:110 F 15 '54 70w

"For reading aloud to younger children, but second- and third-graders should be able to handle it themselves." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 60w

"The moral about being stubborn is merrily put. The text style is rather flat, and the total effect misses distinction." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 16 '54 80w

BEATY, JOHN YOCUM. Plant breeding for everyone. 102p il $2.75 Branford

631.52 Plant breeding

53-7212

"How to find and develop new plant varieties." (Subtitle) In this manual a former associate of Luther Burbank explains the importance of testing and patenting new fruits, flowers, and vegetables. Index.

Booklist 50:351 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 40w

BEAUVOIR, SIMONE DE. She came to stay [tr. from the French]. 404p $5 World pub.

54-5344

"This is the story of an intense, emotional, strained and violent triangle. Pierre, an actor-manager, and Françoise, a novelist, have lived together for a number of years in love and intellectual contentment and confidence, until Xaviere, a young girl from Rouen, comes to Paris 'to stay' with them. They try to establish a perfect relationship since both Pierre and Françoise are very much attracted by Xaviere's strange, selfish and demanding personality, and Xaviere wants to possess each of the others and separate them if possible. And while the relationship is physically chaste, there are strong overtones of both a heterosexual and a homosexual nature. The action is achieved through a series of conversations in which they analyse themselves, and each other, and through which Xaviere slowly emerges as something of an intellectual and emotional monster." Kirkus

"For reasons I'm not quite clear about, I found the story far from dull: it kept me, throughout, in a state of lively irritation."

Atlantic 193:87 Mr '54 140w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 7 '54 300w

"While [this book] is in many ways easier to read than The Second Sex, the audience will probably be limited by the fact that the only people who could want to know as much about the triangle as the author tells us are Pierre, Françoise, and Xaviere."

Kirkus 22:12 Ja 1 '54 250w

"The book reads like an interior monologue written under analysis. It is especially disappointing because of the considerable gifts the author displayed in The Second Sex. Not recommended." R. B. Robertson

— Library J 79:450 Mr 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Nation 178:368 Ap 24 '54 220w

"I have been wondering for a long time what kind of novel could be written by one so incapable of registering actual experience and so remarkably able to convert clichés into anguish. She Came to Stay should have been either extraordinarily good or impossibly bad; I regret to say it is only mediocre. I suppose the primary fault of the novel is its failure to become quite fiction; certainly, it is not nearly so imagined as America Day by Day, which comes by invention less honestly. It remains an allegory, a schematic fable exemplifying the Existentialist psychology of Sartre's Being and Nothingness."

— New Repub 130:20 Mr 15 '54 1250w

"Even so improbable a human triangle as the one in 'She Came to Stay'—unsavory as it is—might have awakened a certain ghoulis interest in the reader, had for instance a Colette undertaken to write it. But in the tense, troubled hands of Simone de Beauvoir it remains as unsuccessful as the experiment itself." Virgilia Peterson

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 28 '54 700w

"The novel is too long and too leisurely in its pace, and some readers may not find it eventful enough. But it portrays, with psychological incisiveness and with dramatic force, the conflict that opposes, as in a classical tragedy, three characters pitted against each other and against fate. The secondary figures are also ably sketched... 'She Came to Stay' is one of the most acute and thoughtful achievements of French fiction at mid-century." Henri Peyre

+ N Y Times p4 F 28 '54 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 7 '54 150w

"A masterpiece of Existentialist writing." Laurent LeSage

+ Sat R 37:20 Mr 13 '54 600w

"Like many other continental writers, Mlle. de Beauvoir is not handicapped by certain semi-puritanical restraints which still fetter many American and British authors and consequently this intimate picture of life in Parisian art and theater circles might be somewhat offensive to some conservative readers. But to those who appreciate first-class writing and who do not shrink from the realities of an imperfect world, it should give much pleasure." H. B. H.

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 220w

Time 63:108 Mr 15 '54 650w

BECK, ARNOLD HUGH W. Thermionic valves; their theory and design. 570p $12 Cambridge

621.342 Vacuum tubes [54-1573]

"A substantial treatment of theory pertaining to the phenomena of electron tubes, written from the viewpoint of graduate engineers concerned with the design of such tubes. In keeping with the current interests in this field, the emphasis is on microwave tubes. The first two parts, which are theoretical, occupy 241 pages. The remainder of the book is devoted to design procedures applicable to specific kinds of tubes. The bibliography is general and is limited to books. However, throughout the text there are footnote citations of books and papers. The list of 'Recent References' which follows the bibliography consists largely of papers published in 1950-52." N Y New Tech Bks

"A book which will be welcomed by young electronics engineers, especially those who are beginning to do research and design on electron tubes." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:990 My 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:7 Ja '54

BECK, DWIGHT MARION. Through the Gospels to Jesus. 468p $5; college ed $3.75 Harper

226 Bible. N.T.—Gospels. Jesus Christ 54-5847

"This book is intended for any reader who desires to know how scholars study the Gospels and what are the results especially in recent years. . . Its purpose is a general study of Jesus, founder of the Christian faith, as set forth in the Gospels and as interpreted by scholars past and present. It undertakes: (1) to present a rapid historical survey of the world in which Jesus lived; (2) to summarize traditional and modern views about the origins of the Gospels; (3) to present briefly the sources for the study of Jesus and to introduce Mark, Matthew, Luke and John' (4) to explain at some length these Gospels, primarily in the light of their authors' original intent, and to explore their age-old, yet ever new, meanings for us today." Pref

Booklist 50:443 Jl 15 '54

Wis Lib Bul 50:125 My '54

BECKEL, GRAHAM. Workshops for the world: the specialized agencies of the United nations; with an introd. by Benjamin A. Cohen. 213p 11 maps $4 Abelard-Schuman

341.132 United nations (organization). International agencies 53-11284

"Popular review of the work of the eleven Specialized Agencies of the UN, each a separate entity but all coordinating their work through the Economic and Social Council of the UN. Agencies are treated in individual chapters, each one opening with a well-told story demonstrating the practical value of the body, followed with accurate outlines of origin, purposes, functions, membership, structure, and organization." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:112 N 1 '54

Kirkus 22:681 O 1 '54 120w

"Recommended for all libraries." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:1495 S 1 '54 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 24 '54 30w

BECKER, ESTHER R., and LAWRENCE, RICHARD L. Success and satisfaction in your office job. 149p $2.50 Harper

651.02 [651.3] Secretaries, Private. Office practice. Business etiquet 54-6440

"Level-headed analysis of everyday work situations with illustrative cases, stressing the need for right attitudes and techniques that can be learned. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:352 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 20w

"This fine book dealing with secretarial psychology, which is as necessary to the office worker as is proficiency in office skills, is the open door to a successful office personality. Illustrative episodes have been skilfully used to accentuate the importance and betterment of both personality and attitude, thus enabling the worker to cope with any problem." E. C. Tillman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 18 '54 100w

"Workable."

+ Kirkus 22:147 F 15 '54 130w

Management R 43:555 Ag '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54 90w

Wis Lib Bul 50:175 Jl '54

BECKER, HOWARD, and others. For a science of social man. See Gillin, J. P., ed.

BECKER, JOSEPH M. Problem of abuse in unemployment benefits; a study in limits. 412p $6.50 Columbia univ. press

368.44 [331.254] Insurance, Unemployment 53-13438

"[This is] a preliminary study of abuses occurring under existing unemployment laws, and deliberately limited to the reconversion period from V J Day through 1947 because this period offered the optimum conditions for evaluation of the systems. The conditions of administration, of the labor market and of the meaning of 'abuse' in the minds of people concerned with the problem are considered. Then follows a detailed account of the various kinds of violation based on material gathered from state offices all over the country during personal visits by the author. A final evaluation of the results points to the lack of statistical data available; thus conclusions are of necessity qualitative rather than quantitative." Library J

Reviewed by Broadus Mitchell

Am Econ R 44:718 S '54 500w

"This is a greatly needed study and an excellent piece of work." A. Morgner

+ Ann Am Acad 293:180 My '54 380w

"The author might well have made greater use of legal norms as embodied in decisional law: he cites no lower court cases and very few rulings by Boards of Review. But this and other criticisms are minor. The author is to be commended for his patience and understanding, qualities not common among newcomers to the subject. His work is deserving of a larger audience than will probably be accorded so specialized a study in a narrow field." Sidney Schindler

+ Columbia Law 54:1172 N '54 1550w

"An intensive and thorough survey by an informed sociologist that will interest students of social welfare on a practical as well as a theoretical level." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:456 Mr 1 '54 270w

"Logically and objectively presented, the investigation contains valuable information on a subject timely for all citizens, but of particular interest to the economist, political scientist, sociologist, and government official."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:220 Je '54 240w

BECKHARDT, ISRAEL, and BROWN, WENZELL. The violators. 253p $3.75 Harcourt
364.973 Crime and criminals—New York (city) 54-9723

"Israel Beckhardt has, for the past nineteen years, been a pre-sentence investigator for the Bronx County Court and he gives us twenty-seven case histories drawn from his file of 3,000 cases on which he has worked." N Y Times

Kirkus 22:521 Ag 1 '54 190w

BECKHARDT, ISRAEL—Continued

Reviewed by Louis Barron

Library J 79:1820 O 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Walter Arm

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 14 '54
550w

"Wenzell Brown, an extremely able professional writer, has expertly applied the conventional slick to the prose so that even the most casual reader will be carried from story to story. The serious student of criminology will find Mr. Beckhardt's concepts and conjectures about his cases interesting and useful." Crosswell Bowen

N Y Times p31 O 10 '54 700w

New Yorker 30:221 N 13 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 31 '54 210w

BEDE, ELBERT. Fabulous Opal Whiteley; from Oregon logging camp to princess in India. 181p il $3 Binfords

B or 92 Whiteley, Opal Stanley 54-3679

"The literary mystery of Opal Whiteley a logger's daughter from the Oregon lumber camps, who wrote 'The Story of Opal: The Journal of an Understanding Heart.' Elbert Bede was editing a weekly paper when he did his first news story about Opal in 1915. Since then he has written about her many times for newspapers and magazines and now he tells her story in this book." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p9 J1 25 '54
60w

"Does Mr. Bede believe the whole mad yarn? Evidently not. In one of his best chapters he presents the evidence, showing the holes in Opal's story. . . . At the same time there remains the genuine appeal of her diary. Her imagination was lively and vivid; her 'Journal' had ■ fresh, haunting quality that brought it very close to literature—in its way and of its kind. She remains one of the strangest of literary mysteries, even after being explained. Readers of Mr. Bede's account will agree, I think." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 21 '54
60w

BEDFORD, HASTINGS WILLIAM SACKVILLE RUSSELL, 12th duke of. Parrots and parrot-like birds [and] Diseases of parrots, by David L. Coffin. 210p il pl col pl $6; with pl in portfolio $7 All-pets Bks.

598.2 Budgerigars 53-11580

"A chapter on the diseases of parrots, written by David L. Coffin, is inserted in the text, which is a revision by the late Duke of Bedford of his Parrots and Parrot-like Birds in Aviculture." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:361 My 15 '54

Wis Lib Bul 50:173 J1 '54

BEDFORD, SYBILLE. Sudden view; a Mexican journey. 288p $3.75 Harper

972 [917.2] Mexico—Description and travel
53-11837

An Englishwoman who traveled in Mexico for several months here reports her observations on the land and its people, and spices her account with humor.

Booklist 50:220 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:105 F '54 20w

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 17 '54
370w

"In all a stimulating, chatty travelogue which is also an entertaining-to-amusing monologue." + Kirkus 21:726 N 1 '53 200w

"The reader who expects a book about Mexico to be ■ Catholic threnody or a proletarian pæan will be disappointed. Nobody else will. Quadrilingual, Mrs. Bedford writes with delicate grace an English prose admirably adapted to record her highly personal impressions of that extravagantly beautiful, bloody country." John Davenport

+ New Statesman & Nation 45:374 Mr 28
'53 700w

"There is a certain insouciance about grammar, spelling, Spanish marks of accentuation; the pages may be too thickly littered with passages in French; a mild species of snobbery is visible and Mrs. Bedford's American characters don't really talk like Americans. No matter. 'The Sudden View' is a unique and often entrancing book, and is urgently recommended." Dan Wickenden

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 10
'54 550w

"Mrs. Bedford is capable of exercising a fine sort of detachment while telling an intensely personal story. . . . With a perceptive paragraph here, a bit of description there, a conversation recorded without comment, she extracts the very essence of rural and small town Mexicans; in these pages they absolutely live; this is the way they are. . . . One must deplore the sort of Spanish that puts an accented ■ instead of an unaccented o at the end of Mexico City's Zócalo. One wonders also why she persists in putting a b in Rivera when the great Diego himself signs his name with a v." V. L. Warren

+ — N Y Times p12 Ja 17 '54 650w

"A delightful, unclassifiable, and shimmering book."

+ New Yorker 29:111 F 6 '54 120w

"To my mind everything about [this book] is exactly what ■ really good book of its type should be. The author understood and liked the people; she got the best out of any situation in which she found herself. Best of all, she has the gift of relating the particular to the general; she can observe Mexico as it is and see it against the backdrop of what it was." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 11 '54
600w

Reviewed by George Pendle

Spec p462 Ap 10 '53 650w

"Mrs. Bedford is often genuinely amusing and pleasant company, but she has a way of going on rather too long. . . . The Sudden View is a most readable book, but if Mrs. Bedford had had more in her of the earnest Miss Quested in A Passage to India she might in addition have contributed something important to the understanding of a country she has clearly enjoyed enormously."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Mr 13
'53 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:69 Mr '54

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE (RICKER) (MRS WILLIAM BEEBE) (ELSWYTH THANE, pseud). Letter to a stranger. 224p $3.50 Duell; Little

54-11130

"A warm-hearted novelist, a widow, Eve Endicott, unwisely involves herself in trying to plot a rescue for one of her fan mail correspondents, whose father is proving himself something of an ogre. That Eve ends by having the father fall in love with her, and herself falling in love with the neighbor next door, Richie Forrest, was something she'd not bargained for. And the result is some heartbreaks, but enough in the way of jolts to bring her young correspondent, Joanna, to the point of standing up for her own right to live." Kirkus

Booklist 51:133 N 15 '54

"A somewhat offbeat romance, done with charm and grace. . . . Not important but a pleasant sort of modern fairy tale."

Kirkus 22:645 S 15 '54 150w

"Miss Thane writes this fantastic tale with a lightness and grace that remove it from the morbid or gruesome." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 14 '54
190w

New Yorker 30:218 N 20 '54 200w

BEEBE, LUCIUS MORRIS. Comstock commotion; the story of the Territorial enterprise and Virginia City news. 129p il $3.50 Stanford univ. press

071 Territorial enterprise and Virginia City news 54-10678

"The history of The Enterprise from its birth at Mormon Station (now Genoa), Nevada, on a cold winter night in 1858 'in a mist both blasphemous and alcoholic' through its recent rebirth is here recounted amusingly by Mr. Beebe. The book's pages are full of anecdotes of the Comstock Lode, all of them related more or less closely to events in the progress, decline and revitalization of one of the West's most famous newspapers. There are stories of its well known staff members, including Joe Goodman, Mark Twain, Dan DeQuille, Rollin Daggett, Steve Gillis, and the present proprietors. There are also tales of the many famed visitors to the Comstock Lode." (San Francisco Chronicle) No index.

Booklist 51:121 N 15 '54

"The result is a highly entertaining book in which the reader may learn a surprising amount about the heyday of the Comstock boom while he is absorbing the story of the paper that was so large a part of it all." J. H. Jackson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S ■ '54 450w

"It is a beguiling and often ribald story, set down in glittery prose that is in keeping with the period by the journal's present proprietor, the onetime Manhattan boulevardier." M. M. Marberry

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 ■ ■ '54 410w

"As readers of Mr. Beebe's columns in the New York Herald-Tribune and Gourmet, and his books on railroading and Western Americana will anticipate, 'Comstock Commotion' is light and lively." Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 22 '54 550w

Time 64:82 Ag 30 '54 750w

BEECH, KEYES. Tokyo and points east; introduction by James A. Michener. 255p $3.75 Doubleday

951.9 Korean war, 1950-1953—Personal narratives. Journalists—Correspondents, reminiscences, etc. 54-11159

"The personal document of the man who covered the Korean War for the Chicago News (he is a Far East veteran with two and Tarawa coverage to his credit) is a mixture of immediate experience and considered interpretation. Keyes Beech was in Tokyo taking a close-up view of the Occupation and MacArthur when the Land-of-the-Morning-Calm exploded. His coverage in Korea reviews the sad history of a nation 'geopolitically doomed to war', relates numerous near-escapes and runs in and out of restless Seoul, comments quite vigorously on Maggie Higgins and her feud with Homer Bigart . . . and points up the cease-fire of Panmunjam." Kirkus

"In this book there is as little bad writing as there is over-modesty. But Beech is capable of punishing his reader with a chapter on his year at Harvard, and sometimes he rocks one backward with such an incredibly self-righteous statement as this: 'My democratic soul rebelled at what I considered MacArthur's autocratic behavior.'" Walter Simmons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 21 '54 330w

"It is a highly personalized book in which one feels that the author is often standing back regarding himself rather than his main subject. But it is lively reading, interspersed with dry, often cynical humor, and with a warm feeling for the underdog whether he be a colonel, an enlisted man, or a Japanese farmer. There are some excellent commentaries on General MacArthur." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 22 '54 400w

"Frank and freewheeling, this gives a view of a correspondent's mind and heart."

+ Kirkus 22:695 O 1 '54 140w

"Mr. Beech reports everything from girl friends to 'gooks,' and reports them well. The Japanese and Koreans receive sympathetic judgment, and bitter Americans in occupation and in war are treated realistically. . . Recommended." C. R. Gough

+ Library J 79:2096 N 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 D 26 '54 470w

"There is a lot of trivial stuff in this book, and sometimes Mr. Beech raises subjects which are best left alone if there is not time to deal with them. . . In spite of a year as a Neiman Fellow at Harvard, Mr. Beech gets out of his depth when talking about American-Japanese relations. But this is only another way of saying that the highly skilled techniques of the reporter do not help very much when he leaves the present tense and when he deals with people or things he has not seen and smelled. Most of the book deals with matters well within the purview of the reporter and as this one is likable, honest and outspoken and has more of the strengths than the weaknesses of modern American journalism, what he writes is well worth the reading." G. E. Taylor

+ N Y Times p18 D 5 '54 800w

Reviewed by Allen Churchill

Sat R 37:28 D 25 '54 300w

BEELER, NELSON FREDERICK, and BRANLEY, FRANKLYN MANSFIELD. Experiments with atomics; il. by A. W. Revell. 160p $2.50 Crowell

539.7 [541.2] Atomic energy—Juvenile literature 54-5613

"Messrs. Beeler and Branley present the facts needed to understand the basic elements of nuclear physics. They describe atomic weapons, atom-powered submarines, and recently developed atomic reactors, the precursors of the furnaces that will provide heat and power in the future. They indicate how 'hot' radioactive materials are used to study the effectiveness of drugs and fertilizers, the operation of automobile engines, the quality of steel castings, and the blood circulation of patients selected for special surgery. These and other matters become clear with the aid of simple models and apparatus which can easily be assembled at home." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 51:18 S 1 '54

Chem & Eng N 32:3208 Ag 9 '54 30w

Commonweal 61:220 N 19 '54 30w

"The projects which are as simple as rubbing a fountain pen and as advanced as making a geiger counter, leave something to be desired as per instructions, and they'll also take time, space and money. But for the right person in the right setting, this is inspiration."

Kirkus 22:156 Mr 1 '54 190w

"For those well grounded in atomics." M. I. Ross

Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 80w

"Beeler and Branley are experts at imparting considerable information without calling on technical terms and mathematical equations." John Pfeiffer

+ Sat R 37:20 Ag 21 '54 270w

BEERS, LORNA DOONE (MRS C. R. CHAMBERS). Crystal cornerstone. 218p $2.50 Harper

53-8533

A story of the Revolutionary war as it appeared to sixteen-year-old Thaddeus Long, who gave up his opportunity to go to college in order to join Washington's army.

Booklist 50:208 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 14 '54 140w

BEERS, L. D.—Continued

"Stirring book." G. P. Lancaster
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 12 '53
110w

"Good writing and characterization, a little romance, and a very-much-alive picture of Revolutionary times make a book to appeal to girls as well as boys." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 29:460 D '53 100w

"It is a good yarn, but the dialogue is stilted, the style uneven, the characterizations thin. Worth reading, nonetheless."
+ — Kirkus 21:712 N 1 '53 150w

"Not outstanding characterization or style but, nevertheless, a good purchase for 12-16-year-olds." Elizabeth Burr
Library J 79:75 Ja 1 '54 80w

"A finely conceived story. This is easy reading, and exciting, for ages twelve up." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 24 '54 180w

"This well-written story, which includes romantic elements, manages to avoid being moralistic or condescending in the treatment of a great moral and human truth."
+ U S Quarterly Bk M 10:58 Mr '54 90w

"Not outstanding characterization or style but, nevertheless, a good purchase for 12-16-year-olds."
+ — Wis Lib Bul 50:37 Ja '54

BEHRMAN, SAMUEL NATHANIEL. Worcester account. 239p $3.50 Random house
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc 53-5014

Altho most of these chapters appeared in the New Yorker, they are here gathered together to make a picture of the author's boyhood in Worcester, Massachusetts.

"The charm and vitality of The Worcester Account are centered in its portraits." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:92 D '54 550w
Booklist 51:105 N 1 '54

"Effective and affecting."
+ Kirkus 22:570 Ag 15 '54 170w

"Highly recommended to literature, Jewish, drama and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 79:2209 N 15 '54 100w

"Any one who thinks that by reading [the chapters in the New Yorker] he has thereby read the book is sadly mistaken. . . Individuals who, in the separate pieces, are of minor or secondary importance, come to full life in the collection as a whole, and Behrman treats them with an insight and a compassion that make most of them likable and all of them understandable. There isn't a false or a shallow character in the lot." Nathaniel Benchley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 24 '54 450w

"A rendezvous with a boyhood in Providence Street, Worcester, recalled and set down in some of the most graceful prose of the year. . . Mere summary does injustice to Mr. Behrman's characterizations. For the residents of Providence Street as he depicts them, are not caricatures or eccentrics even to readers from other environments. Described by others, the people and incidents would be comic burlesque; instead, here is written portraiture at its best." S. T. Williamson
+ N Y Times p6 O 24 '54 950w

"S. N. Behrman's 'The Worcester Account' is an engaging collection of reminiscences of the author's early years in a small, devout Jewish community in New England at the turn of the century. It is a book of warmth and nostalgia and it is sometimes very touching." Saul Bellow
+ Sat R 37:41 N 20 '54 700w

BEIM, JERROLD. Shoeshine boy; pictures by Louis Darling. 48p $2 Morrow 53-9758

Simple little story of a young New Yorker who was too small to deliver clothes or groceries, but found his job and his place in front of the supermarket just right for shining shoes.

Booklist 50:301 Ap 1 '54

+ Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

"Louis Darling's fine pictures are as life-like and busy as the story." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 14 '54 130w

Kirkus 22:112 F 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by Elenora Alexander
Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 70w

+ N Y Times p24 F 28 '54 120w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 20w
Wis Lib Bul 50:182 Jl '54

BEIM, JERROLD. With dad alone; il. by Don Sibley. 145p $2.75 Harcourt 54-8567

Bruce and Robby, along with their father, have a difficult time to reestablish a normal home life after the death of the boys' mother. This story for ages eight to twelve describes how they finally managed.

Bookmark 14:13 O '54 20w

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 20w

"No black and white issues here, except those of human understanding and a strong heart, but an honest look at life as it is."
+ Kirkus 22:384 Jl 1 '54 200w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson
Library J 79:2253 N 15 '54 80w

"[The author] displays his skill in describing in simple words some of the problems that confront young boys." Sarah Jones
+ Sat R 37:78 N 13 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 90w

BELDEN, ALBERT DAVID. George Whitefield—the awakener; a modern study of the evangelical revival. rev ed 302p il $6 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Whitefield, George. Evangelical revival 53-4496

A biography of an eighteenth century evangelist who preached both in England and America. The book was first published in 1930 (Book Review Digest 1931) and is now revised.

"Now reissued by an American publisher, Dr. Belden's standard life of Whitefield gives a well documented record of the facts and an enthusiastic, though not uncritical, interpretation of the work of the great evangelist."

+ Christian Century 70:1082 S 23 '53 190w

"Dr. Belden's enthusiasm so frequently runs away with his scholarship that the American reader can hardly restrain indignation. . . Still, ludicrous as these excesses are, Dr. Belden's book breathes a sincerity, a courage, which makes it a sad reminder that in non-conformist England religious ideas can be propounded with fervency and boldness. . . Whatever its faults, it does bring home to the American reader how astonishing was the resemblance between the spiritual, if not always the material, conditions of the America in which Whitefield labored and those in contemporaneous England, Scotland, and Wales." Perry Miller

+ — New Eng Q 27:265 Je '54 600w

"Dr. Belden, once minister of Whitefield's Tabernacle in London and himself a noted preacher and social idealist, is an enthusiastic biographer. Naturally he admires his great predecessor, and tells a vivid story of his untiring evangelical and philanthropic labours and his astonishing power of moving the multitude. The background is less critically examined."

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:140 Ag 1 '53 240w

"This book was first published in 1930 and has now been revised, though somewhat superficially, for a footnote refers to the Oxford Group Movement as 'springing into being' at the time of going to press, and there are many statements which smack rather of 1930 than 1953. The style is prolix, given to exclamation marks and capitals."

Times [London] Lit Sup p536 Ag 21 '53
700w

BELL, ALLADINE (A. M. BELL, pseud).
Midnight creek. 212p $2.75 Crowell
Western story.

54-5608

Booklist 50:401 Je 15 '54

"Here's a far better than average western novel, with its grim background of crime, intrigue, and hangings lightened by romance, humor, and fine characterizations. Recommended reading." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 2 '54
170w

Kirkus 22:45 Ja 15 '54 60w

"Characters are well drawn, there's some unusually good dialogue, and an exciting climax when the Innocents make a last-ditch effort to rescue their chief." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p10 S 5 '54 40w

Reviewed by S. M. Agnew

Sat R 37:15 Mr 27 '54 110w

BELL, CHARLES G. Songs for a new America. 80p $2.75 Ind. univ. press

811

53-10025

"Simple and direct in style, these verses present a panoramic view of America, describing its vastness and its particulars... In some of the poems where the setting is outside this country, the author is again searching for the meaning of America, for some expression of the democracy that too many fail to carry with them when they travel." Library J

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:558 Mr 15 '54 60w

"Bell has enthusiasm and gift, but he betrays his own process by studding the poem with the over large and the too easily come by."

+ — Nation 178:136 F 13 '54 230w

"There is good poetry in this book, powerful in thought, direct in feeling, and clear in expression." Galway Kinnell

+ Poetry 84:165 Je '54 360w

BELL, HARRY. We adopted a daughter; decorations by Katharine Bernard. 181p $2.75 Houghton

362.73 Adoption

54-5562

"The account of the adoption of two-year-old Barbara will inevitably remind readers of Ernest Cady's parallel report, We Adopted Three [Book Review Digest 1952]. Like the Cady book, this describes the adoptive process, and faithfully records the ups and downs of adjustments between enthusiastic but amateurish parents and a normal child whose behavior covered the full scale from angelic to devilish." Booklist

Booklist 50:315 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 30w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 4 '54
30w

Kirkus 22:142 F 15 '54 150w

"The reader who enjoyed We Adopted Three by Ernest Cady may find this repetitious, not quite as appealing, and somewhat naïve, but on the whole it is a useful title for libraries needing a good human interest story for the general reader." M. P. McKay

+ — Library J 79:445 Mr 1 '54 140w

"We Adopted a Daughter" is a cheerful book—superficially it might almost seem frivolous. Nevertheless it contains valuable information for prospective parents-by-adoption and it is—to employ a word Mr. Bell is far too unsentimental to use himself—heartwarming."

Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p23 My 9 '54 240w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54
110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:128 My '54

BELL, JOHN FRED. History of economic thought. 696p $6.50 Ronald

330.1 Economics—History

53-5712

"[Study] of the evolution of economic theories from Biblical days to post-Keynesian theories. Designed primarily as a text for college students, this work should have an audience among interested laymen. More than the traditional framework of discussing one school of thought and that of its successor is used. The author has concentrated on those men who directly or indirectly had a large measure of influence in the course of economic theory. More important, he has devoted much space to the political, social and economic factors conditioning the views of his thinkers." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

"From a pedagogical standpoint the book, in spite of its encyclopedic character, suffers both from the author's cramped style and the diffuseness of treatment to which his method condemns him. Furthermore, one must note a prevalence of doubtful interpretations and statements of fact, both in the tracing of ideas and in their historical setting." Robert Campbell

Am Econ R 43:939 D '53 750w

"A comprehensive, well-written study... A special accolade is due the author—the entire work contains one lone economic diagram."

+ Current Hist 26:64 Ja '54 110w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 78:1238 Jl '53 60w

BELL, MARGARET ELIZABETH. Love is forever. 218p $2.75 Morrow

54-7624

Alaska in 1889 is the scene of this story of the beginnings of a happy marriage. Florence, whose father was strict in his adherence to Victorian principles, marries Beldon, and goes to live with him at his salmon saltery. The story is of Florence's difficult adjustment to frontier living.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:97 D '54 30w

Booklist 51:18 S 1 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p36 D '54

"Hardy and interesting all the way."

+ Kirkus 22:394 Jl 1 '54 130w

"Absorbing, touching, beautiful—such adjectives can honestly be used for praise of this unusual book for older girls." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p22
N 14 '54 380w

"This first part seems slightly unreal and unconvincing; would any girl even in the early twentieth century be so wedded to long skirts and tight waists? However, Florence's adventure in the woods is the heart of the book."

M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times pt ■ p14 N 14 '54 180w

"The menace and beauty of the country are portrayed with such strength that they practically become characters in the story." K. T. Kinkad

+ New Yorker 30:214 N 27 '54 60w

BELL, THELMA HARRINGTON (MRS CORYDON BELL). Snow; with drawings by Corydon Bell. 55p $2.50 Viking

551.573 Snow—Juvenile literature 54-12459

Presents the facts about snow: why some of it is fluffy, some damp; why all flakes are not the same; how snow can be helpful, and how it can be dangerous, etc.

Booklist 51:89 O 15 '54

BELL, T. H.—Continued

"The mystery of snow is discussed with imagination in a book given all-round distinction by its fine design and superb drawings." V. H.
+ Horn Bk 30:437 D '54 100w

Kirkus 22:389 J1 1 554 110w

"The Bells' book is beautifully printed in dramatic tones of dark blue and bright blue, against which shines the white of snow scenes or the exquisite designs of snowflakes. Mrs. Bell writes pleasantly for the junior high age."
L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p28 N 14 '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 200w

"A book as pretty as the snow it describes. . . The drawings by Corydon Bell, the husband of the author, make this a beautiful book." N. J. D.

+ Sat R 37:82 N 13 '54 90w

BELLAMY, LIONEL JOHN. Infra-red spectra of complex molecules. 323p $7 Wiley

535.8 Spectrum analysis 54-3835

"This book deals with the interpretation of the infra-red spectra of complex molecules, primarily organic. It is based on the literature, but the published data have been reviewed critically in the light of the author's own extensive experience in infra-red spectroscopy. Particular attention is paid to factors which can influence the characteristic spectral bands and thus affect their interpretation. . . The author is Principal Scientific Officer of the Ministry of Supply of the British Government."
N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:4018 O 4 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:78 S '54

BELLONCI, MARIA (SIGNORA GOFFREDO BELLONCI). Life and times of Lucrezia Borgia; tr. by Bernard and Barbara Wall. 343p $5 Harcourt

B or 92 Borgia, Lucrezia 53-9222

A new interpretation of the life of Lucrezia Borgia, based on seven years of research. It is the author's conclusion that "the only Borgia who saved herself" spent most of her life "swinging between consent and rebellion." Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by William Gilbert

Am Hist R 59:931 J1 '54 400w

"In addition to its scholarly merits, Signora Bellonci's study of the ever-fascinating Borgias and their era is an admirably written book, full of color and movement. It has been exceedingly well translated by Bernard and Barbara Wall." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:84 Mr '54 280w

Booklist 50:237 F 15 '54

Reviewed by Alix du Poy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 24 '54 350w

"A reviewer for the London Times Literary Supplement, who read this biography in its original Italian as well as in the English translation at hand, has noted recurrent and serious inaccuracies in the translation. Although such observation is beyond the scope of the present reviewer, it deserves mention because the book is advertised as a definitive study, and because its appeal must certainly be to that segment of the reading public known as 'scholarly.' . . Unhappily for the popular success that the book might have enjoyed, the wealth of description turns out to be rather an embarrassment of riches. Either the author or her translators depend heavily on the flat, informative statement." Jean Holzhauer

Commonweal 60:21 Ap 9 '54 490w

"For limited purchase by college and large public libraries." E. T. Smith

Library J 79:384 F 15 '54 120w

"Dresses and jewels, cavalcades and ceremonies, plays and dancing, love and crime—here in rich and authentic abundance. It is splendid and enjoyable historical romp. Mr. Bernard Wall has caught with great skill, in his translation, the vivid quality and spirit of the original, at the cost of introducing some minor errors of fact. It should give pleasure to all those who like their history to be lively and not too serious." D. M. Bueno de Mesquita

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:46 Ja 9 '54 650w

"What was 'the real Lucrezia' like? . . . The best answer yet offered, perhaps the best that will ever be offered, is Maria Bellonci's judicious and illuminating biography. After publication in eight other countries it is now available in a fine fluent English translation from the original Italian." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 24 '54 950w

"Mrs. Bellonci, who spent seven years on researches has done justice to Lucrezia Borgia. . . The report is admirably narrated and as readable in Bernard and Barbara Wall's English as in the Italian original." Paolo Milano

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 24 '54 1000w

"Signora Bellonci supports her indulgent defense with a combination of wit, warmth, and scholarship that could hardly be more persuasive or entertaining."

+ New Yorker 29:110 F 6 '54 180w

Time 63:100 F 8 '54 900w

"Lucrezia Borgia is not a mere historical study; it is also a work of art, and as such it entitles the author to rank as one of the foremost women writers of present-day Italy. Unfortunately this by no means secondary aspect of the Italian book does not come out in the English translation. Owing to a stern economy in production, a book of 600 pages has been compressed into a little over 300 in the English edition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 15 '54 1150w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. High world; story pictures. 113p $2.75 Harper

54-8936

Story of mountain life in the Austrian Tyrol. It tells of three years in the life of a simple mountaineer, who lived a calm life with his wife and five children until the coming of the hydroelectric plant, which changed many things.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 50w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 12 '54 150w

"The pictures in color and in black and white are wonderful; one depicting a thrilling escape from an avalanche takes seven consecutive pages! A Christmas book that is not limited to this season." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:441 D '54 140w

"Mountain worlds captured in text and pictures in Bemelmans' characteristic style."

Kirkus 22:679 O 1 '54 130w

"Its style, its moral, its humorous yet biting study of contrasting German or Austrian types and of village psychology will delight older readers of any age. . . It's a story you can't put down, with surprises in each brief chapter, and such humor, such rare village talk, such food and such an inn as only Ludwig 'Le Pauvre Bemelmans' could give us." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p2 N 14 '54 270w

"In locale and theme, this is all pretty snowy and delightful. Indeed, all would be well were it not for the strangely uneven manner in which Mr. Bemelmans has written it. The impression is of a smooth, swift, lively story (in that urbane deadpan style which carries Mr. Bemelmans' wit so well) crossed with tedious and lumpy dollops of information on Tyrolean ways." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times pt 2 p32 N 14 '54 220w

"The many pen-and-ink sketches and four full-page illustrations in color add to the charm. The story may have more appeal for adults, but could be read aloud to children of ten to twelve; all will receive a vivid impression of life in the high mountains and of the integrity and sincerity of the people who live there. A distinguished book of somewhat limited appeal. Parts have appeared in Holiday magazine." E. A. G.

+ — Sat R 37:76 N 13 '54 170w

BEN GURION, DAVID. Rebirth and destiny of Israel; ed. and tr. from the Hebrew under the supervision of Mordechai Nurock. 539p $10 Philosophical lib.

956.94 Israel

53-13385

Essays and addresses, dating from 1915 to 1952, in which the first Prime Minister of Israel, discusses the historical background and development of the new state. No index.

Reviewed by E. J. Fisher

Ann Am Acad 295:205 S '54 470w

Booklist 50:376 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 178:396 F '54 160w

Reviewed by Louis Binstock

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 31 '54 400w

"We are told that Ben-Gurion's Hebrew style is extraordinarily brilliant and eloquent. The translation reflects these qualities and conveys an impression of the author's clear thinking, political sagacity and moral earnestness in regard to the task to which he had devoted himself." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:241 F 24 '54 150w

"With the single exception of the recent autobiography of the late Chaim Weizmann, first President of Israel, we find here a clearer, more powerful statement of the conception, drive, idealism, and fanaticism which lay behind the reestablishment of a Hebrew state in the Holy Land than has yet been given." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 22 '53 550w

Current Hist 26:125 F '54 40w

Foreign Affairs 32:517 Ap '54 10w

"It is perhaps picayune, in view of the sweep and grandeur of the picture which emerges from this volume, to complain of technical deficiencies. But there are several: no index and, for several articles, no statement explaining where the article was published or on what occasion the speech was delivered. Also the English of the translation is frequently awkward and obscure. These are, however, but minor faults in a book which reveals the insights, the force, and the stature of the man who with skill and undaunted courage stood godfather to what he calls 'this incredibly fantastic renewal and recrudescence' of our time, 'this birth of the State of Israel.'" C. W. Efrogmson

+ — J Pol Econ 62:348 Ag '54 850w

"The volume would have benefited by better editing. The reader is given little or no indication of the special circumstances under which 'BG' wrote or delivered these essays and addresses. None the less, the book is of value to the student because it presents for the first time the philosophy of Israel's great practical leader."

+ — Nation 178:340 Ap 17 '54 270w

Reviewed by Gerold Frank

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 17 '54 650w

"Of the flood of books on the genesis and development of Israel, only two stand out as required reading: 'Trial and Error,' by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, and this volume. . . These books admirably supplement one another. Read together they reveal with startling clarity the broad outlines of the Jewish people's heroic and tragic history culminating in the re-emergence, in our day, of national independence. . . It may seem gratuitous to point out that despite the rich and rewarding material in these essays and addresses that Ben-Gurion fails to include an adequate treatment of the difficult problem of the Orthodox and the non-Orthodox in Israel. A more serious criticism is that the editing has been so restrained that some of the references will be readily understood only by readers well informed on Israeli and Jewish affairs. Amplification of editorial notes would make a second edition easier going for the general reader." J. G. McDonald

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 3 '54 950w

"The translation, in general, does justice to the classicistic Hebrew of the original. The rendering of some parts, however, is characterized by a regrettably poor English style. Occasionally it is difficult to grasp the meaning of sentences contained in these sections." Raphael Patai

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:287 Je '54 700w

"This collection of essays and addresses, delivered or written by Mr. Ben Gurion over the years 1915 to 1952, gives an admirable picture of his mental development and Mr. Nurock, the Israeli Minister in Australia, who has edited and translated it, is to be congratulated on accomplishing a difficult task supremely well."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p246 Ap 16 '54 1050w

BENARY-ISBERT, MRS MARGOT. Rowan farm; tr. from the German by Richard and Clara Winston. 277p $2.50 Harcourt

54-8568

A sequel to The Ark (Book Review Digest 1953). It is mainly Margret's story and there is a hint of a romance with the son of the farm owners. The return of her doctor-father from the Russian prison camp brings joy to the valiant people at The Ark.

Booklist 51:20 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"Once again the people and animals on the Almut Farm come alive. The two books belong together as one of the most satisfying of our family chronicles—warm, lively, full of courage, and a deep understanding that comes from the author's own experiences." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:336 O '54 200w

"A long book, but the closely interwoven incidents give a convincingly holding view of a new Germany in the making."

+ Kirkus 22:341 Je 1 '54 120w

"Highly recommended." E. M. Malone

+ Library J 79:1670 S 15 '54 80w

"It is a leisurely book, which through its length builds up a deep impression of the hard work on the farm, the beauty of country life, the variety of family problems and the different thinking of varied young people. . . Mrs. Benary-Isbert's first book was a prize book in the 1953 Herald Tribune Spring Festival. Her second, 'The Shooting Star,' was a charming tale for younger readers of a German girl in Switzerland. All three are admirably translated by Richard and Clara Winston." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 22 '54 500w

"Like 'The Ark' this is an uneven performance. It is frequently sentimental and even a little banal, yet it has little of the Teutonic self-pity which seeped through the earlier book. Its horizons are wider and there are times when the author makes the reader sharply aware of the emotional as well as the physical devastation which follows war." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p38 O 10 '54 250w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:212 N 27 '54 50w

"The difficulties facing West Germany while it attempts to reestablish itself are reflected in the trials of the Lechows as they work courageously toward economic stability. Out of her own experiences Mrs. Benary-Isbert has written with warmth and understanding a worthy sequel to 'The Ark.'" F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:35 Ag 21 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 40w

Wis Lib Bul 50:218 O '54

BENARY-ISBERT, MRS MARGOT. Shooting star; tr. from the German by Richard and Clara Winston; il. by Oscar Liebman. 118p $2.25 Harcourt

54-5150

Story of a little German girl and her mother who are sent into Switzerland to regain their health after a bout with pneumonia. Anne-gret becomes a sturdy, self-reliant person during the rigors of her three months in the Alps. For ages 8 to 12.

Booklist 50:282 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 F 28 '54 160w

+ Horn Bk 30:96 Ap '54 120w

Kirkus 22:61 F 1 '54 120w

"Authentic Swiss mountain atmosphere and a happy portrayal of day-to-day activities distinguish this story of a little German girl and the friends she makes while on a visit to Arosa." Virginia Haviland

+ Library J 79:781 Ap 15 '54 60w

"This author's book for older girls. 'The Ark,' was outstanding in fiction for 1953. Her new story is for girls under twelve. It is a simple, leisurely, everyday tale, but is touched with bits of gentle wisdom, and made special by the realism of its picture of Arosa, by the knowledge of the winter skies, and by the charming bit about Anne-gret's love for the little donkey she is certain is the one from Bethlehem." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 28 '54 170w

"The translation from the German is excellent but unfortunately the stereotyped black-and-white illustrations reflect neither the originality nor the charm of the writing." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p24 F 28 '54 150w

Sat R 37:26 Ap 17 '54 110w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:141 My '54

BENCHLEY, ROBERT CHARLES. Benchley roundup; a selection by Nathaniel Benchley of his favorites; drawings by Gluyas Williams. 333p $3.50 Harper

817

54-8937

An anthology composed of articles written by the late Robert Benchley between the years 1915 and 1945. The editor is Benchley's son.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 194:88 N '54 200w

Booklist 50:389; 51:36 Je 15 '54; S 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

Kirkus 22:425 Jl 1 '54 170w

"Recommended for all." H. L. Leet

+ Library J 79:1495 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by D. O. Stewart

Nation 179:343 O 16 '54 500w

"With a single exception, Benchley rings the bell every time in this collection—rings it sometimes, one must admit, with a not too audible tinkle, but far oftener with a resonant bong. The exception is a paper (you have to call it a paper) which he apparently was pistol-whipped into doing for 'The Yale Review'—at least that is where it first appeared. It is called 'The Typical New Yorker.'" J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 10 '54 700w

"If you happen to have a bright, young, humorous son who keeps all his classmates in constant stitches and is thinking of becoming a professional humorist, you owe it to him to buy him 'The Benchley Roundup.' He may not find every one of these pieces quite as funny as you might find them. . . But if your son is as smart as I think he is, he can learn much about playful satire from Benchley, the Gentlest-Harpooner-of-Them-All." Dr. Seuss

+ N Y Times p3 S 12 '54 480w

"More than ever Benchley seems the perfect wit, moving with ease from parody to whimsy to satire to the brand of quizzical good humor that was uniquely his. A book for every bedside table." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:23 S 25 '54 60w

"There must be quite a number of people who feel they haven't had an authentic laugh since Robert Benchley died and who keep wandering back to old collections of his articles to make sure the print hasn't faded. For them, and for the unfortunate few who never encountered one of America's most genuine humorists, there is good news—another Benchley collection and a very good one." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 300w

BENDICK, MRS JEANNE, and BENDICK, ROBERT. Television works like this. (Whittlesey house publication) new rev ed 64p il $2.25 McGraw

621.388 Television—Juvenile literature

53-12878

"This new revised edition [Book Review Digest 1949] brings the book up to date on color television, new uses of television in education, and the future of television. Grades 6-9." Booklist

Booklist 50:263 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by P. O. Marsh

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 40w

"Since there are no changes in the explanation of how TV works, in my opinion the most valuable part of the book, I would not recommend replacing the original edition unless additional copies are needed." Dorothy Schumacher

Library J 79:460 Mr 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 20 '54 30w

Wis Lib Bul 50:79 Mr '54

BENEDICT, MURRAY REED. Farm policies of the United States, 1790-1950; a study of their origins and development. 548p $5 Twentieth century fund

338.1 Agricultural administration 53-7172

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This book, the product of many years of patient labor, is by far the most comprehensive history of farm attitudes, organization, and legislation that has yet been written—or, one guesses, that will soon appear. In roughly the first hundred pages Professor Benedict gives a brief and general sketch of agrarian agitation and legislation in the nineteenth century. Then he settles down to a meticulous account of farm legislation in the twenty years preceding and following the advent of the New Deal." J. K. Galbraith

+ Am Econ R 44:466 Je '54 750w

"This is not an exciting book. Solid, detailed, detached, it underscores the variety and complexity of the agricultural economy." Vernon Carstensen

Am Hist R 59:658 Ap '54 600w

"It is a good book for ready reference but should be used by the reader only as a starting point for further investigation." F. A. Shannon

+ Ann Am Acad 291:168 Ja '54 210w

Reviewed by D. L. Kemmerer

J Pol Econ 62:370 Ag '54 850w

Nation 178:56 Ja 16 '54 120w

"For the period beginning about 1920, Dr. Benedict's large volume is exceptionally valuable for the manner in which it arrays in approximately chronological order almost incomprehensible shifts and changes which constitute the expression of American farm policy in the last three and a half decades. . . It is not possible to discover a thesis, or any clear body of concepts which runs through the twenty chapters of the author's presentation of complex and sometimes diverse materials, unless it be contained in his frequent personal and professional comments on particular actions taken by farmers, Congress, or government administrations at various times. But the work does put together a more elaborate body of information on public action on farm issues than can be found in any other single document."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 9:404 D '53 240w

BENGTTSSON, FRANS GUNNAR. Long ships; a saga of the Viking age; tr. from the Swedish by Michael Meyer. 503p il $4.50 Knopf 54-8763

A saga based on the life of one Red Orm, a Dane of the tenth century, whose adventurous life is followed from 980 to 1010. His exploits in England, Spain, Byzantium, and Russia are recounted, down to the time of his peaceful old age. "Originally published in Sweden in two volumes as Røde Orm. An English translation by Barrows Mussey of Volume I was published in the United States in 1942 [Book Review Digest 1943] under the title Red Orm." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 51:62 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:34 N '54 40w

"Of the many novels dealing with the lore of the viking age this is by far the best I have seen. The author calls his stirring narrative of adventures on sea and land a saga, and his work has, indeed, the full flavor of the Scandinavian chronicles that imperishably record the customs and wayfarings of the Northmen when the dark ages were closing." Charles Collins

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 3 '54 410w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Kirkus 22:410 J1 1 '54 150w

"This reader hasn't had so good a time since he happened on a battered copy of Eric Brighteyes in his youth—though Sir Rider Haggard was not notable for his humor. This certainly is. Public libraries and browsing rooms." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1399 Ag '54 90w

"These tenth-century goings-on at the court of King Harald Bluetooth and among the alarming descendants of the great Ragnar Hairy-Breeks are inviting enough, but the book—admirably translated by Michael Meyer—is even better than its promise." Norman Shrapnel

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '54 180w

"The action is bold, the background is authentic, and there are no phony histrionics. A literate work, evoking a violent era and often preserving epic rhythms." Stanley Cooperman

+ Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 50w

"Never dull, never even long-winded, though it fills five hundred pages of exactly close type, it is perfectly suited to the tastes of, for instance, readers of Mr. C. S. Forester. . . This saga, for all its masterful and erudite control, has no touch of the imaginative genius of, for instance, Sigrid Undset's Kristin Lavransdatter. The material is organized with affection rather than with love; at times, inevitably in so big a work, affection seems unorganized, merely polymathic, and a lack of creative fusion is felt." Giles Romilly

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:294 Mr 6 '54 420w

"The Long Ships,' a novel of the Viking age, is as exciting a tale of heroic adventure as has appeared in many a year." Hudson Strode

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 19 '54 650w

"Under the merriment and the fighting there is a great deal of scholarship as sound as it is imperceptible. Reading this marvelously good-humored ale-broth of a book, you say: this is how it must have been to be a Viking chief a thousand years ago. And not such a bad life at that." Burke Wilkinson

+ N Y Times p5 S 12 '54 300w

New Yorker 30:139 S 25 '54 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 28 '54 150w

"This reader did from time to time wonder if the men and women of Scandinavian heroic age actually spoke with quite the rapier-like Cabellian irony and understatement attributed to them by the Swedish author. But this irony and understatement add to the book's entertainment, and perhaps are not untrue to life." T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 37:16 S 18 '54 650w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong

Spec p190 F 12 '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 210w

Time 64:105 S 27 '54 30w

"In Sweden Frans Bengtsson already enjoys a considerable reputation as a poet and man of letters. The Long Ships, his first novel, should make him as well known in England. . . The splendid understanding of the tenth-century Norse point of view makes it a remarkable panorama of a vanished way of life. . . The translation by Mr. Michael Meyer is smooth and unobtrusive."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p85 F 1 '54 320w

BENJAMIN, NORA (GOTTHEIL) (MRS LAWRENCE SCHLESINGER KUBIE). King Solomon's navy; il. by the author. 181p $2.50 Harper

54-8979

"The author has invented a credible young Hebrew hero, Jared, who, escaping from mine slavery, is assigned to King Solomon's fleet for a long voyage through the Red Sea and down the coast of Africa in search of gold. A dishonest leader, a crew divided in loyalties, danger at sea, and primitive natives all threaten Jared's life, but he manages to survive and helps bring the king's present to the Queen of Sheba." Horn Bk

Booklist 51:139 N 15 '54

"A fresh historical adventure in which a high level of excitement is maintained throughout. . . The plot is well worked out, with active details giving life to period and setting. Jared is an individual and, at the same time, the typical adolescent who resents being patronized by an older brother. His thoughts on slavery and on religious belief add depth to the story." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:337 O '54 140w

"A book full of color and adventure. . . A rich tapestry here of character study and the full social background of the times."

+ Kirkus 22:390 J1 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times pt 2 p14 N 14 '54 130w

BENN, SIR ERNEST JOHN PICKSTONE, 2d bart. The state, the enemy. 176p $3 British bk. centre

320.15 State, The. Industry and state. Great Britain—Politics and government

[53-10400]

"In the tradition of Herbert Spencer, Sir Ernest Benn makes a frontal assault on the Welfare State—especially the Fabianism of the Labor Party—to which he attributes many of the ills of modern society." (Foreign Affairs) No index.

Foreign Affairs 32:332 Ja '54 30w

"Within its limits the book is invaluable in making one reconsider the basic reasons for having a Welfare State. Though it is unlikely to secure many converts, it cannot fail to make the reader think—and that is a service." E. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 2 '53 180w

"Unfortunately, Sir Ernest fails to make an effective case against the state intervention that he deplores. The main difficulty is that he becomes so emotionally involved in his subject that reason departs from his pages and irrelevancies enter on a large scale. If a competent reader on the staff of the distinguished publishing firm that Sir Ernest heads had had the courage to suggest that the book's organization be tightened and its contents pruned and enriched, the House of Benn would have had a worthier volume to promote." Herman Ausubel

BENN, E. J. P.—Continued

Pol Sci Q 69:156 Mr '54 450w

"Two points may legitimately be made. First, Sir Ernest tends to treat all the evils of our time from the decline of the middle class to the economic crisis and from the occasional shortages of food to the position of sterling vis-a-vis the dollar. . . This is clearly not the case. Secondly, he tends to overlook or to minimize the great improvement in the condition of the very poor."

Times [London] Lit Sup p109 F 13 '53 850w

BENNETT, ALFRED GORDON. Focus on the unknown. 260p il $3.95 Lib. pubs.

133 Curiosities

"Speculations of a well-educated, well-traveled Englishman on certain mysterious aspects of the universe which have long puzzled humanity. The author discusses evidence, reports, news accounts, and observations on innumerable interesting phenomena, including sea serpents, insect intelligence and power, magic, demonology, sorcery, witchcraft, life on other planets, flying saucers, religious cults, dreams, and various research in the occult sciences. Readable, imaginative essays on the forces of the unknown." (Booklist) Bibliography.

Booklist 51:31 S 15 '54

"Entertaining book. . . Larger libraries and rental collections." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 79:1306 J1 '54 90w

BENNETT, EDNA, comp. Best cartoons from France; pref. by Philippe Halsman. [120p] $2.95 Simon & Schuster

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 54-5465

A collection of cartoons from French periodicals.

Booklist 50:199 Ja 15 '54

"Not essential but useful together with our own cartoon books and the British ones." A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1060 Je 1 '54 70w

"A generally nimble-witted collection." Gerald Gottlieb

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D '53 100w

"An anthology of about 200 of the best cartoons east of The New Yorker. The fact is, much of the spirit of that magazine is evident in the Gallic import, not at all surprising in view of the fact that the cartoons originally appeared in Match and Le Rire. I had never before seen the work of some of these gentlemen, and I'm pretty ashamed of myself." Bernard Kalb

+ Sat R 36:68 D 5 '53 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 130w

"It is more zany than sane, but often makes sound Gallic sense anyway. . . The trouble with Best Cartoons is that most of them are second best. Too many contributors are serving up Coca-Cola instead of champagne, with pale imitations of such cartoonists as Charles Addams, Peter Arno, and Steinberg."

Time 62:118 D 14 '53 270w

BENNETT, GEORGE, ed. Concept of empire: Burke to Attlee, 1774-1947. (British political tradition ser) 434p $4 British bk. centre

354.42 Great Britain—History—Modern period, 1485- —Sources. Imperial federation

[53-2781]

"This volume of excerpts from a wide variety of sources illustrates one facet of the British political tradition, concern with imperial policy and practice. As in earlier volumes of the series, there is first a short introductory essay, in this case indicating the trends and cross currents of imperial history during the period under consideration, the sequence of policies, and the nature of the problems dealt with by the writers of the excerpts which follow. The 128 extracts which form the bulk of the book are drawn from the speeches and writings of economists, colonial reformers, missionaries, evangelicals, responsible politicians, civil servants, and imperial proconsuls, and they represent the views of conservatives, radicals, nationalists, separatists, federationists, and of individuals not readily classified." Canadian Hist R

Reviewed by P. L. Hanna

Am Hist R 59:685 Ap '54 240w

"Teachers of British imperial history will find this collection very useful indeed, but its value to the uninitiated American student or layman is greatly lessened by the absence of adequate explanatory material. This reviewer found the 28-page introductory essay a masterpiece of compression. Nevertheless, the author, perhaps unconsciously, takes for granted a background of far more than the rudiments of this vast subject." Holden Furber

+ — Ann Am Acad 292:188 Mr '54 350w

"Admirably edited." A. C. Cooke

+ Canadian Hist R 34:365 D '53 300w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 7 '53 140w

Reviewed by E. T. Williams

Spec p523 Ap 24 '53 1100w

BENNETT, JOHN COLEMAN, and others. Christian values and economic life. See Christian values and economic life

BENNETT, MERRILL KELLEY. World's food. 282p $4 Harper

338.1 Food supply. Population. Diet 53-11838

"A study of the interrelations of world populations, national diets, and food potentials." (Subtitle) Index.

"We highly recommend The World's Food to anyone who is interested in a scientific, and yet a most readable, discussion of one of the world's most important economic problems." F. V. Waugh

+ Am Econ R 44:462 Je '54 500w

"This is a critical study and the author has worked hard and consistently to get the facts and to use them intelligently. Because data are lacking we shall not find in this book solutions to the riddle of the real relations between food and population support. But we will learn that to get such answers, we shall have to devote less time to developing theoretical charts of food required and available and more time to observation of real conditions here and abroad." V. H. Whitney

+ Am Soc R 19:624 O '54 1250w

Reviewed by Conrad Taeuber

Ann Am Acad 294:191 J1 '54 440w

Booklist 50:370 Je 1 '54

Foreign Affairs 32:670 J1 '54 30w

Reviewed by P. M. Stern

Geog R 44:611 O '54 850w

"Open to argument and an inconclusive more than answering book, this is still an extensive, well documented survey."

+ — Kirkus 21:779 D 1 '53 210w

"This book is a straightforward and fascinating, if somewhat chilly, dissection of the ghost of Malthus, and of living revivalists of the Malthusian doctrine—William Vogt, Fairfield Osborn and Robert C. Cook, to name three." Russell Lord

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 11 '54 450w

"Whether this book will improve understanding or muddy further waters that are already murky, remains to be seen. Yet it is a valuable contribution, if read with discrimination." William Vogt

Sat R 37:13 Mr 13 '54 111

"In a field rather notable for vehemence of statement, The World's Food is an exception; it is a valuable resumé of what is known about the quality of food for mankind. In addition, the book is a most interesting study in method and attitude on the part of the author."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:239 Je '54 220w

BENNETT, PAULA POGANY, and CLARK, VELMA R. Art of Hungarian cooking; two hundred and twenty-two favorite recipes; drawings by Willy Pogany. 223p $3.50 Double-day

641.5 Cookery, Hungarian 54-5361

A collection of authentic Hungarian recipes which can be used in American kitchens. Includes menus. Index.

Booklist 50:292 Ap 1 '54

Kirkus 22:28 Ja 1 '54 180w

"An addition to any collection." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 30w

"The authors have done an excellent job in bringing us the story as well as the recipes of Magyar cuisine. Their enthusiasm for the gently spiced and warmly flavored dishes so dear to the Hungarians who take a pride in their food and wine is warranted by the recipes they present." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p19 My 2 '54 130w

"Good Hungarian cooking is considered by many to be the best in the world... In this excellent cookbook, Mrs. Bennett gives an interesting sketch of the people in addition to a complete rundown on their cuisine." Jane Friendly

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 4 '54 60w

BENSON, BENJAMIN. Girl in the cage. 218p $2.75 Mill

54-5823

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:45 Ja 15 '54 80w

"Altogether a nice workmanlike job and a very entertaining work of fiction." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p13 Ap 4 '54 100w

"Benson's underplayed, unsensational narrative carries more of an authentically tough wallop than any dozen of the louder and more self-conscious 'hard-boiled' writers." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 18 '54 110w

"As usual with Benson, the detection is authentic and exciting." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 50w

"Nice going." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 Ap 24 '54 20w

"Written in a clear style, and based on evidently correct background material about State Police procedures, this is a better-than-average book of the mystery variety." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 150w

BENTINCK-SMITH, WILLIAM, ed. Harvard book; selections from three centuries. 369p $5 Harvard univ. press

378 Harvard university 53-11123

Selections from the writings of Harvard men covering its three centuries of existence. Includes stories, diary entries, letters, passages from books and other documents ranging in date from 1643 to the present.

"I wouldn't have believed that anybody could get together such an extraordinarily varied and entertaining collection of excerpts, items and fragments about a single American university as Mr. Bentinck-Smith, editor of The Harvard Alumni Bulletin, has assembled in The Harvard Book." F. L. Allen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 N ■ '53 700w

"Readers who do not know some of the riches of the Harvard centuries will find here a star-studded well of refreshment." C. A. Wagner

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 10 '54 650w

BENTLEY, ERIC RUSSELL. Dramatic event; an American chronicle. 278p $3.50 Horizon press

792.0973 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism 54-12279

"Consists of more than fifty periodical essays on the current American theatre, mostly Broadway. And in evaluating the status of American drama, the author brings to bear his wide knowledge of theatre in other lands. Barred from the theatre of the iron curtain countries, he has made up for it by his study of the theatres of England, France, Germany and Italy. (The Orient still awaits his coming.) And his matchings, measuring and appraisings of the native scene are the more erudite and authoritative even if not more charitable therefor." N Y Times

Booklist 51:147 D 1 '54

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 7 '54 360w

"Recommended for drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:2460 D 15 '54 30w

"Eric Bentley has developed into one of the most exciting dramatic critics writing today. Beginning with The Playwright as Thinker in 1946, following with Bernard Shaw, then with In Search of Theatre in 1953, and now this fourth volume, he has continued to gain in stature, growing surer in each book of his principles of judgment, extending his reach and vocabulary, his knowledge and command over his material." Paul Green

+ N Y Times p32 N 28 '54 750w

BENTLEY, JOHN. Oldtime steam cars. 144p il $2 Arco

629.209 Automobiles—History

The story of steam cars from 1655 to 1929, with stress on the Stanley, White, and Locomobile. Copiously illustrated. No index.

Booklist 50:160 D 15 '53

"Bentley's book is probably the fullest account of steam cars that has been published. . . Unfortunately no sources are given and there is no index." R. R. Hawkins

+ — Library J 78:2223 D 15 '53 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p24 N '53 20w

BENTZ, HANS GEORG. Dogs are company; tr. by Marjorie Deans; with an introd. by Brian Vesey-Fitzgerald [Eng title: Three's company]. 191p il $2.75 Dutton

636.78 Dogs 54-5045

Anecdotes of this German writer's three dogs and their life together.

Booklist 50:396 Je 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p15 Je 6 '54 30w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 160w

BERANEK, LEO LEROY. Acoustics. 481p il $9 McGraw

534 Sound, Telecommunication 53-12426

"A comprehensive text written by a faculty member of M. I. T. and intended for the instruction of senior and graduate students preparing for research or practical work in such fields as architectural acoustics, sound transmission and reproduction, and ultrasonics. Treatment is analytical and involves the use of considerable mathematics. A majority of the chapters are devoted to the analysis of acoustic devices such as microphones and loud speakers and to standards and measurement techniques. Graduate engineers, architects, and even amateurs interested in high fidelity recording and reproduction of sound will find the book of interest provided that they have the requisite knowledge of terminology and mathematics." Library J

BERANEK, L. L.—Continued

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 79:1895 O 15 '54 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:49 J1 '54

BERCKMAN, EVELYN. Evil of time. 197p
$2.75 Dodd

54-6051

Mystery story.

"Effectively suspenseful and gruesome, and remarkably original in fantastic concept."
Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Mr 14
54 180w

"Not one of the most distinguished Red Badge prize winners, but promising." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 23
'54 140w

"An uneven but decidedly interesting first novel." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p21 Mr 14 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 4 '54
90w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:62 Ap 10 '54 20w

BERDIAEV, NIKOLAI ALEKSANDROVICH.
Truth and revelation; tr. from the Russian by R. M. French. 156p $2.50 Harper

197 Philosophy and religion 53-10968

"Recognized as one of the most important theologians of the time, Berdyaev has presented his examination of revelation as a religious and spiritual experience, not a philosophic one. This experience he links to the contemporary world of physical science and history. There is in this treatise the theological slant of the Russian Orthodox as against the more familiar occidental Catholic." Library J

Booklist 50:334 My 1 '54

"Truth and Revelation is another brilliant contribution to Christian anthropology, but little else... It is likely that his failure can be accounted for in the fact that, like A. N. Whitehead, Berdyaev assumes that creativity is the explanatory category for the whole universe... Creativity may be the highest category for understanding man, and this is Berdyaev's greatest insight; but the topic of truth and revelation seems to be a matter of thinking in terms of the highest and the best downward into experience. On this subject Berdyaev leaves us with little vision, and we must look elsewhere for a firmer word on this weighty matter." G. C. Stuart

Christian Century 70:991 S 2 '53 600w

"Recommended for the large library and for the library with religious collection." Paul von Khrum

+ Library J 79:552 Mr 15 '54 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p449 J1 10 '53
800w

BERENSON, BERNARD. Caravaggio: his incongruity and his fame. 122p 88pl $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

759.5 Caravaggio, Michelangelo Merisi da
54-812

"The first part of Caravaggio is a detailed analysis of his important authenticated paintings; the second discusses his style in broader terms and also his influence. Berenson rejects the view of certain critics that Caravaggio was an initiator of the baroque. 'Caravaggio,' Berenson concludes 'deserves to be regarded as the most anti-baroque artist of the XVIIth century.' There are eighty-eight photographs of art works referred to in the text." Atlantic

Atlantic 193:87 Mr '54 180w

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 4 '54
40w

Reviewed by Serge Hughes
Commonweal 60:47 Ap 16 '54 200w

"Easy to read, argumentative, full of remarks which are no less true for being a little mischievous. There are irrelevancies... but the irrelevancies are worth having." Stephen Bone

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 15 '53 190w

"Mr. Berenson's book does not pretend to be more than jottings about Caravaggio, and must be taken in the light-hearted spirit in which it was written. It would be missing the point to take it too seriously." Benedict Nicolson

New Statesman & Nation 46:678 N 28
'53 400w

Reviewed by George Biddle
N Y Times p7 Ja 31 '54 210w

"'Caravaggio' which, in other hands, might have been a conventional biography of an unconventional person (master-painter and murderer) not only deals superbly with the art of the man but bristles with the author's indignation over certain so-called critics." Walter Pach

+ Sat R 37:20 Ap 3 '54 500w

"Sometimes smug, sometimes prejudiced, but always stimulating." A. M. Y.

+ Spec p54 Ja 8 '54 50w

"This stimulating book was written before Caravaggio studies assumed their present form, but the inclusion of certain paintings which would now be omitted from the Caravaggio catalogue does not impair its argument."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p40 Ja 15 '54
450w

BERENSON, BERNARD. Seeing and knowing. 48p 88pl $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

701 Art 54-2143

"An essay of 8,000 words which Mr. Berenson wrote in 1948. In it he ranges through all periods of art, from cave-paintings to Cézanne, in a discursive discussion of his dictum that 'representation is a compromise with chaos whether visual, verbal or musical.' It is among other things a celebration of the debt art owes to the human form and a cry from the heart that the beauty of the human body will one day have its ancient eminence in the visual arts again. From this springboard Mr. Berenson makes his attack on the modern arts, an attack which appears to be the main purpose of the essay." Times [London] Lit Sup

Atlantic 193:87 Mr '54 90w

"His Harvard A.B. dates back to 1887, but time has not dulled the trenchant pen with which he sets forth what he considers valid principles of representational art and castigates those modern painters and sculptors who flout them."

+ Cath World 178:479 Mr '54 150w

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 4 '54
40w

"The peculiar allusions to Impressionism and to Van Eyck, may unsettle the most docile of followers. The unsettling will turn into distress in some as Berenson flowingly sweeps on to speak of technique as something existing independently of art, to confuse art and progress, to imagine the possibility of progress in the arts, and by logical inference to imply that art can come to one point of perfection by which the art of all other times is to be judged. It would have been far better to have written a short article bristling with cultured aphorisms, revealing that there is a lot of nonsense going on in contemporary art. The magnificent swells of his theorizing would then have been smaller before breaking on the rocks of coherence." Serge Hughes

Commonweal 60:46 Ap 16 '54 600w

"It is a valuable and interesting essay, but not a major work of this great scholar." Stephen Bone
Manchester Guardian p4 D 15 '53 60w

"Bernard Berenson's brilliant little essay is packed with short and pithy truths that might well be carved over the portals of our art schools. You may disagree with the author's findings. You cannot deny the cogency of his reasoning, the clarity of his exposition, his rounded scholarship and obvious sincerity. I do not recall any work on esthetics as penetrating and provocative, since reading Ortega y Gasset's 'Dehumanization of Art.'" George Biddle
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 31 '54 210w

"Any book by Mr. Berenson is bound to be worth reading. Still, no one has universality of knowledge, much less of appreciation, and this book's value is limited by the fact that it principally concerns the modernists, both painters and writers—a field that Mr. Berenson's long preoccupation with the Italian artists of the Renaissance in no way fits him to explore. Written in a curiously choppy style, it has its charming, perceptive moments. . . Perhaps the lesson is that even the greatest authorities are a little at a loss outside their particular orbit."

— + New Yorker 30:117 F 27 '54 170w

Reviewed by Walter Pach

Sat R 37:20 Ap 3 '54 500w

"Mr. Berenson is a great critic of art, even if he has not sought out the farthest corners of his brilliant talent, but it is not even criticism to talk of the 'confusion, strummings, blusterings, solemn puerilities that are now practised.' More than this is needed to lead us towards his world of 'life enhancement.' The 88 plates which accompany the essay are a fascinating personal anthology of art from Altamira and the Aurignacian period to Picasso. Superb knowledge and taste have gone into their selection."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p756 N 27 '53 750w

BERESFORD, MARCUS (MARC BRANDEL, pseud). Time of the fire. 240p $3 Random house 54-5968

Mystery story.

"'The Time of the Fire' is a tremendously interesting novel. Readers will find in it wisdom, drama, action, pathos—all put together in strong, well governed prose. It is a whodunit of the highest order." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 15 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:248 Ap 1 '54 160w

"The movingly conceived characters are forced by the situation to reach depths of self-recognition; the murderer, when revealed, proves terribly plausible and meaningful; and the book as a whole is as admirable and powerful a blend of suspense story and mainstream novel of character as has appeared since Robert M. Coates' 'Wisteria Cottage.'" Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Je 27 '54 120w

Reviewed by John Metcalf

— Spec p506 O 22 '54 220w

Time 63:114 Je 14 '54 50w

BERGENGRUEN, WERNER. Last captain of horse; a portrait of chivalry [tr. from the German language original Der letzte rittmeister, by Eric Peters]. 304p $3.50 Thames (N Y)
[54-21828]

"The retired Captain of Horse once served under the Tsar, and has now settled down in the Lake region of Italy, and [this novel] is mainly made up of the anecdotes, folk tales and memoirs which enliven the conversation of this retired soldier. Most of the stories have as their theme deeds of bravery and courtliness which distinguished such 'shining fools' as Bayard and Bertrand de Guesclin." Kirkus

"It serves as a gentle reminder of gentler times which will have a nostalgic bouquet for those to whom gallantry and knight errantry still exert their timeless appeal."

+ Kirkus 22:39 Ja 15 '54 130w

"Recommended for all libraries which wish to have representative collections of contemporary European literature." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Isabel Quigley

Manchester Guardian p4 O 23 '53 60w

"'The Last Captain of Horse' (Der Letzte Rittmeister) will inevitably be compared with the one other book by Mr. Bergengruen which has been translated into English: 'A Matter of Conscience.' The latter, however, is a tightly knit novel of guilt and redemption, becoming before the end something close to a medieval morality play. The present work is slighter, less unified—but exceedingly pleasant and rewarding to read." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune R p4 Mr 21 '54 500w

"Taken slowly like a glass of old brandy, these stories with their sly, quietly bizarre humor are a perfect antidote for twentieth-century blues." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 25 '54 350w

"Discursive—only occasionally over-talkative—civilised, warm, calmly sentimental, Mr. Bergengruen introduces his old friend the Rittmeister to us casually, sure of our affection. When we've pulled up our chairs, he lets him talk on and on about the things which happened in that other time. For me the first ninety-five pages of urbane introduction, handled with a grace and graciousness that's in the highest European tradition of Mann and Gide, are the real heart of the book." John Metcalf

+ Spec p464 O 23 '53 320w

"This cheerful dose of reactionary sentiment makes a stimulating book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 23 '53 120w

BERGER, MORROE, and others, eds. Freedom and control in modern society; this volume is written in honor of Robert Morrison MacIver [contributors: Gardner Murphy and others]. 326p $6 Van Nostrand

304 Sociology. MacIver, Robert Morrison
54-7534

"Most collections of essays published today are intended to serve as supplementary readings for college courses. This one, however, reverts to the older tradition of grouping together a series of papers written in honour of a great scholar, in this case Robert M. MacIver. Nor are any of the contributions reprints, for all were especially written for this volume and are here published for the first time. The contributors are former colleagues or students of MacIver's at Columbia University and the majority of them, reflecting MacIver's dual career, are sociologists and political scientists." Canadian Forum

Reviewed by R. A. Dahl

Am Soc R 19:807 D '54 1000w

"The quality of the contributions is uneven and several of the essays are not up to the high standards of the others. The book may not be too useful as a text, but several of the articles should be excellent for classroom purposes. However, with a few exceptions, the specialist will have little new to learn from the volume." M. A. Kaplan

Ann Am Acad 296:185 N '54 500w

Booklist 51:32 S 15 '54

"It is gratifying to be able to report that the contributions from sociologists are generally superior to those from political scientists. Three in particular by themselves almost justify the price of the book. Nathan Glazer contributes a brilliant discussion of nationality-groups in America. . . . Seymour M. Lipset's long and thorough paper on the conditions favoring more or less internal democracy in trade unions is an example of the workings of the modern sociological mind at its very best. . . . The third paper of exceptional merit is Kingsley Davis' able analysis of the demographic foundations of national power. . . . One other paper deserves special comment. Intriguingly entitled 'Friendship as Social Process,' it is a lengthy 'substantive and methodological analysis' of the degree to which people with similar values enter into close primary (personal) relations with one another." D. H. Wrong

BERGER, MORROE—Continued

+ Canadian Forum 34:163 O '54 600w

BERGSON, ABRAM, ed. Soviet economic growth: conditions and perspectives [rev. form of the proceedings of a conference held at Arden House, Harriman, N.Y., May 23-25, 1952 . . . organized under the sponsorship of the joint committee on Slavic studies of the American council of learned societies and the Social science research council]. 376p il $6 Row

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions 53-2115

"Brings together the results of the research of a score of American scholars on the subject of the Soviet economy. Presented first at a conference held in May 1952, these studies, containing much original material, cover the major sectors of Soviet economic life, their present status and future prospects." Foreign Affairs

"The statistical manipulations which are to be found in some of these reports lead, not only to modifications of the pattern of the variations, but even to a reversal of their direction. More generally, most of the reports suffer from a lack of effort to understand or analyze the economic laws applicable to the Soviet economy. They accordingly do not make clear enough distinctions between the successive periods through which the Soviet economy has passed and omit any indication of the characteristics of these different periods and of the way in which these features have developed. . . . The critical character of these different observations should not make one lose sight of the undoubted interest of this work and the information it contains, as well as the special value of some of these reports, notably, in our opinion, and despite our reservations on various points, the ones by N. M. Kaplan and W. Galenson." Charles Bettelheim

+ — Am Econ R 44:165 Mr '54 1750w

"We have here solid and original research, based usually upon a thorough knowledge of modern economic theory, into the statistics of most aspects of Soviet economic growth: population, natural resources, transport, industry, agriculture, foreign trade, investment, national income. Omitted are forced labor and the standard of living. These omissions are particularly serious as they make the successes of the Soviet economy seem even greater than they are." P. J. D. Wiles

+ — Ann Am Acad 291:194 Ja '54 400w

"Important book."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:163 O '53 50w

"The papers are of a high scholarly level and copiously footnoted. They are not encyclopedic; instead, each deals exhaustively with a central theme, which may be substantive or methodological. This approach can only be commended; for within the scope of the book treatment of all aspects of a given topic would necessarily have resulted in superficiality and incompleteness. . . . The regional geographer will look in vain for a discussion of the significance of changes in the locational pattern of the Soviet economy or the magnitude of the vaunted 'eastward movement.' Yet in spite of the economist's approach in aggregate terms and his slighting of the regional concept, the book is a milestone in the study of the Soviet economy." Theodore Shabad

+ — Geog R 44:454 Jl '54 700w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian

Yale R n ■ 43:464 spring '54 150w

BERK, BARBARA. First book of stage costume and make-up; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. 45p $1.75 Watts, F.

792.02 Costume—Juvenile literature. Make-up, Theatrical—Juvenile literature 54-5946

A graphically illustrated book of suggestions for inexpensive stage costumes and convincing make-up for grades four to seven.

Booklist 50:424 Jl 1 '54

Reviewed by Sylvia Cassell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 20w

Horn Bk 30:340 O '54 100w

"A fine layout of clearly, creatively presented ideas. Progressing from simple to difficult, the material covers types, periods and stunts and capitalizes on the use of ingenuity plus home grown tools wherever possible. Brisk two-tones by Jeanne Bendick complete a snappy performance."

+ Kirkus 22:363 Je 1E '54 70w

"Beginning adult drama groups will find it excellent help. Recommended for children 10 and up." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 79:1324 Jl '54 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:216 O '54

BERLE, ADOLF AUGUSTUS. 20th century capitalist revolution. 192p $3 Harcourt

338.74 Corporations. Capitalism 54-11327

"A study of the modern corporation as a political institution forced to operate within the framework of a democratic society. The author first looks at the corporation in relation to power, property, and the state; he next describes the checks that public opinion imposes upon it in the form of law. He then surveys the corporation in its international relationships, concluding that they are, on the whole, constructive. He predicts that the American corporation will weather the political storms of the next half century, if it develops a social conscience and creates a desirable community around it." Booklist

Booklist 51:53; 75 O 1 '54; O 15 '54

Reviewed by R. D. Cahn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 21 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:562 Ag 15 '54 240w

"Strongly recommended for all except smallest public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:1820 O 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by Walton Hamilton

Nation 179:534 D 18 '54 1750w

Reviewed by Robert Lekachman

New Repub 131:20 N 29 '54 1300w

"One thinks of certain small books which in their distillation of thought and their elegance of style have opened new tracks for the mind. Mr. Berle's belongs on such a shelf. It should make its way into widening circles and take a permanent place in contemporary thought." August Hecksher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 12 '54 550w

"Interesting, important and provocative book." S. E. Harris

+ N Y Times p3 O 24 '54 1350w

New Yorker 30:137 O 30 '54 190w

Reviewed by G. W. Stocking

Sat R 37:22 N 27 '54 1400w

BERLIN, ISAIAH. The hedgehog and the fox; an essay on Tolstoy's view of history. 86p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

891.733 Tolstoi, Lev Nikolaevich, graf

53-9697

"Most of us, I imagine, reading 'War and Peace' tend to skim over the long disquisitions on history as rather tedious breaks in a marvelously exciting story, and nearly all critics hitherto have given official sanction to this habit by attempting to prove that these historical essays are an unnecessary blemish upon a great work of art. However, Isaiah Berlin—

lecturer in philosophy at Oxford and famous as a scholar, diplomatist and conversationalist in at least two continents—has chosen to subject these historical passages to careful attention. In this brilliant essay he not only succeeds in making very good sense out of Tolstoy's historical theory but also finds in it an indispensable key to the complex and divided personality of the great Russian novelist." N Y Times

"Berlin's stunning command of the resources of scholarship, his sensitivity to literature and to character, and his eloquence as a writer give this essay the luster of a virtuoso performance."

+ Atlantic 193:87 Ap '54 160w

Reviewed by N. D. Roodkowski
Cath World 179:477 S '54 400w

"Whatever the reader's final evaluation of the hedgehog-fox distinction, or of the relative merits of hedgehogs and foxes, he will find solid intellectual sustenance in this learned and likely essay. Berlin complains—with considerable justification—that hardly anyone had taken Tolstoy's philosophy of history seriously (the only significant exception being the Russian historian Kareyev). The publication of Mr. Berlin's book has removed all ground for further complaint on this score." G. L. Kline

+ Ethics 64:313 Jl '54 1300w

"The argument is ingenious and subtle, full of overtones—exactly what good critical writing should be, and so rarely is in these hurried and shallow times." Max Beloff

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 18 '53 480w

"This essay is an admirable excursion into comparative literature, as it is into the philosophy of history and the psychology of a great writer. And in bringing to the foreground Tolstoy's neglected quarrel with the historians Mr. Berlin makes us speculate whether, on the same ground, we might not quarrel with the biographers who see lives as chronologies rather than intensities, and with the philosophic unififers who forget, in their pursuit of the whole, the diversity of the parts." Leon Edel

+ Nation 178:223 Mr 13 '54 1300w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 46:768 D 12 '53 650w

"Mr. Berlin discourses on all this with wisdom, acuteness and brilliancy. This small book is a technical feat, of writing and of thinking. The sentences, sometimes a whole paragraph long, should be difficult but are not. All they ask is alert attention; every phrase counts." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 Ap 4 '54 800w

"Not only does Mr. Berlin command all the materials of erudition, literary and philosophical, for his task, but he has a deep and subtle feeling for the puzzle of Tolstoy's personality, and he writes throughout, and particularly toward the last pages, with a wonderful eloquence. This essay, I am sure, will take its place amid the permanent literature about Tolstoy." William Barrett

+ N Y Times p4 F 14 '54 850w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden
New Yorker 30:131 S 25 '54 2650w

Reviewed by Robert Bierstedt
Sat R 37:30 Ap 17 '54 250w

"To indicate and to explain the despair and the terrifyingly destructive quality in Tolstoy which is both the cause and the effect of this despair, Mr. Berlin's symbols or categories of the hedgehog and the fox do not seem wholly adequate. Nor, I think, are Mr. Berlin's closing words, illuminating as they are, quite as pointed as they might be. Tolstoy is described in the end as 'the most tragic of the great writers, a desperate old man, beyond human aid, wandering self-blinded at Colonus.' But the real tragedy is that Tolstoy never got to Colonus, and, if he had got there, something would have caused him to suspect the offer of human hospitality or the possibility of divine guidance." Rex Warner
Spec p20 Ja 1 '54 1400w

"This brilliant essay, which originally appeared in the second volume of the 'Oxford

Slavonic Papers' (1951), is now available, with some expansions and revisions, as a little book. Despite its brevity, it raises many important questions and pursues a few related themes vigorously." René Wellek

+ Yale R n s 43:607 summer '54 950w

BERLIOZ, HECTOR LOUIS. New letters, 1830-1868; with introd. notes and English tr. by Jacques Barzun. 322p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-5189

A chronological collection of the letters of Hector Berlioz in the original French with an idiomatic English translation. Most of the letters were unknown or not easily available in English. Includes a check list of additional Berlioz letters; a list of Berlioz's domiciles with approximate dates of occupancy; bibliography; and index.

"The editor links the letters skillfully, includes footnotes which identify places and people among other things, and provides an excellent bibliographical apparatus which is not too obtrusive." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:557 Mr 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by O. E. Albrecht

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:459 Je '54 500w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin

Nation 179:158 Ag 21 '54 1500w

"In these nearly forty years of letters shine that intelligent drive and creative vitality which make it reasonable for Mr. Barzun to write that 'after Weber's early death, only Berlioz could have sustained over a span of thirty years . . . two such incomparable roles as educating the musicians and public of Europe to a new art and supplying the models thereof.' It is our privilege, in this book, to watch him doing both." Herbert Weinstock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 28 '54 500w

"One need not be a musician to enjoy the book. Anyone interested in a résumé of nineteenth-century culture, or eager for an insight into the character of a great man and the workings of a great mind, will find the volume both profitable and rewarding." T. K. Scherman

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 11 '54 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 16 '54 220w

"The documents are rendered in their original French and, on parallel pages, given a splendid English translation by Mr. Barzun that sets new standards for literacy and grace. The editor has also provided penetrating introductory material as well as historical links between certain of the more fragmentary letters." Robert Lawrence

+ Sat R 37:30 Ap 24 '54 550w

"Professor Barzun has provided an introduction, copious notes and a running biographical commentary, which make the book easy for the student to use. He has also printed the French text and his translation on opposite pages, which seems altogether unnecessary: a translation may be needed for university students, but in that case the original text could have been omitted and the high price of the book reduced."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 17 '54 950w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:148 Je '54 220w

BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, SAINT. Letters; newly tr. by Bruno Scott James. 530p $10 Regnery

B or 92 A54-671

"In St. Bernard's lifetime his secretary Geoffrey of Auxerre published a first collection of some 300 letters, a number since greatly augmented by the researches of others. This new collection contains letters hitherto inaccessible to all but the specialist together with several never previously translated or published. For the convenience of readers all the letters are grouped in a rough chronological order according to the chief subjects but within the framework of the traditional order." (Publisher's note) For a smaller selection of Bernard's letters by this same editor see Book Review Digest 1953.

BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX—Continued

Reviewed by Alban Baer
Commonweal 59:312 D 25 '53 320w

"Bernard is very hard to translate; and the editor conveys the qualities of vigour and warmth in the saint's style sometimes at the expense of its sonority and floridity and of literal rendering. But he shows great skill and at many points improves upon the older version of S. J. Eales, usually contriving to be both agreeable to read and faithful." C. R. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 3 '53 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 19 '53 650w

BERNARD, JOHN D., pseud. See Swartout, J. M.

BERNDT, RONALD MURRAY, and BERNDT, CATHERINE HELEN. First Australians. 144p il $4.75 Philosophical lib.

572.994 Ethnology—Australia. Australia—Native races 54-10939

An Australian husband-and-wife team of anthropologists spent more than ten years in research among the aborigines of Australia. In their book they endeavor to answer such questions as: What are the aborigines like? How do they live? What do they think about? Bibliography. No index.

Christian Century 71:1304 O 27 '54 160w

"Perhaps the best modern introduction to the life and customs of the Australian aborigines, written for the layman and covered in only 144 pages. It bears the authority of the Department of Anthropology of the University of Sydney and the easy style of a most readable book. . . However, it is difficult to be casual about an import price of $4.75 and to recommend the book to libraries when very few general collections can afford this much for a work of limited subject interest, no matter how good it is." Lee Ash

+ Library J 79:853 My 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by L. A. Mander
Pacific Affairs 27:378 D '54 200w

BERON, RICHARD, ed. With the Bible through the church year; prefaces on the liturgy by Mary Perkins; il. by Brothers of the Benedictine order [tr. by Isabel and Florence McHugh]. 242p $4.95 Pantheon bks.

264.02 Bible stories 53-9944

"This beautiful book takes us 'Around the year from Genesis to Apocalypse with Psalms and Texts on the Liturgy.' The Bible stories have been retold by a monk of Beuron Abbey." Cath World

"[The stories] are well told; the prefaces to the seasons and feast days are by Mary Perkins and are marked by the spiritual insight of one whose life is shot through and through by her faith and its implications; the illustrations by the Benedictine Brothers are virile, colorful, and clear cut. It would be well if this book were owned and used by every family seeking to integrate their faith into their daily life."

+ Cath World 178:320 Ja '54 130w

+ Commonweal 59:178 N 20 '53 80w

"Illustrations are graced with clarity of line and compliment the text. Invaluable for parents and teachers and children of 8-12." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 79:72 Ja 1 '54 70w

"Here is beautiful bookmaking for Catholic families to share and to treasure. . . The project takes us back to the days when monasteries made books by hand together." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 20 '53 80w

BERRALL, JULIA S., ed. Flowers in glass. 104p il $5 Studio

635.96 Floral decoration 54-5620

Photographs, some in color, of flower arrangements in glass containers. Includes only brief text, and short biographical sketches of the contributors.

Bookmark 13:232 J1 '54 10w

"Within the book there is inspiration for all flower arrangers." Helen Reber

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 20 '54 40w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1317 J1 '54 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 30 '54 40w

BERRILL, JACQUELYN. Strange nurseries; another wonder book [il. by the author]. 96p $2.50 Dodd

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of—Juvenile literature 54-6053

Brief, non-technical accounts of some of the ways, surprising, unusual, and various, in which animals and insects take care of their young. Partial contents: Fish nurseries; Frog nurseries; Spider nurseries; Bird nurseries; Pouched nurseries; True mammal nurseries.

Booklist 50:363 My 15 '54

"Recommended for natural history collections." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 16 '54 40w

"The book gives one a sense of intimacy with the animal world and doubtless many children will gain a feeling of security concerning their own well-being as they learn about the tender care that the young of other species enjoy."

B. D. Hurley

+ N Y Times p16 Je 20 '54 110w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A. C.

BERTELSEN, AAGE. October '43; tr. by Milly Lindholm and Willy Agtby; with a foreword by Sholem Asch. 246p il $3 Putnam

940.531 World war, 1939-1945—Jews. Jews in Denmark 54-5485

"A memorable month in the history of mankind, when the Nazis were foiled in their plan to kill or enslave Danish citizens who were Jewish, afforded also stirring opportunities of brotherhood and decency. Mr. Bertelsen, head of the Cathedral School and distinguished author, became a leader in the resistance group that smuggled thousands out of Denmark, into Sweden." Library J

"A true and inspiring record of courage and compassion."

+ Bookmark 13:215 Je '54 30w

"Like the phosphorescence on those midnight beaches, this story is a glowing spot in black years. It is a contribution to history and to human self-examination." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 23 '54 340w

Kirkus 22:227 Mr 15 '54 150w

"Recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 79:853 My 1 '54 120w

"The story is told by Mr. Bertelsen in a rather professorial way, which tends to dull the sharp edge of the excitement which must have surrounded this month of high adventure. One of his purposes in writing the book is to combat anti-Semitism. Surely he and the other Danes who saved their Jewish fellow citizens gave the world a truly great example of active contra-anti-Semitism which richly deserves to be spread on the record, as the author has done."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 18 '54 300w

"In reconstructing this new Northern saga, its chronicler falls short of epic style. His narrative tends to ramble and occasionally gets lost in vagueness. Nevertheless the courage of those who defied the Germans, and those whom the schoolmaster and his friends snatched from the Germans, comes shining through. In its understated and discursive manner, this little book is a monument to Denmark's gallantry." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p11 My 30 '54 300w

"Mr. Bertelsen, a Copenhagen schoolmaster, was one of the chief designers of that Jewish Dunkirk, and in this brisk, businesslike book he tells us how he and a multitude of other courageous and compassionate Danes, together with many Swedes and even a few Germans, managed to bring it off."

+ New Yorker 30:139 Je 5 '54 160w

Springf'd Republican p5C J1 4 '54 110w

BERTHOFF, ROWLAND TAPPAN. British immigrants in industrial America, 1790-1950. 296p maps $5 Harvard univ. press

325.242 British in the U.S. U.S.—Foreign population 53-6028

"A history of how English, Scottish, and Welsh immigrants have fared economically and socially in the U.S., based entirely on primary source materials. The British immigrants, as skilled workers, soon filled the higher paid jobs in textiles, iron, and steel, moving up to owning and management when other immigrants took their place. Since they possessed the same language as the native-born, they assimilated easily, and quickly leveled social barriers. A scholarly and conscientious study, which opens up an area often ignored by economic and social historians." Booklist

"This monograph is based upon a wide variety of source materials, most notable of which are the immigrant press, trade union newspapers, trade journals, and other special periodicals. It is earnestly to be hoped that other immigrant groups in this country may ultimately have histories as thorough, as free from national bias, and as revealing as this one of the British." J. B. Hedges

+ Am Hist R 59:954 J1 '54 500w

"Rowland Berthoff's British Immigrants in Industrial America fills a gap in immigrant literature all the more striking because the rest of the wall has been so thoroughly bricked up." Preston Slosson

+ Ann Am Acad 293:174 My '54 350w

Booklist 50:232 F 15 '54

Manchester Guardian p4 S 7 '54 210w

"The copious documentation, symptomatic of the book's origin in a Harvard doctoral dissertation, adds greatly to its value for students of immigration. For the general reader there is much to commend the book as well, for it is full of illustrative detail woven skillfully into the main theme." C. C. Qualey

+ New Eng Q 27:279 Je '54 650w

U ■ Quarterly Bk R 10:228 Je '54 200w

BERTON, PIERRE. Royal family. 273p $3.75 Knopf

923.142 Windsor, House of. Great Britain—Kings and rulers 53-9456

A history of England's present royal family, the Windsors, from Queen Victoria to Elizabeth II. Index.

Booklist 50:296 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by Gwen Morgan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 11 '54 250w

Reviewed by P. J. Henniker-Heaton
Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 11 '54 750w

"Full of detail, anecdote and incident, this is superior assemblage of majesties as people and rulers."

+ Kirkus 21:808 D 15 '53 200w

"A very readable and accurate picture of the British ruling family. . . University libraries may find it unnecessary as it is designed for general readers in public libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:200 F 1 '54 80w

"The flood of books about the English ruling family, like curiosity about their private lives, is no novelty. But the lively episodes in Mr. Berton's book will satisfy much curiosity and may well arouse a deeper interest in the remarkable family which has made the English throne so solid and so celebrated." Edme Seton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Mr 14 '54 650w

"Entertaining book. . . Mr. Berton has gone to great pains to confirm his material, and his book is a little classic of pioneer research. The British, he notes, expect their sovereigns to be human, but are constantly surprised when they are. He has certainly done his best to surprise them." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 7 '54 430w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN). Hay-foot, straw-foot; written and il. by Erick Berry [pseud]. 95p $2.50 Viking

54-8230

A young colonial lad, Si Cameron, tries hard to enlist, but every recruiting sergeant in General Abercrombie's army turns him down. But Si is persistent, seizes every opportunity to be helpful, and finally wins a place at the head of the army as drummer boy.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 193:84 Je '54 30w

Booklist 50:325 Ap 15 '54

"A competent, historical story, with more fun than usual." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:173 Je '54 100w

Kirkus 22:114 F 15 '54 60w

"Fast pace, simple, humorous. Will appeal to youngsters who want army stories. Recommended for ages 10 up." E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 79:782 Ap 15 '54 80w

"Here is one of Erick Berry's best books for children of twelve and under. Somewhat slight in historic content, it is so lively a picture of a Yankee boy and Yankee recruits and army life with the British, and such a good introduction to a favorite song, it cannot fail to be popular. The many bold sketches are exactly right for the spirit of the tale." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 25 '54 220w

"Humorous characters and situations enliven colonial history and social customs. The origin of 'Yankee Doodle' and the strange ways of the military are fun to read about. The illustrations add to the good humor of the story." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:62 My 15 '54 140w

BEST, HERBERT. Columbus cannon. 217p $2.50 Viking

54-4134

"In many respects the hero of this story is a 1908 Lanchester—an automobile to the uninitiated. Its ability to double for a truck saves a sugar-cane crop. The Lanchester is aided and abetted by Henrietta Sanders, her inventive and brainy brother, Archie, and their grandmother. Frequently and with much humor they come to the aid of Gil Perrine, an American boy attempting to rebuild a Jamaican plantation. He, meantime, is involved with underwater spearfishing, a hurricane, and a fifteenth-century cannon resting underwater." Sat R

"Fresh, exotic and better than average young fiction."

+ Kirkus 22:489 Ag 1 '54 210w

"It is very well written, a clever blend of sport, humor and practical business." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p8 N 14 '54 260w

BEST, HERBERT—Continued

"Teen-age boys and girls will enjoy this story of the West Indies, but Best would do well to talk to an American teen-ager soon. They do not call an allowance a remittance nor do they say 'dash it' when they mean 'darn it' or something stronger." L. T. B.

+ Sat R 37:91 N 13 '54 140w

BEST, HERBERT. Diane. 341p $3.95 Morrow 54-7101

A romantic tale of Jamaica in 1804. The master of Gramercie, a great sugar plantation, is dying. He believes his illness is caused by slow poison and suspects two people, but before he can get his evidence ready he is killed. The remainder of the novel belongs to Diane, the master's beautiful daughter, who avenges her father and takes on the running of the estate.

Booklist 50:400 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 20w

"Herbert Best is a skilful story teller. 'Diane' is an absorbing story that will appeal to everyone who can enjoy drama told with top flight edge-of-your-chair excitement." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je '54 340w

"Costume drama, with careful details of period setting, and some sidelights of locale that add flavor of authenticity."

+ Kirkus 22:205 Mr 15 '54 130w

"A story that is rich in action and more than surface deep in characterization." Carol Field

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk '54 360w

"The author, a sometime resident of Jamaica, makes this all as plausible, surely, as anyone could. He contributes a knowledgeable background of obeh magic, native psychology and social minutiae—and is perhaps at his best in brief descriptions of native ceremonies." Lewis Vogler

N Y Times p25 Je 6 '54 350w

"Not one for subtle shadings, Mr. Best paints his characters with the same flamboyant hues that color the West Indian foliage. The villain is a slaving cad, the mettlesome Diane is too good to be true, and virtue triumphs in a blaze of baroque violence. Mr. Best's informed account of Jamaican folklore helps to provide a texture of reality for Diane Moore's melodramatic progress." M. L.

Sat R 37:40 Ag 14 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p5C Jl 4 '54 40w

BEST, HERBERT. Ranger's ransom; a story of Ticonderoga; il. by Erick Berry. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75 Aladdin 53-12166

Story of the fall of Fort Ticonderoga in 1759, for grades five to eight. Cass Purdie, who runs away from the blacksmith to whom he is apprenticed, and joins Roger's Rangers, is the hero.

Booklist 50:104 N 1 '53

Kirkus 21:581 S 1 '53 120w

"The book's military interest is slight because the French and Indian War was closing as the story begins. The characterization is sketchy and disappointing, especially in the case of Major Rogers. Underemphasis of dramatic situations and a lack of broad historical background leave considerable to be desired." M. P. A.

Sat '36:72 N 14 '53 110w

Wis Lib Bul 49:623 N '53

BEST plays of 1952-1953 [the Burns Mantle yearbook] ed. by Louis Kronenberger [il. with photographs and with drawings by Hirschfeld]. (V36) 374p $4.50 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections (20-21432)

The theater yearbook edited by Burns Mantle for many years has been taken over for 1952-1953 by Louis Kronenberger, dramatic critic of

Time. Contains synopses and excerpts from Broadway plays; reports on the London and Paris theaters; photographs; drawings by Hirschfeld; notes on outstanding, non-hit plays; necrology; and indexes. The ten plays included are: Bernadine; Dial "M" for murder; The climate of Eden; The love of four colonels; The crucible; The emperor's clothes; Picnic; Wonderful town; My angels.

Booklist 50:163 D 15 '53

"The Best Plays must not be considered much an anthology as a reference book and a very valuable and factual one." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Cath World 178:397 F '54 210w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 78:2222 D 15 '53 60w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 29 '53 220w

"Since Louis Kronenberger is one of our most intelligent drama critics, and Al Hirschfeld one of our most perceptive caricaturists, it should come as no surprise that 'The Best Plays of 1952-1953' is an improvement over past volumes in the series they have taken over." H. H.

+ Sat R 36:33 N 7 '53 270w

Wis Lib Bul 50:27 Ja '54

BEST plays of 1953-1954 [the Burns Mantle yearbook] ed. by Louis Kronenberger [il. with photographs and with drawings by Hirschfeld]. (V37) 433p $5 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections (20-21432)

"The second volume of this annual to appear under the Kronenberger editorship is uniform with its predecessor. Plays selected for condensation in this issue are: The Caine mutiny court-martial, In the summer house, The confidential clerk, Take a giant step, The teahouse of the August moon, The immoralist, Tea and sympathy, The girl on the Via Flaminia, The golden apple, and The magic and the loss." Booklist

Booklist 51:148 D 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 7 '54 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk '54 31

BEST science fiction stories: 1953; ed. by Everett F. Bleiler and T. E. Dikty; with a guest introd. by Alfred Bester. (V5) 279p $3.50 Fell

Short stories—Collections (49-10461)

Contents: The trematode, by Alfred Bester; The fly, by Arthur Porges; Ararat, by Zenna Henderson; Counter-transference, by W. F. Temple; The conqueror, by Mark Clifton; Machine, by J. W. Jakes; The middle of the week after next, by Murray Leinster; The dreamer, by Alfred Coppel; The moon is green, by Fritz Leiber; I am nothing, by E. F. Russell; Command performance, by W. M. Miller; Survival, by John Wyndham; Game for blondes, by J. D. MacDonald; The girls from earth, by F. M. Robinson; Lover, when you're near me, by Richard Matheson; Fast falls the eventide, by E. F. Russell.

Booklist 50:147 D 1 '53

"One of the few rewarding anthologies of the year, with particular emphasis this time on the newer writers rather than the Grand Old Names." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 1 '53 220w

"Close students of the field will possibly be surprised (as I was) to note that well over 50 per cent of these 'bests' have been contributed by youngsters who have been writing science-fiction for five years or less." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p53 N 29 '53 180w

"Annual anthology does a fine job." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat '37:61 F 20 '54 20w

BESTOR, ARTHUR EUGENE. Educational wastelands. 226p $3.50 Univ. of Ill. press
370.973 Public schools—U.S. Education—U.S. 53-9761
For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Earnest and sustained polemical writing such as this can sometimes be rather strident on the ear but fortunately in Mr. Bestor's case the argument is leavened by grace and humor; indeed, the way he writes is one of his best arguments for the sort of education he wants to restore to our children. This reviewer's only complaint is a minor one, the lack of an index." Mortimer Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 F 28 '54 360w

"With few exceptions, Dr. Bestor is rather calm and rather specific in making these charges although sometimes he goes beyond his evidence to draw rather startling conclusions. Basically, however, he does a good job of presenting his view that education needs reform, that the educationists have taken over, and that progressive education has turned into 'regressive education.'" G. E. A.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 31 '54 210w

"A rough-riding, vigorously controversial book of general interest. . . . Although the book ranges widely among a variety of topics and recommends remedies for current ills, its most interesting chapters are the sharply critical ones."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:81 Mr '54 240w

BETTENCOURT MACHADO, JOSE. Machado of Brazil; the life and times of Machado de Assis. 246p $3.75 Bramerica, 505 5th Av, N.Y. 17

B or 92 Machado de Assis, Joaquim Maria 53-4205

"This biography is the first book-length work in English on the enigmatic Brazilian mulatto who became one of the great ironists of the nineteenth century. . . . What manner of man could have written, in 1880, a book ('Epitaph') that would inspire comparison by American critics, seventy-two years later, with works by so irreconcilable a literary crew as Blake, Cervantes, Compton-Burnett, France, Gogol, Hemingway, Huxley, Marquand, Montaigne, Montherlant, Pirandello, Poe, Proust, Sterne, Svevo, Voltaire, Waugh and Whitman? In response, the biographer gives us an individual whose élan vital and frein vital were both titanic, with consequences favorable to literature and disastrous to Machado." N Y Times

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 29 '54 230w

"'Machado of Brazil' is not, and does not purport to be, a definitive work. The important thing is that now one need not learn Portuguese to satisfy, at least in part, curiosity about the Brazilian master." W. L. Grossman
+ N Y Times p12 N 22 '53 450w

BETTINA, pseud. See Ehrlich, B. B.

BETTS, MRS DORIS. Gentle insurrection, and other stories. 274p $3.50 Putnam

54-8709

Twelve short stories in each of which a "gentle insurrection" in the life of the central character provides the motivation.

"Here is a book, in many ways one of the most distinguished of the year, which at once exhibits an extremely polished professionalism as well as a youthful author's groping experiment. It is remarkable to consider that the short stories in The Gentle Insurrection are the work of a young woman who is still a college undergraduate and that some of these stories, and by no means the least skillful, first appeared in what is usually a dead end of creative effort, a college magazine." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 179:392 Ag '54 320w

"These 12 stories by Doris Betts are not at all typical of standard magazine fiction. Indeed, only four of them have previously been printed in magazines. Yet all of them deserve attentive reading, as fine, quiet, perceptive pieces, marked by a strong feeling for character, an enlivening strain of good humor, and an admirable technical control." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 5 '54 300w

"A subdued, but not necessarily sombre, spectacle, honestly observed."

+ Kirkus 22:270 Ap 15 '54 120w

"The author writes smoothly and well; her delineation of character rings true, it seems to me. . . . Recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1057 Je 1 '54 130w

"Doris Betts' collection of short stories comes preceded by a considerable reputation; as the winner of the first Prize Contest sponsored by G. P. Putnam's and the University of North Carolina, it carries, as well as the promise inherent in every young writer's first book, an assurance of unusual excellence. . . . As readers, we are grateful to Mrs. Betts, to the committee of judges who selected her work, and to the publishers and university who sponsored her prize, and we look to them all for more." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 30 '54 550w

"In her first book, a collection of twelve short stories, Doris Betts, a young North Carolinian, proves herself to be already a sturdy professional writer, a master of the short story form, and a candidate for an important position among those concerned with serious and perceptive reporting in literary form of the Southern small town and Southern people." Robert Tallant

+ N Y Times p4 My 30 '54 450w

"Here we have twelve fine stories, free from banality of thought and commonplace theme, exploring deep dimensions of experience with a mature authority. Mrs. Betts excels in the creation of charged atmospheres, subtle tensions, and unexpressed anxieties between well-meaning people who would like to understand one another, but are hopelessly divided by our human isolation." Evelyn Eaton

+ Sat R 37:14 Jl 10 '54 600w

BEUCLER, ANDRE. Last of the Bohemians; twenty years with Léon-Paul Fargue; with an introd. by Archibald MacLeish [tr. by Geoffrey Sainsbury]. 237p $3.75 Sloane

B or 92 Fargue, Léon Paul 54-10608

A biography of the French Dadaist poet, Léon-Paul Fargue, who was born in Paris in 1876 and died there in 1947. The author, friend and disciple of the poet, was born in Russia in 1898.

"This book is a tender and simple memoir of the French poet, Leon-Paul Fargue, written by his best friend and the inseparable companion of the last twenty years of his life."

+ Kirkus 22:519 Ag 1 '54 210w

New Yorker 30:194 N ■ '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 21 '54 160w

"This is an affectionate tribute to the older man and an admiring record of his conversation and of his independent life. . . . Archibald MacLeish, in an excellent introduction, points to the essential weakness of 'The Last of the Bohemians': fascinating as it is to listen to a man who 'once did see Shelley plain,' who had known Mallarmé, Ravel, Henri de Régnier, and other heroes of the departing nineteenth century or of the nascent twentieth, it is also disappointing not to have a single quotation from his poetry, a single comment on it." Henri Peyre

+ — Sat ■ 37:22 N 13 '54 700w

BEWLEY, MARIUS. Complex fate: Hawthorne, Henry James and some other American writers; with an introd. and two interpolations by F. R. Leavis. 248p $5 Grove

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Hawthorne, Nathaniel. James, Henry 54-8581

"Mr Bewley's main concern is with the proper tradition of American literature and its relation to the European tradition. It is largely from this point of view that he considers Hawthorne and Henry James, their relation to each other, to the American tradition, and to Europe. Some subtle and provocative discussion of both these writers emerges against the background view that Cooper, Melville, Hawthorne, and James form a tradition in the American novel too little respected to-day." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p7 D 31 '52 210w

"Mr Bewley is a young American critic who has worked with Dr F. R. Leavis in Cambridge and has learned much from Dr Leavis's method and approach. His concern with literature is serious and responsible, and his criticism displays a fine intellectual rigour." David Daiches
+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 16 '52 360w

"There is a great deal of surplus wordage and the over-elaborate kind of critical definition that is the curse of our 'little magazines.' These essays, as a matter of fact, were written for the English little mag Scrutiny, published at Cambridge. Their verbosity tends to smother some good critical insights and make of the total a rather inharmonious blur."

— + Nation 178:311 Ap 10 '54 280w

Reviewed by Graham Hough
New Statesman & Nation 44:696 D 6 '52 1000w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 28 '54 40w

New Yorker 30:155 S 11 '54 180w

"Although comparisons between James and Hawthorne have been legion, the present volume of essays serves a useful critical function through its detailed analyses of novels which reveal comparable tensions of faith and fear, of hope for America and criticism of its deficiencies. . . . Passing to other genres, Mr. Bewley in stimulating if unduly petulant fashion rebukes H. L. Mencken and Kenneth Burke, both of them for esthetic insensitivity and Burke also for the Marxist slant of his criticism." E. A. Bloom

+ — Sat R 37:31 S 4 '54 360w

Reviewed by J. M. Cohen
Spec p50 Ja 9 '53 280w

BEYLE, MARIE HENRI (STENDHAL, pseud). Private diaries of Stendhal; ed. and tr. by Robert Sage. 570p il $7.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-11160

"The journal which Stendhal began in 1801 at eighteen and continued intermittently until 1823 was published in the original French in 1937. Here, Sage provides in a facile and competent translation a major portion of the journal up to 1814. This he has filled out with hitherto untranslated letters to give fuller treatment of Stendhal's formative years." Library J

"The surprisingly spontaneous, naive, and yet urbane entries of these notebooks are the raw material from which he drew his later works and is of course a valuable addition to any understanding of the novelist. For devotees, it will be a priceless piece; for students, it will have a lasting reference value."
+ Kirkus 22:656 S 15 '54 210w

"For the general reader rather than the scholar." Harold Lancour
Library J 79:2205 N 15 '54 130w

"These diaries are a brilliant record of society in the Napoleonic epoch, and of a very peculiar kind of sensibility. Young Marie-Henri Beyle had really no political convictions."

. . . The present translation is in the colloquial modern idiom which the young diarist himself helped to originate—no rhetoric, no eloquence!—and Mr. Sage's editing job seems excellent." Maxwell Geismar
+ Nation 179:535 D 18 '54 800w

"A French youngster, just turned eighteen, began a diary on April 18, 1801. . . . He left us a series of candid pictures, extending over more than 2,000 pages, which record the perennial spirit of youth, its follies and glories, and, at the same time, an exciting fragment of life in the Napoleonic age. It is a document which for human interest equals the journals of young Boswell, but which for insight and depth rests in a class by itself." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 21 '54 1350w

Reviewed by Andre Maurois
N Y Times p1 N 21 '54 1100w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden
New Yorker 30:142 D 18 '54 2200w

"I must confess that until I read his diaries I did not know that Stendhal was such a fool. His self-revelation makes me wonder about the accepted critical evaluations of his work. . . . Can the works of Stendhal really be as good as we thought? I look again at 'Le Rouge et Le Noir' and I know that my answer must be Yes. Somehow this young fool grew up to write some great books, passionate and true. But the publication of his journal does not make the process much clearer." Morris Bishop

Sat R 37:22 D 11 '54 800w

Time 64:106 N 22 '54 1050w

BHATTACHARYA, BHABANI. He who rides a tiger. 245p $3 Crown

54-11175

"The story of Kalo, a village blacksmith; of Kalo's tender love for his daughter Chandra Lekha, and of how Kalo defeated the famine and saved his daughter by the adoption of a monumental lie." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) By the author of Music for Mohini (Book Review Digest 1952).

Booklist 51:132 N 15 '54

"This is more intricate than the previous book, and less innocent, but as explicit in its picture of a foreign land."
+ Kirkus 22:591 S 1 '54 210w

"Recommended heartily for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 79:1588 S 15 '54 90w

"How Kalo finally manages to climb down from the tiger's back and tweak the tiger's tail if not exactly destroy it, makes a fine and exciting climax to a book notable for its vivid characterizations and its burning compassion for all suffering." Margaret Parton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 24 '54 600w

"It is a good story, and Bhattacharya has told it exceedingly well. Kalo and his delightful daughter are excellently depicted. If the author is not so successful with the merchant Motichand that is because the Motichands of this world are always hard to draw. He makes the 'miracle' convincing; he gives Kalo depth and reality. Altogether a gay, hilarious, devilish, tragic and compassionate book." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p5 O 24 '54 600w

"Bhattacharya's writing craft is clearly a product of the same fermenting forces that have shaped his moral viewpoint. The pronounced moralizing note evident throughout the novel precludes him from being a realistic writer in our sense. But social though his theme is he is yet not a tendentious writer. His style and attitude might have a resemblance to the early Upton Sinclair except for a quality of incantation that goes straight back to the scriptural poetry of the Hindus, and from which Bhattacharya is still trying to free himself. One can only hope he will for he has important things to say about his country and his people and he has his heart in the right place." Joseph Hitrec

Sat R 37:34 N 20 '54 550w

BIANCOLLI, LOUIS LEOPOLD, ed. Mozart handbook; a guide to the man and his music. 629p il $7.50 World pub.

B or 92 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus 54-8174

A symposium of musical and biographical material on Mozart. The papers include work of such contemporaries as his father and the librettist Da Ponte. Subjects considered are Mozart's childhood, the influence of his father, the women in his life, his letters, his later life and his death. Classified list of Mozart's works. Chronology. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:167 D 15 '54

"A must for all Mozart lovers."

+ Kirkus 22:651 S 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:2336 D 1 '54 90w

"Mr. Biancolli was animated by the conviction that Mozart towers higher than ever today as not only one of the greatest composers of history but one of the greatest creative geniuses. The scope of his accomplishment in a short life continues to stagger the imagination. The truth is that no single book can quite encompass it appropriately. . . For an over-all view of Mozart and his music, this handbook has considerable value." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p4 N 28 '54 750w

"The book is illustrated, indexed, and appended to a fare-thee-well."

+ New Yorker 30:205 D 11 '54 90w

"The 'Mozart Handbook' would take a fairly big hand to lug around to the opera but, if perused at home, should furnish many pleasant and educational hours for the opera and concert lovers." John Haverstick

+ Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 40w

BIANCOLLI, LOUIS LEOPOLD, and PEYSER, HERBERT FRANCIS. Masters of the orchestra. 481p $6 Putnam

927.8 Musicians 54-7704

Biographical and critical studies of fourteen of the classical composers whose works are most often heard on modern orchestral programs. Included are: Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Berlioz, Wagner, Brahms, Tschai-kowsky, Richard Strauss, Prokofieff.

Booklist 50:378 Je 1 '54

"Many improvements in today's world of music can be made through a study of history, of composers and their works. Mr. Biancolli's book is another fine collection that will doubtless make a valuable contribution to this end." Harold Rogers

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '54 550w

"Fine reading."

+ Kirkus 22:94 F 1 '54 100w

"The contributors are all skilled journalists and know how to write as well as how to dig up the facts, but it would perhaps not be too unfair to single out Mr. Peyser's gracious, flexible prose." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:776 Ap 15 '54 140w

"Masters of the Orchestra has a strong case, I think, but not one based on inclusiveness, ease of reference, or even consistency of quality. The defining, and sole distinction of the book lies in the fact that nine of its fourteen divisions preserve and make readily accessible essays whose matter and manner reflect the breadth, humanism, and scrupulously precise statement characteristic of the scholarship of the late Herbert F. Peyser. . . In them the essential personality of each composer is captured, possessed, communicated in terms of the objective facts of his life and his music." J. H.

Sat R 37:25 Jl 3 '54 400w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Holy Bible in brief; King James text; ed. and arranged by James Reeves; with a foreword by Angus Dun, bishop of the diocese of Washington of the Protestant Episcopal church [Eng title: Bible in brief]. 302p $4 Messner

220.5

54-10593

A chronological arrangement of the Bible, with the material divided into chapters, each chapter appropriately named. In the New Testament the Gospels have been combined to form a continuous narrative containing the teachings of Jesus. The second section of the New Testament chronicles the beginnings of the Christian church. Index of references, and a general index.

Booklist 51:97 N 1 '54

Reviewed by John Evans

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 21 '54 300w

Christian Century 71:1303 O 27 '54 240w

"Many attempts have been made to make the Bible more readable for today's reader. This condensation and re-ordering of the Biblical material has much to recommend it and is, perhaps, more successful than most."

Kirkus 22:702 O 1 '54 210w

"Recommended for all libraries." E. H. Weeks

+ Library J 79:1585 S 15 '54 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 15 '54 300w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p39 S 26 '54 60w

"A 300-page Bible in standard library format makes an attractive and useful book. Its concise continuous narrative may be read 'as easily as a novel,' its publishers point out. Of course this has always been so, even of the full and more difficult King James text, as witness the enormous grist it has provided for the fiction and motion picture mills. Distilled to its present form it will probably be an even more fruitful source book." D. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 28 '54 300w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Inspirational reader; selections from the Bible for everyday use; comp. by William Oliver Stevens and an editorial panel: Phillips P. Elliott [and others]. 253p $3.50 Doubleday

220.52

54-5166

An anthology of passages from the King James version of the Bible arranged by subjects, for easily found guidance for spiritual needs.

Bookmark 13:131 Mr '54 20w

"A perfect bedside volume." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 F 21 '54 50w

"The value of such a book—when the selections are competently chosen, appropriately classified and attractively printed, as they are in this case—is that readers are attracted and are helped to find things they might otherwise miss. The reasons given for using the unrevised 1611 version seem entirely inadequate." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:495 Ap 21 '54 170w

Kirkus 21:792 D 15 '53 60w

BICE, CLARE. Great island; il. by [the author]. 103p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

54-1610

A mystery story about buried treasure in Newfoundland. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 50:363 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 1 '54 120w

"Clare Bice will make Newfoundland a place well known to boys and girls who relish mystery and excitement in their reading." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 160w

BICE, CLARE—Continued

"The author, a Canadian artist, conveys the character of the Newfoundland coast in many superb drawings, as well as in his vividly written text." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:173 Je '54 100w

Kirkus 22:154 Mr 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:709 Ap 15 '54 20w

"Fine illustrations by this famous Canadian artist consisting of a frontispiece in color and thirty-five wash drawings in black and white provide the proper atmosphere and give the book distinction. Recommended for all libraries for 9-12 year olds." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 79:1236 Je 15 '54 80w

"It's a good, rousing tale and a solid contribution to the 'Peoples and Places' shelf." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 25 '54 160w

+ Sat ■ 37:62 My 15 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:183 Jl '54

BIDNEY, DAVID. Theoretical anthropology. 506p $8.50 Columbia univ. press

572 Anthropology 53-12098

"The explorer, the field-ethnographer, the museum expert and the archeologist have not always been fully aware of the assumptions underlying their research projects or of the implications of their own findings. It has been the job of theoretically-minded anthropologists to systematize the data collected by their more pedestrian colleagues and to discern promising generalizations inherent in these data. Now in this book, a trained philosopher applies his special skills to the writings of these theoretical anthropologists." Library J

Reviewed by R. F. Spencer

Am Anthropol 56:1107 D '54 1650w

"This work will be relished by every thoughtful social scientist. . . Unfortunately, Bidney's volume is not quite what the title seems to promise; it actually constitutes a collection of essays many of which have been published before in widely read journals. Even as 'Essays in Theoretical Anthropology,' it is, however, not so carefully edited as the significance of both the topic and the author's contributions to it would warrant. With some additional effort, many fatiguing repetitions could have been avoided, making this a shorter and more readable book." E. K. Francis

+ — Am J Soc 60:99 Jl '54 1150w

Reviewed by Ernest Manheim

Am Soc R 19:813 D '54 550w

"The general public, unfamiliar with the intricacies of anthropological scholarship, may find this book somewhat difficult to follow. Appreciative readers will be found, however, among graduate students, social scientists, psychologists, and historians of ideas. Dr. Bidney does a particularly good job of demonstrating to the as yet unconverted 'practical man' and 'man of action' that ideas and theories are of primary importance for the world of social reality." Joseph Bram

+ Library J 78:1228 Jl '53 250w

"A perusal of this preliminary and rather personal, but resourceful, attempt to think through the assumptions of American anthropology is quite likely to force many a practitioner of that discipline to look at it again and with new insights."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:71 Mr '54 240w

BIGLAND, MRS EILEEN. Indomitable Mrs Trollope. 255p $3.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Trollope, Mrs Frances (Milton)

54-6102

Biography of Frances Trollope, mother of the better-known English author, Anthony Trollope. Beginning with Frances' marriage at the age of twenty-nine in 1808 the course of her tempestuous life is followed to her death in 1863. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:339 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 25 '54 300w

"The extraordinary life of Frances Milton is recorded here with both authority and vivacity and presents a figure of unusual interest. . . A portrait, which reflects the managerial talents and lively interests of a woman whose presence and personality should prove exciting reading for many."

+ Kirkus 22:142 F 15 '54 200w

"The Indomitable Mrs Trollope is readable and vivacious, and if there is not a dull page this is by no means merely because Fanny Trollope is such an attractive person to write about." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 4 '53 240w

"The Indomitable Mrs. Trollope reads easily and is, without being anywhere very searching, an entertaining account of a courageous but irresponsible flibbertigibbet who blundered into writing a sensational best-seller." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 178:365 Ap 24 '54 750w

"Miss Bigland likes her indomitable Mrs. Trollope and understands her. Though she has tried for and achieved a lighter kind of biography, her Mrs. Trollope is the same as the Stebbins Mrs. Trollope and the Smalley Mrs. Trollope and the Mrs. Trollope that lady herself drew so unintentionally so well. Now as then, she is too indomitable to trifle with." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 25 '54 300w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 25 '54 800w

"Eileen Bigland's new biography, 'The Indomitable Mrs. Trollope,' will not lay the ghost of Mrs. Trollope's reputation as a shrew. It is, however, a competent and sympathetic portrait of a very game old dame." H. B. Woodward

+ Sat R 37:18 Ap 17 '54 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p816 D 18 '53 2650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:134 My '54

BIKERMAN, JACOB JOSEPH, and others. Foams: theory and industrial applications. 347p il $10 Reinhold

541.375 [541.3452] Foam

53-8705

"Covers chemical and physical properties of foams, applications of foams, and chemical destruction of foams." (Chem & Eng N) Indexes.

Chem & Eng N 31:4468 O 26 '53 20w

"The field which forms the basis for this book is one in which empiricism is rampant and in which there is certainly not less art than science. Furthermore, aside from the empirical character of much of the literature there is also available a goodly amount of misinformation. Dr. Bikerman has had extensive experience with the scientific and technical literature and he has shown the ability to evaluate such material critically." N. Hackerman

+ Chem Eng 61:333 Ag '54 450w

"It is addressed primarily to graduate chemists, but it will be of interest to anyone not a specialist in foams who has a theoretical or practical interest in the subject." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:386 F 15 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:89 N '53

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. House called Morven; its role in American history, 1701-1954; with an essay on the architecture by George B. Tatum. 206p il $3 Princeton univ. press

974.967 Morven, Princeton, New Jersey. Stockton family 54-6074

"A history of the Morven home in Princeton, N.J., and of its various owners from 1701 to 1954. Among its owners have been many men distinguished in public affairs such as Richard Stockton who signed the Declaration of Independence and Walter E. Edge, former senator and United States Ambassador to France." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Writing that evinces scholarship, watered with quotation, is a delight in itself, and Mr. Bill has brilliantly rendered the stately progress of life in and out of Morven through its two hundred and fifty years. He has brought history home to us as a warm and living thing." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '54 500w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 11 '54 40w

BINGHAM, JOHN MICHAEL WARD. Third skin. 237p $2.75 Dodd

54-8496

Mystery story.

"The tale is one of the distinctest and most quietly distinguished of the year." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 4 '54 220w

"Two earlier and cruder novels have shown Bingham's unusual skill in complex characterization; here that skill is backed by greatly improved writing and construction to produce his best book to date and a highly appealing wry study in crime and punishment." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 270w

"The book is a sensitively realistic view of middle-class England and its criminal element, using suspense without mystery and a good deal of writing skill." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '54 80w

"Unusual, also good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:32 Jl 17 '54 10w

Times [London] Lit Sup p469 Jl 23 '54 150w

BINGHAM, JONATHAN BREWSTER. Shirt-sleeve diplomacy: Point 4 in action. 303p 44 Day

338.91 Technical assistance 54-5880

The author, son of former Senator Hiram Bingham, was deputy administrator of the Point Four program from 1951 to 1953. In this book he describes his experiences and discusses the future of the program. Index.

Booklist 50:252 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:215 Je '54 30w

"In this book as nowhere else one can find in readable form the essential factors regarding the purpose, the organization, the operation and the needs of the Point IV program. These are things that the church member and the intelligent citizen need to know." R. A. Dudley

+ Christian Century 71:432 Ap 7 '54 450w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 15 '54 230w

Commonweal 59:654 Ap 2 '54 50w

Foreign Affairs 32:675 Jl '54 20w

"Point Four in action is impressive, and this clear informal and informative interpretation of its role can point up its importance for the general reader."

+ Kirkus 21:814 D 15 '53 160w

"Highly recommended for public and college libraries." Felix Hirsch

+ Library J 79:445 Mr 1 '54 150w

Nation 178:311 Ap 10 '54 190w

"The present volume, better than anything else that is likely to be written, sets forth the scope, the method, the problems, and the underlying philosophy of this continuing governmental effort. . . Indeed, quite apart from Point 4, the book can be read as a fascinating case study in the art of public administration." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 14 '54 850w

"An excellent report. . . If all goes well, a similar report some years hence should be even more enlightening. But even now his survey of Point Four accomplishments makes exciting reading, as well as necessary homework for thoughtful Americans willing to understand the new world slowly unfolding in the broad underdeveloped areas of Asia, Africa and South America." Chester Bowles

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 7 '54 1250w

"The fullest and most authoritative account of the program yet published."

+ New Yorker 30:137 Ap 17 '54 200w

"Jonathan Bingham's 'Shirt-Sleeve Diplomacy' makes a timely appearance, indeed, no one interested in the world's welfare should fail to read it. The published works on Point 4 are numerous (Bingham lists the important ones), but no other single volume, to my knowledge, excels 'Shirt-Sleeve Diplomacy' in telling the Point 4 story from the time of its troubled inception, through the five years of its rugged but rewarding development, to its present ambiguous existence." C. R. Decker

+ Sat R 37:18 Je 5 '54 900w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 600w

"In his excellent, thought-provoking account of the Point Four program, Mr. Bingham draws heavily on the experience acquired when he served with the former Technical Cooperation Administration. The scope of the book, like the program itself, is worldwide."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:170 Je '54 280w

Reviewed by W. L. Thorp

Yale R n 43:599 summer '54 170w

BINGHAM, MILLICENT (TODD). Emily Dickinson; a revelation. 109p $3 Harper

B or 92 Dickinson, Emily 54-12227

A study of a collection of drafts of letters written by Emily Dickinson to her father's oldest friend, Judge Lord of Salem.

Booklist 51:150 D 1 '54

Kirkus 22:627 S 1 '54 170w

"Lovers of Emily Dickinson's poetry will not need this 'revelation' to keep them re-reading the work of the perplexing poet of Amherst. . . But the many readers who long ago decided that Emily Dickinson was 'in love with love' will not be confused by the appearance of one more object of Emily's affection. This small book is not for the general reader but for the student and scholar." K. T. Willis

Library J 79:2096 N 1 '54 90w

"The question which most perplexed Mrs. Bingham could have been answered in only one way. To some, the publication of those intimate records may seem like profanation. But to have destroyed them, or even withheld them longer, would have been infinitely greater profanation. Emily Dickinson is beyond the need of reticence. She belongs to the world." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 14 '54 650w

"I would not undervalue Mrs. Bingham's contribution to our knowledge of the poet. It is authentic and it does seem to write finis to speculation concerning the identity of Emily Dickinson's 'lover.' But the great charm of this book is in the character of Mrs. Bingham herself, and its great interest in the people she encounters during a quest for something that, in the end, never was found, and, from the beginning, never needed to be found." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p18 N 7 '54 750w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 28 '54 90w

"Mrs. Bingham's purpose is to present a slim packet of Dickinson letters, and these are in themselves sufficiently arresting. One only

BINGHAM, M. T.—Continued
regrets the sixty years during which exaggerated feelings of delicacy led Mrs. Bingham and her mother to withhold the letters from publication. . . . But they do not reveal anything which implies a major revision in our thinking about Emily Dickinson's life or her writing." Richard Chase
Sat R 37:19 N 20 '54 800w

BINNS, ARCHIE. Sea pup; il. by Robert Candy.
215p $2.50 Duell; Little

Seals (animals)—Legends and stories
54-5113

Clint Barlow, who loved the sea and everything about it, lived on the shore of Puget Sound. On one of his "exploring" trips Clint rescued a baby seal and raised it. Buster became Clint's friend and his pet, and paved the way for Clint to begin his life work ■ an oceanographer. Ages 12 to 14.

Booklist 50:282 Mr 15 '54
Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"An unusually lively and amusing pet story, for Buster was an intelligent animal and ■ born clown. The human characters, too, are well drawn and the background of Clint's absorbing interest in sea life enriches the book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:96 Ap '54 90w

Kirkus 22:113 F 15 '54 100w

"An excellent story containing humor, adventure, and excellent characterization." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 79:564 Mr 15 '54 80w

"Mr. Binns grew up in this fascinating region; the background for the lone boy exploring in his boat is memorable. He writes with a fine sense of a boy's emotions, with humor, and with just enough scientific detail to prove Clint's ability. . . . Very good reading for ages nine to twelve, and with a point of view very healthy for those poorer readers in junior high, actually of Clint's own age. Large type and amusing chapter headings." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54 210w

"Mr. Binns' prose is realistic and clear. The incidents are exciting and the development of Clint's and Buster's personalities admirably done. Recommended especially for animal-lovers and out-of-door fans." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p33 Je 6 '54 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:141 My '54

BINNS, LEONARD ELLIOTT ELLIOTT. See Elliott-Binns, L. E.

BIRD, BRANDON, pseud. of GEORGE EVANS and KAY EVANS. Hawk watch. 200p $2.75
Dodd

54-6822

Mystery story.

"All in all not only Brand Bird's best novel thus far but an enterprise soundly calculated to raise your weariest hackle. It is thin on mystery but savage with uncertainties and as neatly sharpened as a nice knife-edge." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ap 25 '54 140w

"Much the best book yet by the Brandon Bird team." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p28 My 2 '54 50w

"Nice novelty number." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:31 J1 10 '54 20w

BIRDWOOD, CHRISTOPHER BROMHEAD
BIRDWOOD, 2d baron. India and Pakistan a continent decides [Eng title: Continent decides]. 315p il $4.50 Praeger

954.09 India—Politics and government.
Pakistan—Politics and government. Kashmir—Politics and government [54-672]

"Lord Birdwood's volume setting out primarily to present the problems, interests and inherent strengths and weaknesses of contemporary India and Pakistan after six years of partition, is a combination of personal, nostalgic reminiscence, hard facts and statistics, opinions and comment. The author is one of a family that for several generations occupied prominent and responsible positions in the English colonial service in India." N Y Times

Bookmark 14:59 D '54 30w

"A sound, sincere, statesmanlike study. . . . Highly recommended for students of India. Invaluable for reference libraries." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1306 J1 '54 180w

"The one difficulty presented by the book is that it presupposes in the reader a thorough knowledge of Indian affairs for many years preceding the partition. Aside from this, the volume is an invaluable compendium of first-hand information on contemporary Indian and Pakistani problems and personalities. Permeated throughout with the warmth of his affection for the land where he grew up and spent most of his active life, and for its peoples, the author's presentation and conclusions are none the less singularly fair-minded and impersonal." H. H. Harte

+ N Y Times p12 S 12 '54 460w

"There is no attempt at a chronological record but rather a series of essays, 'sometimes fact, sometimes theory, sometimes just random impressions from a diary,' and always flavoured with agreeable sincerity and anecdote. The reader will be wise to turn first to the section on Kashmir which forms the key to the book. Here Lord Birdwood, with a quarter-century's service in the Indian army and the impressions of a very recent visit in mind, writes with especial authority, giving us what is probably the best short account we have of the Kashmir struggle." C. H. F.

+ Spec p274 Mr 5 '54 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 22 '54 750w

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). Martín de Porres, hero [il. by Jean Charlot]. 120p $2.50
Houghton

B or 92 Martín de Porres—Juvenile literature
53-10992

The story of Martín de Porres, Spanish-Negro Dominican lay brother of sixteenth-century Lima, Peru, who died in 1639, and was beatified in 1837. For grades five to eight.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 60w

Booklist 51:46 S 15 '54

"Brother Martin's remarkable life and personality are given vivid and moving treatment by the author, and the artist's powerful illustrations add to the book's great distinction."

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 14 '54 220w

"Martin comes alive because the author identifies herself so completely with her hero and all the constructive things he sought to do. Mrs. Bishop presents here a series of dramatic scenes that neither teen-agers nor their parents would soon forget." E. S. S.

+ Commonweal 61:295 D 10 '54 260w

"This is an inspiring biography with fine bookmaking and some of Charlot's best pictures. Good reading for anyone but, as a Christmas gift, particularly appropriate for Catholic boys and girls from nine up." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:439 D '54 200w

Kirkus 22:436 J1 15 '54 180w

"Mrs. Bishop tells simply and forcefully her story of 'a tough, spiritual giant who towers above average mankind.' Charlot's many pictures are superb. The bold line and fine colors of end papers and jacket are memorable. The varied patterns, sculptural power, and religious symbolism of the text pictures are among his best work." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 3 '54 350w

"Rarely are biographies so eloquent and moving. Mrs. Bishop's life story of this Dominican lay brother who was inclined to put charity before obedience is poignant and timely. Jean Charlot's bold halftone drawings add the final touch of distinction." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times pt 2 p 12 N 14 '54 160w

Reviewed by H. G. Jefferson

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 28 '54 100w

"Children of all faiths will find this an interesting, alive story of a great human being." A. B.

+ Sat R 37:87 N 13 '54 180w

BISHOP, CURTIS KENT. Fighting quarterback. 208p $2 Steck

54-12513

"Jim Corson, combat marine, discharged when discovered to be under age, returns to high school in the hope his football ability will earn him a college scholarship. His ruthless devotion to the scholarship dream almost ruins things, but Jim wakes up in time." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 N 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54 50w

"Although Mr. Bishop claims that Jim was a good marine, one wonders how he survived two and one-half years with the Marines, where teamwork is learned early. Nevertheless, the book makes for good reading." J. D. Savercool

+ — N Y Times p38 N 21 '54 100w

Reviewed by D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 14 '54 20w

BISHOP, CURTIS KENT. Hero at halfback. 187p $2 Steck

53-12652

A high school football story. It shows the development and readjustment of a good player who moved from a city to a small town, and had to meet difficulties before he could be accepted.

Kirkus 21:635 S 15 '53 90w

"There is plenty of football in the story and the book, though not outstanding, will be enjoyed by sports fans." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 79:75 Ja 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by I. T. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p20 N 15 '53 20w

Reviewed by D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 15 '53 70w

BISHOP, CURTIS KENT. Larry leads off. 149p $2 Steck

54-6831

"The manager of a Little League team presents the problem of an indifferent teammate on a team fighting to win a second season championship." Library J

"Larry's second year (see Larry of Little League) with his little league team has its concurrent complications, but they are of a contrived variety and expressed in annoyingly stilted English."

Kirkus 22:233 Ap 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:710 Ap 15 '54 20w

"Interesting primarily because it goes outside baseball for its basic story, using the game as a form of psychotherapy on a boy whose dad is missing in Korea." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 80w

BISHOP, LEONARD. Creep into thy narrow bed. 486p $3.95 Dial press

54-7124

Adam Michaels, a young and ambitious actor, in his pursuit of money, becomes involved in the evil doings of an abortion racket.

"It would be unfair to say that Mr. Bishop has written nothing but a crime story. . . The author respects his people and, in spite of their melodramatic machinations, makes them come to life. He has an eye for the grotesque, and knows how to relieve his somber theme with patches of humor. In general, he keeps us reading. And yet one feels that the underlying honesty of the story is impaired by a weakness for the sentimental—underneath the oil slick runs the milk of human kindness." David Dempsey

+ — N Y Times p25 Je 6 '54 400w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:26 J1 3 '54 220w

BISHOP, MORRIS GILBERT. Bowl of Bishop; museum thoughts and other verses. 106p il $3 Dial press

811

54-6002

A collection of the author's light verse published during the last dozen years. Many of the poems appeared originally in the New Yorker. Contains an introductory essay on light verse by the author.

Booklist 50:316 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 20w

Reviewed by A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 28 '54 170w

Reviewed by P. J. Henniker-Heaton

Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 8 '54 1250w

"Delightful verse." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p10 Ap 11 '54 400w

"Readers of The New Yorker will be pleased to find a fine, heaping handful of Mr. Bishop's 'Museum Pieces' from that magazine. . . Mr. Bishop, who is Professor of Romance Literature at Cornell, has written an introductory essay on the art and practice of light verse which is the best thing of its kind I've ever come across. The new issue of Harper's magazine runs the whole thing as one of its articles, and in it Mr. Bishop has a host of good things to say." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 12 '54 650w

"Whether one shares Mr. Bishop's view of poetry today or not, there is no denying the fact that it is being produced with vigor and (for me at least) in many quarters with great vision and technique. But as for the little masters of the imprecise précis, any hundred of them could not together display the discipline, imagination, wit, and the rare gift of satire implicit in the best of Mr. Bishop's work. His selected verse, when it arrives, will be a little monument in American letters which no honest appraisal of our literature will be able to ignore." David McCord

+ Sat R 37:17 N 27 '54 600w

BISSELL, RICHARD PIKE. High water. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 280p $3.75 Little

54-8323

The second mate of a Mississippi towboat is the narrator. He tells the story of the little boat's attempt to push eight coal barges from St Louis to St Paul during a flood. The trip ends in disaster for the boat, but happiness for the first mate.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 194:88 O '54 480w

BISSELL, R. P.—Continued

"Here is a lively, delightfully entertaining story, sharply detailed, with rapid incident and humorous talk, displaying the common man's infinite variety." Warren Beck
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 26 '54 280w

Kirkus 22:456 J1 15 '54 210w

"Bissell is successful in developing the elemental qualities of both background and characters through the eyes of his hero; he is especially warmhearted with youngsters, and his dialogue is superb—possibly not all suited to Aunt Minnie, though the cruder words are modestly dashed. Throughout is wonderfully refreshing river humor. Recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 80w

"The story of these crewmen and their hopeless fight to bring the Royal Prince into port pushing her cargo ahead of her is so compelling that every sensitive reader will resent each drop of rain that swells the waters moving down against them. . . Unhappily, however, just as the reader searches his memory for other classics on this theme . . . the author introduces on page 175 of a book of 280 pages a new character who is lying on the roof of a house partially submerged by the flood. . . Suddenly then the reader realizes that he is being cheated of the catharsis of tragedy and offered a cheap substitute." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 26 '54 1000w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

N Y Times p5 S 26 '54 550w

"A fast, breezy, good-humored tale."

+ New Yorker 30:139 S 25 '54 40w

"I would be doing Mr. Bissell an injustice if I left the reader with the impression that this is just an adventure story. The author of 'A Stretch on the River' and '7 ½ Cents' was a river pilot himself, and with the salty monologue of Duke, the anecdotes of life in the modern river towns, and the lonely individualists who man the Royal Prince, he demonstrates that the Mississippi is still the same old river. When Duke goes ashore at Hannibal he runs across an old man with a white moustache, long hair, and a rumpled linen suit. It is a tribute to Mr. Bissell's skill that the reader does not resent this apparition." T. E. Cooney

+ Sat R 37:16 O 9 '54 500w

BISSON, THOMAS ARTHUR. Zaibatsu dissolution in Japan [prepared with the cooperation of the International secretariat, Institute of Pacific relations]. 314p $5 Univ. of Calif. press

338.8 Trusts, Industrial. Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-1952 54-6468

"[An account] of the American campaign to dissolve Japan's gigantic and nearly omnipotent family trusts, and the reasons why this effort failed. . . Mr. Bisson, who served on General MacArthur's staff and is America's top-ranking authority on the subject, shows how Washington's directives were—or were not—implemented. The Zaibatsu, in fact, survived the storm well. Nine years after defeat they are back in power." (Nation) Bibliography. Index.

"It is important that the occupation of Japan be subjected to more careful scrutiny with greater historical perspective. A variety of general evaluations have already been attempted but the definitive account remains to be written. . . General accounts will improve, however, only as more detailed studies of limited aspects of the occupation are produced. Mr. Bisson has made a major contribution in this direction." R. F. Hackett

+ Am Hist R 60:114 O '54 600w

Reviewed by J. B. Cohen

Ann Am Acad 294:167 J1 '54 600w

"A superb blow-by-blow account. . . The book is a lucid and thoughtful job of research and analysis, and will remain indispensable to the understanding of contemporary Japan until such day as the secret archives of Japan, Washington, and General MacArthur are available for study."

+ Nation 178:338 Ap 17 '54 350w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 25 '54 110w

"Mr. Bisson suggests that American policy would have been wiser if it had proposed the nationalization and public ownership of Japan's economy—relying on the Social Democrats—instead of regulated free enterprise. The suggestion seems to me to be as bad as the one actually imposed by the U.S. . . Apart from this, students of postwar Japanese economy will find this volume useful." F. N. Trager

Sat R 37:25 My 29 '54 320w

BIVORT DE LA SAUDEE, JACQUES DE, ed. God, man and the universe: a Christian answer to modern materialism; with an introduction. 421p il $7.50 Kenedy

215 Catholic church. Religion and science. Communism 53-11513

"Essays reflecting Catholic opinion, by Roman Catholic scientists, historians, philosophers, and theologians, on problems about which materialism, Marxism, communism, and other non-Catholic doctrines often differ. The contributors discuss in readable, nontechnical style such matters as the existence of God, origins of life, humanity, and religion, historical bases for Christian belief, the Lutheran reformation, and the Catholic Church in relation to modern society, political systems, and the problem of evil. Of interest to both Catholic and non-Catholic readers desiring more information on the Roman Catholic point of view. An English translation of the third French edition." Booklist

Booklist 51:32 S 15 '54

Reviewed by J. B. Sheerin

Cath World 180:234 D '54 300w

"As a reviewer of this mammoth of learning I feel grateful for what I learned and, once faith has taken reign, I know this modern summa is sufficient, imperfections in detail notwithstanding. But like all apologetics—and this becomes most evident in the face of the problem of evil—this one is not as rational as it promises to be; it ignores some of the deeply disturbing questions of anguished minds and it is best where it is easy to be good and worst where it is hard." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 61:173 N 12 '54 1200w

"Highly recommended for larger public, college and university libraries." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 79:1507 S 1 '54 110w

"If other Christians may in places think their case could have been stated more effectively but for particular claims made and difficulties unnecessarily raised by the Church of Rome, and if there are some unevennesses in quality, some gaps and hesitations, the total effect of this book remains strong and massive. In dealings with individual Communists or Communist countries Christian charity is wanted, but between Christian and Communist thought there can be no compromise. Here is some excellent ammunition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p ix Ap 30 '54 1000w

BLACK, CYRIL EDWIN, ed. Challenge in Eastern Europe. 276p $4 Rutgers univ. press
940.2 Europe—Politics. Europe—Social conditions 54-6834

"A symposium concerning social, political and economic problems in Eastern Europe, this book is composed of analytical essays by American scholars and exiled European statesmen. It is published in co-operation with the Mid-European Studies Center of the National Committee for a Free Europe, Inc." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Of course each reader will have his own views on the symposium type of volume, but this one approaches a high standard." D. W. Treadgold

+ — Am Hist R 60:104 O '54 600w

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich

Ann Am Acad 295:195 S '54 600w

Booklist 51:58 O 1 '54

Foreign Affairs 33:164 O '54 40w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 30 '54 50w

"It is only in some specific sections that a substantial contribution to our understanding of the 'challenge in Eastern Europe' has been made—and, curiously enough, only in the chapters prepared by the American scholars... But even these chapters suffer from being basically only 'lectures'; there are hardly any footnotes and no bibliography whatever. In short, the book is guilty of telegraphing its punches at night-letter length in about half of the chapters. But, at the same time, dull as some of the statements are, they form invaluable material not only for the momentous period with which they deal, but also for the objective knowledge of the region which is geopolitically so important to the United States today." J. S. Roucek

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:478 S '54 500w

"For the student and general reader interested in such problems, 'Challenge in Eastern Europe' is an important and thought-provoking book. This reviewer, however, remains puzzled. These essays point up the fact that the prewar governments did not try hard enough to provide the bare necessities for their peoples, and that the Communists have provided far less. When and what form of government will come forward to put shoes on the feet of all the people in Eastern Europe?" Antoni Gronowicz

+ — Sat R 37:21 J1 17 '54 600w

BLACK, HAROLD STEPHEN. Modulation theory. 363p il $8.75 Van Nostrand

621.3845 [621.38415] Modulation (electronics) 53-10091

"A well-organized text developed from material used in the Communications Development Training Program of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc. The historical development of modulation as applied to communications is outlined, then the general principles and the developed systems are covered rather fully. Most of the matter included is technical, and the book is addressed to advanced students of communications engineering and graduate engineers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Chapter bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1234 Je 15 '54 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:67 S '53

"Stemming from material used in the Communications Development Training Program of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, the volume is addressed to advanced students and practicing engineers. Not the least valuable feature of the book is the extensive list of references following each chapter."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:129 Mr '54 240w

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). Pete, the parakeet; il. by Kurt Werth. 97p $2.50 Holiday

Budgerigars—Legends and stories 54-12815

Pete was a pet parakeet who had some difficulty finding a permanent home. People could understand his words but they did not understand Pete, until finally a small boy found Pete when he was lost and gave him what he needed.

Booklist 51:137 N 15 '54

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

"Because so many children now own parakeets or are well acquainted with those who live in the homes of friends, this book will find a welcome audience." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:329 O '54 80w

+ Kirkus 22:483 Ag 1 '54 100w

"Recommended for ages 8-10." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 79:2490 D 15 '54 70w

BLACK, ISABEL. Hold close the day. 287p $3 Crown

54-6628

Story of a Brooklyn family about the turn of the century, told chiefly as it appeared to the nine-year-old Margaret.

Kirkus 22:78 F 1 '54 190w

"It is all very wearying reading with extremely unconvincing and monotonous characters." E. P. Nichols

— Library J 79:770 Ap 15 '54 100w

"The way in which the family, despite their vicissitudes, continues to love and make endless excuses for the unreliable Dody is well if insistently set forth. Miss Black's novel is written with dependable skill." Peter Girvin

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 18 '54 280w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke

N Y Times p20 Ap 18 '54 350w

BLACK, JOHN DONALD. Introduction to economics for agriculture. 727p maps $6 Macmillan (N Y)

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects 53-1210

"Designed to provide the agriculture student with the basic orientation needed for an understanding of the economy of agriculture against the larger setting of the overall national economy. A textbook for use in the undergraduate curriculum of agricultural colleges. The author is Henry Lee Professor of Economics at Harvard University." Library J

"The book is clearly a specialized one for which the author has an admirable, probably unequaled, experience in public service with government agencies and private groups, research, and teaching in agricultural economics at both landgrant and private universities." Sidney Hoos

+ Am Econ ■ 43:995 D '53 1150w

Reviewed by Paul Wasserman

Library J 78:1536 S 15 '53 50w

BLACK, THOMAS B. Four dead mice. 251p $2.75 Rinehart

54-7925

Detective story.

"Spillane-type speedball."

Kirkus 22:372 Je 15 '54 60w

"In 1946-47, Mr. Black wrote three novels about private detective Al Delaney. . . The long-delayed return of Black and Delaney should be welcomed by all Hammett-readers; they're still among our more effective practitioners of restrained but powerful violence." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p40 S 12 '54 200w

"This is honest toughness, not too incredible, but, although things keep moving, there are so many complications and deductions that readers feel bewildered. C plus." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 100w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:64 O ■ '54 20w

BLACK ELK, OGLALA INDIAN. Sacred pipe; Black Elk's account of the seven rites of the Oglala Sioux; recorded and ed. by Joseph Epes Brown. (Civilization of the American Indian) 144p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

970.1 Oglala Indians. Indians of North America—Religion and mythology 53-8810

"This is a faithful transcription by Mr. Brown of the words of Black Elk, the last of the Sioux holy men to know his tribes' religious rites, together with their history and significance. Black Elk, who died only a few years ago, was an Oglala Sioux, one of the last tribes to be subdued. Black Elk himself was present at the Little Big Horn when Custer was disastrously defeated; Crazy Horse, the chieftain-priest of the Sioux who presided over the slaughter of Custer's men, was Black Elk's cousin. In 1947 and 1948 Mr. Brown lived with Black Elk on the reservation, and the holy man, in order to preserve the Siouan rites both for the whites and for his own people, told him all he knew of the rites." Sat R

"Ritual literature is often dull reading, but Brown's prose is free of archaism and pedantry, and conveys a quality of the deepest sincerity. The versions are descriptive commentaries, interspersed with prayers and invocations; there is no indication of the extent to which Brown has rearranged the material as it came from Black Elk. The work cannot be compared to renderings such as LaFleche's Osage rites, or Michelson's Fox ceremonial texts and translations. Such comparative notes as there are mostly call attention to parallels in Christianity, Islam and Hinduism, and make no reference to the long-standing problem of the nature and origin of North American Indian monotheistic beliefs. Brown apparently did not intend to present Black Elk's account in the context of the ethnology of religion and its controversies." G. W. Hewes

+ — Am Anthropol 56:906 O '54 350w

"Mr. Brown brought to his task genuine respect for the vanishing culture of the Sioux and for the values of their religious system. Although a professional anthropologist might wish the book had been spared some literary flavoring and editing, the general reader will profit by the author's desire to make his document more easily readable and the Sioux culture more attractive." Joseph Bram

+ Library J 78:1419 S 1 '53 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 21 '54 50w

Reviewed by Oliver La Farge

N Y Times p6 N 22 '53 650w

"His admiration for Black Elk and his people is obvious; so obvious, in fact, that one wonders how much of Brown's own beliefs were mixed unconsciously with those of Black Elk. It is a common fault among scholars to read too much in something that seems to prove their own theories. This is Brown's first book, however, and he has done a fine job producing a book that is a valuable contribution to American Indian literature." A. N. Chamberlin

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 27 '53 750w

Reviewed by Seth Agnew

Sat R 36:11 D 26 '53 400w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:71 Mr '54 280w

BLACKER, IRWIN R., ed. Irregulars, partisans, guerrillas; great stories from Rogers' rangers to the Haganah; with commentaries. 487p $5 Simon & Schuster

904 Guerrillas

54-8646

"With two criteria for his selections, that they be interesting, exciting, honest stories and show different phases of guerilla warfare, Irwin Blacker has collected thirty-two stories that span the globe and run from Morgans' Panama raid to the actions of Haganah." (Kirkus) Partial contents: Morgan's march on Panama (Panama), by John Esquemeling; Roger's Rangers (Colonial America), by Robert Rogers; Partisans against Napoleon (Russia), by Dennis Davydov; Jagunço rebellion (Brazil), by Euclides da Cunha; Lawrence and the Arabs (Arabia), by T. E. Lawrence; The long march (China), by Edgar Snow; A Jedburgh (France), by Stewart Alsop and Thomas Braden; Maquis notebook (France), by Joseph Kessel; Mission for a dictator (Italy), by Otto Skorzeny; American guerrilla (Philippines), by Ira Wolfert; Haganah at Athlit (Palestine), by Moshe Pearlman.

Kirkus 22:525 Ag 1 '54 110w

"This an excellent anthology. . . It is a war-like book, of course, but it is recommended for these challenging times." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 79:1827 O 1 '54 180w

"Irwin R. Blacker's collection of episodes from guerrilla campaigns—there are thirty in this anthology, about half of them dealing with World War II—forms an excellent introduction to the type of fighting that has just helped the Communists wrest half of Indochina from the French, and may some day help the satellite peoples free themselves from communism." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p40 S 26 '54 750w

BLACKFORD, CHARLES MINOR. Deep treasure; il. by Alexander Key. (Land of the free ser) 243p $2.75 Winston

54-5069

In novel form with a youthful hero, the author tells the story of the Greek immigrants who took over the sponge fishing industry on Florida's west coast a generation ago.

Booklist 50:405 Je 15 '54

"A story which older boys will find both exciting and informative." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 20 '54 90w

"Description of family life, traditional customs and old-world ideas, and details of work at sea add color to the narrative. A good addition to the Land of the Free series." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:249 Ag '54 100w

+ Kirkus 22:120 F 15 '54 120w

"Social and cultural barriers felt by the Greek community are well presented. While characterizations don't always ring true, plot is smooth and local atmosphere authentic. Recommended especially for its regional value. Grades 7-10." M. H. Edmonds

+ — Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 80w

"Mr. Blackford is not a distinguished stylist, but he is a thoughtful writer and as a salt-water man himself, he conjures up in realistic vein some horrendous adventures on and under the Gulf waters." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '54 200w

Sat R 37:39 Je 19 '54 230w

BLACKFORD, LAUNCELOT MINOR. Mine eyes have seen the glory; the story of a Virginia lady, Mary Berkeley Minor Blackford, 1802-1896, who taught her sons to hate slavery and to love the Union [introd. by Bell Irvin Wiley]. 293p il $5 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Blackford, Mrs Mary Berkeley (Minor) 54-5018

"An unfamiliar type of pre-Civil war southern woman emerges in this story of Mary Berkeley Minor Blackford [1802-1896], recorded by her grandson. Forceful fighter against sin and slavery, she reared five soldier sons who defended the honor of the confederacy rather than the institution of slavery. Blackford is commendably objective and entertaining in these glimpses into family life, interracial relations and social customs in old Virginia." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Although the material might have been more tightly woven together, historians will find this book especially useful for its new material on antislavery and Unionist sentiment in ante-bellum Virginia." David Lindsey

+ Am Hist R 60:215 O '54 280w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 16 '54
40w

"In this book, which necessarily skips from one to another of the Blackford family, Mary herself emerges as the courageous fighter for her ideals that she must have been, shown chiefly in the characters of her children and in the things she trained them to cherish. A drawback to the book is that there is so little of her actual writing preserved. She is seen mostly through the replies she received to her letters. This lack causes her to move through the book as a personality only rarely present in her own undoubtedly vigorous words." N. E. Taylor

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 3 '54
600w

Kirkus 22:142 F 15 '54 170w

"The Blackford name is honored and the intelligent descendants owe much to this famous Mary. For general purchase—and general reading." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:767 Ap 15 '54 140w

Nation 178:488 Je 5 '54 130w

"The Blackford chronicle is chiefly a collection of letters. It does not have the charm, the sparkle, and the hedonistic delight in the pleasures of society and witty conversation which distinguish Mrs. Chesnut's 'A Diary from Dixie.' Mary Blackford was a Victorian lady, intensely serious, and her interests were largely religious and moral. . . . 'Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory,' like Faulkner's novels, shows a different kind of glory from that of the romantic stereotype of the Old South with its emphasis on material grandeur—it is the glory of character." Clement Eaton

Sat R 37:18 My 22 '54 450w

BLACKHAM, HAROLD JOHN. Human tradition. 252p $3 Beacon press

190 [144] Humanism 54-535

"This analysis of 'the human tradition' seeks to explore 'the possibility of communication across the great divide that seals East from West.' It tries to achieve its purpose by clarifying the meaning of the operative ideals in the minds of Western philosophers and statesmen, and by making the latter realize that the program of the West represents only one alternative, and that it will triumph only if it 'springs from the human tradition, is oriented on actual problems, and defines itself on ample disclosures of its rejections and their consequences.'" (Ethics) Index.

Reviewed by L. W. Norris

Ann Am Acad 296:200 N '54 500w

Reviewed by J. A. Torres

Ethics 64:329 Jl '54 400w

"It is noteworthy that Mr Blackham takes the view that, grave as is our cultural disintegration, no remedy is to be found in a premature synthesis. What is most useful, in his view, is the definition and development of the alternatives open to man, so contributing to a genuine understanding of the fundamental issues. His book is packed with thought and with significant material and will be found illuminating by all serious thinkers, whether or not they accept his conclusions." J. B. Coates

+ Hibbert J 52:199 Ja '54 1000w

"Mr. Blackham writes of the fundamental contemporary world-debate with a learning, an ease, and a modesty that are altogether refreshing and enviable. He is not afraid to find and report some virtues in the non-revolutionary aspects of Marxism, or to praise the specific merits and contributions of Christianity, or to admit the shortcomings of Humanism as 'a tradition in the making.'" H. A. Larabee

+ J Philos 51:533 S 2 '54 800w

"The Human Tradition is an English essay in Ideengeschichte with the merits and defects of a German work. It is heavy. It lacks literary graces. But its scholarship is irreproachable, and it has a great deal to say which is both original and important." Maurice Cranston

+ — Spec p518 N 6 '53 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p681 O 23 '53
750w

BLACKINGTON, ALTON HALL. Yankee yarns. 243p $3 Dodd

818

54-11233

The author of these New England tales is a Boston newspaperman and radio broadcaster. The stories are chosen from those which Mr Blackington gave over his once-a-week broadcast. Partial contents: The petrified Indian boy; Gold mine hoax; Human hibernation; Presque Isle lynching; Ruth Blay; The legend of Micah Rood; Steamer Portland.

Booklist 51:122 N 15 '54

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1496 S 1 '54 140w

"Completing the collection of eighteen sprightly yarns is some really new material about the loss of the steamer Portland in a big storm in November, 1898." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p12 O 3 '54 450w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 300w

BLACKWELL, DAVID HAROLD, and GIRSHICK, MEYER A. Theory of games and statistical decisions. 355p $7.50 Wiley

519 Mathematical statistics. Games, Theory of 54-7259

"In this graduate-level text, portions of the theory of games which are important to the theory of statistical decision are explained and developed so as to constitute an introduction to statistical decision theory. The reader is assumed to be familiar with the basic concepts of statistics and of mathematical analysis. Proofs are supplied for all theorems. The bibliography runs to 180 citations." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1320 Jl '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:55 Jl '54

BLACKWOOD, ANDREW WATTERSON. Biographical preaching for today; the pulpit use of Bible cases. 224p $3 Abingdon

251 Preaching 54-8237

"Dr. Blackwood's previous books on the science, art and practice of preaching, written during his 20 years as professor of homiletics at Princeton, have won wide circulation and general acceptance. He is now (since 1950) at Temple University. The point of emphasis in the present somewhat more specialized work is the use of single biblical characters as furnishing the starting point and the main line of direction for sermons." Christian Century

Booklist 51:121 N 15 '54

"This is especially recommended for young preachers. It might be added that it is a method which can very easily be abused, but it seems that the author has, either directly or indirectly, set up warning signs at most of the danger points." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1208 O 6 '54 200w

"This is rather elementary material and of use primarily to theological students and young and inexperienced preachers. Will have a limited appeal."

Kirkus 22:575 Ag 15 '54 140w

BLAIR, CLAY. Atomic submarine and Admiral Rickover; il. with photographs. 277p $3.50 Holt

623.825 Rickover, Hyman George. Nautilus (submarine) 53-9584

"Story behind the design and construction of the first atomic submarine and also the man Admiral Rickover, who had the original idea for the nuclear-powered submarine, called the Nautilus." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Booklist 50:233 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:103 F '54 30w

Chem & Eng N 32:257 Ja 18 '54 20w

Reviewed by T. L. Rettger

Chem & Eng N 32:432 F 1 '54 800w

BLAIR, CLAY—Continued

Reviewed by Robert Nicholas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 24 '54
400w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 9 '54
800w

Foreign Affairs 32:674 J1 '54 20w

"A warmly biased biography of a man with a mission."

Kirkus 21:752 N 15 '53 150w

"For collections on Naval history and atomic energy." F. J. Anderson

Library J 79:140 Ja 15 '54 180w

Nation 178:115 F '54 290w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

New Repub 130:18 Ja 25 '54 550w

"Controversy apart, the personal story of Admiral Rickover, mingled with the tale of the first attempt to harness atomic energy for propulsion, is a fascinating drama. It is well told and amply documented, by a man who has obviously been close to the subject and cares deeply about all its complex aspects." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 F 7 '54
900w

"The story of the atomic submarine and the indomitable Rickover is exciting reading for even the nontechnically inclined. Man is little more than over the portal of the Atomic Age. Popular books about this incredible age are often themselves unbelievable, but Mr. Blair's account is a sound treatment meriting wide acceptance." R. E. Lapp

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 17 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Jim Walls

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ja 17 '54
1050wSpringf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54
240w

Wis Lib ■■ 50:174 J1 '54

BLAIR, EDWARD PAYSON. Bible and you; a guide for reading the Bible in the revised standard version; published for the Cooperative publication associations. 154p $2 Abingdon

220 Bible. Whole—Reading. Bible. Whole—Study and teaching 53-6348

A layman's guide to the reading and understanding of the Bible. The author is professor of New Testament interpretation at Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois.

"This book meets a real need. Even the experienced biblical reader is often baffled by the complexity of Bible literature. Like the novice, he needs all the help he can get from a teacher like Dr. Blair of Garrett Biblical Institute." Clarence Seldenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 31 '54
150w

"Can be warmly recommended."

+ Kirkus 21:441 J1 15 '53 110w

"His running comments and the two suggested representative readings will greatly help any reader of the Bible. His style is fresh and inspiring."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:62 Mr '54

BLAISDELL, ETHEL F. And God caught an eel. 242p $3.50 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Thurber, Charles S. 54-10140

Informal, anecdotal biography of a New England sailor and preacher, for forty years (he is now ninety years old) chaplain of the Seamen's Bethel at New Bedford, Massachusetts.

Booklist 51:81 O 15 '54

"What this account sometimes lacks in the color and thoroughness of its unique New England detail is compensated by its simplicity and warmth and the author's genuine desire to tell a moving, factual story. She considers the Chaplain a master story-teller, has heard his tales since childhood, and has felt compelled to record them." D. S. Raymond

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 16 '54
750w

Kirkus 22:611 S 1 '54 270w

"Not an important book at all, but one with some charm which should find a few appreciative readers." G. W. Wakefield

Library J 79:1885 O 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p22 D 5 '54 80w

BLAISDELL, HAROLD F. Tricks that take fish; foreword by H. G. Tapply; il. by Walter Dower. 299p $3.95 Holt

799.1 Fishing

54-5441

Ideas on fresh-water fishing by an experienced angler. Partial contents: Taking trout on bait; Fly fishing; Bait fishing for bass; Lake trout and salmon; Pickerel, pike, muskellunge; Ice fishing.

Booklist 50:353 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:182 My '54 20w

Reviewed by George Strickler

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 27 '54
60w

"There's plenty of patience and 'just so' technique needed for his suggestions, and a world of know-how in his time and weather comments while his gear and tackle details help to complete the picture of rod and reel delights for insatiable fishermen of all types. And he swears his hocus-pocus works."

+ Kirkus 22:49 Ja 15 '54 150w

"Small sketches by H. G. Tapply clarify text. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:458 Mr 1 '54 50w

"There's much here for argument, but lots more, it seems, worth giving a try. An index would have added immeasurably to the book's usefulness." Nathan Aleskovsky

+ — N Y Times p14 Ap 4 '54 160w

"Fisherman Blaisdell's hints indicate that he has the one happy faculty which is indispensable for a full creel: When fishing he thinks like a fish. . . This putting himself in the fish's element makes Blaisdell's text seem eminently reasonable. The only test of whether it is or not is to try it out in practice. This reviewer feels that Blaisdell, if followed carefully, should put fish in the icebox." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 21 '54
200wBLAKE, NICHOLAS, pseud. See Day-Lewis, C.BLAMIRE, HARRY. Devil's hunting-grounds; a fantasy. 162p $2 Longmans

54-12658

A fantasy which tells of a modern Christian's visit to Purgatory.

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p39 ■ 26 '54 40w

"As a tract I don't think the book succeeds; as a satire I found it neat and amusing." Kingsley Amis

+ — Spec p445 Ap 9 '54 110w

"The people are trivial, the places unreal. The author returns to earth unchanged, and there are no trumpets. As a sincere defence of Christian doctrine, and a plea for a return to authority in matters of belief, the book is clear and even dramatic in places. As an account of dislikable people, it holds the attention; but the only lasting graces are lacking and nothing can make up for them."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Je 11 '54
450w

BLANCH, LESLEY. Wilder shores of love. 332p il $5 Simon & Schuster

920 Burton, Isabel (Arundell) lady. Ellenborough, Jane Elizabeth (Digby) Law, countess of. Du Buc de Rivery, Aimée. Eberhardt, Isabelle 54-8642

"Lesley Blanch has had the engaging idea of making a portrait gallery of four nineteenth-century European women whose lives are woven into the history of North Africa and the Near East. One, the cousin of Josephine Beauharnais, became the mother of a Sultan of Turkey. Another, a nymphomaniac reared among the nihilists of Geneva, became a consummate authority on the Sahara. Another, who married and divorced so many husbands that her contemporaries lost count, spent the last thirty years of her life in the black tents of her Syrian husband, the Sheikh Medjuel el Mezrab. Finally there was the fat, plain, dumpy, neurotic wife of Ruffian Dick. . . We know Isabel Arundell best as Lady Richard Burton, the wife of the greatest orientalist of his time, a man who spoke twenty-eight languages, an expert on falconry, swordsmanship and all the stews of India." N Y Times

Booklist 51:106 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 12 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:359 Je 1 '54 210w

"The short biographies of these well-known women are provocative and stimulating. Small libraries will find this useful; all libraries may buy it for the general reader." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 79:1395 Ag '54 130w

Reviewed by Bennett Epstein

Nation 179:407 N 6 '54 1150w

"The Wilder Shores of Love is a deeply absorbing book, though it occasionally gushes in its writing and has too many contemporary tricks of evocation. Miss Blanch is an agreeable but uneven writer. The essence of her portraits is thoroughly sound." V. S. Pritchett
+ -- New Statesman & Nation 48:442 O 9 '54 2200w

"The four [sketches] are of unequal length and merit, ranging from an excellent account of Richard Burton's wife, Isabel, to a final sketch which leaves substantially all its questions unanswered." Vincent Sheean
+ -- N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 5 '54 1000w

"Perhaps the greatest of the four women was Isabelle Eberhardt, the Russian Jewess who escaped from Geneva to live in the stews and souks of North Africa and went on to explore the Sahara at the turn of the century. A proud, tattered, demonic woman, who wrote angelically, living with any chance Arab she came across, an intimate of Lyautey and a friend of General Catrou, she alone of the four women bears the mark of indisputable genius, and it is good that we have at last a full account of her." Robert Payne
+ N Y Times p3 S 5 '54 1050w

"Four seething but most enjoyable studies in headlong nonconformity."
+ New Yorker 30:140 S 25 '54 240w

"In her sinuous, rich, and many-hued prose Miss Blanch brings her subjects to exotic life and indicates how 'each of these women found some, if not all, of her fulfillment, as a woman, along wilder Eastern shores.'" R. P. Corsini
+ Sat 37:19 N 6 '54 290w

"They were memorable women, and though the treatment of their exploits varies widely in taste and sophistication (it is often excellent, but at times descends to breathless clichés) their lives make splendid reading. But as always in stories of the East, it is the East—the now vanishing East that received and transfigured them—that steals the story." H. M. Champness

+ -- Spec p320 S 10 '54 1000w

Time 64:116 S 13 '54 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p623 O 1 '54 1150w

BLASSINGAME, WYATT. Great trains of the world; il. by Jack Coggins. [60p] maps $1 Random house

385.1 Railroads—Trains—Juvenile literature 53-6290

Accounts and pictures of some of the famous trains of the world: Flying Scotsman; Orient Express; Twentieth Century Limited; Super Chief; Golden Arrow; and others. Gives routes, running time, history, description of the train, and anecdotes. Grades 4 to 7.

Booklist 50:188 Ja 1 '54

"Dramatic illustrations and some well done maps round out a fine $1 buy for the young railroader." J. E. Sloan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 15 '53 30w

Kirkus 21:699 O 15 '53 80w

"Usable in large elementary school and public library collections, even though it lacks table of contents, and necessary prebinding will cut into some pictures." M. H. Edmonds

Library J 79:213 F 1 '54 80w

Sat R 36:79 N 14 '53 50w

BLAUSTEIN, ALBERT P., and others. American lawyer; a summary of the Survey of the legal profession; foreword by Reginald Heber Smith. 360p $5.50 Univ. of Chicago press

340 Law—U.S. Lawyers. Survey of the legal profession

A summary of a survey of the legal profession sponsored by the American Bar Association and the Carnegie Corporation. "This book is designed to make available to leaders of public opinion—business executives, economists, editors, journalists, labor leaders, clergymen, scholars, social workers, sociologists, teachers, and vocational guidance counselors—as well as to members of the public generally and to members of the bar a summary of the facts, cognate material, and recommendations assembled by the Survey of the Legal Profession during the last seven years. These materials were published in approximately 175 separate reports written by the 'Survey team' of over four hundred men and women." (Foreword)

Booklist 51:124 N 15 '54

"An attorney-reviewer cannot help but be impressed by a book such as this. Admittedly, it is far from inclusive—tax specialists, for example, are not mentioned despite their obvious importance today—but it meets a social need, the humanization of the lawyer and his profession. To the layman, it should come as an opportune eye-opener—as for the lawyer, it should renew his sense of obligation to the public which supports him." W. M. Kunstler

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 12 '54 300w

"The chapter (VIII) dealing with ethics is worthy of the study of every lawyer and the final chapter on the organization of the legal profession is interesting historical reading. Three or four chapters will interest every lawyer, and the entire text will interest the majority. The work is not argumentative but, in direct and simple style, unencumbered by legal phraseology, sets forth fact upon fact historically, with ample illustration."

+ Kirkus 22:419 J1 1 '54 240w

"When this book came to me, I gritted my teeth in anticipation of three or four hours of sheer boredom. In plunging in, however, I found myself delighted with the clarity, the brightness and the insight of this book, and greatly pleased by the style in which it is written. There is no sign of arrogance or pontifical self-assurance." L. P. Stryker

+ N Y Times p3 O 31 '54 700w

"Those who come in the future to use the bar association's survey will find this unofficial summary an indispensable key to its contents. Beyond this, one would like to be able to say that the work of Mr. Blaustein and Mr. Porter

BLAUSTEIN, A. P.—Continued
indicates that the survey includes much treasure. . . . In sum, one's disappointment with this volume is not based upon the insufficiency of the efforts of Mr. Blaustein and Mr. Porter. They have done all that could be done with the materials available to them." M. D. Howe
+ — Sat R 37:39 O 2 '54 850w

BLEEKER, SONIA (MRS HERBERT SPENCER ZIM). Seminole Indians; il. by Althea Karr. 156p $2 Morrow
970.1 Seminole Indians—Juvenile literature 54-5079

"Part narrative, part exposition, the seventh volume in the author's series of books on North American Indians traces the history of the Seminole, formerly Creek Indians, from 1808 to the present—their migration to Florida, how they came to be called Seminole, how they lived, the wars that resulted in the removal of thousands of Seminole to Indian Territory, and the life of the Florida Seminole today. Grades 4-7." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 50:282 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

Kirkus 22:34 Ja 15 '54 130w

"Recommended especially for school libraries." Anne Jackson
+ Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 80w

"The Seminole Indians follows her usual, intelligent pattern, alternating facts with story in a way that has proved very appealing to readers of eight or nine to twelve. Large type, many informative line cuts, a pleasant small size. Boys of nine to twelve who collect this series will find, as they grow up and perhaps travel over America, that they are well worth re-reading to illuminate an adult point of view."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p23 My 16 '54 70w

"The capture of Osceola under a flag of truce and the division of the Nation by removing most of the people to Oklahoma does not make a pretty story. Miss Bleeker tells it simply and with dignity." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:36 Ag 21 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:141 My '54

BLEILER, EVERETT FRANKLIN, and DIKTY, T. E., eds. Best science fiction stories. See Best science fiction stories

BLIVEN, BRUCE. Wonderful writing machine. 236p il $3.95 Random house

652.3 Typewriters 54-5955

The story of the typewriter from its pioneer days to the present age of the electric machine. The author also describes the evolution of the secretaries who have used the various types of machines from the early days to the present. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 50:393 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 20w

"Bliven's work is light, humorous, and informative." Anthony Wirry
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 23 '54 70w

"Mr. Bliven gives warmth and excitement to a subject which has so often been classified only as a historic event. The book should attract more than just the devotee." H. C. Kenney

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '54 800w

"Bliven has a facility in enlivening what might have been dull reportage of an invention that revolutionized communication at local level. . . . Bliven did his research at the Royal plant, so there's more about Royals than the others, but in the main it is a tribute to all models, and may pass a speed test in unexpected sales."

+ Kirkus 22:224 Mr 15 '54 180w

"Fascinating book. . . . Recommended for all public libraries large enough to own a typewriter." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1320 Jl '54 120w

"A sprightly and informative account. . . . More than 60 illustrations supplement the text, which is also liberally interspersed with quotations from a variety of authentic historical sources."

+ Management R 43:555 Ag '54 40w

Reviewed by Spencer Klaw

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 20 '54 320w

Reviewed by D. L. Cohn

N Y Times p7 My 16 '54 480w

New Yorker 30:134 My 22 '54 200w

"The story of the typewriter is so colorful and its impact on the world of business has been so revolutionary, it should not be forgotten. Mr. Bliven has made a useful contribution in recalling it. His volume, written in breezy journalese—sometimes descending to such slang phrases as 'a swift pain in the neck' and 'what burns scientists up'—is a lively example of skilful industrial prose, conceived to hold the reader's attention and at the same time to get over certain institutional values of the business under discussion." J. W. Rogers

+ — Sat R 37:18 Je 5 '54 550w

Time 63:78 My 31 '54 250w

BLIZARD, MARIE. Conspiracy of silence. 246p $2.75 Mill

54-5851

Mystery story.

"Plot of intricate ramifications unfolded with sustained interest and startling finale." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 4 '54 140w

Kirkus 22:44 Ja 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p12 Mr 28 '54 30w

"This one's no world-shaker, but it's pretty good journeyman writing. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 4 '54 50w

"Implausible but lively." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:28 Je 12 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 8 '54 50w

BLOCH, MARIE HALUN. Tunnels; drawings by Nelson Sears. 95p $2.75 Coward-McCann

624.152 Tunnels and tunneling 54-6323

A factual account of the building of tunnels all over the world, but particularly in the United States. For ages eight and older. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 50:325 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by P. O. Marsh

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 100w

Commonweal 61:200 N 19 '54 20w

"Mrs. Bloch . . . has long been interested in tunnels. She has made a thorough study of them and presents her material well."

+ Horn BK 30:254 Ag '54 70w

"Recommended for children in grades 5-8." Edna Rose

+ Library J 79:782 Ap 15 '54 30w

"A well planned, well written book for ages ten up." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 2 '54 130w

"This account of tunnels, past and present, and how they are made, is as exciting as an adventure story." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:53 My 15 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:183 Jl '54

BLOND, GEORGES. Death of Hitler's Germany; tr. by Frances Frenaye. 302p $4.50 Macmillan (N Y)

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Germany 54-13220

"Between July, 1944, and May, 1945, there took place the bloodiest struggle in all European history. . . The whole center of the continent was afire. In order to point up the unity of the dramatic action, I have thought it best to pitch my observation post at the very heart of it, that is, within Germany. Here was the clearest view of the converging eastern and western invasions, and then, of course, the last apocalyptic act could be played out only in Berlin. I have shifted my focus from East to West as often as necessary in order to take in the most dramatic and significant episodes of the Battle of Europe." (Foreword) Bibliography. No index.

"A wonderfully paced narrative. . . An exciting story, this has neither rancor or sentimentality, and should arouse an audience beyond the student and devotee of military history."

+ Kirkus 22:516 Ag 1 '54 160w

"As a summary of this material, this is a successful, readable work but there is nothing new here which has not already appeared in the numerous German biographies which have been published since the war." Donald Wasson Library J 79:1820 O 1 '54 100w

"In telling of these happenings and all the others which make up the story of the war's last nine months in Europe, M. Blond in just 300 compact pages has achieved a miracle of compression and a work of art. For once, a jacket blurb does not exaggerate when it says of this book that it required 'a novelist's talent, a dramatist's eye and the dispassionate attitude of a historian.' M. Blond gave it all three. But I have one complaint. Though the maps are excellent, there is no index!" W. L. Shirer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 D 19 '54 320w

"The man has a gift, a splendid gift. He can write military history—the story of high level decision, operational frustration, troop feelings and the battle climax—with such power of expression, movement and suspense as to make it more enthralling than the best of fiction. He has indeed, as his publishers put it, 'a novelist's talent, a dramatist's eye and the dispassionate attitude of a historian.' It is a new and better technique; Blond can weave an incredible tale out of credible, and in the main, well-documented fact." S. L. A. Marshall

+ N Y Times p5 N 21 '54 750w

"There is a particularly good description of the Battle of the Bulge as it appeared from the German side."

+ New Yorker 30:218 N 20 '54 120w

"A narrative which is at once full and fast-moving, authentic and exciting." Telford Taylor

+ Yale R n s 44:288 winter '55 80w

BLOOMFIELD, ARTHUR IRVING. Speculative and flight movements of capital in postwar international finance. 96p pa $1 Princeton univ. press

332.6 Capital. Investments, Foreign. Foreign exchange 54-6069

"In this, the third of the Princeton series of less-than-book-length 'studies,' Dr. Bloomfield deals with postwar 'hot money' movements. Noting the meagerness of the literature, he proposes to bring together and analyze the available information and to consider possible counter measures. An economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, Bloomfield is an experienced observer and writer in the field of international finance and has been closely associated with the United States government statistical program on international capital transactions." Ann Am Acad

"The reviewer considers this study 'must reading,' particularly for those economists who still trust in the efficacy of exchange controls per se. It will probably annoy them but, as they say in Washington, the facts speak for themselves." F. R. Root

+ Am Econ R 44:681 S '54 450w

"This well-ordered and thoughtful discussion contributes toward the understanding of an important and difficult problem. While not forbiddingly technical, it will appeal chiefly to readers with more than a casual familiarity with recent international financial developments." E. T. Crowder

+ Ann Am Acad 295:168 S '54 400w

BLOUGH, GLENN ORLANDO. Not only for ducks; the story of rain; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey House bk) 46p $2.25 McGraw

551.573 Rain and rainfall—Juvenile literature 53-9009

In the guise of a story this book for ages six to ten explains the importance of rain to all growing things, to animals, and to people either in the country or the city.

Booklist 50:262 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 18 '54 140w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54 30w

"Sometimes the introduction of a fictional character detracts from the presentation of science, but here Mike and his liking for looking really add to the interest and clarity of the book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:99 Ap '54 150w

Kirkus 22:2 Ja 1 '54 60w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p28 My 9 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:182 Jl '54

BLOUGH, GLENN ORLANDO. Wait for the sunshine; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey House bk) 47p $2.25 McGraw

580 Botany—Juvenile literature 54-8812

"The story of seasons and growing things." (Subtitle) Information about plant growth and its economic importance for ages seven to nine.

Booklist 51:114 N 1 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 14 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:584 S 1 '54 90w

"The share of the sun is made clear, then come harvest and winter. With its many pictures, half in three colors, the descriptive text is carried along. It will be useful in school nature study." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p28 N 14 '54 90w

BLUM, DANIEL C. Pictorial treasury of opera in America. 315p $10 Greenberg

782 Opera 54-12557

A pictorial history of opera in America, containing some 1500 photographs of scenes and stars in costume. The brief text gives synopses of famous operas. Index.

Booklist 51:168 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:55 D '54 10w

Reviewed by Claudia Cassidy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 28 '54 300w

Reviewed by Harold Rogers

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 2 '54 270w

BLUM, D. C.—Continued

Kirkus 22:616 S 1 '54 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 D 5 '54 20w

— New Yorker 30:205 D 11 '54 100w

"The text which accompanies these pictures says nothing about the singers but is simply a dull rehash of the operatic plots, and the layout of the pictures themselves shows no genius in that art at all." John Haverstick

Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 50w

"Not very skillfully done, but it includes many hundreds of photographs of opera stars and scenes that will make pleasant browsing for opera fans."

+ — Time 64:130 D 6 '54 20w

BLUM, FRED H. Toward a democratic work process; the Hormel-packinghouse workers' experiment. 229p $3.50 Harper

331.15 Hormel, Geo. A. and company.
United packinghouse workers of America.
Local 9, Austin, Minnesota. 53-8534

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by D. F. Roy

Am Soc R 19:500 Ag '54 850w

Reviewed by H. C. Kenney

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 16 '54 400w

"Many responsible managerial thinkers will go a long way with Mr. Blum in his conclusions concerning the need for making more use of the new knowledge about group processes to bring about greater participation and integration of workers in determination of work organization and methods. . . . But they will challenge the author's ultimate conclusion that a complete reorganization of the corporate structure of our economic enterprise is necessary." E. B. Sauer

+ — Management R 43:64 Ja '54 1150w

"Descriptive and analytical in approach, the study illustrates the new emphasis on appraisal of the socio-psychological conditions which underlie increased productivity. At the same time, the author's diagnostic insights suggest new frontiers of analysis—and practice—in management-union collaboration. From the standpoint of methodology alone, the book represents a significant contribution to further research in the field. It will add to the understanding of all those interested in labor-management relations, as well as of professional students and practitioners."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:100 Mr '54 280w

BLUM, GERALD SAUL. Psychoanalytic theories of personality. 219p $3.75 McGraw

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Personality 52-12350

"In a manner well suited to the needs of senior and postgraduate students of psychology, social work and psychiatry, Dr. Blum has arranged and correlated in this volume the psychoanalytic theories of personality of the orthodox Freudian school and of those schools evolving and deviating from it. The material is presented in chronological sequence, and the eight chapters follow the life history, from prenatal and birth influences to adult character structure." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Despite the excellence of this book, it cannot be recommended to the psychoanalytic neophyte, not because it is difficult, but because much of the meaning of the various theorists is lost when their ideas are removed from the total structure of their thought, as they are in this book, and isolated for purposes of exposition. But those who are already acquainted with some of these authors in their primary sources will benefit greatly by the systematic comparison and evaluation which Blum has undertaken." M. E. Spiro

+ — Am Anthropol 56:325 Ap '54 500w

"That the writings of Freud and his followers will perforce contribute heavily to the formulation of an adequate theory of personality has long been recognized. The present volume is an effort to review some of the psychoanalytic materials which may well contribute to the construction of such a theory. The author has read widely and has done a good job in digesting a vast array of publications in the field." Kimball Young

+ Am Soc R 18:714 D '53 600w

"Designed to correct the confusion in the area of the psychoanalytic theories of personality, the book fails to overreach the level of organization one associates with the notes which lecturers use for their own guidance. With all of this, one leaves the book with the feeling that its author is a thorough and sound student of psychoanalytic doctrines. Thus, a competent reader can page through his book with profit, making his own gleaming of stimulating observations." Joseph Bram

+ — Social Forces 32:298 Mr '54 450w

"Throughout the book the material is concisely presented, and is arranged to facilitate comparison of diverse theoretical positions on the issues of personality development."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:331 S '53 160w

BLUM, JOHN MORTON. Republican Roosevelt. 170p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 54-5182

A study devoted chiefly to Theodore Roosevelt's political career.

Reviewed by V. P. De Santis

Am Hist R 60:202 O '54 400w

"Mr. Blum's final chapter shows Roosevelt out of power from 1909 to his death in 1919. It is a sort of case study in failure and frustration, and the story that the author tells is not a happy one. Everything that he says is true, but he overlooks the contribution that Roosevelt made to Wilsonian reform and to the movement to prepare America to play a leading role in world affairs. However, these are minor criticisms. We must be grateful to Mr. Blum for giving us one of the liveliest, best-written, and most thoughtful books in American history during the year." A. S. Link

+ — Ann Am Acad 296:174 N '54 550w

Booklist 50:339 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 20w

Reviewed by A. S. Henning

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 16 '54 330w

"Amazing, bubbling energy, unlimited curiosity, expertness in a dozen fields, lively intelligence, great devotion to family and friends, intuitive sense of public feeling, linked with a cultivated skill in practical politics, remarkable foresight of national and world development—all these added up to a dynamic public leader whose achievements are still bearing fruit." Donovan Richardson

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 30 '54 550w

"Theodore Roosevelt emerges in good relief, often sharpened by the author's knack with accentuating similes and phraseology, as a man who perhaps more than anything, did good hard. For historians, students and the more interested lay public."

+ Kirkus 22:101 F 1 '54 220w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:445 Mr 1 '54 210w

"Mr. Blum is in a unique position to know whereof he writes. He was a principal aid to Elting E. Morison in compiling the vast eight-volume correspondence of Theodore Roosevelt. He wrote many of the footnotes and appendices for that excellent series. He has probably read as many T. R. letters as any man alive." H. F. Pringle

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 11 '54 600w

"Apart from its central emphasis on Roosevelt the conservative, 'The Republican Roosevelt' offers a fresh, well-written biographical treatment of one of the most arresting figures of modern American life." E. F. Goldman

+ — N Y Times p14 Ap 11 '54 900w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 9 '54
160w

"This is the right kind of book about T. R. Blum. Blum is not one of the 'incense-swingers,' but neither is he one of the snide critics of a later time who judged Roosevelt by their own age and not by his. Nor does he tire us by repeating the facts we already know well; the book is an interpretation, not another biography. And it is convincing. Most readers will agree with the author that when Roosevelt is finally weighed he will not be found wanting." J. D. Hicks

+ Sat H 37:28 My 1 '54 650w
Yale R ns 43:589 summer '54

BLUM, WALTER J., and KALVEN, HARRY. Uneasy case for progressive taxation. 107p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

336.2 Taxation, Progressive 53-3592

"This study consists of a brief legal history of progressive taxation and an extended examination of the economic, philosophical, political, ethical, and legal arguments which buttress or weaken the doctrine. . . . Walter J. Blum and Harry Kalven are members of the Law Faculty of the University of Chicago. Both authors are graduates of the University of Chicago and its Law School, and both returned to join the Law Faculty in 1946, where they have both worked extensively in the field of federal taxation." Publisher's note

"Progressive-tax theory has been due for an overhauling and the authors do a highly competent job in exposing the vulnerable spots in its utility and sacrifice supports. . . . The work is distinguished by penetrating analysis, comprehensive coverage of sources, and excellent documentation. It should do for this generation what Seligman's work did for the last. And on the score of rigorous and circumspect analysis the new contribution rates high honors in the field." H. M. Groves

+ — Ann Am Acad 291:176 Ja '54 240w
"Scholarly and provocative essay." Haskell Wald

+ Ethics 65:68 O '54 1700w

"A stimulating and highly informative book. . . . No two persons would agree with [the authors'] conclusions as to the weight to be given the respective arguments for and against progression. But few would dispute the timeliness of this survey of progressive taxation. It is a carefully documented, closely reasoned, highly readable discussion of one of the most difficult problems of our troubled times. It fills a vacuum in tax literature. It is not a 'luxury' item. It needed to be written, and it needs to be widely read." Randolph Paul

+ Harvard Law 67:725 F '54 2400w

"Written in a lucid and stimulating style, the essay will be valuable to those concerned with law, economics, taxation, and the ethics of public policy."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 10:75 Mr '54 240w

BLUNDEN, GODFREY. Land and people of Australia. (Portraits of the nations ser) 128p il $2.75 Lippincott

994 [919.4] Australia—Juvenile literature 54-5589

Describes the continent of Australia, its people, its native plants and animals, and traces its history from discovery to the present. For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 50:301 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 100w

"It is not written down nor is it superficial, although it is a broad coverage of history, government, geography and natural backgrounds. A section of excellent photographs, a map and an index are included. One of the best contributions to this useful series." V. H.

+ Horn 30:187 Je '54 100w

"An adequate, if uninspired basic text about Australia. . . . Good reference material."

+ Kirkus 21:789 D 15 '53 150w

"Highly recommended for all young people's collections." M. L. Turk

+ Library J 79:788 Ap 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk 8 p8 Je 13 '54
180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:144 My '54

BLUNT, ANTHONY. Art and architecture in France, 1500 to 1700. (Pelican history of art ser) 312p 192pl $8.50 Penguin

709.44 Art—France. Architecture—France A54-8892

This is the fourth volume of a projected forty-eight volume work: The Pelican History of Art. The material in this is divided into eight chapters, in each of which the author treats the historical background, the architecture, sculpture, and painting of successive periods from 1500 to 1700. Index.

Reviewed by Rexford Newcomb

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 14 '54
90w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:861 My '54 90w

"The relevant social and historical background to changes is clearly and readably explained. The analysis of the development of such artists as German Pilon, Poussin, and Claude is supported by illustrations in sufficient number to allow the reader to appreciate Professor Blunt's points and to form his own opinions. . . . It is a book to enhance and enlarge one's pleasure." D. R. G.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '54 180w

"Blunt's book fills a prominent gap in English-language histories of art. Much has been discovered in the past twenty years about French art and architecture of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and for the first time these efforts have been adequately brought together." S. L. Faison

+ Nation 178:366 Ap 24 '54 210w

Reviewed by Lawrence Gowing

New Statesman & Nation 47:444 Ap 1 '54 500w

Reviewed by Clement Greenberg

N Y Times p7 Ja 17 '54 250w

"At first glance such a scheme might seem overly systematic, but the wealth and variety of material presented in these three hundred pages could hardly have been organized more clearly and efficiently. The lesser ramifications of the subject have for the most part been relegated to the notes, so that the text as a whole has an astonishing degree of continuity and balance. If the author speaks with greater eloquence of Francois Mansert or Nicolas Poussin than of certain earlier masters, no one will begrudge his special enthusiasms, which only serve to enhance an account that remains at all times a happy blend of analytical scholarship and sympathetic insight. We shall be fortunate indeed if other volumes of the Pelican History of Art reach the same level of distinction." H. W. Janson

+ Sat R 37:34 F 6 '54 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 Ap 1 '54
1000w

BOARDMAN, CHARLES WILLIS, and others. Democratic supervision in secondary schools. 557p il $5 Houghton

373 School supervision and supervisors 53-7198

"This book is written on the thesis that the school in a democratic society must be organized and operated upon democratic principles. . . . The organization of this book is similar to that of an earlier book by the same authors, but most chapters have been completely rewritten, the remainder revised and brought up to date, and several new chapters added. Three major aspects of supervision have been considered quite comprehensively: (1) nature and organization of supervision, (2) techniques for improving instruction, and (3) types of supervisory services. A comprehensive list of selected references at the close of each chapter provides opportunity for further study." (J Home Econ) Index.

BOARDMAN, C. W.—Continued

"For those actively engaged in supervision in secondary schools, or for those preparing for supervisory work, this book should be very helpful." Mabel Yates

+ J Home Econ 45:755 D '53 230w

School & Society 77:142 F 28 '53 40w

"A valuable reference book, especially for teachers and students of educational administration; for the administrative and supervisory officers of school systems, large and small; and for members of boards of education. The presence of tabular data, diagrams, and charts, combined with carefully selected bibliographies appended to each chapter, adds to the general usefulness of this publication." O. E. Peterson

+ School 61:554 D '53 550w

BOAS, ERNST PHILIP. Add life to your years. 278p $3.50 McBride co.

618.97 Old age 53-11331

"Taking into account 'human values,' Dr. Boas describes in simple terms the aging process and ordinary hygienic measures concerned with diet, work, recreation, etc. Index." Bookmark

"Dr. Boas knows his subject intimately. Everything he presents is sound and well stated. . . Dr. Boas is an organicist; he sees disease clearly, but one does not feel that he sees the person as a whole. And yet, the individual is indivisible. The exposition of the facts of chronic illness is excellent; as a guide to anticipatory hygiene or health construction, the volume is inadequate. It may alarm some patients, for the elderly are especially vulnerable to iatrogenic disorders. Perhaps its greatest service will be to members of the family of patients with chronic progressive disorders, in helping them to comprehend the nature of the illness of their loved one." E. J. Stieglitz

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1088 Ag '54 410w

Bookmark 13:127 Mr '54 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p 15 My '54

"Nothing romantic here but the title; this earnest, clear writer actually provides a pretty good reference book for laymen, which should speed anyone to his doctor if anything is seriously wrong. Recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:553 Mr 15 '54 90w

BOASE, THOMAS SHERRER ROSS. English art, 1100-1216. (Oxford history of English art) 331p il $10 Oxford

709.42 Art, British. Art—History [53-4155]

"This is volume III of what will be, when completed, an 11-volume 'Oxford History of English Art.' . . The century covered by this volume was a transitional one for English art. Architecture was the principal art. Attention is of course given to sculpture also, which at that time was always a subsidiary of architecture, and to manuscript illumination. The year 1100 was, it will be remembered, only a generation after the Norman conquest. The old Saxon style had gone out of fashion and with almost incredible energy nearly every see in England was building a new cathedral. . . Nearly 100 full pages of illustrations enable the reader to visualize the work to which the text refers. The author, now president of Magdalen College, Oxford, was formerly professor of the history of art in the University of London." Christian Century

"It may be the weight of this material throws out of balance the form of the book as continuous reading; and it is certainly true that the photographs (particularly of architecture) were sacrificed to the needs of manuscript illustration, and illumination itself so compressed that often only initials removed from the context of the page serve inadequately to convey the whole quality of the decorated folio. The ample references of the index convert the survey into an encyclopedia, though in the reading the weight of numbers of monuments is not apparent. Between a special plea and an indiscriminate catalogue is a narrow course: Mr. Boase has safely run it." Stephen Vickers

Canadian Forum 33:282 Mr '54 420w

+ Christian Century 71:738 Je 16 '54 300w

"A few of his ascriptions of provenance to the manuscripts are rash, and when he is so bold as to ascribe to the Empress Matilda influence on 'the marked change in taste which becomes apparent in England in the thirties' it is hard to follow him. In the present state of these studies Mr. Boase's book provides a well-documented and valuable guide to the sources. Excellent half-tone plates of well-chosen subjects help the reader to follow the analysis and comparison of styles." C. R. Cheney

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 17 '53 330w

"Of the three volumes in The Oxford History of English Art published so far this, the last one, is the most important for subject matter and scholarly treatment. . . Professor Boase rises magnificently to the exacting task of incorporating the latest results of research in every branch. He achieves a synthesis in three different fields, dealing fully and at the highest level of scholarship, with every aspect of artistic activity: architecture as well as sculpture and painting." H. H.

+ Spec p162 F 5 '54 150w

"In his survey of our present knowledge of English twelfth-century art, Mr. Boase has taken full account of all aspects of research since the war. The result is quite admirable. The reader will find in the volume a complete and up-to-date statement of modern views on the Romanesque period from the Norman Conquest . . . to the early thirteenth century. . . The author is careful in his assessments, without ever being betrayed into the extravagant or unsubstantiated hypotheses to which some medieval art-historians are prone."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p704 N 6 '53 950w

BOATRIGHT, MODY COGGIN, and others, eds. Folk travelers: ballads, tales, and talk. (Texas folklore soc. Publication) 261p $4 S.M.U. press

398 Folklore—Texas

53-12578

"Texan folklorists follow the migrations of folk ballads, stories, and speech from one country to another in a collection of articles stressing the lore of the Southwest. The vagabonds include anecdotes, animal names, street cries, cattle brands, and the rites of witchcraft; they cross over the borders of states and countries without benefit of passport, undergoing change in passage." Booklist

Booklist 50:194 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 8 '54 600w

"Altogether the pieces in the collection should have great appeal beyond the borders of its state and its subject." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 37:34 Mr 20 '54 270w

"The quality of the articles is high, and the material entertaining as well as informative. The volume will be of special interest to folklorists, not to mention Texans."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:187 Je '54 120w

BOCCA, GEOFFREY. Woman who would be queen; a biography of the Duchess of Windsor. 309p $4 Rinehart

B or 92 Windsor, Wallis (Warfield) duchess of 54-9123

A biography of the Duchess of Windsor, telling of her private life from girlhood in Baltimore, describing her marriages, her meeting with the Prince of Wales, and the subsequent events which brought her into the public eye. Brief bibliography.

Reviewed by Gwen Morgan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 19 '54
450w

"Always a serious interpreter, though at times finding small details to report, Mr. Bocca tracks the if's and might-have-beens of the Windsor history along with the is of it. He reveals the Duke in his equivocal character and feels that the Duchess would have made a fine queen. The ambition intimated in the title is certainly soft-pedalled if considered at all in the book. Reigning today in a cafe society court reminiscent of pomp and circumstance, the Windsors call forth many questions, and if the intimate and interior questions are unanswered, it is not to be wondered at."

Kirkus 22:624 S 1 '54 240w

"Here, there is an irritating pressure. In spite of this the book will be popular in rental libraries and many public libraries will have demand patrons. It belongs in the class with Iles Brody's story of the Duke of Windsor." K. T. Willis

— Library J 79:2097 N 1 '54 80w

"A remarkably 'intimate' biography." Roger Pippett

N Y Times p16 N 21 '54 320w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54
120w

BOCK, EDWIN A. Fifty years of technical assistance; some administrative experience of U.S. voluntary agencies. 65p $1.50 Public adm. clearing house, 1313 E. 60th St, Chicago 37

338.91 Technical assistance

"It 'summarizes the rich experience of representatives of many American voluntary agencies which were operating in every quarter of the globe for half a century before the phrase 'technical assistance' became current.' This excellent condensation of practical experience is based on interviews with 55 persons who have had long experience in technical assistance in health, literacy, and agriculture in less developed countries. It provides sound suggestions for planning and action and it points out many of the dangers." Am J Pub Health

"This little book will be of the greatest value to those who are to undertake or administer public health activities in cultures which are new to them. . . . Special emphasis is placed upon the development of a spirit of self-help and initiative on the part of the people, long-term versus short-term projects, the community approach to problem solving, teamwork, the careful selection of visiting and of indigenous workers; and a sound understanding of the psychology and cultural background involved."

C. E. Turner

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1470 N '54 200w

Booklist 51:32 S 15 '54

BODEN, CLARA NICKERSON. Cut of her jib; il. by Gordon Grant and Walker Cain. 232p $3.50 Coward-McCann

54-10141

A tale of life a hundred years ago in the Massachusetts coastal town of Cotuit, based on the diary of the author's grandmother, kept during the years 1851 to 1854.

Booklist 51:41 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 20w

"It is an appealingly ingenuous tale that will have particular interest for any one who loves the sea and Cape Cod country." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 22 '54
290w

Sat R 37:93 N 13 '54 90w

BODIN, PAUL. Sign of Eros; an English translation of Les amants du Theil, by Pamela Morris [Eng title: Lovers' dilemma]. 280p $3.50 Putnam

53-8148

"Etienne, a rich, middle-aged man, is unable to get through life without the complete devotion of his wife, Catherine, and the physical enjoyment of his mistress, Odile. After a great deal of introspective conversation and several triangular experiments, the three decide that the only thing is for all to live together." New Statesman & Nation

Kirkus 21:681 O 1 '53 180w

Reviewed by Betty Askwith

New Statesman & Nation 47:201 F 13
'54 100w

"There is nothing of levity in this novel by a French professor. It is a tour de force of concentration on the dilemma of highly charged people caught in the toils of an obsessive passion. Not only are Etienne Malherbe, a prosperous business man, his cold but devoted wife, Catherine, and his earthy and desirable mistress, Odile, bedeviled by the rush of their emotions, but the reader, too, is rather overwhelmed." Gertrude Buckman

N Y Times p39 N 15 '53 350w

"The romantic notion that Frenchmen know all there is to know about love is finally laid to rest in this novel in which the author approaches his subject with all the finesse of a backward adolescent." D. R. McD.

— San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ja 17 '54
250w

"Etienne's design for living is less acceptable to his mistress than to his wife, but she consents to it, and the trio are led by their emotions into conduct which some readers may consider far-fetched indeed. . . . The spectacle of three people so incapacitated by their excitement about each other that, for months on end, they can think of nothing else, may in any case be too much for us stockish Anglo-Saxons. When, in addition, they are self-obsessed, humourless, and otherwise tiresome, the oddity of their behaviour seems insufficient compensation." L. A. G. Strong

— Spec p190 F 12 '54 190w

"M. Bodin shows considerable psychological insight in dealing with his characters, but their never-ending jockeying for position soon becomes tiresome, and they hardly seem to be worth the time and trouble he spends on them—save possibly Odile."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 12 '54
200w

BODINE, A. AUBREY. Chesapeake bay and tidewater [introd. by Mark S. Watson]. 144p il $10 Hastings house

975.5 [917.55] Chesapeake bay 54-12939

A photographic study of the Chesapeake Bay and its adjoining cities and country. There are 200 photographs selected from the photographer's thousands of pictures of the Bay and tidewater Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia. Brief descriptive text. Index.

"Probably too rich for most library budgets, but this is the perfect gift book for anyone interested in the section, or in photography." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:2463 D 15 '54 90w

"The book is a labor of love by a highly talented photographer who is a resident of the region and therefore was very clearly dealing with his own. Any one who appreciates good photography can enjoy the book, but any one with roots in the Chesapeake region will find in it an astonishing emotional appeal as well. You will not find a better gift book for a former resident of Maryland or Virginia."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 28
'54 110w

"Remarkable in themselves, the book's photographs are reproduced in such a fashion that nothing has been lost of the fine art of the camera man and the infinite patience he has given to the choice of targets and the achievement of the purpose of the picture." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p32 N 21 '54 600w

BODINGTON, NANCY (SHELLEY SMITH, pseud). Afternoon to kill. 176p $2.50 Harper 53-11868

Mystery story.

Booklist 50:343 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

Kirkus 21:723 N 1 '53 120w

"The consequence is bright amusement mixed with a tearful period piece all of it deftly juggled." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 7 '54 110w

"It is, as one expects of Smith, admirably written, rather like a subtler and more economic Joseph Shearing in its fine sense of crime-in-period. But it concludes with what Harper calls 'a lovely surprise ending'—and what you may well consider a piffling and unworthy trick. You'll surely enjoy reading the book, but may be left with a keen desire to strangle Miss Smith and the editorial staff of Harper." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 31 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p29 F 14 '54 40w

"Pleasant period piece." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat 37:34 Mr 27 '54 20w

"The story is graceful, absorbing and real; at the end of the day the psychologist, a little less self-confident, flies off in his repaired plane to his pupil. The book would have risen right out of the ruck, if Miss Smith had not at the end, with the equivalent of a school-girl's giggle, added what the publishers call 'a really surprising twist.' The last page makes nonsense of the whole story. I suppose one could tear it out." Raymond Postgate

+ — Spec p768 D 25 '53 260w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54 140w

BOELL, EDGAR JOHN, ed. Dynamics of growth processes. See Society for the study of development and growth

BOGAN, LOUISE. Collected poems, 1923-53. 126p $3 Noonday

811

54-9946

A collection of all the poetry which the author wishes preserved of her work to date. Includes several new poems.

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 70w

"Speaking as one reader—if I admire objectively the poems of the first three (the earlier) sections of Miss Bogan's collection, with the poems of section four, I find myself forgetting the thee and me of it. I am no longer being objective about the excellences of a poet who leaves me shrugging down to the Neapolitan marrow of my bones. I am immediately engaged. Miss Bogan began in beauty, but she has aged to magnificence, and I find myself thinking that the patina outshines the gold stain." John Ciardi

+ Nation 178:445 My 22 '54 360w

Reviewed by Kenneth Rexroth

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 '54 230w

"Louise Bogan's poems adhere to the center of English with a dark lyrical force. What she has to say is important. How she says it is pleasing. She is a compulsive poet first, a stylist second. When compulsion and style meet we have a strong, inimitable Bogan poem. There is relatively little technical innovation in her poems." Richard Eberhart

+ N Y Times p6 My 30 '54 650w

"The evidence of the poems is that this poet has rarely written except when impelled by the strong experience of the private person. Though adhering more closely to traditional forms than many poets find will meet their case, the language of the poems is as well of now as not, their temper of mind and presuppositions perfectly so." Leonie Adams

+ Poetry 85:165 D '54 1450w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 18 '54 140w

"Louise Bogan is mistress of precise images, and commands an extensive range of poetic accents and prosodic effects; she is also a musician, whose notes are as crystalline as those of Chopin's Preludes. More than this, one cannot read far in her pages without realizing that at the core of her poetry is mind-stuff which it is fashionable to call metaphysical." B. R. R.

+ Sat R 37:19 J1 3 '54 90w

BOILEAU, PIERRE, and NARCEJAC, THOMAS. Woman who was no more [tr. from the French by Geoffrey Sainsbury] [Eng title: Woman who was]. 202p $2.75 Rinehart

54-6374

Mystery story.

Kirkus 22:128 F 15 '54 130w

"The three characters are well and clearly drawn; the story well paced; the mood and suspense successfully maintained to the end. Plot and style are reminiscent of Simenon." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 79:550 Mr 15 '54 80w

"The end, the solution of the mysterious messages, is an astounding turn that holds creative validity both for plot and characterization. One cannot question its credibility, for the authors brilliantly succeed in personifying an evil force that knows no quality of kindness or mercy. That it remains triumphantly in power is a sardonic but interesting deviation from the usual pattern of justice being served at the close." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 11 '54 400w

"I haven't read the original French version, but I've read enough other stories by each writer to know that they are far more literate and readable than anyone could gather from Geoffrey Sainsbury's opaque translation. The plot, however, is such that it's worth plowing through even this graceless English version." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p21 My 9 '54 110w

"Macabre, skillful, told with creeping suspense." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 13 '54 100w

"The Messrs. Boileau and Narcejac play an entirely new variation on the double-indemnity theme, keeping the reader's interest riveted on M. Ravinel as he passes through various stages of horror, doubt, and fear. They also, believe it or not, employ flashes of ironic humor and tie matters up in a weirdly untypical climax." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 37:34 My 22 '54 140w

"The story of a commercial traveller who may or may not have murdered his wife, really grips; but the trick ending can be too easily foreseen, and this particular mystery should be impenetrable." Penelope Houston

+ — Spec p40 J1 2 '54 50w

"The mystery is not likely to puzzle the reader as much as poor Ravinel, but Authors Boileau and Narcejac keep the reader guessing the rest of it to the Gallic end."

Time 63:122 Ap 26 '54 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 4 '54 200w

BOLES, PAUL DARCY. Beggars in the sun. 217p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12506

The narrator is Carp Rambo, a singer and handyman in a southern town. In order to buy a hound dog for his wife Carp takes a steady job at the Magnolia Bar. His difficulties arise when he buys Bo from Clint Hattram. Carp is in the poor white trash class; Clint is a wealthy playboy, but Carp nearly succeeds in taking Clint's wife away from him. Carp's way of handling the situation is an eye-opener for Clint.

Booklist 51:83 O 15 '54

"A simple story, of sudden emotions, unashamed and to a certain extent exempt from the restrictions of a more conventional morality, provides a transient type of entertainment."

Kirkus 22:368 Je 15 '54 170w

"A rather moving, somewhat tense and well-motivated story. . . [It] is both simple and subtle; the plot is negligible; the characters develop well out of Carp's telling. The author's knowledge of the South and his feeling for its people appear to be extensive. They exhibit dimensions outside of their accent. The use of folk dialect in a novel is a delicate and chancy matter, frequently sloping off into burlesque or caricature, less often into satire and not unusually offending the sensibilities. The author has, on the whole, successfully eluded most of the gimcracks—though he is addicted to speaking of a 'power' of this, a 'bait' of that and a 'mort' or 'scult' of the other, and to jam his wool hat down a little too firmly. But he is all right otherwise." G. M.

+ — N Y Times p25 S 19 '54 440w

New Yorker 30:146 D 18 '54 90w

"It is more difficult to write an interesting story about a good man than about an evil one. That Mr. Boles has succeeded is an indication of his skill. . . This book has a quality of its own; it is written with a sure hand. Mr. Boles has the gift of bringing a character to life with a phrase, a line or two. Even the hound pup remains with us as a real personality."

C. R. Sumner

+ Sat R 37:13 S 25 '54 500w

BOLINDER, GUSTAF. Devilman's jungle. tr. from the Swedish by M. A. Michael. 190p il $4 Roy pubs.

960 [916] Africa—Religion 54-6924

A Swedish anthropologist has written this account of the tribal magic and ritual of some of West and South Africa. "The main emphasis has been given to what is most typical for certain areas: the secret societies of Sierra Leone and Liberia, human sacrifices and cannibalism among the peoples of the Niger Delta, and of the powerful witch-doctors of South Africa." (Publisher's note) No index.

Booklist 51:10 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:377 Je 15 '54 250w

"Not recommended." R. S. Taylor

— Library J 79:1306 Jl '54 100w

"Professor Bolinder writes well for the general reader." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 47:734 Je 5 '54 360w

N Y Herald Tribune BK R p9 Ag 22 '54 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 18 '54 250w

BOLL, HEINRICH. Acquainted with the night; tr. by Richard Graves. 200p $3 Holt

54-10516

"Moving drearily among the moral and material ruins of a defeated nation, [this novel] describes three days in the life of a man who, because he earns a poor living, drinks too much, and has fits of bad temper, feels unworthy to live with his wife and children, and so separates from them. He sends them small sums of money, and wanders alone through the nightmarish city like a victim of shock, responding only to the quick warmth of a glass of schnapps." Sat R

Booklist 51:83 O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:500 Ag 1 '54 150w

"The story is told by Kate and Fred in two first-person-singular narratives—a dangerous experiment. Yet the 37-year-old author has resisted all temptations the form offers. His interior monologues have a brilliance and insight worthy of Schnitzler, and they combine to tell a unified story. Some of Kate's and Fred's reminiscences begin and end a bit too abruptly, but the author makes up for this with his Dostoevsky-like intensity, the quiet sadness which permeates every sentence of the story." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p42 O 17 '54 320w

"In a novel otherwise undistinguished except for its occasional telling symbols for the spiritual ugliness of urban Germany, Mr. Böll achieves something—he conveys the quality of sad mutual tenderness which can persist in a relationship between a man and a woman in which love, though besieged by the forces of abominable ill-fate, has not dwindled to a mere outward habitual expression, or vanished entirely. For the most part, though, the writing is colorless and the author seems often as uncertain of purpose as his characters." Jerome Stone

Sat R 37:17 S 16 '54 280w

"Böll's picture of the Ruhr reeks of human ruin. Its smells jar the senses; its sounds are grotesque. Böll writes with simple beauty, but often he treats despair with that detailed evenness that the dullest of The New Yorker writers apply to domestic crises in suburban Connecticut."

Time 64:106 O 4 '54 300w

"A fine book it is. Brief, unpretentious, technically conventional, it is worth reading because it is written out of the part of life that matters. American fiction more and more retreats into the suburbs. Geographically that may be all right, but spiritually it is slow death. Böll, on the other hand, has the courage and the talent to tackle his subject where it is most living." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 44:315 winter '55 550w

BOLTON, MIMI DU BOIS. Merry-go-round family; il. by Oscar Liebman. 245p $2.75 Coward-McCann

54-6319

The adventures of the Turner family who in 1910 bought a traveling merry-go-round and went on a tour of fairs and resorts in Wisconsin. For grades four to six.

Booklist 50:325 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:1 Ja 1 '54 70w

"Recommended for ages 10-12." Virginia Russell

+ Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p34 Je 1 '54 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:141 My '54

BOLTON, WHITNEY. Silver spade; the Conrad Hilton story; with a foreword by Conrad Hilton. 230p il $3.75 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Hilton, Conrad Nicholson 54-9988

"A biography of Conrad Hilton, and his fabulous hotel empire, has its symbol of success the silver spade used to break ground for each new site. Now the owner of the largest international chain of hotels in the world, which includes the Waldorf and the Plaza, Hilton looks ahead to more in Pakistan, Manila and Cuba. A devout Catholic, who makes practical use of his belief in the efficacy of prayer, Hilton roused his staff at 6:15 to pray for the purchase of the Waldorf, concluded the transaction with another round of prayer. And at 66, he still dreams hotels with the same ardor of his youth when he suggested that his family take in drummers to repair the family finances back in 1907." (Kirkus) No index.

"Bolton has done well by his subject, packing a great deal of detail into a comparatively short work." Philip Hampson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 26 '54 360w

Kirkus 22:474 Jl 15 '54 160w

"A well-written biography of an outstanding American businessman, strongly recommended for general readers." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1395 Ag '54 140w

Sat R 37:32 N 27 '54 250w

BOLTON, WILLIAM. What to do until the doctor comes. 145p $2 Reilly & Lee

614.88 First aid in illness and injury 53-4006

"This volume, prepared by the associate director of the Bureau of Health Education, American Medical Association, is intended for the public as a guide to emergencies occurring in the home, the office, and the factory. It comprises 135 concise articles alphabetically arranged and including modern points of view on such events as atomic disasters as well as the conventional types of accidents." Am J Pub Health

"The volume can be recommended for its intended purpose and as a useful source book for health education of the public." R. M. Atwater

+ Am J Pub Health 44:542 Ap '54 100w

"This unpretentious volume would make a helpful addition to any home library." Marion Carey

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 27 '53 80w

"The author, who is associate director of the Bureau of Health Education of the American Medical Association, is well qualified to write of those common emergencies and more customary illnesses that happen to families, and, particularly, what to do about them immediately upon discovery."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 24 '54 90w

BOMBARD, ALAIN. Voyage of the Hérétique; the story of Dr. Bombard's 65-day solitary Atlantic crossing in a collapsible life raft; tr. by Brian Connell [Eng title: Bombard story]. 214p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

910.45 Voyages and travels. Survival (after airplane accidents, shipwrecks, etc.) 54-5813

"Another solitary crossing of the Atlantic this time by a French doctor, in a rubber dingy or life raft, with the purpose of demonstrating that a castaway can live for months on what the sea provides, drinking ocean water, and rain water, eating raw fish and drinking fish juice and plankton while laboriously crossing great stretches of ocean—the tale of a harsh experience which nearly cost a life." Library J

Booklist 51:11 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 15 '54 120w

Kirkus 22:184 Mr 1 '54 180w

"Recommended for collections of sea literature, possibly for the general reader." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 79:853 My 1 '54 100w

"Doubtless there will be dispute of the applicability of the author's discoveries to every ocean. But they are significant, and there can be no doubt of the courage that sustained him on his lonely voyage, or the skill with which he describes an extraordinary experience." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 20 '54 350w

"Dr. Bombard's bold and gallant adventure will interest medical scientists and sailor alike. His book is certain to take a high place in the literature of small-boat voyages." Walter Hayward

+ N Y Times p12 Je 6 '54 320w

New Yorker 30:100 Je 19 '54 210w

Reviewed by R. H. Dillon

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 3 '54 500w

Reviewed by Percy Knauth

Sat R 37:16 Jl 17 '54 1050w

"His book, whether read as adventure or a serious scientific document, is as stimulating as anything of its kind now in print." Peter Vansittart

+ Spec p706 D 11 '53 650w

Time 63:128 My 17 '54 330w

"This book is as unique and memorable as the enterprise it records. . . It is well in our times that a man should seem to be throwing away his life, and yet save it, in order, perhaps, that countless others may lift up their hearts and live."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p776 D 4 '53 950w

BOND, JOHN R. Sports cars in action. 254p il $10 Holt

629.22 Automobiles. Automobile racing 54-10517

"Complete facts and figures on 36 outstanding sports cars of the world. Three categories: competition sports, dual purpose sports, and touring sports cars. Wealth of information on handling and racing. A nice quarto volume, fully illustrated." Library J

"Bond hopes one day to own a small car plant, and says of his book: 'It is for owners, buyers and dreamers,' which seems a competent summing up. Superbly illustrated with photographs." Robert Cronie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 21 '54 160w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:2336 D 1 '54 20w

"This book is for the owner or prospective owner rather than the general reader with a fancy for the mystique of the sports car. For the intense look under the hood of the sports car owner's mind, plus a fuller listing, Ralph Stein's 'Sports Cars of the World' is more satisfactory. 'Sports Cars in Action' gives the technical data an owner finds lovely to read." Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p24 D 5 '54 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 28 '54 70w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:23 D 4 '54 60w

BOND, OTTO FERDINAND. Reading method; an experiment in college French. 368p $6.50 Univ. of Chicago press

440.7 French language—Study and teaching

"Appearing at a moment when the objectives, methods, and results of foreign-language study in the United States are the subject of much earnest and controversial discussion, Professor Bond's book makes an eloquent defense of the extensive-reading method as the one cure for all our ills. It is based on two main assumptions: that the ability to read one foreign language is what the average student wants and is all he can achieve in the one or two years usually allotted to this study; and that this is all the average teacher is capable of imparting. Oral-aural techniques are used only so far as they contribute to the chief aim, the understanding of the written language." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"Teachers of language and students of educational method, history, and research will find The Reading Method not only an authoritative definition of the method which makes reading in the second language, from the very beginning, the foundation of other language activities (and all that this implies) but also a record of the development and evaluation of an educational concept and its concomitants. The reader will be impressed by the documentation and the objective data presented, but he should not be discouraged by the tables scattered throughout the text." F. F. Powers

+ School R 62:310 My '54 600w

"Much of the book is taken up with detailed accounts of the experimental development of the method at the University of Chicago, of false starts, of administrative difficulties and classroom problems peculiar perhaps to one situation only. There is, however, a great deal of practical material for those who wish to make a genuine experiment with the method. Statistics on student success and failure make dull reading but should be faced by the open-minded reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:214 Je '54 240w

BONHOEFFER, DIETRICH. Life together; tr. and with an introd. by John W. Doberstein. 122p $1.75 Harper

248 Christian life 54-5848

Brief discussion on theological matters by a German pastor who was executed by the Nazis in 1945, because he refused to follow Nazi orders on how to write and preach.

Booklist 51:75 O 15 '54

"This is profoundly religious literature."

+ Christian Century 71:1304 O 27 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:201 O '54

BONI, MARGARET (BRADFORD), ed. Fireside book of love songs; arranged for the piano by Norman Lloyd; introduction by Irwin Edman; illustrated by Alice and Martin Provensen. 324p $6 Simon & Schuster

784 Songs M54-46

"Here are the romantic melodies and lyrics that lovers have loved over the centuries. They range from Kathleen Mavourneen and the haunting Black Is the Color of My True Love's Hair to Verdi's Celeste Aida, from Love's Old Sweet Song to what is possibly the most magnificent of all tributes to a beloved, Handel's great aria, Where'er You Walk. While most of the songs are American, English, and Irish, the book includes songs from many other countries." Publisher's note

Booklist 51:168 D 15 '54

Reviewed by Norman Ross

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 12 '54 210w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '54 270w

"A lovely book withal. Quality merchandise." + Kirkus 22:773 N 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:2454 D 15 '54 100w

"This contains ample riches. Songs of many peoples are here . . . with airs from folk singing and great composers alike, in Norman Lloyd's fresh, playable arrangements, simple, but, as Mr. Edman points out, often 'artfully so'. Pictorially the Fireside Book embodies the very spirit of the songs. The Provensens' color embellishments are idyllic and wholly beguiling. The book is a treasure." S. H. Adams

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 14 '54 400w

"This new Fireside collection lives up to its popular predecessors in interest, appearance and usability, though I do miss the notes of the two earlier books. Now that they have done Folk Songs, Favorite American Songs and Love Songs, what will these willful editors do next? Will it be Minstrel Songs? Such a volume would draw on the richest field of American popular song." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p10 N 21 '54 700w

"Not every old melody in this book will be known to everyone, perhaps, but the overwhelming majority will, even though they come from many lands—the U.S. as a matter of course, but songs from England as well, and from Germany, Scotland, France, Spain, Finland, Ireland and Denmark for example." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 26 '54 500w

BONNELL, JOHN SUTHERLAND. Practice and power of prayer. 93p $1.50 Westminster press

264.1 Prayer 54-5654

A book based on sermons preached at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York and on the National Vespers program of the American Broadcasting Company. Contents: Prayer—a limitless power; The science of true prayer; Does anything happen when you pray? Will your prayers for others affect their lives? The Lord's Prayer interpreted; Jesus' prayer in Gethsemane; Answering your questions on prayer.

"A helpful summary of Dr. Bonnell's belief in the value of prayers, personal and intercessory, with satisfying answers to questions posed by many doubters."

+ Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 20w

"That this is a small book is one of its merits, and its very brevity is part of its message. One of the most important things Dr. Bonnell has to say is just this: If you have doubts about the efficacy of prayer, don't try to settle them by reading big books on the subject, just try it. It is well to avoid 'vain repetitions' in talking or writing about prayer as well as in praying. Dr. Bonnell does." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:706 Je 9 '54 100w

"A good book to put into the hands of seeking souls."

+ Kirkus 22:105 F 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:446 Mr 1 '54 160w

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM. Baseball rookies who made good; foreword by Joe Reichler. 173p il $2.50 Knopf

927.96357 Baseball—Biography 54-5303

"Stories of more than forty baseball stars; their early trials and their rise to the top, with records and vital statistics. Fully illustrated with photographs of the great players and great plays." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:424 J1 1 '54

"A solid hit for anyone who follows major league baseball." Harry Molter

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 110w

Kirkus 22:121 F 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:710 Ap 15 '54 20w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 4 '54 20w

"This is just the thing for young hero worshippers." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 50w

BONNER, PAUL HYDE. Glorious mornings; stories of shooting and fishing. 228p il $3.75 Scribner

54-5914

Twelve stories of hunting and fishing in places as varied as South Carolina; Dutchess county, New York; and Scotland.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:74 Je '54 250w

Booklist 50:320 Ap 15 '54

"The Glorious Mornings is a welcome addition to any library. It is readable, enjoyable, and perfectly paced for pleasant relaxation." George Strickler

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 9 '54 240w

Kirkus 22:74 F 1 '54 140w

"Recommended for large collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:622 Ap 1 '54 60w

"What lingers after a reading of these stories is not the feelings of men but the pictures of moor and marsh and sky. Gray daylight is breaking on the salt marshes and thousands of ducks are headed out of the bay in a solid cloud bank of beating wings. There is the melody of a mountain stream and sun on the swirling water. There are pines against the blue, dogs racing in the wind-billowed broomsedge, and birds climbing fast and high." Walter Havighurst

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 21 '54 600w

"Mr. Bonner differs from many erudite sportsmen in that he does not mind being amused at what is sometimes involved. His stories, written over a period of twenty years, are a pleasant mixture of weather-wisdom and urbanity. Whatever weaknesses some may have, it must be said of all that the background is bracing." Lewis Vogler

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 14 '54 500w

BONNER, P. H.—Continued

"Pleasant, dreamy reading."

+ New Yorker 30:136 Ap 17 '54 20w

"Mr. Bonner has apparently been at this sort of thing since he was fourteen and he knows what he is talking about. The stories, even when not very good, all bear the stamp of authenticity." William Murray

+ Sat R 37:27 Mr 27 '54 270w

BONTEMPS, ARNA WENDELL. Story of George Washington Carver; il. by Harper Johnson. 181p $1.50 Grosset

B or 92 Carver, George Washington—Juvenile literature 52-13746

"Arna Bontemps tells the story of how little orphan George, who is always wanting to know 'how come and what for,' leaves a comfortable home to find a place where a Negro boy can go to school. From the time he enters school to the day he dies, Carver works diligently to help his people. His scientific discoveries and his kind acts are sympathetically recorded in this [story]." San Francisco Chronicle

"The humility of true greatness and his avid quest for knowledge about the world combine to make Carver an inspiration to all young readers. The simplicity of style of this well-rounded biography should prove valuable for upper grade remedial reading as well as for character building and developing and understanding of minority groups." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 30w

"Addressed to a slightly younger age group than was Anne Terry White's recent study, this is simpler in approach. It is not quite incisive enough in its summary of Carver's achievements, but it is, none the less, a moving portrait, unsentimentalized, written with restraint and sensitivity." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p16 Je 20 '54 40w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

New Yorker 30:220 N 27 '54 50w

"Engagingly told story." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 60w

BOOKS and the mass market [by] Harold K. Guinzburg [and others]. 66p $2 Univ. of Ill. press

655.5 Booksellers and bookselling 53-12608

"Three leaders of publishing survey the contemporary status of the American book, in the 1952 Windsor lectures in librarianship at the University of Illinois. The president of a publishing house concludes that book publishing is less jeopardized by current pressures for conformity than other media. The economic consultant to the American Book Publishers Council shows how economic factors influence the publishing and distribution of books. The editorial vice-president of a paper-backed books firm describes methods publishers use to expand the book audience. Of special interest to librarians and members of the book trade." Booklist

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 F 28 '54 220w

"While Books and the Mass Market supplies some answers it raises even more questions. This is not a weakness of the book but its strength, for the questions are raised deliberately and are aimed at all those who—working together—may be able eventually to supply the answers. It is both refreshing and challenging that libraries are seen by all three speakers as an appropriate part of that group to whom these questions should be addressed." Lester Asheim

+ Library Q 24:271 Jl '54 1050w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 21 '54 60w

BOONE, JOHN ALLEN. Kinship with all life. 157p $2.50 Harper

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 54-6901

The larger part of this book is an account of the author's association with the famous motion picture dog star: Strongheart. He describes his efforts to communicate with Strongheart and the dog's responses. The later chapters describe his experiences with other animals, reptiles, insects, and even bacteria.

"While the ideas are commendable and the experiences succinctly told, still there is that aura of incredibility that often surrounds a Hollywood production. Probably the general reaction to this little book will be, 'It's unbelievable!'" E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1053 Je 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 250w

"A distinct addition to any natural history library."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:173 Jl '54

BORDEN, MARY (LADY SPEARS). Margin of error. 249p $3.50 Longmans

54-10863

An airplane from England to Damba in Africa crashes in the Sahara. Nine people, some flying to Africa for Christmas, are saved, but one of the nine, a priest, dies before they are rescued. The novel describes the effects of the crash on the lives of each of the survivors.

Booklist 51:83 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 19 '54 300w

"Here is a novel of high dramatic potential, its effectiveness enhanced by the restraint with which it is written. Its opening sentences foreshadow catastrophe, and it skirts tragedy throughout—thereby developing an almost unbearable suspense. Yet it ultimately arrives at an intelligently happy ending." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '54 1200w

"Explicit political commentary runs through the colonials' stories and a spiritual magnifying glass examines the adults committed to the adventure, so that the whole, although not in perfect cohesion, is a multiple personality portrait."

+ — Kirkus 22:411 Jl 1 '54 200w

"Fine novel heartily recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by Douglas Hewitt

Manchester Guardian p4 S 28 '54 150w

"There are oases of good story-telling in this novel, but its pervading feeling is one of irritation with overt criticism of a government for which Miss Borden has little respect." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 3 '54 900w

Reviewed by John Barkham

N Y Times p28 O 3 '54 450w

"This threadbare plot is neither concealed nor improved by the glaze of professional, omnipotent tolerance and understanding deposited upon it by its present manipulator, Miss Borden."

New Yorker 30:140 S 25 '54 90w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat ■ 37:34 N 20 '54 250w

Reviewed by John Metcalf

Spec p420 O 1 '54 200w

BORGESE, GIUSEPPE ANTONIO. Foundations of the world republic. 328p $6.50 Univ. of Chicago press

321.041 International federation 53-12892

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by R. E. Turner

Am Hist ■ 59:975 Jl '54 350w

"A philosophical work which makes fascinating reading, whether or not one is interested in world government."

+ Current Hist 26:64 Ja '54 120w

"A strange book, at times illuminating, at others quite opaque, in which the late Italian philosopher and literary critic argues, foretells, and urges the coming of a world government."

Foreign Affairs 32:668 Jl '54 20w

"A leader of the Committee to Frame a World Constitution at the University of Chicago, the late Giuseppe Borgese sought in this volume to give a philosophic base to the preliminary draft of that constitution, here reprinted as an appendix. To this task he brought his phenomenal learning in literature and political theory. He also incorporated in it his own version of the English language, with the result that the book defies casual reading. . . Triple-plated with allusions which often confuse the argument, the style is unnecessarily intricate and abstruse. In spite of these distractions, the book is worth reading even if one considers it utopian, since it deals with one of the obvious alternatives to the present world of uncertain international relations."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:89 Mr '54 240w

BORGHESE, IUNIO VALERIO. Sea devils; tr. from the Italian, Decima flottiglia mas, by James Cleugh, and adapted by the author. 261p il maps $4.50 Regnery

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Italian 54-4054

"Beginning during the wanton assault on Ethiopia and continuing much more efficiently as Hitler's ally in World War II, Italy developed a type of secret submarine weapon which for a time was a serious threat to her enemies and especially to British vessels. The gist of it was the idea of a one-man or two-man guided torpedo. . . This book, a translation and adaptation from the Italian original by the commander of this service, tells the whole story of the achievement." Christian Century

Booklist 51:103 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O ■ '54 350w

Christian Century 71:1181 S 29 '54 170w

New Yorker 30:186 O 9 '54 130w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 180w

BORMANN, MARTIN, and BORMANN, GERDA (BUCH). Letters; the private correspondence between Martin Bormann and his wife from January 1943 to April 1945; ed. with an introd. and notes by H. R. Trevor-Roper [tr. by R. H. Stevens]. 200p il $3.75 British bk. centre

B or 92

[A54-3739]

"This correspondence between Hitler's adviser and his wife, covers the period January 1943 to April 1945. It is dull and on the whole inconsequential except as it shows the character and mentality of a man who exerted a powerful influence over the government of Germany." Library J

"Excellent editing and introduction by H. R. Trevor-Roper. An essential item for all war collections." Donald Wasson

Library J 79:2209 N 15 '54 120w

"If any private soldier was chosen at random from the British (or German) Army and his letters home published, they would be more entertaining and of more historical value than these. Published in the original German, they might help to discredit the Nazi legend. But they are probably too dreary to serve even this purpose. In English translation they have no justification at all." A. J. P. Taylor

— Manchester Guardian p4 F 26 '54 300w

Time 64:126 N ■ '54 220w

"At first the banality, the tedious repetition of this correspondence seems merely ridiculous. But there are dangerous moments for the reader when the absurdity of the letters becomes, as it evidently has become for M. François Genoud (from whom the publishers received them), almost touching. It is as well at such moments to remember that it was a characteristic of many Nazis, especially the smaller S.A. fry, to indulge in these orgies of sentimental family affection and at the same time to be proud to persecute Jews or Poles."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p243 Ap 16 '54

650w

— + Yale R n s 44:289 winter '55 170w

BOSANQUET, MARY. People with six legs; il. by Rachel Reckitt. 92p $2 Transatlantic

"Like Alice, the heroine of this story lives in two worlds: the ordinary one of her family and the world where she is tiny enough to ride on the back of a dragonfly and follow along ant passages. Nature facts and a philosophy of living are incorporated in this little story, but it is the fantasy that will appeal to the imaginations of boys and girls." Library J

"Recommended for ages 7-10." M. C. Skinner
+ Library J 79:1324 Jl '54 70w

Reviewed by Philippa Downes

New Statesman & Nation 46:732 D ■ '53 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p18 N 27 '53 30w

BOSSARD, JAMES HERBERT SIWARD. Parent and child: studies in family behavior. 308p $5 Univ. of Pa. press

301.427 [392.3] Family. Parent and child 53-9551

"Based on more than five hundred original case studies, this book considers the ultimate behavioral significance of tiny continuous factors which, integrated, make living in any two families fundamentally different experiences. Among factors considered as affecting family behavior are: size of family; father's occupation; ownership of pets; childhood visiting; interclass marriages." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by M. F. Nimkoff

Am Soc R 19:366 Je '54 300w

"Bossard writes in a clear and easy style, which also bears the marks of maturity. There is a useful brief summary at the close of each chapter. This book should appeal to the sophisticated general reader who is interested in child development." M. F. Nimkoff

+ Ann Am Acad 291:181 Ja '54 450w

"Although this volume is concerned with research developments and findings it is not highly technical and is beneficial reading for the layman as well as the social scientist. Extensive references are provided throughout the book." J. B. O'Reilly

+ J Home Econ 46:277 Ap '54 180w

"Interesting, beneficial reading recommended for parents, teachers and students of the social sciences. For public and college library collections." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 78:1678 O 1 '53 150w

"An unusually interesting exploration of various areas of family life." S. R. Arnstein
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 10 '54 100w

BOSSI, ELDA. Child with a flower; tr. by C. J. Richards. 205p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)
301.427 Mothers. Parent and child 54-8771

"Concerning the psychological relation between a mother and her child, this records the author's experience in motherhood from the moment when her newly born opened its eyes through the first three or four years of the baby's life." N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■

Booklist 50:354 My 15 '54

BOSSI, ELDA—Continued

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 9 '54
60w

"A highly sensitive and perceptive portrait of motherhood in its psychic and physical realities."

+ Kirkus 22:52 Ja 15 '54 160w

"An introspective, quiet story such as this too frequently has limited appeal. To those who read it, it will give pleasure and a feeling that, at least in some spot on this troubled earth, families still have the capacity for happiness. Recommended for general collections." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:446 Mr 1 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 21 '54 30w

"Not in all these pages does daughter have a name. Perhaps it is poetic to leave her nameless, but it may explain why 'my child' tends to be a shadow rather than a flesh-and-blood child with grace and with faults. Yet in spite of these serious shortcomings there is much to recommend this highly subjective monograph of mother and child." Gertrude Samuels

— + N Y Times p55 D 5 '54 450w

"For all the universality of its larger aspect, such a book as Mrs. Bossi's has a specialized appeal. There are those, and among them this reviewer, who may find 205 pages of concentrated enchantment with every detail of motherhood . . . just a bit wearying. But perhaps I am carping at a book which will undeniably strike an answering chord in the breasts of many mothers." S. H. Hay

Sat R 37:41 Je 19 '54 160w

"No one, and certainly no mother of young children, should be put off reading her book by its rather rarefied tone and the horrible historic present in which it is written. It is a good and profoundly sensible book because Signora Bossi respects life and has the imagination to recognise and the patience to accept its manifestations, whether it is her child's logic or the endless dawdle in the bath for the pleasure of playing with water." Carol Stewart

+ — Spec p350 S 17 '54 110w

BOTKIN, BENJAMIN ALBERT, ed. Side-walks of America; folklore, legends, sagas, traditions, customs, songs, stories and sayings of city folk. 605p $5.95 Bobbs

398 City and town life. U.S.—Social life and customs. Folklore—U.S. 54-9485

A collection of the popular traditions and folklore of the city in the United States. "The hero of this book—the city—has many faces and many voices. Not all of them are here, for there are as many as there are cities in the United States. But enough of them have been brought together to give a composite portrait, a folk's-eye view of urban America, of which we are all inescapably a part whether we live in cities or not." (Intro) Includes some music in simplified form. Index.

Booklist 51:163 D 15 '54

Reviewed by Walter Blair

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 12 '54
400w

Reviewed by R. M. Hammond

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 2 '54 490w

"One of the most rewarding collections in its field. It is a good book to pick up from time to time for a few minutes of delightful reading. Even when read from cover to cover it is equally fascinating." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 5 '54
700w

"A rich and varied collection. . . Most of this is modern folklore in modern dress. As such, it records much of what we and our fathers and grandfathers saw, heard, talked, smelled, sang, danced, ate, drank and dreamed. In this folklore of the American city from 1880 to today the city dweller will find much of himself." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p50 D 5 '54 800w
New Yorker 30:153 D 18 '54 110w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Man and beast; il. by W. T. Mars. 118p $3 Harcourt

54-9722

Five short stories in which the suspense is supplied by crisis or tragedy in the relationships between man and animal.

Booklist 51:108 N 1 '54

"Five scintillating stories."

+ Bookmark 14:34 N '54 10w

"This provocative collection of short stories about wild and domestic animals explores the psychological borderland where man and animal meet. Some of these stories have the quiet detachment of fable, others touch the drama of real life. All of them are written with the imaginative simplicity that will add young readers to Phyllis Bottome's audience." Anzia Yezierska

+ N Y Times p36 O 10 '54 400w

"Every addict of animal stories will be attracted to Phyllis Bottome's 'Man and Beast'—'five stories about remarkable relations between human beings and animals.' Essentially they are psychological tales equally penetrating with both the human and animal characters." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:34 N 27 '54 130w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Secret stair [Eng title: Against whom?]. 252p $3.50 Harcourt

54-6391

Pictures the life in a tuberculosis sanatorium near Davos, Switzerland. The head doctor and his beautiful nurse-wife are estranged because she had let a wounded Nazi die. The three other doctors, one of them a woman, and some of the patients are drawn into the psychological impasse. An imperious young woman patient stirs up more trouble, but the situation is resolved by another patient, a self-effacing Anglican priest.

Booklist 50:333; 341 My 1 '54

"A tense, absorbing psychological study. Adult reading."

+ Bookmark 13:237 Jl '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:312 Jl '54 200w

Reviewed by La Tourette Stockwell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 23 '54
380w

"Miss Bottome's autobiographical writings, particularly The Challenge, increase the reader's awareness of her own intimate and first hand knowledge of sanitarium life, routine and interrelationships."

Kirkus 22:166 Mr 1 '54 210w

"A story that holds attention and stirs the imagination. Recommended for general public." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:859 My 1 '54 140w

"Phyllis Bottome neither shoots skyward nor zooms down from past splendour. She stands where she has always stood, and does it very well. This is not to say she is dull, and if she does not dazzle neither does she disappoint." Isabel Quigley

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 13 '54 130w

"Miss Bottome tells the story with suspense, swift movement of events and glints of humor and also with sensitive and scrupulous regard for what is happening within these people as well as to them. It is a story that gives full scope to the author's special interests and gifts. And, despite the setting and the gravity of issues with which it deals, 'The Secret Stair' is, in effect, both hopeful and pleasant." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 16 '54 400w

"Remembered for 'Private Worlds' and 'The Mortal Storm,' Phyllis Bottome is again at her impeccable best in this tautly written novel about life in a T. B. sanatorium in Switzerland. Descriptive or dramatically, her touch is one of assurance. She writes with intimate understanding of the details and tensions of hospital routine." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p4 My 16 '54 450w

"About a collection of people at a Swiss sanatorium. They have hardly enough intelligence and strength among them to keep one human being upright for ten minutes, but Miss Bottome follows them diligently for quite a long time, and when she finally abandons them, it is with an evident sense of regret and a feeling of illumination that will be incomprehensible to most readers."

— New Yorker 30:133 My 22 '54 60w

"This novel has certain minor weaknesses in motivation, but they do not detract from the vigorous restatement of Miss Bottome's favorite theme: It is the job of the individual to make audible 'the small yes at the center of the vast no.'" Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 21 '54 700w

"Miss Bottome's practised skill has woven a story of absorbing complexity and authenticity, its outlines barely suggested by these paragraphs. Depth of perception and warmth of compassion are the keynotes of her characterizations, always interesting, even in the minor figures not mentioned here. Michael Bretherton is the cornerstone of her structure, skilfully realized and projected. 'The Secret Stair' will reward Miss Bottome's wide audience." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:31 My 15 '54 600w

"The story moves at a nicely varied pace, the background is ably described, there is tension and drama, and an underlying religious motive is tactfully and sympathetically handled. Why, then, does it completely fail to 'take'? . . . The failure is one of realism, of not taking the trouble to imagine what things are really like, and the result is, inevitably, trivial." Kingsley Amis

Spec p445 Ap 9 '54 280w

"'The Secret Stair' doesn't need comic relief, but if the characters would just relax once in a while, the novel would have a better chance of getting out from under the microscope." R. M. F.

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 80w

"Surely real people do not in all seriousness behave quite like this. Out of her energetic and fertile imagination Miss Bottome has created in an adult way the kind of dream-world, peopled with stern heroes, that a child creates telling itself stories in the dark. But it is a convincing dream-world. We are made to believe that if such people as these could exist they would certainly behave as these do."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p229 Ap 9 '54 270w

Wis Lib Bul 50:136 My '54

BOULLE, PIERRE. Bridge over the River Kwai; tr. by Xan Fielding [Eng title: Bridge on the River Kwai]. 224p $3 Vanguard

54-11508

"Colonel Nicholson, a regular soldier and a disciplinarian, is captured with his unit at the fall of Singapore. The prisoners are put to work on an important railway bridge in the Siamese jungle. After a period of joyous sabotage, Nicholson persuades his men that duty—the duty of behaving like British soldiers in front of Japanese barbarians and incompetents—demands that the bridge is built as well, not as badly, as possible. A miracle of improvisatory skill unaided by any mechanical power, the bridge is ready for its first supply train when Nicholson finds someone getting ready to blow it up. What does he do then?" Spec

"The Bridge Over the River Kwai is a thoroughly unusual novel. Pierre Boule a Frenchman who served in the last war with a British Commando-type force in Southeast Asia, has written an exciting story of action which centers on a situation that is simultaneously droll, pathetic, and appalling." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:98 N '54 370w

Booklist 51:83 O 15 '54

"Here is a fine story of adventure in which a highly original conception makes a psychologically rich situation out of what could easily have been a simple tale of daring." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 3 '54 250w

"The ambivalence, and dissonance of East and West, the irony of a stiff code of conduct which has no wider vision, this is an effective demonstration and a military moral for our time."

Kirkus 22:501 Ag 1 '54 220w

Reviewed by R. P. Bartolini

Library J 79:1824 O 1 '54 140w

"In the expert hands of M. Boule [this is] a fascinating taut narrative, rich in irony and accurate observation of the British character." Patricia Hodgart

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 30 '54 100w

"This is a stirring and imaginative book. Whatever Monsieur Boule may think of Kipling standards he has, to his advantage, soaked in the Master's atmosphere. Ably seconded by an excellent translation he has achieved something of the brisk yet laconic style, the unforgettable character sketches, the technical details, the storytelling magic, which were part of The Day's Work and Many Inventions." Betty Askwith

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:480 Ap 10 '54 270w

"Despite the author's careful preparation, Col. Nicholson's folly is not quite credible. But it certainly motivates a brilliantly constructed story." Taliaferro Boatwright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 O 17 '54 600w

"Pierre Boule attempts to tell alternately the story of one such British team of 'Force 316' and that of British soldiers in a Japanese jungle prison camp who are forced to build a link in a crucial supply line. Unfortunately, both stories—with their pat descriptions and stilted writing—lack conviction." M. J. Tweedy

N Y Times p28 O 3 '54 480w

"An amazing story, well written and jumpy with suspense."

+ New Yorker 30:202 D 11 '54 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 13 '54 500w

"The central character, Colonel Nicholson, overshadows everyone else in the book. Superbly set down with great sympathy and respect, he is the archetype of much that is admirable in military life." Robert Minton

+ Sat R 37:55 D 4 '54 380w

"The story is told with the most outstanding skill in a tone of continual and invigorating dryness, a prose of enviable simplicity, an apparently expert translation, good print and 170 pages. Of these, the last page and a bit come as a good deal of a surprise. . . . But reflection will, I think, lead one to the view that this ending has really been worked for throughout the book, that nothing has been thrown away except sentimental notions of what is right and proper." Kingsley Amis

+ Spec p444 Ap 9 '54 360w

Time 64:107 N 1 '54 170w

"If a trifle narrow in approach, this is an exciting, subtle novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Ap 16 '54 170w

BOULOGNE, CHARLES DAMIAN. My friends, the senses; tr. by Jane Howes; foreword by Gerald Vann. 206p $3 Kenedy

242 Senses and sensation 53-11511

"Père Boulogne is a teacher and lecturer at the monastery at Marseilles, and has written some half dozen volumes. In this brief work, he delineates, in a precise and philosophical manner, the functions of the five senses, pointing out for each the marvellous construction and operation of the human body so perfectly adapted by the hand of the Creator." (Library J) No index.

BOULOGNE, C. D.—Continued

"This cheerful, wide-awake meditation on the human body and the world to be discovered through its senses is recommended particularly to educators." Gary MacEoin

+ Commonweal 59:383 Ja 15 '54 550w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 78:2029 N 15 '53 180w

BOUQUET, ALAN COATES. Everyday life in New Testament times; ill. from drawings by Marjorie Quennell. 235p $3.50 Scribner

225.91 Palestine—Social life and customs. Bible. N.T.—History of contemporary events, etc. 54-7082

An illustrated study of how people lived in the world around the Mediterranean in the first century A.D. Considers houses, clothes, modes of travel and communication, meals, schools, and places of worship. Index.

Booklist 51:87 O 15 '54

Christian Century 71:1338 N 3 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 30 '54 50w

"It is no mere Bible history; the life of the people we read about in the New Testament is set in a vividly apprehended background. Indeed, there is more in it about what the Roman Empire was like to live in than there is about Judaea itself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p17 N 27 '53 450w

BOURGIN, ANDRE. Design of dams; tr. by Frank F. Fergusson. 344p ill $8.50 Pitman 627.8 Dams

"A collection of lectures prepared for the instruction of students in the School for Hydraulic Engineers, Grenoble, France. The arch dam has attracted renewed attention in France in recent years and several successful dams of the type have been built. In this book it is treated from the standpoint of practical engineering design. The theories of various authorities are discussed, and engineer readers are shown practical ways of making the essential calculations. Some discussion of gravity dams and of dams of mixed types is included. This edition contains revisions and notes supplied by the author which are not to be found in the French edition." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

"Will be of interest to graduate students and graduate civil engineers." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1320 Jl '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:6 Ja '54

BOURLIERE, FRANCOIS. Natural history of mammals; tr. from the French by H. M. Parshley. 363p ill $5 Knopf

599 Mammals. Animals, Habits and behavior of 52-12183

This is an introduction to the comparative ethology (the habits) and ecology (the relations of individuals and of populations with their environment) of wild mammals. This American edition of a work first published in Paris in 1951, has been revised and brought up to date, and new drawings and photographs added (cf Preface and Introduction) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:336 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:179 My '54 50w

"The book, written by a specialist on a technical subject, nevertheless has such a clear and lucid style that the layman reads with understanding and pleasure." D. M. G.

+ Canadian Forum 34:144 S '54 200w

"Of special interest to the average outdoor fan and also parents who would like to be able to answer children's questions when they visit a zoo are the chapters on the social life of animals and their development and longevity. The author's discussion of acoustic and vocal signals between animals is one of the most remarkable chapters in the whole book." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 16 '54 180w

Kirkus 21:725 N 1 '53 150w

"The librarian will find answers to many questions, such as length of gestation periods and number of young, maximum running speed of some land mammals, and potential longevity observed in some mammals. The naturalist will find many suggestions for further research and experiment. And the general reader will be fascinated by the wealth of information on all phases of animal life—locomotion, food, reproduction, migration, social life, and relations between mammals and their environment. . . Recommended for special collections, college and public libraries, both large and small." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 78:1522 S 15 '53 160w

"Essentially a scientific work and largely a synthesis of innumerable technical studies, this book by a professor at the University of Paris is nevertheless perfectly accessible to the interested layman. Moreover, it fills an important gap between the 'how to identify' manuals on the one hand and the life histories of individual species on the other."

+ Nation 178:205 Mr 6 '54 130w

"I can't speak of the style of the French original, but this translation (by H. M. Parshley) is done in simple, vivid English superior to that of most books of this genre." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 130:20 Je 7 '54 250w

"In all the biological sciences technical papers are being published at a staggering rate—'Biological Abstracts' records tens of thousands a year—and even for the specialist syntheses like the present are becoming more and more necessary. It is no wonder that 'The Natural History of Mammals' has been given an enthusiastic pre-publication reception by various distinguished authorities. Besides photographs, there are many line drawings which, though their primary purpose is to convey information are very charming." J. M. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 14 '54 900w

"François Bourlière of the University of Paris says that his object is not to write a manual of the biology of mammals but to furnish basic information on the group as a whole that will help to guide the beginner in his study. He has succeeded admirably. Were I asked to select ten indispensable books for a beginner in natural history, this would stand near the top. Moreover, it will prove to be of great value to the specialist. Every page is packed with accurate and interesting information and interpretations of the findings of modern science." R. C. Andrews

+ N Y Times p7 F 14 '54 700w

"An excellent survey, designed for the general but attentive reader, of practically all that modern science can say with reasonable certainty about the life in nature (as distinguished from life in the zoo or on the farm) of the multitudinous members of the seventeen orders of vertebrates who share with man a diaphragm, a greater or lesser abundance of hair, and a breast-fed infancy."

+ New Yorker 30:115 F 20 '54 220w

"Its greatest merit is that it constantly emphasizes the vast amount of work still to be done and even gives advice as to which aspects of the investigation might well first be attacked. Mr. Bourlière has brought together in one modest volume a grand, embracing picture of perhaps the most important field of research open to humanity. He has written it with that beautiful logic for which the French have become renowned." I. T. Sanderson

+ Sat R 37:23 Ap 10 '54 550w

Reviewed by L. D. Otis

Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 250w

BOURNE, GEOFFREY, and KIDDER, GEORGE WALLACE, eds. Biochemistry and physiology of nutrition. 2v 569;641p il v 1 $13; v2 $15 Academic press

612.39 Nutrition (52-13364)

"This is a modern, comprehensive book written by specialists and directed to all workers dealing with problems of metabolism as well as to nutritionists. Much space is given to enzymes, co-enzymes, and the particulars of intermediary metabolism, since the editors believe that 'basic metabolic functions have assumed a definite and indispensable place in the science of nutrition.' But other subjects are also included: the major nutritional components; intracellular localization of enzymes and vitamins; structural tissue changes in vitamin deficiency; the relations of vitamins to hematology; and historical considerations." Am J Pub Health

"The result presented in these two volumes is a happy one; each chapter contains a well rounded presentation of its subject, up to date, and replete with references (as many as 300-700 references in the case of some); and the editors seem to have largely avoided the repetitions and omissions which can easily occur in such a collaborative effort. Thus, the reviewer found that, with the help of the chapter headings and the complete indexes, he could rather easily follow the story of a subject such as cocarboxylase which cuts across several chapters." A. H. Bryan

+ Am J Pub Health 44:825 Je '54 500w

"This is what the students of nutrition have been hoping to see for a long time—a pulling together of the vast amount of information in the related fields of physiology and biochemistry which contribute to the growing science of nutrition. This excellently documented treatise will be of greater interest to the advanced than to the elementary student." N. C. Esselbaugh

+ J Home Econ 46:608 O '54 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:82; 39:11 N '53; Ja '54

"In failing to define the limits of the 'science of nutrition,' the editors have gathered a seriously unbalanced work in which the proportional distribution of space and completeness of presentation appear to have been left to the discretion of the individual authors. This is not to decry the excellence of the individual contributions. Of real interest and value to the student and investigator are the chapters on several subjects which, historically, are in the domain of nutrition."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:249 Je '54 320w

BOURNE, PETER, pseud. See Jeffries, G. M.

BOUSCAREN, ANTHONY TRAWICK. America faces world communism; with introduction by George Creel. 204p $3 Vantage

909.82 Communism. U.S.—Foreign policy 53-11637

"This book is in the nature of a series of studies based upon the data previously presented—a tracing of events back to origins and causes. It will leave reasonable men convinced that World War III began in 1944, and we are losing that war, and that 'the U. S. as the leader of the Free World, must... build up the entire non-Soviet World (and pre-eminently those states that have their heart in the anti-Soviet crusade) with a view not of appeasement or containment-co-existence, but of an offensive leading to the ultimate cutting of the Soviet cancer from the world body politic. Nothing short of this will bring real peace.'" Cath World

Am Pol Sci R 48:589 Je '54 50w

"Every book that comes from this author is well worth reading."

+ Cath World 178:400 F '54 140w

Foreign Affairs 33:156 O '54 50w

BOWDEN, BERTRAM VIVIAN, ed. Faster than thought: a symposium on digital computing machines; with a foreword by the Earl of Halsbury. 416p il $8.50 Pitman

510.78 Calculating machines [54-15305]

"A British book by twenty-four authors about the most versatile variety of electronic computer. It contains discussions of theory, descriptions of typical computers, and accounts of some applications. Terms such as 'input,' 'out-put' and 'programming' are used as if they were part of the common language, and there is an occasional diagram or mathematical equation; nevertheless, the book is addressed to non-specialists." (Library J) Glossary.

"Because there is more meat in it than in a strictly popular book, both lay readers with serious interests and scientists specializing in fields other than mathematics and computing machines will find it of interest." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:777 Ap 15 '54 90w

"The book is by no means a breezy popularization, but it is designed for reading by non-specialists. Although the individual chapters are not signed, differences in style show that they are the work of various authors. Some can be read very easily—for instance the chapter entitled 'The Construction, Performance and Maintenance of Digital Computers.' Others require concentration, but none is based on the assumption that the reader will have a knowledge of advanced mathematics. The illustrations include a number of photographs of digital computers and computer elements."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:19 Mr '54

BOWEN, BETTY MORGAN. One against the sea; decorations by Arthur Marokvia. 214p $2.75 Longmans

54-6371

Story of a young American boy and his little sister during the first months after their mother died and they went to live with Gram in her Yorkshire home. At first Bill runs into difficulties but in time he wins a place for himself in the community.

Booklist 50:424 Jl 1 '54

"A convincing and well-told story, with full-dimensioned characters and real Yorkshire flavor." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:182 Je '54 150w

"Storms and a dramatic rescue bring on the climax that solidifies the community and leaves the reader with a sense of growth and well being."

+ Kirkus 22:117 F 15 '54 120w

"Teen-agers will enjoy Bill's adventure." E. H. Speer

+ Library J 79:1239 Je 15 '54 80w

"It is a well written story combining excitement at sea with an unusual and real study of a fine boy finding his place in an old country new to him." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 170w

"The setting is interesting and Bill's adventures with the Flamborough fishermen are certainly exciting. Unfortunately few of the minor characters are completely realized and Bill is too heroic to be entirely credible. Because he is invariably successful against tremendous odds, the storm chapters verge on melodrama. A story that could have approached the stature of 'Captains Courageous' is not a great deal more than a readable Anglo-American tract." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p20 Je 13 '54 160w

BOWEN, CROSWELL. They went wrong. 264p $3.50 McGraw

364.1 Crime and criminals 53-12440

Reports of six criminal cases of recent date in which the writer attempts to explain why the persons involved "went wrong." Contents: A reporter in crime; Robert Brown; The McManus case; The brutal cop; Times Square kid; An American fascist; Inside and out. Three of the articles appeared originally in The New Yorker.

BOWEN, CROSWELL—Continued
Booklist 50:291 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by V. W. Peterson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 11 '54
320w

Kirkus 22:27 Ja 1 '54 180w

"All of these men told their stories to Mr. Bowen and he retells them calmly and objectively. In this very dispassionate treatment lies the secret of his effectiveness." Walter Arm
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 28 '54 550w

"These stories by a good reporter provide the reader with an understanding of delinquency and insight into why some of us go wrong." Emanuel Perlmutter
+ N Y Times p31 Mr 7 '54 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 31 '54
800w

"Although the writing in this book occasionally bogs down in detail, at its best it is journalism raised to its highest power. In the sordid files of the welfare agencies, courts, and police stations resides a great deal of the history of our sordid times. This is one of the best books to come out of the files in a long time." J. B. Martin

+ Sat R 37:17 Mr 20 '54 950w

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54
170w

BOWEN, EDMUND JOHN, and WOKES, FRANK. Fluorescence of solutions. 91p il $4.75 Longmans

535.3 Solution (chemistry). Fluorescence
54-465

"Elementary account of the process of light absorption and emission, of the factors influencing fluorescence, and kinetics of fluorescent quenching. Describes principles and apparatus used for fluorescence excitation and measurement." (Chem & Eng N) Index

"This book will be of little interest to the advanced student but will be of great help to the beginning student or to the technician who wishes to know more about the basic principles underlying the study of fluorescence. For the latter purpose the selection of material is good and the presentation clear. The book is also excellent in its mechanical features." G. K. Rollefson

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:4246 Ag 20 '54 260w

Chem & Eng N 32:532 F 8 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:83 N '53

BOWEN, ROBERT O. Sidestreet. 212p $3 Knopf
54-8755

Character study of a ruthless woman, whose only virtue was her devotion to her son, and even that was no credit to her. The time is just before and after World war I; the place a small American town.

"This book marks an important step in Mr. Bowen's career. He has shown that he is capable of writing brilliantly about a subject other than that of the recent war, for in Sidestreet he has given us a truly memorable book, one worthy of being placed on the shelf beside Ethan Frome." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 180:71 O '54 450w

"Mr. Bowen's third novel is the portrait of one of those matrons whose housewifely exterior conceals the sensibilities of a retarded ape, Edna Roberts is a type dear to writers including Nobel prizewinner Francois Mauriac, and comprising the fruitful subject of a good many examinations of evil. It is sad to report that she here emerges as a rather feeble and conventional sketch. . . In justice, it should be noted that Sidestreet improves as it goes along, especially in style; and what begins as an earnest splitting of infinitives and self-conscious straining. . . gets harder and cleaner as it nears the end." Jean Holzhauer

— + Commonweal 60:542 S 3 '54 650w

Kirkus 22:345 Je 1 '54 190w

"Respectability, puritanism, and emotional frigidity are 'exposed' in what has become a neo-traditional pattern. Bowen, however, does produce some sensitively underwritten work despite limited material." Stanley Cooperman
Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 30w

"A blisteringly ironic, closely circumscribed and quite powerful small novel. . . The theme of Mr Bowen's 'Sidestreet' is not new. But his treatment of it is—partly because of the extremes to which he is willing to go to develop his bitter thesis, and partly because of the undeniable subtlety and power of his writing." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 8 '54
450w

"One of the most thought-provoking and disturbing novels of recent years." John Nerber
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 8 '54 600w

"Why Mr. Bowen chose to waste his talent on a long study of unrelieved self-righteousness is a puzzle, but since he has done it, and the book is finished, one can only hope that now he will quickly go on to some subject not quite so shallow and monotonous."

— New Yorker 30:83 Ag 14 '54 90w

"Mr. Bowen's study of two kinds of hate is sympathetically conducted but damaged by its intensity; there is more explaining of Edna than most readers are going to think necessary. . . On the other hand, Mr. Bowen commands a notable talent for convincing situations, and in consequence his book is often an emotionally upsetting affair. In sum, though his is short as novels go, if the author had done it at about two-thirds the length it would have been a true tour de force of its kind." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 25 '54
450w

"Once you've finished 'Sidestreet' you find it difficult to believe in Edna, but while you read you do. . . Though Mr. Bowen sometimes hurts his narrative by too heavily ironic statements of his bitterness against the Ednas of the world and never explains adequately why the Bill Gavins marry them, 'Sidestreet,' his third novel, is good in itself and shows that he has the ability to write even better fiction than he has so far." Durham Curtis

+ Sat R 37:13 Ag 14 '54 550w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54
120w

"Mr. Bowen's central character is a monster, a monster of ruthless averageness. . . How literally this monster can be or should be taken remains doubtful. Probably she should be regarded less as a study of individual psychology than as a selection of a few characteristics raised to their ultimate degree of intensity. As the symbol of certain unpleasant qualities in American life she is a frightening but convincing creation." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 44:xvi autumn '54 450w

BOWERS, CLAUDE GERNADE. My mission to Spain; watching the rehearsal for World war II. 437p $6 Simon & Schuster

946.081 Spain—Foreign relations. Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939
54-6668

"A noted newspaper writer and editor and authority on the Jeffersonian period in American history, Claude Bowers served as U.S. ambassador to Spain (1933-39) and Chile (1939-53). Having retired from the foreign service he now feels free to issue this book of observations most of which was written ten or more years ago. . . In this book he presents interesting portraits of Alcalá Zamora, Indalecio Prieto, Fernando de los Rios, Gil Robles and other Spanish politicians, Juan Belmonte the bull fighter, Salvador Madariaga the great humanist author, and many other representative Spaniards." Library J

Booklist 50:309; 415 Ap 15 '54; J1 1 '54

"Perhaps the most valuable portions of this book are those in which Mr. Bowers recounts his impressions of public leaders under the stress of circumstances. From these there emerges additional light not only on the Spanish character but upon all the shortcomings to be found in the public officialdom of any nation when that country is still struggling to overcome a long and strong antidemocratic past." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 17 '54 470w

"Unlike his former works, My Mission to Spain is not a well-organized narrative, and bears the obvious mark of hasty or unreflective composition. It is heavily repetitive, cliché-laden, and warmly partisan—it presents the Ambassador's memoirs, not the fruit of critical and sustained thought. He loved Spain but with little depth of comprehension, and it is difficult to be just to a lover who can only describe a beautiful and complex woman in the banalities of David Belasco." M. A. Fitzsimons
Commonweal 60:397 J1 23 '54 750w

Foreign Affairs 33:164 O '54 80w

"Even at this late date, an important book, from a man of sensitive appreciation, perception, understanding, And he can write!"

+ Kirkus 22:261 Ap 1 '54 250w

"A work of considerable charm and a first-hand account of an important period in history, this book is recommended for purchase by all libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:1052 Je 1 '54 280w

"The memoirs of the American Ambassador to Spain from 1933 to 1939 cannot be dismissed as unimportant. Actually they are more valuable than the apologies of many other public men of that time who have endeavored to justify themselves in the light of later events. Mr. Bowers gives what he saw and thought at the time, not what he might think now that he ought to have thought." J. B. Trend

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 16 '54 420w

"It is particularly useful to have Mr. Bowers's impressions of American policy during the Spanish War. . . . The Ambassador knew everybody and went everywhere, and his account of the progress being made to create a decent and modern state is grim reading when one thinks of the totalitarian stamp that has been pressed on one of the most attractive peoples in the world." T. J. Hamilton

+ Nation 179:74 J1 24 '54 1300w

Reviewed by D. M. Friedenberg

New Repub 130:17 Je 28 '54 2450w

— New Statesman & Nation 48:515 O 23 '54 130w

"An absorbing and challenging book which will doubtless arouse intense controversy among the many to whom the Spanish War is still a lively issue." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 13 '54 1000w

"One would want to say that Mr. Bowers has written the definitive book on the Spanish Civil War, one that can be recommended without qualifications to those who want to know what really happened. Alas, there must be many qualifications. His work has all the weaknesses and freshness of an account written in the heat of battle. The book has to be read in the frame of mind of 1939, not 1954. It is not judicious, unbiased, academic; it is passionate, biased, and provocative. And it has an appalling number of mistakes." H. L. Matthews

+ — N Y Times p3 Je 13 '54 1000w

"My Mission to Spain is interesting for a variety of reasons. The first is that Mr. Bowers' tour of duty ran from 1933 to 1939, so that he was in an especially favorable position to witness the whole process of the establishment, in blood and misery, of what has proved to be the most enduring of the European Fascist dictatorships. . . . Mr. Bowers is not dispassionate or impartial in his account of the long-drawn-out war that followed this Fascist rising; he was wholeheartedly on the side of the liberals, and he considers their abandonment by the democracies an appalling error. . . . But it has to be admitted that anger and history do not go well together; the emotion, natural though it is, obscures the issues and introduces certain oversimplifications." Anthony West

+ — New Yorker 30:78 Ag 14 '54 2650w

Reviewed by G. A. Barker

San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 27 '54 1000w

"One might have hoped that his personal record of those years, a record assembled by an historian of note who had exceptional opportunities for close observation, would be a work of judicious appraisal, of weight and substance. Instead it is a curious melange, part diary, part travelogue, part eyewitness journalism. There are many fine descriptive passages, but there is little consecutive narration and the final effect, is disappointing." Geoffrey Bruun

Sat R 37:13 Je 12 '54 1100w

Time 63:114 Je 21 '54 550w

"As the United States Ambassador to Spain from 1933 to 1939, he had first-hand experience and constantly tried to warn the State Department of the Fascist conspiracy against the democratic Spanish Republic. He might, in this book, have made a very important contribution to the available evidence and documentation. His contribution is disappointing, but it is still important."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p715 N 12 '54 900w

BOWERS, FAUBION. Dance in India. 175p il $4 Columbia univ. press

793.31 Dancing—Folk and national dances 53-8755

"There are several aspects of the dance which will not be found in this book. It is not a manual. It is not a critical evaluation of personalities in India's dance world. In the sense that it makes no attempt to reconcile conflicting schools of thought, to arbitrate dates, or to be exhaustive and definitive, it is not a scholarly book. It simply calls upon conventionally accepted sources and applies evidence readily apparent to the naked eye and ear. This book's chief distinction is that it represents the first attempt to treat Indian dance as it is today with the view to bringing it nearer the comprehension of non-Indians. In broadest terms, the following pages constitute a rough survey of what India offers by way of dances and a general description as to what they are like." (Introd) Index.

"Although the author disclaims scholarly intentions, the material is fairly technical, and interest would be limited mainly to large or special collections."

Booklist 50:199 Ja 15 '54

"Excellent and readable account. . . . Recommended for circulation, and as reference for dance and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:147 Ja 15 '54 20w

"Entirely based on its author's firsthand observation, this study of the Indian dance is remarkably thorough and informative, notwithstanding the modesty of its size and presentation."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:182 Je '54 240w

BOWLE, JOHN. Politics and opinion in the nineteenth century; an historical introduction. 512p $4.50 Oxford

320.9 Political science—History 54-9919

"In the first part of his book, [the author] deals with the political thought of the romantic age, from Herder and Hegel through the Utilitarians, the counter-revolutionaries, the early socialists, the humanitarian nationalist Mazzini, and the liberals. In the second part, The Age of Darwin, he analyzes belief in progress in Spencer, Buckle and Lecky, the students of life in institutions, Maine, Bagehot, Tylor, and thence through the English neo-Hegelians to Marx and Engels, Treitschke, and on to the threshold of our own world, the irrationalists Schopenhauer and Nietzsche, the Catholic attitudes, especially as seen in the great encyclicals of the second half of the century, Sorel, the Fabians, and two modern sociologists, Wallas and Durkheim." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 22 '54 480w

BOWLE, JOHN—Continued

"Politics and Opinion in the 19th Century has real elements of merit. Its scholarship is obvious. Some of the essays—on Bentham, on the Utilitarians, on Saint-Simon and Durkheim—are brilliant. But in other essays, especially those concerned with figures who are not in the tradition of humanism as Mr. Bowle conceives it, there is an unwillingness to make the effort to understand, or worse, a retroactive reading of the primary texts. For the ideological historian the way is dangerous indeed." Michael Harrington

+ — Commonweal 60:565 S 10 '54 1200w

"Though in a book of this kind there is no need for careful analysis of ideas and nice distinctions between them, there is need for greater precision of language than we sometimes get from Mr Bowle. . . The last chapter in which Mr Bowle gives us his own ideas, is confused and unimpressive. He speaks for others better than for himself. These are not minor faults, but the book is really good of its kind." John Plamenatz

+ — Manchester Guardian p2 Ag 3 '54 500w

"All this is admirable and highly relevant for the era of the H-bomb. But our quiet walk through the dense forest of nineteenth-century ideas and the conclusions drawn from them offer only a partial and perhaps a too long-range answer to the immediacy of the world's barbaric weapons. The ideas expressed by Bowle, based on great learning and lucid thinking, speak for civilization at its highest whereas other (and powerful) voices of our time speak only for bigger and better explosives." Leon Edel

+ — Nation 179:118 Ag 7 '54 550w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 47:838 Je 26 '54 200w

"This is an admirable introductory survey of the political ideas of an age remarkable for the range, variety and boldness of its ideas—and perhaps also for its lack of any universally held ideas. . . Perhaps [Mr Bowle] should have sampled a few British imperialists, a Gibbon Wakefield, a Kipling, or even a Benjamin Kidd. And an American reviewer must point out that if the United States produced no great political philosopher in the nineteenth century, its place in the history of Western opinion is worth more than a few passing references. Calhoun, Thoreau, the idealistic founders of our many social experiments, the reputation of the United States in European thought, all deserve treatment." Crane Brinton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 8 '54 650w

Reviewed by J. B. Stewart

Pol Sci Q 69:620 D '54 850w

"Mr. Bowle's [book is a] somewhat precipitate attempt to write a history of European political thought in the nineteenth century as a sequel to his work on the earlier centuries. It would be ungenerous to decry the attempt altogether; it is gallant in spite of its conventionality. But that so much industry and good intention should come to little more than another collection of chapters expounding the views of important political writers confirms the suspicion that the conditions for writing a proper history are lacking: what confounds the author is the attempt rather than the deed." Michael Oakeshott

Spec p66 Jl 9 '54 900w

"The style is lively and the pace excellent; it contains no long expository passages but crystalizes and examines at the same time the political substance in the writings of many thinkers; and by happy quotations from authors of earlier ages it forces the reader to reflect on the importance of certain perennial political dilemmas. The text remains unencumbered by detail because the author sensibly consigns biographical information to footnotes some of which are highly entertaining. . . No doubt a great deal of hard reading must have gone into the preparation of this book, but Mr. Bowle seems time and time again to echo the conclusions of the main English and European secondary authorities whom he cites and he ignores many American works—Mr. Richard Humphrey's book on Sorel, to name one at random—which might have stimulated him to come to more challenging conclusions."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p408 Je 25 '54 2200w

"Mr. Bowle is, in the best sense, a European humanist, and, as his final chapter indicates, he believes that in the end European humanism is bound to prevail in some sort of world order not yet come. . . For him the future is not with the revolutionaries but with men of good sense, and it is inevitable he should prefer the telling and realistic conclusion of Mill's vindication of liberty to all theories of power. . . To Mill's noble creed Mr. Bowle is in fact committed; and the strength and wisdom of his writing about the state seem to me preferable to any given amount of technical impersonality. Mr. Bowle not only makes political theory interesting, he makes it an integral part of that 'Moral Discourse' for which Mr. Joseph Wood Krutch has recently pleaded." H. M. Jones

+ Yale R n s 44:148 autumn '54 850w

BOWLES, CHESTER. Ambassador's report.

415p il $4 Harper

954.09 India—Economic conditions. India—Social conditions. Diplomatic memoirs
53-11840

The author, who served as Ambassador to India from 1951 to 1953, gives his account of his experiences. "In eighteen months the Ambassador traveled to every part of India, visited hundreds of villages, met all the big men and talked with thousands of common folk in the industrial slums, the university campuses, the mud huts, the rice paddies, the dam sites and factories. He discussed Indian and world affairs with that complex, enigmatic figure Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru twice a week and sometimes oftener. . . Before leaving India he collected opinions and data from his senior aides, which no doubt contributed to the book. But his own warm, sympathetic, perceptive personality shines through his factual evaluation." (N Y Times) Index.

"Mr. Bowles's book does a fine job of explaining to this country what the people of South Asia think. At the same time his constructive proposals merit the most serious attention from our public. Finally, the very tone of his book constitutes a primer for Americans in the difficult task of working with other freedom-loving nations in defense of a common value—liberty." R. I. Crane

+ Ann Am Acad 296:206 N '54 400w

"Aside from furnishing a compact course on Indian history, religion, and recent politics, Mr Bowles's book is notable for its intelligent discussion of India's gigantic problems; its sensitive appraisal of Nehru; its warm humanity, fair-mindedness, and thoughtful criticism."

+ Atlantic 193:86 Mr '54 180w

Booklist 50:202 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 7 '54 500w

Reviewed by R. A. Dudley

Christian Century 71:269 Mr 3 '54 700w

"Certainly as a salesman of American democracy in skeptical India, the author achieved notable success in pursuing such a policy. He did not try to tell India how to run its affairs. . . Only history will tell whether he was as successful as his publishers aver. But for the moment his achievement can be measured, perhaps, only by the enthusiasm with which Indians themselves applauded him." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 7 '54 1250w

"Mr. Bowles has done a difficult thing successfully in this book, combining a remarkable amount of information with the personal account of his own and his family's reactions to India and Southeast Asia." William Pfaff

+ Commonweal 59:454 F '54 650w

Current Hist 26:255 Ap '54 140w

Foreign Affairs 32:518 Ap '54 40w

"There is much in this that should be required reading for our representatives in Washington. But at least we should make an effort to see that every thoughtful citizen reads it. The pride and enjoyment will make it a rewarding experience."

+ Kirkus 21:775 D 1 '53 280w

"Readable, important, up to date, of wide general interest." J. W. Rogers

+ Library J 79:143 Ja 15 '54 130w

"A truthful, thoughtful, and eminently readable book. There are a number of things in it with which Indians might argue, but such disagreement is healthy among friends—and the heartening quality of 'Ambassador's Report' is that it is written by a critical but understanding friend." S. R. Rau

+ Nation 178:95 Ja 30 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Michael Straight

New Repub 130:17 Ja 18 '54 2550w

"If more American ambassadors wrote reports demonstrating breadth of understanding and vision such as Mr. Bowles demonstrates in his new book, and if more American citizens and officials read and heeded such reports, then indeed the millennium for American foreign policy would have arrived! Failing that day, we can only be grateful that Mr. Bowles has produced a book which does for Asia what Theodore White's 'Fire in the Ashes' has done so magnificently for Europe." Margaret Parton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja '54 1200w

"'Ambassador's Report' is the first competent full-length readable appraisal of India since freedom, in all its puzzling aspects. And Mr. Bowles' outlook hasn't changed essentially, though he does voice a number of obvious criticisms that he suppressed while [there] for diplomatic reasons. . . [It] can be taken as a handy reference work or quick indoctrination course on India since independence. It covers the essentials of every major development and trend that may shape the India of tomorrow, but it does much more. It presents a sensitive appreciation of India's towering problems." Robert Trumbull

+ N Y Times p1 Ja '54 2150w

New Yorker 30:117 F 27 '54 280w

"It would be easy to dwell too much on the fluency and charm of Mr. Bowles's anecdotal narrative. Behind this lies a realistic assessment of a complex situation which would have been the more impressive to the non-American reader had the author appeared less concerned to reassure home opinion about the essential orthodoxy of his own outlook." Nicholas Mansergh

+ Pacific Affairs 27:273 S '54 650w

"To judge from the volume at hand he is equally facile and perceptive in explaining Indian attitudes and policies to the West as he was in presenting the logic of United States viewpoints to Indian audiences. Time and again he puts himself in the Indians' place and tries to look at things from their point of view. The result is an extraordinary performance in international understanding." J. B. Cohen

+ Pol Sci 69:468 '54 1050w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 7 '54 180w

"Chester Bowles answers many of the questions we have been asking, he clarifies points that require it, and he leaves the reader well briefed on the controversial issues in which India is involved. Throughout the book Mr. Bowles maintains a commendable objectivity which gives his observations value and conviction. His book is meaty and readable." W. E. Stevenson

+ Sat R 36:14 Ja 9 '54 1200w

Social Educ 18:333 N '54 110w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 31 '54 850w

Time 63:106 Ja 18 '54 1100w

"This lively, chatty book is not history, except incidentally and rather unsuccessfully, nor is it a full analysis of India's problems. One of the most critical, that of her relations with Pakistan, is hardly more than touched. The volume is, rather, assertive, pictorial, and impressionistic."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:149 Je '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:69 Mr '54

Reviewed by W. L. Thorp

Yale R n s 43:599 summer '54 140w

BOX, EDGAR, pseud. See Vidal, G.

BOYLE, JOYCE. Susan's special summer; il. by Kathleen Voute. 95p $1.50 Abingdon

54-674

Simple little story about the everyday doings of a six year old who spends the summer at a resort park with Mother and Daddy. What makes it a special summer is that at the end of it Susan is to become a Big Sister.

Kirkus 22:1 Ja 1 '54 60w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 79:864 My 1 '54 60w

"There is a calmness pervading this story that obviously reflects the author's training as a teacher of kindergarten children. The familiar is kept fresh and inviting. It is good simmer-down reading before bedtime or after stimulating activity." Pat Clark

+ N Y Times p34 Je 6 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:139 My '54

BOYNICK, DAVID KING. Champions by setback; athletes who overcame physical handicaps. 205p $2.75 Crowell

927.96 Athletes

54-5534

Accounts of ten men who overcame physical setbacks to excel in sports. Contents: Cunningham, Bonthron, San Romani; James J. Braddock; Forbes Holten Norris, Jr.; George Monroe Woolf; John Hackett; Hamilton Richardson; Charles A. Boswell; Martin Whiteford Marion.

Booklist 50:325 Ap 15 '54

"An inspiring book which may well be a turning point for a sick or crippled youngster." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 20 '54 140w

Kirkus 22:35 Ja 15 '54 80w

"The stories are neither over-written nor sentimental; they are readable and inspiring and contain a good amount of sports action. Recommended for ages 12 and up." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 79:564 Mr 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 4 '54 30w

Reviewed by H. B. Lent

N Y Times p20 Je 13 '54 180w

BRADLEY, CAROLYN GERTRUDE. Western world costume; an outline history. 451p il maps $4.50; lib ed $6 Appleton

391.09 Costume

53-7150

"Arranged by historic period under uniform topics, chapters in this richly informing volume show the development of dress from primitive times to the present. Maps and drawings. Chronology, bibliography, sources of illustration, lists of European rulers and United States presidents." Bookmark

"A useful guide for students, fashion designers, theatrical producers, artists, and writers."

+ Booklist 50:444 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 30w

"In Western World Costume, Miss Bradley has organized in very readable fashion a wealth of material on the history of dress from the period of primitive peoples to the present time. The book is presented in outline form, which permits easy cross-reference of the material and facilitates use of the book as a reference." Doris Myers

+ J Home Econ 46:611 O '54 220w

BRADLEY, C. G.—Continued

"For fashion or (theatrical) costume designers, and illustrators, an excellent single volume at an accessible price."

+ Kirkus 22:217 Mr 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1832 O 1 '54 20w

BRADSHAW, ANGELA. World costumes, 191p
142il 16 col il $8 Macmillan (N Y)

391 Costume 53-578

"This is an attractive volume of 142 pages of black and white sketches and 16 colored plates, showing some native costumes of 79 countries from Abyssinia to Yugoslavia, arranged alphabetically, plus a few ancient costumes and examples of 16 periods of English costumes from Norman days to 1900. . . The main part of the book consists of 139 pages of attractive sketches of traditional folk costumes, with the artist's own style lending a definitely decorative quality to these illustrations. Some of the costumes, such as the Fulah woman from French Guinea, mentioned in the Introduction do not appear in the pages of illustrations, if the user relies on the names accompanying the drawings. This would only occasionally prove disconcerting to the reader." Subscription Bks Bul

"There are some cases where to the uninitiated, the sketches themselves might lead the user to reproduce inaccuracies, the illustrations of American Indian costumes, for example, but the book as a whole is helpful and interesting. . . The book should prove useful as a beginning guide and inspiration for designers, artists, and others interested in planning costumes for theatrical and decorative purposes. The reader should, however, supplement it with other works for extensive coverage of any particular country, and for specifications on color, materials, and similar details when ethnologic accuracy is desired. World Costumes is recommended for libraries and homes wanting a decorative collection of sketches of folk costumes from many lands." + — Subscription Bks Bul 25:14 Ja '54 440w

BRADSHAW, MARION JOHN. Free churches and Christian unity; a critical view of the ecumenical movement and the World council of churches. 225p $3.50 Beacon press

280.1 Ecumenical movement. World council of churches 54-6659

"The author of this able criticism of the ecumenical movement has been for many years a member of the faculty of Bangor Theological Seminary. He was ordained as a Christian or Disciple Minister and for thirty years has been a Congregationalist. Thoroughly ecumenical in his personal relationships, he has come to think that the ecumenical leaders in his own communion are finding centralizing tendencies irresistible and are willing that all Congregational churches be destroyed in the interest of one world-wide church." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by W. W. Sweet

Ann Am Acad 296:195 N '54 400w

"Bradshaw's book will be annoying to many people. Parts of it are to me. It is, however, a greatly needed book." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:876 Jl 21 '54 950w

BRAILSFORD, MABEL RICHMOND. Tale of two brothers: John and Charles Wesley. 301p $4 il Oxford

B or 92 Wesley, John. Wesley, Charles 54-10013

Study of the lives and careers of the brothers John and Charles Wesley, early leaders of Methodism. Index.

Booklist 51:60 O 1 '54

"Who Mabel R. Brailsford is, I have no idea. . . But whoever Miss Brailsford may be, she has written a fascinating book. Its merit consists in her success in depicting John and Charles Wesley as they really were—human beings with small resemblance to the pious images of Methodist hagiography." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 71:1205 O 6 '54 850w

"More than just a religious market here in its portrayal of family history and the origins of evangelical history."

+ Kirkus 22:603 S 1 '54 180w

"Miss Brailsford's book conveys the intimate humanity of the brothers and does this very well; but it does not go sufficiently outside their private lives to reconsider their work critically. Of all the revivalists, they are, of course, in the private sense, the most engaging and cultivated." V. S. Pritchett

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:671 My 22 '54 1950w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 3 '54 100w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p39 S 26 '54 20w

"Miss Brailsford is clearly at pains not to take sides; yet it is partly due to her tendency to sidestep the other causes of antagonism, stemming from basic differences in character and outlook, that Charles emerges as the villain of the piece. . . But unless she had been prepared to go more deeply into the subject, she would have been wiser to omit the superficial judgement which she attempts concerning the influence of the movement on the Industrial Revolution. Still, her portrait of the protagonists is both readable and informative, though one doubts whether, even yet, the last word has been said about them."

+ — Spec p748 Je 18 '54 270w

Reviewed by R. S. Brooks

Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 1100w

"Unfortunately, Miss Brailsford is no more interested in theology than Wesley. She does not know who the Non-Jurors were. She believes that the secession of the Methodists from the Church of England was an act of liberation, but seems to have little idea what they were liberated from or where they were progressing to. So that her study of the Wesley brothers is not really anchored to their age. Nevertheless, here is a book which more than once gives a new insight into two who, in spite of all contradictions and bewilderments, remain among the most strangely triumphant figures of the eighteenth century."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 25 '54 1000w

BRAND, CHRISTIANNA, pseud. See Lewis, M. C. M.

BRANDEL, MARC, pseud. See Beresford, M.

BRANDON, MRS DOROTHY (BARRETT). Mamie Doud Eisenhower; a portrait of a First Lady. 307p il $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 Eisenhower, Mamie (Doud) 54-6298

The life story of America's first lady from the time she met her future husband to his inauguration as President of the United States.

Booklist 50:449 Jl 15 '54

Bookmark 13:215 Je '54 20w

"Seldom has the informal biography of a living person in the world's drama been written more engagingly than this 'portrait of a first lady.' . . Dorothy Brandon has herself broken tradition in popular biographies of living public characters by making her heroine just simply alive and human and not a public monument." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 16 '54 600w

"One of the main impressions of this excellently written chronicle is the extent to which its heroine is always 'in character.' Although there was reported to be some apprehension among politicians as to how such a nonpublic person as Mrs. Eisenhower would react to public life and campaign platforms, there need have been no concern or even surprise at the superb way in which she rose to this new occasion. It was entirely consistent for her to do so." Josephine Ripley

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 20 '54 700w

Kirkus 22:279 Ap 15 '54 230w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1053 Je 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 16 '54 900w

"Mrs. Brandon does not at all purport to make her book intensely analytical, nor does she draw her subject out on any controversial matter. This portrait is as informal and folksy as a chat over a cup of tea with Mamie Doud Eisenhower herself." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p14 My 16 '54 350w

"You'll never see her picture in the paper or read about her without a different feeling after you have read this book. It's interpretative biography in spite of its light touch. Today, Mamie Eisenhower is as good a statesman's wife as she was a soldier's." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 6 '54 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Pollock

Sat R 37:18 Ag 7 '54 330w

Wis Lib Bul 50:177 Jl '54

BRANT, IRVING. James Madison. 4v; v.4, Secretary of State, 1800-1809. 533p il $6 Bobbs

B or 92 Madison, James (41-19279)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Mr. Brant has sometimes been too lavish with his material, going off into side paths which, however interesting, have only a tenuous connection with the onward march of his hero's story. . . . Another fault—and again one which is shared with most modern biographers—is that the subject of the biography is literally the 'hero.' . . . In spite of these specific criticisms, however, the sheer mass and research of Mr. Brant's volumes make them the source to which all students of history must turn in the future for any extended study of Madison and his times. They will not easily be superseded." Nathan Schachner

+ Am Hist R 60:126 O '54 750w

Booklist 50:237 F 15 '54

"Mr. Brant's volume—the fourth in a five-volume biography of Madison [is] undoubtedly the best study of him as Secretary of State. . . . In general, the method employed throughout this biography may be called the blow-by-blow technique, involving the vast accumulation of detailed political maneuvers and exact chronological development. This method, however, fails to catch the more intangible and personal elements, and provides scant treatment of political ideas and principles." Adrienne Koch

+ New Repub 129:17 N 30 '53 700w

"One expects a biographer's documentation to be adequate. Mr. Brant's is overwhelming. From the documents he has given us a new Madison. It is a bigger Madison than we have known. Perhaps it is not quite a human Madison. But it may be the only technique for the job he has set for himself—the basic, long-deferred job of clearing away old misconceptions, old misrepresentations, and giving us at last the authentic record." F. B. Tolles

+ Sat R 37:37 Jl 31 '54 500w

Reviewed by G. C. Smith

Social Studies 45:229 O '54 220w

"As before, Mr. Brant has engaged in an exhaustive search in the sources, although he has somewhat slighted the results of previous scholarship. . . . Familiar figures are given new portraits in these pages. . . . Mr. Brant's interpretations are fresh and original, and his narrative, particularly where diplomatic matters are concerned, is both detailed and inclusive."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:2 Mr '54 260w

BRAY, JOHN LEIGHTON. Ferrous process metallurgy. 414p $6.50 Wiley

669.1 Metallurgy

53-12032

"An engineering college textbook about the making of iron and steel. Processes now in use and the equipment used in them are described in considerable detail and in a lucid style. The viewpoint is that of engineers and other technicians engaged in steelmaking, and such aspects as the advantages and disadvantages of tilting open-hearth furnaces are discussed both expertly and practically. The book contains 80 figures, none of which is the reproduction of a photograph. In place of photographs the author has used clear line drawings which better illustrate principles and construction details." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:1612 Ap 19 '54 20w

"In addition to its use by students, the book will be useful to mature lay readers such as journalists, teachers and technicians in the steel-treating and -using industries."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 39:42 My '54

BRECK, VIVIAN, pseud. See Breckenfeld, V. G.

BRECKENFELD, VIVIAN GURNEY (VIVIAN BRECK, pseud). Maggie. 249p $2.75 Doubleday

54-8914

"The story of an impulsive daughter in a well-to-do San Francisco family who falls in love three times in the course of a year, marries the third man, a British mining engineer, and travels to a Mexican wilderness with him. In an isolated mountain settlement she endures loneliness. The real test of her strength comes when she, in the absence of her husband, manages the mine alone and averts a rebellion among the Mexican workers." Sat R

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:97 D '54 120w

Booklist 51:65 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p38 N 14 '54 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p36 D '54

"A provocative young adults novel, conspicuous for its reality and substance in the discussion of love and marriage." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:443 D '54 110w

"Fine fiction, this has a stamina and a realism absent from most juveniles."

+ Kirkus 22:486 Ag 1 '54 200w

"Highly recommended for high school and young adults." Pauline Winnick

+ Library J 79:2499 D 15 '54 100w

"A very well written story for girls over twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p3 N 14 '54 270w

"'Maggie' is a welcome change from the 'lived happily ever after' tradition of teen-age literature. Despite a compromise ending, it is an adult, engrossing novel, full of haunting pictures of primitive life." Alberta Eiseman

+ N Y Times pt 2 p14 N 14 '54 160w

"The characterization is lively and the scene is rendered with the zest of an aficionado."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 120w

Sat R 37:92 N 13 '54 80w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 150w

BREIHAN, CARL WILLIAM. Complete and authentic life of Jesse James; with an introd. by Homer Croy. 287p il $4.50 Fell

B or 92 James, Jesse Woodson 53-11214

"Homer Croy, author of Jesse James Was My Neighbor writes a humorous preface to this new biography of the outlaw, designating it as a definitive work and giving the author credit for contributing much original material. More factual than the somewhat flippant Croy rendering, this disposes of the claims of various impostors who claimed to be the notorious Jesse, and proceeds straightforwardly through the story of his life and criminal career." Booklist

BREIHAN, C. W.—Continued

Booklist 50:237 F 15 '54

"If we may speak of a definitive life in connection with the famous Jesse, this is it." Cath World 179:79 Ap '54 60w

"There are fuller accounts of the Northfield robbery, when the peaceful citizens of that Minnesota town shattered the James gang as years of sheriffs and marshals could not. There are accounts with less vague generalization. But there is no life as abundant with family and state and national information lighting up clearly the figure of this over-romanticized outlaw." Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F 7 '54 380w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 29 '54 500w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie

N Y Times p10 Ja 31 '54 650w

"Sheriff Breihan, the author, is relentless as a good sheriff should be. He has pursued Jesse's deeds for 20 years in 37 States, sifting clues, making deductions, and trying to separate myth from truth. Sheriff Breihan has no truck with theories that Jesse lived to old age. He presents convincing evidence that the man Bob Ford killed was the real Jesse James." G. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 18 '54 240w

BRESLIN, HOWARD. Silver oar. 310p $3.95 Crowell

54-9155

Historical novel of the American colonies reaching its climax with the Boston revolution which overthrew Andros when rumors of the English revolution of 1688 reached the Colonies.

Booklist 51:83 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 24 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:454 J1 15 '54 210w

"By the author's own admission there is as much history in this novel as there was silver in the gilded wooden oar which always preceded a pirate to the Boston gallows. Nor can the reader long escape the conviction that his protagonist is a great liar. His sense of time and space in Colonial America is dim and confused; his fighting and escaping in this contrived scenario are completely synthetic. And yet, as an escapist exercise in derring-do, the book is more than adequate." P. A. Duhamel

+ N Y Times p34 N 14 '54 400w

Time 64:106 S 27 '54 60w

BRETT, MARTIN. Hot freeze. 246p $2.50 Dodd 53-8524

Detective story.

"A wholly unsuited private eye novel, but a surprisingly entertaining one." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 F 21 '54 40w

"Vitality is the only redeeming feature. C minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 28 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

BRETZ, RUDY. Techniques of television production. 474p il $10 McGraw

792.95 Television—Production and direction 53-6038

"This book is concerned with sound and light effects and other technical aspects of successful staging of programs for television broadcasting. Television cameras, television lenses, etc., are described in necessary background material, but the greater part of the space is devoted to the techniques of achieving standard and special effects and of avoiding undesirable ones such as streaking and halos in the received image. Such recurrent problems as the design and handling of title cards are discussed at length, but the treatment of large topics such as scenery and makeup are necessarily more in the nature of outlines of fundamentals. The chapter on remote pickups is relatively full one." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:386 F 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:31 Mr '54

BREWER, JOHN MASON. Word on the Brazos; Negro preacher tales from the Brazos bottoms of Texas; foreword by J. Frank Dobie; il. by Ralph White, jr. 109p $3.50 Univ. of Tex. press 398.21 Folklore—Texas. Folklore, Negro 53-10834

"This is a collection of Negro preacher anecdotes, rather than stories or tales, from the Brazos river bottom land in Texas. Their nature can be guessed from the following headings: 'God Throws a Tree Limb,' 'The Wrong Man in the Coffin,' 'The Moderator and the Alligator' and 'The Preacher Who Talked in His Sleep.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The Word on the Brazos' is worth reading as an interesting and in spots delightful contribution to American folklore in a field which is vanishing before it has been fully explored—the Negro's use of humor in religion." W. T. Polk

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 7 '54 360w

"Here are no dry bones of scholarship, no references to Bolte-Polivka and the Aarne-Thompson index. . . It is the best Negro story book I have seen since Zora Neale Hurston's 'Mules and Men' appeared in 1935." Vance Randolph

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 24 '54 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 14 '54 200w

BRICK, ANNA RIWKIN, il. Nomads of the North. See Jannes, E.

BRICK, JOHN. King's rangers. 290p $3.75 Doubleday

54-5357

Novel of the American Revolution from the Tory viewpoint. The king's rangers were a company of woodsmen, under Colonel Walter Butler, who fought for the King in the upper regions of New York state.

Booklist 50:259 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:108 F '54 20w

"Tho the Revolutionary war has been fought in hundreds of historical novels since Fenimore Cooper's 'The Spy,' Brick now offers a fresh and dramatic story that has not been told before." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 7 '54 370w

Kirkus 21:768 D 1 '53 210w

"Small romantic interest but good history." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 79:204 F 1 '54 70w

"Mr. Brick has succeeded very well in conveying the atmosphere of the times, the motives which impelled the revolutionary and Tory alike, and the customs and habits of the day."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 2 '54 160w

"Mr. Brick's new novel—muddled oftentimes by the multiplicity of minor characters, not infrequently labored in style, and weakened occasionally by stilted dialogue—comes through none the less as a finely woven account of the fratricidal days when families were divided and neighbor was split from neighbor according to allegiances varied from the King's cause to the Rebel crusade." Henry Cavendish

+ — N Y Times p26 F 14 '54 290w

"Mr. Brick writes very well when he deals with battle scenes and description of the countryside and his narrative of the defeat of Herkimer's force is excellent. But as a whole the novel drags slowly through snow and brush, Indian camp and battleground so that the end comes none too soon. Had the novel been confined to Butler and his campaigning without the sorry romantic interludes that seem, alas, to be requisite in historical fiction, this would have been a stimulating book."

A. N. C.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 25 '54 420w

Sat ■ 37:36 Ap 17 '54 230w

BRICK, JOHN. They ran for their lives. 287p $3.50 Doubleday

54-9830

Three long short stories about Americans who escaped from the enemy during the Revolutionary and Civil wars.

Booklist 51:176 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 10w

"John Brick is a great storyteller; a master of suspense and historical detail. These three stories should lift him to the ranks of America's top-flight novelists." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 12 '54 320w

"Well paced tales, these are lively footnotes to Brick's previous historical novels."

+ Kirkus 22:407 J1 1 '54 190w

"Message for Uncle Billy' might be about any two desperate fugitives from any death camp in any war. Unfortunately, Mr. Brick mars the grim story near the end by running his bloodhound-tracked Yankee fugitives from Andersonville smack into the boudoirs of a couple of sympathetic Boston beauties, fortuitously domiciled in Georgia. This is carrying luck too far. But with some rewriting, 'Message for Uncle Billy'—and to a lesser extent each of its two companion pieces—could readily be expanded into first-rate historical novels." Richard Match

+ — N Y Times p37 O 10 '54 290w

BRICKHILL, PAUL. Reach for the sky. 312p il $3.75 Norton

B or 92 Bader, Douglas. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 54-10994

Biography of an English hero of the last war, Douglas Bader, who had lost both legs in an air crash, but learned to walk again, became a top ace in the Battle of Britain, was captured by the enemy but was able to escape, and now continues to lead an active life in peace times.

Booklist 51:38 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:3 O '54 30w

Reviewed by Alan Brown

— Canadian Forum 34:208 D '54 2100w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 1 '54 370w

"This is a pungent, journalistic book, another of those 'war stories,' but especially inspiring for those who fancy they are handicapped by one physical disability or another. It is not incorrect to mention Douglas Bader along with Helen Keller. And on another level, the Bader story takes its place next to two other recent characteristic British triumphs—John Hunt's expedition that climbed Mount Everest and Roger Bannister's four-minute mile. It can all be described as Elizabethan." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 5 '54 550w

"Brickhill, himself a pilot, writes vividly of Bader's courageous fight against his handicap and of his brilliant flying."

+ Horn Bk 30:360 O '54 160w

+ Kirkus 22:374 Je 15 '54 120w

"Highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1395 Ag '54 140w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 26 '54 110w

"It is a story so remarkable that no one would dare to invent it even for the silliest of boys' magazines. Mr. Paul Brickhill is not able to match his subject, but he does well in the circumstances to make the thing credible and real. His analysis of character is sensible and objective, the atmosphere of school and Cranwell reasonably well caught, and the middle part describing the Battle of Britain is a brilliant piece of fictionalised reporting, vivid and compelling. If the mythologist ever does arrive to take this as his subject, he will find all the material in Mr. Brickhill's book, and find it well set out." Richard Lister

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:542 Ap 24 '54 480w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 1 '54 850w

"An excellent double feature of a book, 'Reach for the Sky' provides first, a picture of a man overcoming a physical handicap that confines ordinary mortals to a wheelchair. The second picture is of this same man as an R. A. F. pilot in the Battle of Britain. The camera eye moves swiftly over the light years of the Thirties, the gallant years of the Forties, the news-torn years of today. All this is a reader's bargain." Herbert Mitgang

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 1 '54 650w

"Mr. Brickhill tells it all at length, and in almost too much detail, but it makes a thrilling story."

+ New Yorker 30:86 Ag 21 '54 240w

Reviewed by J. M. Flagler

Sat R 37:57 D 11 '54 300w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 410w

"Reach for the Sky is the unique story of how airman Bader rose to heroic heights. Author Paul Brickhill, a wartime R. A. F. flyer himself, tells Bader's story without slushing about in sentimentality. He combines hard, muscular prose with a dignified simplicity that will bring tears to the eyes and laughter to the lips of many a reader."

+ Time 64:76 Ag 2 '54 900w

"Mr. Brickhill has put down the whole man without a coat of varnish. He turns out to be as vital as his legend, and big enough to bear driving by so ruthless a demon."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 19 '54 550w

BRIDGE, LAWRENCE WILFORD. Funk & Wagnalls book of parliamentary procedure; a guide to democratic practice in meetings. 180p $3 Funk

328.1 Parliamentary practice 53-10796

"A concise, graphic exposition of principles and rules of order with illustrations valuable to both novice and expert. Visual material. Guide to systematic study, index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:335 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:154 Ap '54 20w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 18 '54 100w

BRIDGES, HENRY P. Woodmont story; hunting and fishing and raising wild turkeys in a sportsman's paradise. 209p il $10 Barnes, A.S.

799.06 Woodmont rod and gun club of Baltimore City. Turkeys 53-11343

A history of the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club of Hancock, Maryland. Author is one of the club's founders. The Woodmont has made a specialty of breeding wild turkeys and several chapters of this book are devoted to them.

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:66 Ja 1 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 4 '54 170w

BRIDGES, WILLIAM. Zoo expeditions. 191p il $3.50 Morrow

590.74 Zoological specimens—Collection and preservation. Scientific expeditions 54-7948

"Whether sent out to capture specimens of a rare peacock in Africa or to investigate the age of a common box turtle in Rhode Island, the expeditions of the New York Zoological Society were exciting experiences for its Curator of Publications. His enthusiasm makes this personal account of seven such expeditions as pleasurable as his earlier animal books. One chapter originally appeared in Collier's." Booklist

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 194:96 D '54 50w

Booklist 51:99 N 1 '54

Commonweal 61:202 N 19 '54 50w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 30:465 D '54 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p14 N 14 '54 120w

"Mr. Bridges is not a trained ichthyologist, ornithologist or herpetologist, and this is to the good. With rare exceptions, scientists cannot describe their activities without getting bogged in technical minutiae. Mr. Bridges omits the undigestible stuff. . . Mr. Bridges' book is all too short. The Zoo should let him go on more expeditions." J. N. Leonard
+ N Y Times p34 O 10 '54 400w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 30:219 N 27 '54 90w

"Although there is nothing sensational in the events or in the writing, Mr. Bridges has made the accounts interesting and exciting enough to satisfy any reader." Elaine Simpson
+ Sat R 37:84 N 13 '54 130w

BRIDGWATER, WILLIAM, ed. See Columbia-Viking desk encyclopedia

BRIER, HOWARD MAXWELL. Fighting heart; il. by Jay Hyde Barnum. 95p $2 Doubleday

54-5209

Bill Rand, a fire captain and an ex-marine, hoped some day to find the dog he had trained and who had been with him thru the war. In this story for grades six to nine Bill got his wish in a dramatic manner.

Booklist 50:456 JI 15 '54

Kirkus 22:155 Mr 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:716 Ap 15 '54 20w

"The pace is swift and exciting, with excellent description of rescue work and of the techniques of combating big city fires."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 28 '54 90w

BRIGHT, ROBERT. Miss Pattie; il. by [the author]. [32p] $2 Doubleday

Cats—Legends and stories 54-10110

Story and pictures about Miss Pattie, an ordinary looking cat, who proved to be most extraordinary for a time. For ages three to six.

Booklist 51:114 N 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 14 '54 80w

Kirkus 22:677 O 1 '54 90w

"Recommended." Virginia Russell

+ Library J 79:2490 D 15 '54 80w

BRINDA, maharani of Kapurthala. Maharani; the story of an Indian princess as told to Elaine Williams. 246p il $3.50 Holt

B or 92 India—Social life and customs

53-5497

Autobiography of an Indian princess. She traces her life from her carefree childhood, thru the years of her marriage to a wealthy prince, to the later years when, contrary to all law, she left her husband and went to live in Europe.

Booklist 50:318 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:127 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 7 '54 270w

"Her frankly told story of her life gives an intimate inside view of the tension between Hindu customs and Occidental ideas as it affected a sensitive and essentially liberated spirit." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:495 Ap 21 '54 70w

"The reader may be left in some measure of doubt as to the author's consistency, but there can be no doubt whatever about her frankness and honesty." M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 11 '54 450w

"Touching and strange, this memoir gives fine glimpses into the Hindu culture, of worlds apart moving together, not without grief."

+ Kirkus 21:815 D 15 '53 180w

"Recommended for large libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 79:453 Mr 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Charles Spielberger

N Y Times p13 Ap 18 '54 500w

"In tone, the book is at times painfully naïve, but it can hardly fail to hold your interest."

+ New Yorker 30:130 Mr 27 '54 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 15 '54 380w

"Western readers have a challenging introduction to India in this enchanting, often humorous study of two worlds—the wise East smiling enigmatically at the tides of change; the hectic West feverishly trying to maintain order in the midst of chaos. And through it runs the silvery voice of a remarkable human being, gifted with insight into both civilizations, who might easily have been tutored by Bhartrihair himself." Richard M'Laughlin

+ Springf'd Republican p6C F 28 '54 500w

BRINTON, CLARENCE CRANE. Temper of western Europe. 118p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

940.55 Europe—History

53-11936

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Professor Brinton is too wise a man to fall into clichés, and he never gives a simple answer. Often he ends in paradox and this is how the astute student of contemporary affairs must usually conclude. One thing he makes clear: 'the condition of western Europe is not as bad as it is generally believed in this country.' If this is the end of western Europe, we cannot know it—yet." B. C. S.

+ Am Hist R 59:668 Ap '54 150w

"Probably the best recent eulogy of what is left of the grandeur and glory of the Western European civilization, this small volume emphasizes that Western Europe is today, as a whole, richer than ever before in spite of the last war. . . Brinton is good, but too eloquent; and his eloquence must be carefully checked against 'other' facts. To use Brinton's own words, his main contribution has been 'merely skirting the philosophy of history.'" J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 291:200 Ja '54 440w

"As an antidote, the volume performs a necessary function. But its proportions are wrong. It has the makings of an article and of a book. But in its present form it is too discursive and digressive, and the suspense (of judgment) might well be envied by Eric Ambler." M. A. Fitzsimons

+ Commonweal 59:457 F 5 '54 350w

"There is evidence of a definite philosophy of life, of an optimistic belief in the good things in Professor Brinton's book, and as well a talent for delightful writing. This little book is the result of a six months' holiday in Europe in 1952-53, and is somewhat in the nature of a reproof to the pessimists. . . He does not question the sincerity of the pessimists, but he is frank in admitting his belief that one sees largely what one wants to see. He went to Europe expecting to find encouraging signs of life, optimism and efforts forward—and he found them." Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 26:59 Ja '54 700w

Foreign Affairs 32:510 Ap '54 10w

"Expanded from lectures given at the University of Virginia in April 1953, this small book is based on observations Professor Brinton made on a prolonged visit to Western Europe in 1952-53, and, it should be added, on a thorough general preparation extending over decades. . . Professor Brinton rather enjoys being paradoxical, not merely for the fun of startling his audience, but for the scholar's purpose of brushing aside unreflecting conventionalities."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:19 Mr '54 230w

BRISTOL, CLAUDE MYRON. TNT, the power within you; how to release the forces inside you—and get what you want! ed. by Harold Sherman. 238p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

131 New thought

54-5668

"It is one of the self-help books which attempts to place at the disposal of the reader those subtle psychological forces which have the power to release energy and to sustain a person in the achievement of his objectives. Out of his own personal experience of trying to utilize his inner resources and out of his wide experience as journalist and business consultant, Claude M. Bristol discovered and worked with this program." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"This book is bound to do the reader no end of good." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 15 '54 170w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:33 S 16 '54 1000w

"This is a self-help book crammed with interesting but unfortunately undocumented cases of the success obtained by people who have followed Mr. Bristol's common-sense suggestions on thought-transference and other topics. Some of the examples, however, are open to dispute and Mr. Bristol fails to provide references where they can be readily checked." J. J. N.

+ — Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 100w

BRITTAİN, VERA MARY (MRS GEORGE EDWARD GORDON CATLIN). Lady into woman; a history of women from Victoria to Elizabeth II. 256p il $3.25 Macmillan (N Y)

396 Woman—History and condition. Women in Great Britain 54-9385

A study of the changing role of woman in Britain and throught the world during the years in which the struggles for woman suffrage were raging and finally emerged in the greater equality of the sexes.

Booklist 50:311 Ap 15 '54

"Miss Brittain's history can be respected as far as her statistics go. As far as her evaluation is concerned, perhaps it could best serve as a warning to American women to weigh the worth of material benefits at the cost of socialism, and to persuade them to take individual responsibility for the betterment of their fate as against government handouts." Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 7 '54 300w

"Miss Brittain's study is so heavily buttressed with statistics gleaned from research that readability is too often sacrificed. She seems chiefly concerned lest the accomplishments of not only the embattled Suffragettes but of all the pioneers in the struggle for women's economic and legal rights be forgotten in these days of widespread emancipation. Here, then, for the record, she presents a chronological report of that struggle." M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 4 '54 950w

"One would suppose it to be a difficult feat to write a really dull book on the subject of the evolution of women's place in society since the days of Victoria, but Mrs Brittain has successfully accomplished the feat. The dullness is due in part to the number of unimportant and peripheral details included, in part to a kind of naivete in presentation, and in part to style."

Nation 178:153 F 20 '54 120w

"If it were not for the vivacity and at times the real penetration of [Miss Brittain's] running commentary, her record would emerge as a tightly packed compendium—a hand-book rather than a history. At moments indeed it does so, but not for long. Thus she has produced a book which should be read, indeed owned and reread, by the contemporaries of her daughter to whom it is dedicated." Mary Stocks

+ New Statesman 46:803 D 19 '53 600w

"Vera Brittain has written a superlatively good book, something of a model of its kind. 'Lady Into Woman' is written in just the right mood, in the easiest and most attractive of styles, and is just the right length." Ashley Montagu

+ Sat R 37:32 Ap 17 '54 180w

"For a short and readable account of the position in England to-day, with a glance at the history behind it, one may turn to Miss Vera Brittain's Lady Into Woman, which gives a cheerful report of progress supported by some interesting facts and figures."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p7 Ja 1 '54 30w

BRO, MRS MARGUERITTE (HARMON). Indonesia: land of challenge. 263p il $4 Harper

991 [919.1] Indonesia

54-10077

The author, who had already had considerable contact with the peoples of the Far East, went with her husband when he was appointed cultural attache to the United States Embassy in Djakarta. After traveling up and down thru Indonesia Mrs Bro has prepared this report, for the lay reader, on the social conditions of this new independent state.

Booklist 51:79 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:29 N '54 50w

"Mrs. Bro, who came to Indonesia the wife of the American cultural attache, has the rare gift of being able to point out the problems, the obstacles, the frustrations, the heartaches of the task of nation building now going on in that country, without ever being overwhelmed herself by the enormity of the problems. Her writing is permeated throughout by honesty, generosity, and spontaneous sympathy for the people and the land she describes." Takashi Oka

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 N 4 '54 600w

Current Hist 27:326 N '54 100w

"Good."

+ Kirkus 22:468 Jl 15 '54 210w

"Highly recommended for non-specialists." William Henderson

+ Library J 79:1820 O 1 '54 160w

"Mrs. Bro's conclusions are more often drawn from her sympathetic heart than from the hard facts which she has collected. Mrs. Bro's book, nevertheless, is a useful contribution to the present slim list of reference material on this new, non-colonial, independent Indonesia."

Jean Lyon

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk 4 p4 O 31 '54 650w

"It is irritating to encounter initials like SOBSI without the organization's full title, and sums of money given in local Indonesian currency without translation into American. But these are minor faults. 'Indonesia: Land of Challenge' is not a scholar's book for scholars. It does include much intelligent first-hand observation and interpretation of a country that is as fascinating as it is little known." Peggy Durdin

+ — N Y Times p18 O 17 '54 600w

BRO, M. H.—Continued

"During a year and a half of close study in Indonesia Margueritte Harmon Bro has picked her way carefully through a mass of confusing issues and returned with an exceedingly competent report, 'Indonesia: Land of Challenge.' It is not a brilliant report; there is a good deal of padding. . . . But these are small matters. The heart of the book lies in her descriptions of the countryside and the people she met on her travels, and four excellent chapters devoted to a survey of the Indonesian peoples, their food, health, and education." Robert Payne

+ — Sat R 37:14 O ■ '54 1000w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Ballet for Mary; il. by [the author]. 79p $2.50 Knopf

54-7709

Mary was called Sudden Mary because she was prone to do things that way, and in consequence the furniture often got damaged, Little Sister might be hit with a croquet ball, and so on. But Mary wanted to take ballet lessons and in hopes that they might change her from Sudden Mary to Graceful Mary, Daddy consented and this is the story of the lessons and the recital and Mary's final triumph.

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 10w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p24 N 14 '54 70w

Commonweal 61:206 N 19 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:336 J1 1 '54 90w

"This is an amusing story of a natural little girl and her friends in a small town dancing school. Recommended for girls from 8-12." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 79:2254 N 15 '54 70w

"The author-artist's many pictures, eight in full color, are charming, and the big type fine for eight to ten year olds. It is a gay gift book for very young would-be dancers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p10 N 14 '54 50w

"Mary's story is gay and full of fun." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 14 '54 70w

"With rare humor, imagination, and understanding Emma Brock in 'Ballet for Mary' now presents 'Sudden Mary' to a slightly older audience. 'Ballet for Mary' is a tonic that psychiatrists might well prescribe as a 'must' for parents in families where there are light-hearted, bouncy, knobby-kneed, unpredictable little girls." D. McG.

+ Sat R 37:78 N 13 '54 180w

BROCK, RAY. Ghost on horseback; the incredible Atatürk. 403p $4.75 Duell; Little

B or 92 Atatürk, Kamâl. Turkey—Politics and government 54-8299

A romanticized biography of Mustapha Kemal Atatürk, who created the Turkish nation practically on his own, and wore himself out and died at fifty-seven. The author spent five years as war correspondent in Ankara and Istanbul. No index.

"Ray Brock calls his reconstruction of this memorable life a historical novel. It is fictionized biography of a sort, undocumented, but lustily written and recounting Kemal's career a little too minutely. The amount of drinking and wenching attributed to Kemal might be offensive to sober spirits in a nation which has just splendidly entombed the hero's remains in Ankara, the capital he built for them." Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 7 '54 280w

"The author is not particularly sympathetic to Mustapha and dwells at greater length on his sins and violences than on his constructive achievements. This lively story is well suited to those who like their history with dramatics."

Kirkus 22:571 Ag 15 '54 280w

"Written with great vigor and intensity, this book is probably the first popular study of Atatürk. Will appeal to many readers other than specialists." J. C. Sipman

+ Library J 79:2321 D 1 '54 90w

"History, or historical novel, it is a fast and furious story that will repay reading." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 26 '54 400w

"Any book that tries to stake out the dimensions of such a colossus is likely itself to be fairly agitated and unbelievable, and make racy reading too. Ray Brock's book comes roaring through on all counts, managing at times to be more incredible than its subject. To savor this 'biography' fully, one needs only a strictly amateur curiosity about matters Turkish or a zest for bonecrushing action. Anything more might spoil the fun." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p18 N 28 '54 700w

"All we have is a bad novel about an interesting, if rather forbidding figure."

— New Yorker 30:204 D 11 '54 160w

"Author Ray Brock (Blood, Oil and Sand) has written—or overwritten—the first full-dress biography of this tremendous figure since his death. But the book is too crammed with imagined detail to gratify either history or Hollywood."

Time 64:116 N 8 '54 350w

BRODER, NATHAN. Samuel Barber. 111p il $3.50 Schirmer

B or 92 Barber, Samuel

54-13121

Brief biography and critical essay on an American composer, 1910-. "This book provides a full view, heretofore lacking, of Barber and his work to date. Mr. Broder does not attempt to persuade the reader of his subject's merits; his tone is formal and cool, not propagandizing. . . . The discussions of individual works are descriptive rather than 'appreciative.' Little is attempted in the way of over-all criticism and evaluation of the music. The many musical examples (well over one hundred) are relied upon for the direct information or stimulation of the reader." (Music Lib Assn Notes)

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:2454 D 15 '54 140w

"Nathan Broder has done an admirable job, complete, objective, copiously illustrated with both photographs and musical examples, combining a scholar's care for accuracy and detail with a musician's concern for quality." R. F. Goldman

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:559 S '54 400w
New Yorker 30:222 N 13 '54 160w

BRODERICK, EDWIN ■. Your place in TV; a handy guide for young people. 142p il $2.75 McKay

621.388 Television as a profession

The director of radio and television communications for the Diocese of New York describes his book as "a blueprint of the television field and the qualifications required for its many-faceted work." Especially directed toward young people who want to enter the TV field. Lists colleges offering courses in TV, and technical schools for television. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:422 J1 1 '54

"The great merit of Father Broderick's book is that he has not buried valuable information in a mass of complicated and wearying explanations but has set it crystal clear in short, apt and meaningful phrases and sentences." V. F. Holden

+ Cath World 179:398 Ag '54 270w

"The book's value lies in its 'bird's eye view' and its encouragement to the young to do even the hardest jobs, but it is short on criticism, and while it suggests doing educational work, places more of its emphasis on the traditional plot, advertising and the familiar big names."

Kirkus 22:157 Mr 1 '54 130w

"An excellent and thorough book on careers in TV." F. W. Bulter

+ Library J 79:1326 Jl '54 80w

BROGLIE, LOUIS, prince de. Revolution in physics; a non-mathematical survey of quanta; tr. by Ralph W. Niemeyer. 310p $4.50 Noonday

530.1 Quantum theory 53-10401

"Prince Louis de Broglie is one of a bright band of Nobel laureates that includes the late Max Planck, Niels Bohr, Albert Einstein, Erwin Schrödinger and Werner Heisenberg, and that has brought about a revolution in physics as sensational and profound as that associated with the names of Copernicus, Galileo, Kepler and Newton. . . [He] tells the story of this revolution in our conception of matter and energy without the aid of a single mathematical equation. Nevertheless, his is a mathematical story. Ordinary language cannot express the logical necessity that forced him and others to reach conclusions that seem to offend common sense. For this reason his book, a valuable contribution to the philosophy of physics, will not be easily absorbed by the layman who wants everything explained simply and concretely." N Y Times

N Y New Tech Bks 38:92 N '53

"The reader who wants to familiarize himself with quantum mechanics by consulting its creator must prepare himself for important but stiff reading." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p10 Jl 19 '53 950w

Reviewed by Edmund Whittaker

Spec p404 Ap '54 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Mr 19 '54 750w

"This beautifully planned and superbly composed book is not always easy to read; the subject would not permit it. But the reader may be safely assured that he will not find another book to match this one for clarity and patient explanation, and a study of it will reward him by making him acquainted with one of the great revolutions in the history of thought, one whose profound philosophical implications have not even now been fully realized." I. B. Cohen

+ Yale R n s 43:283 winter '54 450w

BROKENSHERE, NORMAN. This is Norman Brokenshere; an unvarnished self-portrait [foreword by Norman Vincent Peale]. 307p il $3.50 McKay

B or 92 53-11368

A pioneer radio broadcaster tells the story of his life, with special emphasis on his long struggle to overcome alcoholism.

Booklist 50:357 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 30w

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ap 18 '54 300w

"This is a sincere book, written with a special care for other sufferers of alcoholism, but while it emphasizes spiritual reprieve it does not seem to come to grips with the bases of the problem, the loneliness and insecurity which seemingly led to drink. Norman Vincent Peale's foreword and Norman Brokenshere's reputation in radio may help to start the book on its journey to others in distress."

+ Kirkus 22:173 Mr 1 '54 240w

"An absorbing, sometimes hair-raising chronicle, this also throws some valuable sidelights on the growth and history of American broadcasting. Theatre collections; public and university libraries can put it next to Jack London's John Barleycorn and Eliot Taintor's September Remember." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:619 Ap 1 '54 130w

"The style of the book is somewhat hectic. The narrative hops and skips to keep pace with the author's vagaries. But there are interesting passages concerning the early days of radio that will prove nostalgic for old-time listeners. After reading the book, one can believe that the human spirit, no matter how deeply it descends into the abyss, is never beyond redemption." Val Adams

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 25 '54 320w

Reviewed by Joseph Hirsh

Sat ' 37:17 Ag 7 '54 140w

"Recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:133 My '54

BROMBERG, WALTER. Man above humanity; a history of psychotherapy; foreword by Winfred Overholser. 342p il $5.75 Lippincott

131.32 Psychotherapy 54-6921

A history of psychotherapy which presents both the movements and types of past attempts at mental healing and the individual figures involved in them. Index.

Booklist 51:3 S 1 '54

"The bulk of the book, and the most important part of it for practical purposes, is the modern section. The work is thoroughly documented for the benefit of serious students, but its text is an account of the development of modern psychotherapy sufficiently complete and thoroughly intelligible for lay readers." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1433 N 24 '54 550w

"A historical perspective of considerable magnitude—and detail, this is for the more informed reader and a serious presentation."

Kirkus 22:257 Ap 1 '54 190w

"Dr. Bromberg has written an enormously fascinating history of psychotherapy and covered an enormous area in terms of both time and subject matter. . . Dr. Bromberg's survey is by far the most comprehensive treatment of the subject, and as such must be acquired by general and specialized library collections." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:854 My 1 '54 150w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. New pattern for a tired world. 314p $3.75 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Economic policy. World politics 53-11829

An American novelist and writer on farm life and land economics, here sets forth a review and severe criticism of American foreign and economic policy during the last twenty years.

Booklist 50:177; 270 Ja 1 '54; Mr 15 '54

"This book is well worth reading. It is not a profound book. It lacks order and system. But it is full of common sense and reflects the sanity and innate wisdom of the American people." Kenneth Colegrove

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 7 '54 650w

"Mr. Bromfield has much to say that probably needs to be said, but somehow he does not prove his point, that his solution will solve the maladjustments of an ailing world."

Kirkus 21:777 D 1 '53 320w

"While one realizes that Bromfield is not expert in political matters, one feels that if he is going to be critical, he should be prepared to offer reasonable proposals for positive action. Not recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:553 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Mr. Bromfield is angry at eggheads and generals, at conscription, foreign spending and meddling abroad. This is a familiar enough conservative indictment, but Mr. Bromfield gives it a twist which is not usual among today's conservatives." H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ' p10 My 30 '54 600w

"This is a first-rate book, written in the old-fashioned spirit of inquiry—and by a good man. Although it is not well organized, it has an earthy vigor. This is nowhere more notable than when Mr. Bromfield deals with the pretensions of the pseudo-intellectuals who are unlikely to give him a fair hearing." W. S. White

BROMFIELD, LOUIS—Continued

+ — N Y Times p10 My 23 '54 800w

"It is a rather diffuse, weakly organized work, but it is vigorously written by an obviously sincere and devoted American, who is neither isolationist nor suspected on any other score, but who profoundly believes that the key to our future existence and our future happiness lies in improving our economic status and the economic status of our neighbors by achieving the ultimate in free trade." C. W. Weinberger

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 11 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p706 N 5 '54 480w

Wis Lib Bul 50:63 Mr '54

BROMHALL, WINIFRED. Circus surprise; il. by [the author]. [28p] $2 Knopf

53-7627

"Sandy and Sue hadn't enough money between them to see the circus nor could they borrow it. But when they found the little performing bear and returned him, they were given the best seats in the tent." Library J

Kirkus 22:60 F 1 '54 60w

"All children like circus books, and this will be no exception. Seven-eight-year-olds will read it for themselves. . . Recommended."

Juanita Walker

+ Library J 79:460 Mr 1 '54 70w

"Young children should find [it] quite satisfying, if not highly exciting." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 28 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:139 My '54

BRONSON, LYNN, pseud. See Lampman, E. S.

BRONTE, CHARLOTTE. Brontë letters; selected and with an introd. by Muriel Spark. 208p $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Brontë family [54-29239]

"The 130 letters in this one-volume edition were arranged to tell the story of the adult lives of Emily, Anne, Charlotte, and Branwell Brontë. . . Almost all of them were written by Charlotte Brontë. . . The letters in this collection were not edited for scholars; they lack footnotes that furnish background information in biography and criticism." Booklist

Booklist 51:61 O 1 '54

"This is better than any biography; it is the human material from which biographies are made. . . Some editors overdo annotation. Miss Spark has gone to the other extreme. . . For real devotees of the Brontës this edition offers nothing new. For the general reader it provides the best possible introduction to one of the most remarkable families in literary history." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Times p29 S 12 '54 420w

BROOKE, MILTON, and DUBESTER, HENRY JOACHIM. Guide to color prints. 257p $4.50 Scarecrow

769.5 Color prints—Catalogs 53-10394

"This Guide provides a comprehensive and current compilation of color reproductions available for purchase in the United States. It lists basic information for more than 5,000 color reproductions of over 4,000 paintings by more than 1,000 artists. Over 150 portfolios and sets of color prints are also included. . . The Guide will be found especially useful to persons and institutions directly concerned with the fine arts, such as art teachers, artists, libraries, museums, universities, educators, as well as to print dealers, decorators, print enthusiasts, and the general public." (Introd) Title and artist indexes.

"Bound to be useful." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 78:2216 D 15 '53 20w

"The 'Guide to Color Prints' has such high potential usefulness that it is to be regretted that a bit more thought and time were not expended on it. Despite its shortcomings, it is helpful in offering in one list the currently available color reproductions of sixty-five American publishers." R. E. Schoneman

Library Q 24:409 O '54 650w

"A comprehensive and current listing."
+ Special Libraries 44:381 N '53 10w

BROOKES, EDGAR HARRY. South Africa in a changing world. 151p $3 Oxford

968 South Africa—Politics and government 54-9469

"Senator Brookes attempts to explain the present situation in South Africa to both South Africans and those outside the Union and also to assess the effect of the Union's policies on some serious problems of world adjustment. The little volume is made up of lectures delivered at the University of Natal." Nation

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 4 '54 170w

"Though addressed primarily to a South African audience, and concerned in part with affairs outside the Union, the book is well worth studying here too. It is a fine example of the liberal tradition in South Africa, generous, balanced, well-informed, justifiably resentful of the crude misunderstandings which mar so many alien pictures of the African scene, yet not blinking the ugly truths and the still uglier possibilities." P. J. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 26 '54 150w

Reviewed by M. J. Herskovits

Nation 178:487 Je 5 '54 210w

"The author appeals to young South Africans to see the problems of their country in a world perspective. He views these problems with a refreshing objectivity, and not only because he happens to be a member of the much-maligned white races in South Africa. Natal is essentially the English-speaking province of the Union, and it is thus mainly to English-speaking students that Dr. Brookes addresses his remarks."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p140 F 26 '54 600w

BROOKS, ALFRED HULSE. Blazing Alaska's trails; ed. by Burton L. Fryxell; with a foreword by John C. Reed. 528p il $4.50 Arctic inst. of N. Am, 1530 P st, N.W., Washington 5, D.C.

979.8 [917.98] Alaska 53-4121

"When 700 pages of 1914-1922 manuscript of the late Alfred Hulse Brooks, renowned explorer-scientist, were recently brought to light, publication was jointly undertaken by the University of Alaska and the Arctic Institute of North America. Burton L. Fryxell, former professor of English at the university, shaped the material into the present book. Six chapters deal with the geology, geography, climate, flora, fauna, and early inhabitants of the territory. Historical events comprise 10 chapters; mining and mining industry, six, and there is one chapter each on early transportation, fisheries, agriculture, education, and government." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Kathryn Winslow

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 17 '54 100w

"A work of unusual vigor: no child with a new toy ever showed more enthusiasm than Dr. Brooks for the land he tramped over so thoroughly. He writes of the Alaska that became known to the world immediately after the gold rushes at the turn of the century—the Alaska of the indomitable sourdoughs who quickly populated it and began to settle and develop it." L. R. Huber

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 2 '54 600w

BROOKS, JOHN NIXON. A pride of lions. 308p
$3.50 Harper

54-6294

A novel dealing with the father and son relationship in modern American family life. The son, Tom, has left home and is making a successful life for himself in New York. A letter from his mother, only hinting at trouble, calls him back to East Bank to help and advise his father who is in distress both physically and mentally with the way things are going in the town.

"The novel is pitched in a minor key, and it is a bit lacking in impact. But Brooks is an intelligent and likable writer; he has a clean, firm prose style and handles his characters well."

+ — Atlantic 193:84 My '54 240w

Booklist 50:341 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 179:313 Jl '54 250w

"The idealistic valor of the generation before [the hero] becomes increasingly impressive; and exposed to it he moves from suspicion to tolerance and even a measure of pride. This gradual understanding—the slow, subtle awakening of a mind to values hitherto unseen—is the real matter of this novel; and it is admirably handled. Characterizations are warm, bright, and alive; there is a fine feeling for people and place; and the prose is supple, sturdy, and dependable." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 18 '54 300w

"It is regrettable that a serious novel, honestly and purposefully written, should not move more absorbingly to its conclusion. If the intellectual stimulation could be translated into heart terms, the end result could be as satisfying a feeling experience as it is a thinking one. On the other hand, unlike many a faster-moving novel, 'A Pride of Lions' grows on one, disclosing new depths on second reading."

G. H. Favre

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '54 350w

Kirkus 22:82 F 1 '54 280w

"The highly interesting theme and characters are presented with warm sympathy and understanding. Many aphoristic flashes. Strongly recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:622 Ap 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Douglas Hewett
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 31 '54 80w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
Nation 178:368 Ap 24 '54 60w

Reviewed by John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 48:273 S 4 '54 600w

"In 'A Pride of Lions,' John Brooks has written a thoughtful and intelligent novel about people who are hard to please." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 18 '54 750w

"Mr. Brooks writes deftly and intuitively about well-bred people. He is informed about them, whether members of the modern or antediluvian set. . . But some bystanders may feel that 'A Pride of Lions' contains more long, long aphorisms than long, long thoughts. They may consider that the young hero is really too young to be quite so retrospective and that his vision is not always 20-20 in matters of hard reality." James Kelly

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 18 '54 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 9 '54 200w

"Mr. Brooks writes with poise and perception about human beings; he is particularly effective in suggesting their contradictions, their oftentimes confusing combinations of flaw and merit. There is a Marquandian flavor of his roots in East Bank, to the double loves of his life, to the ironies that divide the generations, and to the elegiac notes so frequently struck. But if the basic structure of the novel is not original, the Osbornes are." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 37:15 My 15 '54 400w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis
Spec p267 Ag 27 '54 250w

"The story is handled with fine ease, and the characters talk with a naturalness that is not at all common in current fiction. What A Pride of Lions sadly lacks is suspense."

+ — Time 63:110 Ap 19 '54 500w

"This is a thoughtful and subtle piece of work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p569 S 10 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:180 Jl '54

BROOKS, VAN WYCK. Scenes and portraits; memories of childhood and youth. 243p $4.50
Dutton

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-5828

Chapters in an autobiography, in which Mr Brooks relates memories of his childhood and youth. It covers in essay form the author's years from 1886 to 1914. Among those he includes in his story are the late Maxwell Perkins (his life long friend), Santayana, Lippmann, Jeffers, Wells and Yeats. No index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:70 My '54 440w

Booklist 50:339 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:127 Mr '54 30w

"Tranquilly and with measured phrase, Van Wyck Brooks sets down the recollections of his childhood and youth. As though he were writing someone else's story, he seems so detached, he describes places and people he has known, particularly those that contributed to his literary growth. Because he has highly cultivated writing gifts, it is delightful reading." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 179:157 My '54 240w

"Having finished his literary history of America, Brooks has begun a history of himself on the same heroic scale. . . The manner is astonishingly like that of the earlier work. Brooks' style has never been more elaborately cadenced; he has never been more allusive, never worked against a richer background. The wealth of memories drawn upon seems as exhaustless as the printed sources of the earlier books. The volume is accurately titled."

Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 7 '54 280w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 18 '54 900w

"All in all, this book has given me more pleasure than any other of Brooks' that I have read except The Ordeal of Mark Twain."

Vivian Mercier

+ Commonweal 59:630 Mr 26 '54 650w

"A delight for those to whom these pages will be graceful recapturing of the fading literary scene."

+ Kirkus 22:30 Ja 1 '54 240w

"Highly recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:446 Mr 1 '54 110w

Reviewed by David Daiches

Manchester Guardian p4 O 22 '54 500w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Nation 178:283 Ap 3 '54 800w

Reviewed by Leon Edel

New Repub 130:20 Mr 22 '54 850w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 48:269 S 4 '54 750w

"'Scenes and Portraits' stands out as alien and comforting as an unexpected and beloved uncle at a fashionably barren cocktail party. Mr. Brooks is as consistent as he is consistently solid; he brings to his memories of childhood and youth the same vigor, modesty, grace, wit, thoroughness and good taste that have characterized his five-volume history of the writer in America; 'Makers and Finders.' And with yet another consistency, he looks outward—at the various worlds he has known and inhabited—and permits us to form our own conclusions about the nature of the observer." Hiram Haydn

BROOKS, VAN WYCK—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 7 '54 1000w

"A work of notable charm and unquestionable interest." Lionel Trilling

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 7 '54 1550w

"It requires a special kind of imagination for a writer to reenter the past and make his reader know again the taste of life as it was known at a given time. Mr. Brooks has this capacity." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 21 '54 650w

"[The book] is a new work by Van Wyck Brooks in which he applies his own peculiar kind of literary impressionism to his own personal past. It is closely related to everything else he has done because it presents a formula for cultural history, arrived at intuitively, by means of a carefully constructed series of sketches of personalities, seemingly unrelated and oftentimes trivial. Those who read to discover another 'Always the Young Strangers' or even another 'Education of Henry Adams' will be disappointed. The early life of Van Wyck Brooks himself is the least important thing in this book; in fact, it is not important at all." R. E. Spiller

Sat R 37:16 Mr 13 '54 800w

Reviewed by David Stone

Spec p294 S 3 '54 380w

"This autobiographic pilgrimage is rich in discovery for the reader as well as for the writer who made it. Like all Mr. Brooks's work, it reads like shared experience. Most of the men whom the writer knew were unknown or distant names in contemporary England. They may be all but forgotten in America today. But they take the shape of humanity in this record of a young American's education."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p574 S 10 '54 1000w

BROPHY, BRIGID. Hackenfeller's ape. 177p
$2.75 Random house

54-8221

"Percy, an ape of the breed nearest to man, cannot accede to the desires of his mate Edwina because his love for the Professor who observes him has taught him human inhibitions. Not till he has been let out (by a female pickpocket whom the Professor blackmails into assisting him) and has returned of his own accord, can his half-human love for Edwina be consummated. The Professor, who set him free to save him from being discharged experimentally in a rocket, has undone him by teaching him to love mankind." Spec

Booklist 50:419 Jl 1 '54

"If the whole does not add up to the sum of its parts, there is still a lot here for a special audience. Miss Brophy has gracefully walked the fine line between the possible impossible and the outright outre, and kept her eye squarely on modern man in the process."

Kirkus 22:248 Ap 1 '54 130w

"Witty, but for a special audience. Rental collections; small libraries, probably not." Earle Walbridge

Library J 79:1315 Jl '54 130w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 N 20 '53 40w

Nation 179:156 Ag 21 '54 300w

"Miss Brophy has a very precise and vivid style; with it, she is constantly delivering the most delicately glancing blows on one from always unexpected angles—odd little ironies of human activity bubble up and burst, the world momentarily goes crazy, then settles back to its still ridiculous normal again. The final 'Soliloquy of an Embryo' must be quite without a parallel in literature. Yet it is perhaps the most convincing, comical and painful character sketch in the book. Certainly Miss Brophy is beginning to make a distinctive contribution to our time's fiction." Derwent May

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:609 N 14 '53 200w

"Brief, distinguished, strikingly original." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 13 '54 380w

"Brigid Brophy has written an elegant, strange book, freshly diverting. It may even renew interest in apes and in Mozart, possibly in the poetry of procreation." John McNulty

+ N Y Times p4 Je 13 '54 410w

"While the professor, whose name is Darrelhyde, and the monkey, who is called Percy, seem to have gentle, pleasant personalities, their story, which is almost pointless anyway, is quite obscured by the determined, even strident, cleverness of Miss Brophy's writing."

+ New Yorker 30:99 Je 19 '54 90w

"The trouble with such books usually is that they are not sufficiently interesting once one has got the point. If 'Hackenfeller's Ape' has a defect, it is the opposite one. Miss Brophy's tale is richly ornamented with witty turns, it is full of events, and by no means all of the surprises are to be anticipated. She keeps the ball rolling in so amusing a fashion that this really is a I-Couldn't-Lay-It-Down book. You can read it in a couple of hours and you probably will." J. W. Krutch

+ Sat R 37:36 Je 12 '54 750w

"It is a clean, astringent parable, this, with its unstressed contrast between Percy-Edwina and Clement-Gloria, and other implicit comment not wholly to the credit of homo sapiens. When Miss Brophy writes a full-length novel, may I be there to read." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p522 N 6 '53 200w

Time 63:94 Je 28 '54 450w

"The plot, put baldly, does not amount to much, but Miss Brophy's writing is elegant and pleasing in its dry wit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 27 '53 120w

BROSS, IRWIN D. J. Design for decision. 276p
il $4.25 Macmillan (N Y)

501.8 Statistical decision

53-12977

"This book is an attempt to explain to non-specialists the nature, concepts and some of the uses of statistical decision. Using only a little mathematics and taking care to make this little as clear as possible, the author dissects the basic problems of making decisions, describes the tools and raw material required and shows how the ideas of statistical decision may point the way to making the best decisions in specific circumstances." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 50:215 F 1 '54

"His presentation is painstaking and his analogies are apt; nevertheless, the subject remains a difficult one for the unprepared lay reader. Probably few readers who are browsing only for information will understand the whole book, even though parts of it, particularly the discussions of probability of sampling, and statistical inference will be clear. On the other hand, such readers as scientists and business executives who have professional or pecuniary incentives for understanding statistical decision should get more out of it."

N Y New Tech Bks 38:95 N '53

"An interesting book which touches on many areas—polls and samples, for instance—but does not give really thorough information about any of them." G. E. A.

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 13 '53 150w

BROUGHTON, LESLIE NATHAN, and others, comps. Robert Browning: a bibliography, 1830-1950. 446p $7.75 Cornell univ. press

012 Browning, Robert—Bibliography

54-7521

"As the most complete record in existence of the works of Robert Browning, of his correspondence, and of writings about him, the present bibliography supercedes earlier ones and will be indispensable to advanced students of Browning and of Victorian literature." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Unfortunately the completed work, for which Mr. Robert Pearsall accepts ultimate responsibility, falls far below the standard for which Broughton and Northup were widely admired."

Times [London] Lit Sup p548 Ag 27
'54 650w

+ U ■ Quarterly Bk ■ 10:273 Je '54 350w

BROWDER, ROBERT PAUL. Origins of Soviet-American diplomacy. 256p $5 Princeton univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. 52-8762

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This excellent monograph is a fresh and penetrating analysis of the circumstances surrounding the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Soviet Union in 1933. The author has combed all available American and Soviet sources to provide a scholarly and thoroughly documented account of the background, the negotiations, and after-effects of recognition." Merle Fainsod

+ Ann Am Acad 292:156 Mr '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 32:335 Ja '54 20w

"The study is sound in general, but Dr. Browder's ascription of the periodical intensification and relaxation of Soviet efforts to establish friendly relations with the United States after 1929 to attempts to exploit United States-Japanese tensions is too monistic and schematic to gain widespread acceptance."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:89 Mr '54 240w

BROWIN, FRANCES (WILLIAMS). Captured words; the story of a great Indian; il. by L. F. Bjorklund. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75 Aladdin

Sequoya, Cherokee Indian—Juvenile literature 54-6081

In this story laid in the 1820s, an Indian father, lamed in battle, and his young daughter work together to "capture" the words of their Cherokee language as the white men "captured" English words.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p28 N 14 '54 20w

"We welcome this easy-reading tale, suitable for ages eleven to fourteen, though several other good biographies of Sequoya exist. The author makes clearer than they do the development of written Cherokee language, which is shown on the end papers. Here is an Indian book that may first make its way as 'required reading,' which it well deserves to be. But in the Cherokee country, Indian and white children will read it without urging." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p26 N 14 '54 120w

"Unfortunately the dialogue sounds improbable, and the characters are all drawn in one dimension." Eithna Sheehan

N Y Times pt2 p26 N 14 '54 50w

BROWN, BILL, and BROWN, ROSALIE (MOORE). Forest firemen; il. by Richard Powers. [28p] $2 Coward-McCann 54-8712

"This is the story of how a fire starts in the woods and how it is extinguished. Bill Brown's experience as a ranger furnishes the facts, Rosalie's experience as a poet communicates the sense of sharing that experience in a way a child between 6 and 9 can understand." San Francisco Chronicle

"An exciting little story which whips breathlessly from page to page. . . . The beginner reader will devour this himself." M. M. R.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 80w

Kirkus 22:679 O 1 '54 50w

"Recommended." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 79:2490 D 15 '54 70w

"The illustrations will aid the child's pleasure."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '54 70w

BROWN, DONALD MACKENZIE. White umbrella; Indian political thought from Manu to Gandhi. 205p il $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press 320.954 Political science 53-11231

"Professor Brown's handling of Indian political thought from Manu to Gandhi is well timed. It discloses the background of Hindu literature; it describes classic India concepts of political power; it implies the causes for India's tenacious clinging to neutrality, non-violence—and, incidentally, self-righteousness—in its approach to present-day world affairs." Christian Science Monitor

"This is an exciting book. Americans are only beginning to learn of the vast thinking of India throughout recorded history on all subjects—mathematics, philosophy, medicine, grammar and linguistics, the natural sciences, and now political science. This is ■ brief survey. But the author has swept into his story the vivid and most compelling portions of an extensive literature, weaving an integrated pattern covering more than two thousand years of recorded thinking. It is ■ challenging book, frequently leaving the reader demanding much more than a single chapter can encompass." H. I. Poleman

+ Am Hist R 59:1021 Jl '54 240w

"This is not the type of book which one might employ to enliven a tedious train journey. It is rather the type of scholarly analysis which any generally informed reader might welcome in his search for a well-rounded picture of one of this world's fastest developing powers." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 31 '53 160w

"This is a tantalizing work, ■ sort of sampler of rich ideas and concepts with ■ brief running commentary, that cannot help leaving readers anxious to read further." J. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 31 '54 550w

"'The White Umbrella' is ■ sketchy but intriguing survey of the political thought of India. It illuminates current Indian policy and political practice, and will reward handsomely those who buy and read it." Donald Harrington

+ Sat ■ 37:16 F 13 '54 600w

"It is an entirely serious work of scholarship, concise and clear, which aims at giving the western reader ■ summary of Hindu political ideas in a form which he can easily grasp."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p584 S 17 '54 470w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:220 Je '54 170w

BROWN, EDWARD JAMES. Proletarian episode in Russian literature, 1928-1932. 311p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

891.709 Russian association of proletarian writers 53-10014

"In this expanded version of his doctoral dissertation author carefully traces the rise and fall of the Russian Association of Proletarian Writers, known as RAPP. After the revolution and for some years to come several groups of varying importance existed side by side but from around 1926 on RAPP assumed more and more leadership and soon absorbed the other groups until RAPP itself was dissolved in 1932 when the Party decreed one single all inclusive Union of Soviet Writers." Library J

"Too specialized for general public; recommended for collections on Russian literature and history." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:59 Ja 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Max Beloff

Manchester Guardian p6 My 21 '54 220w

Reviewed by Emanuel Litvinoff

Spec p411 Ap ■ '54 1250w

U ■ Quarterly Bk ■ 10:188 Je '54 220w

BROWN, ERNEST HENRY PHELPS. The balloon. 241p $3 St Martins

53-13470

In a prefatory note the author says: "This book tells the story of a handful of men in the campaign in France and Belgium in 1940. Their characters are real to me, but they are all creatures of my imagination. Some particularities of the setting there are bound to be, but I have not represented any actual person, nor have I tried to write a narrative of the campaign, or portray any type of unit or soldier. My whole endeavour has been to show how some traits of human nature appear in the flux and stress of events, and to offer an impression of scenes in which beauty and suffering were strangely mingled."

Booklist 50:239 F 15 '54

Kirkus 21:549 Ag 15 '53 90w

"Mr Brown's touch is firm but sympathetic, whether his subject is the strained captain through whose eyes most of the events are seen, the efficient likeable colonel, the embarrassingly fervid padre, or the orderly clerk suspected of theft. This is not a clever novel, but it rings quietly true." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 8 '53 120w

"I do not know whether Mr. Brown has written anything before, but there will certainly be a concert of voices demanding that he write again. Mature, skilful, and honest, The Balloon is the work of a writer who knows his fellow men and likes them." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p680 D 4 '53 300w

"Mr. Phelps Brown's The Balloon is a worthy effort . . . but his hand is so heavy and his dialogue so house-masterly that The Balloon, although it does finally go up, is punctured beyond repair."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 1 '54 50w

BROWN, FREDRIC. Angels and spaceships. 224p $2.75 Dutton

54-8864

Seventeen science fiction stories.

Kirkus 22:459 Jl 15 '54 90w

"You'll have fun reading this." H. H. Holmes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 19 '54 150w

"Any anthology worthy of the name these days includes at least one story by Fredric Brown; this collection of seventeen tales demonstrates why. A handy man with a word, a plot, or a deft and insidious story development, Mr. Brown shows that he is also a master of the vignette with the shock, or surprise, ending." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p36 O 24 '54 120w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 200w

BROWN, FREDRIC. His name was Death. 191p $2.75 Dutton

54-6828

Detective story.

"Brilliant wallop in climax." Drexel Drake
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 4 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:251 Ap 1 '54 70w

"Mr. Brown is an ingenious craftsman and likes to pin himself within special disciplines. . . He does appear to feel that salting of sex is de rigueur and he adds it somberly as if he had been reading Reports on Life Adjustment. For the rest it's very able nonsense which at the last catches you like the mousetrap you set too unwarily." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 6 '54 170w

"You'll be compelled to read through in one sitting to one of the very few endings that have genuinely surprised me in a long time."

Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p13 Je 20 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 18 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 Jl 17 '54 30w

BROWN, FREDRIC. Lights in the sky are stars. 254p $3 Dutton

53-11520

Science fiction.

Booklist 50:205 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 28 '54 40w

"A serious SF novel, this avoids the gimmicks and emphasizes the possible techniques of the future."

Kirkus 21:600 S 1 '53 90w

"Even in this, the best year to date for serious and intelligent science fiction novels, Fredric Brown's second full-length story of the future seems outstanding—and for a rather surprising reason. In both detective stories and science-fantasy, Brown has been noted for sharp melodrama and offbeat humor; here those elements are markedly toned down (though not wholly absent), and what distinguishes the book is a warm blend of simplicity and sincerity." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p50 D 6 '53 170w

"The end is perhaps a little contrived but this is a good story." B. D.

+ — N Y Times p53 N 29 '53 120w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 11 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p3D D 27 '53 90w

BROWN, FRIEDA KENYON. Last hurdle; il. by Peter Spier. 202p $2.50 Crowell

Horses—Legends and stories 53-8427

Story of Katherine Nelson, whose dreams were mostly of horses and riding. With help from others Kathy obtained possession of an apparently worn out horse, worked hard over him, and finally entered him in a show where he won a prize.

Booklist 50:262 Mr 1 '54

"Little girls who dream of riding or owning a horse will thoroughly enjoy the experiences of hard-working, tenacious Kathy." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:35 F '54 80w

Kirkus 21:488 Ag 1 '53 90w

"Recommended for fifth- and sixth-graders." F. M. Hensey

+ Library J 78:2226 D 15 '53 60w

"This is for girls from about eleven to fourteen who know or want to know about competition in the ring. The style and information both are excellent." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 27 '53 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:35 Ja '54

BROWN, MRS GLADYS EVERETS. Tico Bravo, shark hunter; with il. by Scott MacLain. 132p $2.50 Little

54-5135

Story of a Costa Rican family. Tico Bravo wanted to join his father in his trips to sea when he caught sharks for their vitamin-rich livers. But his father insisted that he do well in school before he could join his crew. The story tells what happened when Tico finally realized his dream. For ages eight to twelve.

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 20w

"Boys will find this good reading and they will like Tico, whose traits are not all heroic." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:96 Ap '54 80w

Kirkus 22:33 Ja 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:706 Ap 15 '54 60w

"Boys of nine or ten will be fascinated by his experiences, but the picture of family life, and the share Julita has in Tico's success make it a worthwhile story for girls too." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 110w

"An excellent picture of shark fishing—although an extra illustration or two would have clarified the intricacies of rope and hook for boy adventurers avid for every detail of this fine story." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 11 '54 160w

BROWN, HARRISON SCOTT. Challenge of man's future [an inquiry concerning the condition of man during the years that lie ahead]. 290p $3.75 Viking

572.9 Anthropogeography. Natural resources 54-6422

In his Preface the author says: "This book represents an attempt to examine man's past and present and, on the basis of the clues derived from such a study, to examine his future. . . I believe that man has the power, the intelligence, and the imagination to extricate himself from the serious predicament that now confronts him. The necessary first step toward wise action in the future is to obtain an understanding of the problems that exist. This in turn necessitates an understanding of the relationships between man, his natural environment, and his technology. I hope that this study will in some measure contribute to that understanding."

Booklist 50:352 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 40w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 4 '54 410w

"This book comes well recommended. It has been well received. . . We need to be shocked into recognizing these facts, and into distributing thought and effort more aptly than the present national budget of the United States would suggest. But the hard and brutal realism is not the way to stir men to act. An optimism so thin that it seems plastered onto a deep cynicism more for the sake of form than because it is genuinely meant, won't grow any rice. If it be argued that Mr. Brown is merely stating the objective view of the geochemist and that he who objects is merely bruising his head against nature, then the citizen may be allowed a retort." S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 25 '54 650w

Foreign Affairs 33:159 O '54 80w

"A serious appraisal of a serious situation of which man must take account and act accordingly, this lacks, through its very intensity and purpose, the humor of perspective that would attract a larger audience."

Kirkus 22:92 F 1 '54 260w

"An important book that should be acquired by college and public libraries." Louis Barron + Library J 79:446 Mr 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. C. Gray

Manchester Guardian p4 N 23 '54 130w

Reviewed by K. F. Mather

Nation 178:362 Ap 24 '54 1150w

"Dr. Brown's book follows the general pattern of such well-known writers as Fairfield Osborn, William Vogt and Robert Cook. It is superior to any other that I have seen in the mass of compact information it contains, especially in the field of nutrition for which Dr. Brown's scientific training particularly qualifies him." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 131:20 Ag 16 '54 700w

Reviewed by N. W. Pirie

New Statesman & Nation 48:512 O 23 '54 180w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 28 '54 1450w

"Mr. Brown's book seems to me a really extraordinary achievement, a masterly synthesis of all of the diverse fields of scientific knowledge that bear on the problems of relations between population and resources. I found it, further, to be absorbing reading when I had expected to be bored by the same old facts that alarmed authors have been throwing at us in book after book in recent years. His calm, straightforward prose is very effective and he makes his points, not by 'slanting' or by tricks of rhetoric, but by a clear exposition of what we know and what we can presume." Marston Bates

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 21 '54 750w

New Yorker 30:148 Ap 10 '54 260w

"There is much in this book that is worth reading. Mr. Brown sets down in orderly fashion what he knows about the world's resources, and his figures and arguments are convincing. We do indeed need to think about the problem—and, for that matter, many people are so thinking. But if the only plan is Population-by-Permission in the way he suggests, then, to quote his own words, 'Who would want to live in such a world?' " J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 29 '54 800w

Reviewed by Russell Lord

Sat R 37:14 Mr 20 '54 1300w

Reviewed by Francis Watson

Spec p532 O 29 '54 180w

Reviewed by G. E. Hutchinson

Yale R n s 43:611 summer '54 1350w

BROWN, HENRY PHELPS. See Brown, E. H. P.

BROWN, IRA VERNON. Lyman Abbott, Christian evolutionist. 303p $5 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Abbott, Lyman

53-5065

"Subtitled 'A study in religious liberalism,' this was the prize essay for the American Society of Church History in 1949. Abbott, as much as any other eminent cleric of his time, illustrates the rise of the liberal protestantism which is still the most fashionable religious practice in this country, although Abbott himself 'seldom piloted the ship,' but 'usually traveled in the bow.' " (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

Reviewed by A. A. Ekirch

Am Hist R 59:650 Ap '54 400w

"Readers belonging to a later generation will have a better understanding of the history of American Christianity, and especially of the spirit and content of 19th century liberalism, if they will studiously read Prof. Brown's carefully studied and well documented life of Lyman Abbott. His manuscript was awarded the highly esteemed Brewer prize by the American Society of Church History."

+ Christian Century 71:302 Mr 10 '54 300w

Reviewed by D. S. Raymond

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 1 '54 450w

"Mr. Brown has ordered his research in a clear, comprehensive, and sympathetic survey of Abbott's ideas. . . Mr. Brown, however, does not use his thorough knowledge to illuminate the complex of reform and complacency, imperialism and evangelism of Abbott's time and thought. . . The paleness of judgment and flatness of tone which inform the narrative reflect a limited perspective."

B. M. Cross

+ — New Eng Q 26:550 D '53 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 8 '53 40w

"Admirably clear and nicely written study in intellectual history." J. M. England

+ Sat R 36:42 N 28 '53 270w

"This volume is interesting and important not only for its depiction of the ideas and tensions of Abbott's time, but also for its portrayal of the man."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:149 Je '54 240w

BROWN, JOSEPH EPES, ed. Sacred pipe. See Black Elk, Oglala Indian

BROWN, KENNETH IRVING. Not minds alone; some frontiers of Christian education. 206p $3 Harper

377.1 Religious education 53-11839

"This book is born of a series of convictions. But the major faith on which it is based is a belief that unless American education, in all of its major manifestations in American life from kindergarten to graduate school, can be brought to a deeper appreciation of the place of ethical and religious values in the classroom and the goal of spiritual maturity for both the learner and the teacher, American education will continue to fail its own high objective." (Pref) The author was formerly president of Denison University and Hiram College. Index.

Booklist 50:291 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:127 Mr '54 20w

"It is cause for rejoicing on the part of one engaged in the administration of a college to consider the ideas of a friend and colleague who takes into full account the practical difficulties involved in transforming the desirable into the actual. Here are the problems of team work, evaluation, definition of objectives and democracy, faced with candor. . . Teacher, administrator or student will find an occasion for self-searching as he reads." P. E. Gresham
+ Christian Century 71:494 Ap 21 '54 440w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 160w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Little fir tree; pictures by Barbara Cooney. [32p] $2 Crowell 54-5535

The tale of a little Christmas tree which was brought into the house each year to brighten the life of a little lame boy, and each year was replanted in the forest. Then one year the tree did not have to be brought in; the little boy was well enough to go to the tree. Ages five to eight.

Booklist 51:155 D 1 '54

"A new story to read aloud—and one the little folks will enjoy."

+ Kirkus 22:751 N 15 '54 130w

"A Christmas story for all ages." Elenora Alexander

+ Library J 79:2491 D 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p7 D 19 '54 90w

"The climax is as expected—a happy one, to be sure—but the quality of the book lies in its beautifully evoked feeling of the seasons as the tree grows and waits and in the little verses and songs, set to familiar tunes, which punctuate the narrative." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p54 D 5 '54 60w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Wheel on the chimney [il. by] Tibor Gergely. [31p] $3 Lippincott

Storks—Legends and stories 54-8486

Picture-story book which follows the life story of a pair of storks from one spring to the next.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:95 D '54 50w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54 150w

"Eloquent paintings of these scenes by Tibor Gergely, coupled with the rhythmic prose of the late Margaret Wise Brown make this one of the charming books of the year." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 20w

"The author's characteristic rhythmic lines of text and the artist's brilliant pictures together make this a distinguished contribution to the picture-book age." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:325 O '54 90w

Kirkus 22:432 J1 15 '54 70w

"The text at times seems uninspired and the pictures by Tibor Gergely at one time slip to caricatures. But in spite of this an appealing book. Recommended for children 6-8." N. L. Rathbun

+ — Library J 79:1659 S 15 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt 2 p4 N 14 '54 290w

"This never-ending, ever-wondrous story of migration is told by writer and artist with simplicity and a generous use of color. It is an account of brave, silent birds and friendly, superstitious people—likely to interest young readers and listeners, and even add something to mother's and father's things I-never-knew-till-now list." Pat Clark

+ N Y Times p36 N 28 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 14 '54 100w

"A simple tale . . . but a moving and compelling one in its unerring directness and beauty of movement. Tibor Gergely has heightened this drama of flight with richly colored bird's-eye panoramas of the great countryside, deep jungles, and turbulent seas over which they flew. A beautiful and mind-widening book for children of any age." Rosemary Livsey

+ Sat ■ 37:67 N 13 '54 150w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Willie's adventures; three stories; il. by Crockett Johnson. 68p $2 Scott, W.R. 54-6793

Three short stories for ages four to eight about three episodes in the life of a little boy named Willie.

"All are told with Miss Brown's sure sense of how to reach little children. A well-printed and strongly bound little book with amusing pictures on almost every page." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:246 Ag '54 90w

"Winsome and fetching in the right way."

+ Kirkus 22:231 Ap 1 '54 70w

"Miss Brown's special genius is at its best in this chunky, gay little book, equally good to read to four-year-olds, or for beginning readers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 16 '54 230w

Reviewed by Miriam James

+ N Y Times p28 My 16 '54 200w

BROWN, MAURICE JOHN EDWIN. Schubert's variations. 104p il $3 St Martins

780.81 Schubert, Franz Peter 54-1999

"Mr. Brown has made a close study of the sets of variations, sixteen in all, which Schubert wrote either for independent performance as in the case of the piano duets, or like the Impromptu in B flat for piano solo, or for inclusion as movements in a chamber work, such as those in the octet." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A modest work of loving and meticulous but not ponderous scholarship." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 79:1592 ■ 15 '54 70w

"A modest but scholarly contribution to the growing literature on the variation, well organized (though lacking a bibliography), and engagingly written." R. U. Nelson

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:472 Je '54 330w

"Though unpretentious, it is a sincere and charming description of Schubert's some twenty compositions in this genre." Rudolph Retl

+ Sat R 37:30 Ap 24 '54 320w

"Dr. Vaughan Williams has recently been complaining of the jumbling of the Sublime and the trivial in the variations of the Choral Symphony. Schubert did not expect to be subjected to the scrutiny of Mr. Brown's microscope. But such considerations apart, Mr. Brown is a good critic, he has amassed and grouped such information as is obtainable and for devout Schubertians his short book will be a useful addition to their libraries."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p310 My 14 '54 270w

BROWN, PALMER. Beyond the pawpaw trees; the story of Anna Lavinia; drawings by the author. 121p $2.50 Harper

54-8938

On a lavender blue day, young Anna Lavinia went on a trip to visit her father's sister carrying a basketful of jars of pawpaw jelly. Many strange adventures befell the little girl before she came home again, bringing with her her father who, as her mother said, had been away "chasing rainbows" for a long, long time.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 30w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 28 '54 170w

"Judging by this first book, Mr. Palmer Brown will go far as a writer of children's stories."

+ Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 40w

"An imaginative story by a promising new author who writes with freshness and charm and leaves the reader hoping for more books." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:343 O '54 160w

"Unhackneyed, this is as colorful as it sounds. The author's own drawings for the story have an arresting individualism."

+ Kirkus 22:385 J1 1 '54 170w

"The author's illustrations and several original songs included in the story are equally lighthearted and imaginative. Recommended for the fairy-tale age." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:2254 N 15 '54 80w

"In his first book, a young ex-major of the Air Force gives us a brilliant bit of imaginative nonsense. It has that rare combination of wit, pathos, poetry, and continuously surprising invention that hold a listening child and delight the adult who reads. It may prove the special treasure of many little girls under ten; but its style, its verses, its tantalizing theme about 'seeing is believing,' will take it from pocket to pocket of all who need a new fairy tale to refresh them, even fathers who are searching for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p2 N 14 '54 350w

"This odd and deftly written fantasy may enrapture some girls and interest others not at all." K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:210 N 27 '54 70w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 14 '54 90w

"The author has written this fantasy for little girls who have lively imaginations. Anna Lavinia's remarkable adventures will be appreciated by them and they will probably take the trip with her. Mr. Brown has illustrated the story with drawings which resemble the work of Rowland Emmett." A. B.

+ Sat R 37:74 N 13 '54 120w

BROWN, PAUL. Sparkie and Puff Ball; il. by [the author]. [31p] $2.50 Scribner

54-8784

A little boy who dreamed of horses and cowboys has his dreams come true when he goes to his uncle's western ranch and is given the pony Puff Ball to ride. For first readers.

Booklist 51:67 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 N 14 '54 110w

"A good book for first and second graders. Paul Brown's illustrations on every page are done with real 'hoss-sense.' They make this biggish book a special treasure, for the pictures convey the story almost as well as the words." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '54 90w

Kirkus 22:634 S 15 '54 70w

"Not unusual but useful if more books of this type are needed." A. B. Martin

Library J 79:2254 N 15 '54 70w

"Delightful big-type story for small boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 1 p14 N 14 '54 30w

"Small boys who, like Sparkie, tote six-guns and dream about cowboys and Indians ought to get a great deal of fun out of this picture book." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 110w

BROWN, VINSON. How to make a home nature museum; il. by Don Greame Kelley. 214p $2.50 Little

579 Natural history—Technique 54-5104

Handbook on the making of a home nature museum, explaining how to display the collections attractively. Partial contents: Out-of-doors fun brought indoors; Preparing your space for museum work; Collecting specimens; Classifying specimens; Mounting and labeling specimens; Plaster, rubber and wax molds and models; Arranging your museum displays for both beauty and storytelling. Index.

Booklist 50:301 Ap 1 '54

"Vinson Brown is a naturalist who not only knows his subject but also knows that the amateur naturalist begins his study by knowing nothing. The result is an extremely clear handbook which covers all phases of the development of a home nature museum." Sylvia Cassell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 16 '54 120w

"Whether one has only a corner of a room, part of a wall or a complete attic, these suggestions are practical and stimulating. So, too, are the appendices—to the last sentence: a long list of reference books; a list of sources of supplies; suggestions for further activities. There can be no delinquency problems where such books as this are in use." C. M. Lord

+ Horn Bk 30:399 Ap '54 200w

Kirkus 22:36 Ja 15 '54 110w

"City children living in apartments (or any house where space is at a premium) will find these excellent directions on how to collect, classify, mount, label and display nature specimens impractical. However, this book is ideal for schools, scout and other kinds of groups, summer and day camps, anyone who wants to direct youngsters in such an activity." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:788 Ap 15 '54 80w

"This little book is modest in appearance and could have had more elaborate illustration beside its practical diagrams. It will be useful to scouts, boys' clubs, nature museums, garden clubs, to help inspire children to activities which will mean less hours sitting before the television."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 16 '54 130w

"There are many suggestions for original pursuits which the reader may work out by himself. The pictures are generally helpful. Scout leaders, science teachers, science clubs, exhibitors at science fairs and girls and boys who are really interested in scientific activities will find this volume very useful." G. O. Blough

+ N Y Times p36 Je 6 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:65 Mr '54

BROWN, WALLACE CABLE. Charles Churchill: poet, rake, and rebel. 240p il $4 Univ. of Kan. press

B or 92 Churchill, Charles 53-7064

A critical biography of Charles Churchill, English political satirist, clergyman, and rake, who died in Boulogne in 1764, at the age of thirty-two. The author is professor of English at the University of Kansas City. Index.

BROWN, W. C.—Continued

"In general Mr. Brown deals with the life and works with thoroughness. In one instance, though, he accepts a sentimental platitude without sufficient skepticism, as when he repeats an untrustworthy source that Churchill's sister died of a broken heart in 1764; the records show that she died four years later. And his own frequent attempts to justify Churchill's lapses seem gratuitous. He analyzes the poetry with such exhaustive detail that one recalls his previous book, called by the Times Literary Supplement a veritable Kinsey report on the behavior of the heroic couplet. With the same thoroughness, if with nothing else, he has now treated Churchill to a first complete and documented biography." Robert Halsband

+ — Sat R 37:46 Mr 13 '54 270w

"Dr. Brown's study is markedly strong in its appreciation of the technical niceties of Churchill's handling of the heroic couplet. The critical portion of the book, however, particularly Chapters V and VI, is less successful. The weakest aspect of it, and the weakness is serious, is its almost total neglect of the neo-classic heritage in Churchill's satire. Leaning heavily upon the general plans and the internal structures of the familiar Latin satires, Charles Churchill was a thoroughgoing classicist. Any evaluation of his remarkable satire must take this fact into account, yet Dr. Brown fails to give it meaning in connection with Churchill's poetry."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:45 Mr '54 280w

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS, and OPIE, REDVERS. American foreign assistance. 615p $6 Brookings

338.9 United States—Foreign policy 53-11921

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by W. R. Sharp

Am Pol Sci R 48:548 Je '54 1000w

"Whatever impact this survey may have on the formulation of future policy will be all to the good in view of its wise and reasoned conclusions." J. B. Cohen

+ Ann Am Acad 291:159 Ja '54 400w

Foreign Affairs 32:333 Ja '54 50w

"The outstanding merits of the book as a record—and they are considerable—are that it ferrets out the circumstances that gave rise to the various programs, traces the transition from one type of assistance to another, and delineates the changing objectives of the aid. The handling of individual programs is spot-ty." Gardner Patterson

+ — J Pol Econ 62:179 Ap '54 650w

"Volumes published by The Brookings Institution in recent years have tended to be rather heavy and comprehensive and the present volume is no exception to that pattern. It attempts to deal and deal exhaustively—in spite of disclaimers—with the totality of American assistance to other countries between 1940 and 1952. That is a tremendous job and it is carried out in an exceptionally fine style, as would be expected. Just how long the program under consideration will go on and when another monumental volume such as the present will be justified is uncertain." P. B. Potter

+ — Social Educ 18:43 Ja '54 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p102 F 12 '54 700w

"Much of the information and analysis presented is familiar to those who have studied or had experience of these matters, but nowhere else is so much authoritative, detailed material brought together."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:443 D '53 240w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseud.). Invitation to murder. 183p $2.75 Scribner

54-8689

Detective story.

Booklist 51:134 N 15 '54

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54 50w

"Good summer entertainment, better written than the Grace Latham-Colonel Primrose [works]."

+ Kirkus 22:372 Je 15 '54 90w

"Peripheral characters drop like flies and there's so much overacting among the principals that it's all tense enough to send impressionable readers into fits. Others are likely to prefer the customarily poised and amusing Leslie Ford." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 26 '54 90w

"Has a glittering background of Newport society, an attractively spirited heroine, a likeable love story and some of Mrs. Ford's smoothest writing; but it's slow and long for pretty unsurprising plot, and badly weakened by an abrupt ex machina ending." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p41 S 26 '54 30w

"Colonel Primrose, Sergeant Buck, and that nice Mrs. What's-Her-Name are missing from this one, and their absence is felt. Miss Ford's characters are always agreeable, however, and her plot (something about the malevolence resulting from a tangled inheritance) is plausible enough, so the chances are that her admirers will be reasonably content."

New Yorker 30:168 O 16 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 10 '54 100w

"Pleasant, lively." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 20w

BROWNE, DOUGLAS GORDON, and BROCK, ALAN ST HILL. Fingerprints: fifty years of scientific crime detection; with a foreword by Frederick R. Cherrill. 260p il $3.50 Dutton

364.12 Fingerprints 54-6826

Short history of fingerprinting and its use gathered from French, American, and English sources. Includes a chapter on notable fiction about fingerprinting. Index.

Booklist 51:4 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:281 Ap 15 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 4 '54 20w

"An instructive book which would be even more valuable for reference if the authors had included more technical material on the science itself." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p15 Je 27 '54 80w

"Excellent." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:41 Jl 24 '54 20w

BROWNE, HOWARD (JOHN EVANS, pseud.). Thin air. 209p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

54-6671

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:275 Ap 15 '54 60w

"A very entertaining game of double dodge-em. . . Mr. Browne's variations on a well-known theme are nicely mixed up with his experience as an ad-man and as he keeps his tensions pulled tight, the tale is entertainingly sustained frenzy." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 20 '54 170w

"The book doesn't quite sustain the excellent premise of detection-through-ad-media; but it's simply, easily and vigorously told, strong in suspense and rich in superbly overheard executive double-talk." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 4 '54 80w

"Excellent twists, real excitement and punch." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 27 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 Jl 17 '54 30w

BROWNING, ELIZABETH (BARRETT) (MRS ROBERT BROWNING). Elizabeth Barrett to Miss Mitford; the unpublished letters of Elizabeth Barrett Barrett to Mary Russell Mitford; edited and introduced by Betty Miller. 284p il $4 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Mitford, Mary Russell A54-10114

"Elizabeth Barrett and Mary Russell Mitford were introduced at a party in London on May 27, 1836, and although Miss Mitford was then fifty years old and a literary lioness of formidable stature, while Miss Barrett was barely thirty, as yet wholly unknown, and almost pathologically shy, they instantly formed a friendship that, though largely epistolary, dominated both their lives for a full decade. This selection of a hundred and forty-two hitherto unpublished letters (drawn from a total of more than four hundred letters in the possession of Wellesley College) is a record, one-sided but adequate, of that friendship." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 51:174 D 15 '54

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 48:237 Ag 28 '54 1600w

New Yorker 30:223 N 20 '54 170w

"The letters were very numerous. 'I hear from her two or three times a week,' Miss Mitford wrote. Mrs. Betty Miller has been wise, I imagine, in editing a selection from them rather than the whole corpus. Her short introduction is admirable, as are the explanatory notes, from which I learned much that was new to me." Rex Warner

+ Spec p119 J1 23 '54 1000w

"Admirably edited selections from Miss Barrett's unpublished letters to Miss Mitford between 1836 and 1846."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p486 J1 30 '54 1950w

BRUCE, JAMES. Those perplexing Argentines. 362p $5 Longmans

982 [918.2] Argentina—Social life and customs 53-10840

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Bruce's book doesn't make the Argentines any less perplexing. But it does give us a wide picture of the country and its people." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 26:188 Mr '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 32:519 Ap '54 10w

"The author was United States ambassador to Argentina from 1947 to 1949; and the book proves he is no writer. Even the polished surfaces of reporting are beyond him. Yet it is doubtful whether many envoys to Hispanic America before the Roosevelt era could have done so honest and earnest—above all so respectful—a job of trying to understand a people so distinct from our own. Mr. Bruce is not equipped to interpret Argentinian complexities; he lacks the sociology, the psychology, and the aesthetic sensibility. Yet almost in spite of himself he reveals glimpses of the subtle realities of Argentina."

+ — Nation 178:137 F 13 '54 280w

"An engaging, warm-hearted account of the country and its people." G. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 21 '54 150w

"One of the better books on Latin America that has appeared recently. . . . While Mr. Bruce's discussion of Argentine politics is not as searching as might have been desired, or expected, the book as a whole is an intrinsically interesting story of life in a turbulent nation." Donald Derby

+ — Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 270w

Wis Lib Bul 50:26 Ja '54

BRUCE, JOHN CAMPBELL. Golden door: the irony of our immigration policy. 244p $3.75 Random house

325.73 U.S.—Emigration and immigration. U.S. Laws, statutes, etc. 53-9712

A popularly written book, embodying criticism of the McCarran-Walter Act and a plea for a better law to take its place.

Booklist 50:270 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 21 '54 300w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 3 '54 700w

Kirkus 21:812 D 15 '53 210w

"This is an angry, lively, timely work on a controversial issue affecting all of us, along with persons and nations the world over. Well worth purchase for all libraries." E. M. Oboler

+ Library J 79:378 F 15 '54 110w

Reviewed by David Fellman

Nation 178:310 Ap 10 '54 550w

"What Mr. Bruce has done is to take a complicated technical subject and treat it as narrative, something he achieves by illustrating the workings of the law with many stories about men, women and children trapped by its provisions. The stories are not formal case histories, but are more like the familiar magazine-style incident, interesting and effective. . . . Mr. Bruce concludes his well written book with some suggestions that make sense." R. J. Donovan

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 21 '54 650w

"This is by no means an objective and impartial study, but it is first-rate source material for anyone who wants to argue the inequities of our present immigration policies." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p14 F 21 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:119 F 27 '54 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 28 '54 2150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:63 Mr '54

"The book does not pause to give a judicious appraisal of the workings of the whole system; it is too overwhelmed by the manifest injustices. Yet these very qualities of excited indignation give the work its value. For it reduces to immediate, personal terms the tragic injustices committed under the McCarran-Walter Act in the two years of its operation." Oscar Handlin

+ Yale R ns 43:640 summer '54 250w

BRUCKNER, MRS LEONA S. Triumph of love; an unforgettable story of the power of goodness. 213p $3 Simon & Schuster

362.78 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. 53-10822

The mother of a son who was born without arms describes the sorrows and ultimate triumphs of accepting the small boy into their otherwise normal family.

Booklist 50:214 F 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ja 17 '54 60w

Kirkus 21:729 N 1 '53 260w

"This is a story that deserves that outworn adjective 'heart-breaking.' Simply and sincerely, Leona S. Bruckner writes of the torments, tears and, finally, the rewards of caring for a physically handicapped baby." Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p29 F 7 '54 360w

"Her book is certainly worth reading, if only because it shows what can be done to make life livable, no matter what the handicap." William Murray

+ Sat R 37:22 F 13 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:203 O '54

BRUCKNER, WALTER HERBERT. Metal-lurgy of welding. 290p 1l $6 Pitman

671.52 Welding

A54-4871

"A textbook written by a faculty member of the University of Illinois' Department of Mining and Engineering. It covers from the metallurgical viewpoint the whole field of the welding of metals. Several of the chapters are devoted to technical descriptions of the various welding processes, and related processes such as flame hardening are also described. Other chapters are devoted to stresses in welded metals, specifications for electrodes and welding rods, and the economics of welding." (Library J) Index.

"The book is designed for engineering students, but other readers including machine designers and production engineers will be interested." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1320 J1 '54 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:48 My '54

BRUNNER, HEINRICH EMIL. Eternal hope; tr. by Harold Knight. 232p $3.50 Westminster press

236 Eschatology

54-3507

"Beginning with a note of the part played by hope in human life, Dr. Brunner steadily reviews all that the Bible has to say of the last things, time and history, the meaning of the idea of progress, death, the return of Christ, the judgment, the consummation of all things. Constantly he does his best to free Biblical thought from the picture language in which it was expressed, and the result is always illuminating." Times [London] Lit Sup

"One must wait until the third volume of Brunner's Dogmatics appears to see how these brief glimpses fit into the whole panorama of his theological work. The present volume only whets the reader's appetite and increases his impatience. Whether or not Brunner offers us a real, responsible alternative to the programs of Barth and Bultmann, his mediating and missionary intention is bound to be decisive in marking out the next stage for theology, a stage on which we are already standing." Roger Hazelton

Christian Century 71:1465 D 1 '54 650w

"Essential in theological libraries; will also be wanted in larger public libraries." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 79:2321 D 1 '54 110w

"It is the work of one of the most considerable of the Continental theologians, and it is impossible to read it without recognizing the deep thought that lies behind it, or without corresponding thought. It should be added that the 'Postscript' in which Dr. Brunner speaks of his relation with other contemporary writers and their thought, is extremely interesting."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p317 My 14 '54 450w

BRUNTON, DOUGLAS, and PENNINGTON, DONALD H. Members of the Long parliament; introd. by R. H. Tawney. 256p $4.25 Harvard univ. press

328.42 Great Britain. Parliament

[A54-3394]

"The late Mr. Brunton and Mr. Pennington were both assistant lecturers at Manchester University when they began this book at the suggestion of Professor Namier in 1947. Their aim was to unravel the history and social background of the members of the Long Parliament. . . The authors set out to discover in the first place whether any clear social, economic or educational distinction can be drawn between these Parliamentarians and the Royalists in the Long Parliament; then they examine in a similar manner the background of the 'recruiters,' that is to say, the new members who were elected to the House to replace the Royalists at the end of the first civil war. The conclusion which they reach is that in all significant respects 'the contrasts between the contending parties are less striking than the similarities'—'the two parties appear, on the basis of the statistics here presented, to be economically and socially much of a piece.'" (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

Reviewed by Caroline Robbins

Am Hist R 60:81 O '54 550w

"This is not a book for laymen. It is a tool for scholars. . . This volume has an admittedly negative value. It is to humble the student before all generalizations, especially any which speak of this revolution as a class struggle. New interpretations are withheld, but they are foreshadowed in this preliminary study which, even thus far, has well deserved a laudatory introduction from Tawney." G. C. Rogers

Ann Am Acad 295:187 S '54 450w

Current Hist 27:387 D '54 80w

"While a general survey is given of the entire country, the representation of two regions, the East and the South-West, has been analysed in greater detail. The chapter on 'The Eastern Association' is by Mr. Brunton; it is replete with interesting information which, however, has not undergone the last pruning that only the author can give to his work; and writers of mass biography, not to tax unduly the absorptive capacity of the reader, should eschew giving detail which is irrelevant or distantly related to their theme. . . Mr. Pennington's carefully constructed chapter on the South-West, beside illustrating some of the basic theses of the book, contains much valuable material on the family history of that region." L. B. Namier

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:333 Mr 13 '54 1850w

"This is one of the most useful books to appear for years on the nature of the English Civil War of the seventeenth century—most useful because so precise and objective. . . The book is too stimulating an achievement for the reviewer to spend space on small quibbles and corrections. It is sad to record that Mr. Brunton, one of the authors, was killed in a road accident shortly before its completion." R. C. Latham

+ Spec p241 F 26 '54 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p151 Mr 5 '54 1000w

BRYAN, JOSEPH. Aircraft carrier. 205p $3; pa 35c Ballantine

940.544 Yorktown (aircraft carrier 2d of the name). World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 54-7147

"The author was assigned to the staff of Adm. Radford, in command of an aircraft carrier division, in 1945, and remained five months. This is the diary Bryan kept while serving aboard the carrier Yorktown." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 50:338 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 4 '54 110w

"The author presents his diary—very interesting and uncluttered with details—of his assignment to the Yorktown in 1945. . . There is some profanity but not an excessive amount. All in all, a convincing picture of fighting men at sea." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:261 Ag '54 60w

"This is an absorbing picture, told with compassion and without sensationalism, and most of all with thought to the ironies and comradeship and heroism of wartime existence."

+ Kirkus 22:91 F 1 '54 210w

"Not recommended except to those especially interested in the Yorktown." Frank Anderson

Library J 79:542 Mr 15 '54 90w

"The co-author of 'Admiral Halsey's Story' and 'Mission Beyond Darkness' gives us in this modest, deliberately unheroic book a clean slice of life on an Essex class carrier at the height of the Pacific war. . . This volume, in short, has realism and freshness, dry wit and homely observation to distinguish it from the yards of writing about our naval war." Alfred Stanford

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 25 '54 420w

"The diary is beautifully written, as is everything the versatile Mr. Bryan writes. . . Mr. Bryan's anecdotes are delightful." W. J. Lederer

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 4 '54 450w

"For the reader who knows little of sea-air warfare, 'Aircraft Carrier' is highly recommended as an informative, dramatic, and highly skilful job of writing a personal account of war; for the initiate, it will bring back a vicarious tension and an intimate pleasure akin to personal reminiscence." A. A. Ageton

+ Sat R 37:14 Ap 17 '54 1350w

BRYANT, ALICE FRANKLIN (MRS WILLIAM CHENEY). Religion for the hard-headed. 116p $2 Dodd

239 Christianity—Evidences 53-10255

"In dialog form, a Believer, Hardhead, Agnostic and Skeptic argue about 'the minimum essentials of a workable Christian philosophy.'" Bookmark

Booklist 50:231 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:103 F '54 20w

"For that friend of yours who is intelligent and is well informed about everything except Christianity, maybe Mrs. Bryant has turned the trick. . . Note to sophisticates: There is no sawdust trail scene." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 27 '53 80w

"There is nothing startlingly new in either the objections to religion or the answers as given here. There are, in fact, no new objections and no new answers, but there are various ways of stating them. The informality of the dialogue form, and the fact that the unbelievers get a chance to talk back as the conversation proceeds, give the presentation a down-to-earth flavor which ought to appeal to a good many of the hardheaded." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:207 F 17 '54 650w

"The author is well informed in philosophy and familiar with modern biblical scholarship. She reinforces her arguments by quotations from such authorities as Du Nouy, Millikan and Bergson, as well as from ancient philosophers. . . The treatment of each topic is brief, but sound and persuasive." H. G. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 7 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:62 Mr '54

BRYANT, SIR ARTHUR. Story of England; v 1, Makers of the realm. 399p $5 Houghton

942 Great Britain—History [54-13122]

The first of a projected three-volume popular history of England. This volume "carries the story to Edward I's reign. It describes how the nation was first made, how its peoples—the descendants of England's many invaders—were blended into one, and its basic institutions were created. The Monarchy, Church and Common Law, the Shire, Hundred and Parish, the Gentry, Yeomanry, and the Great Council that became Parliament, were all formed in this period." (p.25) Index.

Bookmark 14:55 D '54 30w

"The author obviously has a great love for and feeling of British history, and his enthusiasm can be contagious to the casual student."

+ Current Hist 27:386 D '54 130w

"His writing, as always, is brilliant and delightfully allusive: Many men and boys may find it too rich a diet; but those who enjoyed his biography of Samuel Pepys and his books on England in the Napoleonic Era know what to expect and will not be disappointed. Recommended for general purchase." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:2209 N 15 '54 130w

"It shows the genius of the island people revealing itself in a series of episodes and movements skilfully arranged and delightfully—at times brilliantly—described. The author is not, it is true, at home in these early ages as he is in an 'age of elegance'; inaccuracies are much too common." C. R. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 20 '54 180w

"Endowed with a style beautiful in its simple lucidity and with a gift for organizing vast quantities of material, this historian possesses also the faculty of distinguishing the substance from the accidental, the significant from the merely factual. . . The old, old story is retold with a freshness, a verve, an assured competence which will hold the attention of any reader whether he is already initiated into the subject or is a neophyte." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 D 12 '54 550w

"The first volume of a trilogy that promises to be a brilliant evocation of the English past."

+ New Yorker 30:224 N 20 '54 150w

Spec p162 F 5 '54 170w

Spring'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 100w

"It would be easy to criticize isolated sentences in this book. . . But to multiply minor criticisms would be to obscure the outstanding merits of a remarkable book. What imparts special quality to this work is a generosity of spirit—an informed and enlightened patriotism. The result is a notable achievement, and if the remaining instalments sustain the high quality of this volume, we shall have the best popular history (within its scope) of the country which Mr. Bryant obviously and sincerely loves."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p811 D 18 '53 1050w

BRYHER WINIFRED (MRS KENNETH MACPHERSON) (BRYHER, pseud). Roman wall. 219p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

54-7067

Historical novel about life in a Helvetian outpost of the Roman Empire in the third century. The hero is Valerius, a Roman officer, who commands the post, and who escapes with a few others when Orba is overrun by the Alemanni.

Booklist 50:380 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:219 Je '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:473 ■ '54 300w

Reviewed by J. S. Untermeyer

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 16 '54 300w

"The charm of this book lies in the author's ability to recreate the atmosphere which must, indeed, have been that of the Roman provinces in the latter years of the third century A.D. . . All this is described with the touch of intimate knowledge but with no trace of heaviness. It is a book for those who love their history in light novel form or for those who might someday wish to visit those outposts of empire which Rome left strewn across the face of Europe." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je ■ '54 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

"Throughout her books Bryher's method has been to remove small details from a large historical picture and examine them, with the care of a jeweler. Although she avoids anything as easy as direct comment, her grasp of any given historical situation, which is the result of a poetic sensibility firmly grounded on scholarship, is communicated to the reader as an almost live thing. . . Finally, in this age of machine-like prose, Bryher writes like a woman with a private income: she can afford to take pains, and although never destined to be a best seller, Roman Wall will repay those willing to take the time to savor it." D. I. Segal

+ Commonweal 60:493 Ag 20 '54 650w

"There is a quiet penetration of character and national mood here which places Bryher's work in a special, evocative category of historical fiction."

+ Kirkus 22:291 My 1 '54 170w

"Bryher uses delicate colors rather than turgid contrasts, without straining for 'epic' effects. The result is a neat series of pictures capturing a significant moment in history."

+ Nation 179:58 J1 17 '54 360w

BRYHER, WINIFRED—Continued

"She can banish time and make the past as real and credible as the present. This is her special secret and her special charm. We wake from the spell with a sense of effort and of loss to realize that for two hours we have been living in a world that perished fifty generations ago." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 16 '54 700w

"As history reanimated, Bryher's 'Roman Wall' is remarkable. A man of imagination and a good soldier, Valerius is satisfactory as hero; the real hero of the book is the mind that does not deceive itself." Marianne Moore

+ N Y Times p5 My 16 '54 550w

+ New Yorker 30:90 Je 26 '54 150w

"It is a good novel in its own right, indeed an excellent one, and a good novel rarely states, though it often suggests, a moral. Rather it has its own independent existence—it has characters and action and life. 'Roman Wall' has all of these." T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 37:12 Je 12 '54 400w

"Philosophical in tone, poetic in concept, set like delicate cameos in exquisitely wrought settings, her superbly moving resuscitations of the past have no modern peers. We would have to go back to Sigrid Undset's remarkable chronicles of medieval Norway for suitable comparisons." Richard McLaughlin

+ Spring'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 300w

Wis Lib Bul 50:209 O '54

BRYNLEY, DAVID. Seth. 311p $3.50 Scribner 54-7918

Story of a poor Welsh boy, born out of wedlock and orphaned early in life who after many hardships in childhood and youth, finally finds a way open to him for a better life.

"The characters reek of wickedness or shine with virtue; the plot is continually on the boil and steaming with melodrama; and the happy ending is in the best possible Victorian tradition." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:83 S '54 100w

Booklist 51:14 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:347 Je 1 '54 210w

"To this conventional tale Mr. Brynley brings a deep and intimate knowledge of Welsh character and life in the fishing village where Seth was born. . . In contrast to the vicious exploiters of the boy, Mr. Brynley introduces a few characters who have the simple virtues of compassion and goodness. It is they who give the pattern of the book some relief from its excessive scenes of brutality and violent deaths. That Seth emerges, as he does, as a sensitive youth who will one day be a singer of sweet songs is something of a miracle." Carol Field

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 15 '54 240w

"The author has certainly not been bashful in helping himself to stereotyped turns of plot. Yet the abundant, intimate details with which he fills the background of the story come to outweigh its naive simplicity. The author, himself Welsh, was certainly there, the reader feels, and most of this surely happened to a lot of people. Although he has stacked the cards heavily against Seth, plainly a lot of his outwardly more fortunate fellows felt the same oppressive horror at this seamier side of Welsh life." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Times p19 Ag 15 '54 550w

"The boy, Seth, is an acceptable character, since he is set up from the beginning as a stock figure of one very young and deeply wronged—a sound enough hook to hang this sort of wandering, shifting story on—but the grownups who surround him are too rigidly fixed in their virtue or in their vice to be either believable or entertaining."

+ — New Yorker 30:86 Ag 21 '54 70w

"Like a nineteenth-century novelist, Mr. Brynley frequently portrays his characters in black and white. More effective is his picture of the harsh Welsh background. The novel shows Cwmgleng in the changing seasons—

white and tranquil after a Christmas snow-storm, relaxed and warm on cloudless days in spring, desolate under the dark skies of November. But in the midst of wretchedness and toil there is music. The first time he heard a Welsh chorus, singing as if nothing else mattered in their lives, Seth knew that he was in the presence of something that transcended the poverty and ugliness of Cwmgleng." Walter Havighurst

+ — Sat R 37:36 S 18 '54 220w

BRYSON, LYMAN. Drive toward reason; in the service of a free people. 148p $2.50 Harper

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Intellectual life. Education of adults 54-8873

Based on three lectures sponsored by the Ford Foundation Fund for Adult Education, this is the author's affirmation of his belief in the future of America. Index.

Booklist 51:11 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:3 O '54 20w

Christian Century 71:1105 S 15 '54 80w

"Stimulating, forward looking. Important to all interested in adult education." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1221 Je 15 '54 220w

"Here is a book, stimulating first to last, by a veteran in the championship of reason." A. P. Davies

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 18 '54 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 5 '54 850w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Spring'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 340w

Wis Lib Bul 50:172 Jl '54

BUCHANAN, LAMONT. Pictorial baseball instructor; with forty magic rules to help you play any position better in little league, college play, major league. 124p $2.95 Dutton

796.357 Baseball 54-5027

"A text for the aspiring big leaguer, with 182 photos of major league, college, and Little league players in action. Advice on how to hit, how to play each position, base running and strategy tips, and how signals are given are among the facets of the national game covered in this easy to read volume." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 50:243 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:183 My '54 40w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 7 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:20 Ja 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:459 Mr 1 '54 30w

"For instructor, player and fan alike, the first complete 'How-To' book on baseball is thoroughly recommended."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 24 '54 200w

BUCHANAN, WILLIAM, and CANTRIL, HADLEY. How nations see each other; a study in public opinion, with the assistance of Virginia Van S. Zerega [and others; prepared under the auspices of the United Nations educational, scientific and cultural organization]. 220p $5 Univ. of Ill. press

301.152 [301.154] Public opinion. Public opinion polls. International relations 53-6623

"An analysis of a poll conducted in nine countries in 1948 concerning the attitudes of individuals toward their own and other countries. While regarded as only a pilot study, some of the material presented is most interesting." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by J. W. Riley

Am Soc R 19:496 Ag '54 750w

"If we are to find the way toward real international co-operation, studies such as this are essential to the understanding of mankind. . . [They] add greatly to our total knowledge and ultimate understanding. With information along these lines, we have an important part of the necessary underlying fabric for building free world unity and eventual peace. Without it, we might well fall victim to our preconceived prejudices and rationalizations, and this is inevitably the road to division, despair, and disunity." Elmo Roper

+ Ann Am Acad 292:155 Mr '54 490w

Foreign Affairs 32:505 Ap '54 30w

"A word of high praise should be written at this time for the general excellence of the production job on this study. The appendices provide complete breakdowns of the data; the methodological difficulties are amply discussed; and good summaries are found after every chapter and at the conclusion of the work. . . . Students of public opinion should find this book of value for the volume of raw data and the discussion of problems of international surveys. . . . This volume is probably destined to endure the cruel fate of suffering much criticism while enjoying wide use." R. M. Darrow

+ Pol Sci Q 69:467 S '54 750w

"More than half the book consists of methodological appendixes and a compilation of returns for each of the participating countries. These will be valuable for the historian as source material, and for the professional pollster as an informed evaluation of the many shortcomings and pitfalls in public-opinion polling."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:100 Mr '54 270w

BUCHWALD, ART. Paris [il. by Ronald Julius Christensen]. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 277p $3.75 Little

944.36 [914.436] Paris—Description 54-11131

A selection from the author's columns in the Paris and New York editions of the Herald Tribune. Some are interviews with celebrities; others are about eating places in Paris; and others are on assorted subjects—for instance on taking dogs to restaurants, etc.

"Those who have been chuckling with, and sometimes at, Art Buchwald as he reports his views of Paris to readers of his column in the Herald-Tribune will welcome the repeat performance and the lagniappe of extra material in this personal introduction to the Paris he knows so intimately."

+ Kirkus 22:621 S 1 '54 160w

"Mr. Buchwald has a mordant sense of humor, and his irreverent handling of celebrities is half the fun of the book." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:2463 D 15 '54 100w

"There are a few solid and highly readable essays—the one on art speculation as big business and the engaging account of Europe's first omnibus—but probably the most popular chapters for any reader anticipating a trip abroad will prove to be the authoritative and straightforward pieces on tipping and night life. The interviews with such diverse personalities as Mother Gabor and Somerset Maugham who, conceivably, may never have heard of each other, are entertaining and the illustrations by Ronald Julius Christensen are satirical and gay." Ilka Chase

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 21 '54 270w

"He is a journalistic flâneur with an eye cocked for the unpredictable in human behavior, and his reports on his wanderings are often quite funny. . . . There is also some valuable-sounding advice on where and what to eat on both banks of the Seine."

+ New Yorker 30:226 N 20 '54 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 21 '54 140w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Johnny Jack and his beginnings; il. by Kurt Werth. 47p $2.50 Day

612.6 Sex instruction—Juvenile literature 54-5885

"Johnny Jack is a small boy on a farm, who asks why, why, why. Of course, one day, the

'why's' work back in his mind to that biggest question of all, 'where did I begin?' His mother's honesty and tact, the animal babies around him, the wondrous arrival of his own baby sister, all make little Johnny's new knowledge a matter for wonder, yet a matter he takes in his stride as part of the joyous wonders of the daily world." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 10w

"A fine book for mothers to share with their young." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 16 '54 140w

"A valuable book, handling the subject at beginning level."

+ Kirkus 22:60 F 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:703 Ap 15 '54 20w

"Parents forever are asking for the best book for younger children telling them how they were born. For this year, Mrs. Buck's is the answer. It is so simple, direct, happy and short that it will delight parents to read it aloud."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 18 '54 170w

"Mrs. Buck has written in simple, warm terms a story which answers children's first interest in how they came to be. This is not a beginner's textbook to be shared by parents with their children. Instead it is a pleasing story of a little boy in a comfortable home setting hearing from his mother in a natural way how life begins." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 11 '54 130w

Wis Lib Bul 50:182 Jl '54

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). My several worlds; a personal record. 407p $5 Day

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10460

Autobiography of the first American woman to win the Nobel prize. In it she describes the different patterns into which her life has fallen, but stresses her early years in China, where her parents were missionaries.

Booklist 51:106 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 40w

"The book is subtitled, 'A Personal Record,' and personal it is in the sense of being a record of what her very seeing eyes saw and what her heart understood. It is not personal in the sense of being outspokenly self-revealing. Her autobiography is in a new pattern, with no personal intimacies, but surprisingly intimate in its revelations of man's relationship to man in the world of yesterday as well as of today and tomorrow." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p1 N 7 '54 400w

"If any book can build a bridge of understanding between Asia and America in these urgent times, this is it. For Pearl Buck shows us with her incomparable vividness and accuracy the growth of modern China, its deeply grounded mistrust for the West, but the opportunity the United States has to escape from present misunderstandings back into the old friendship. It is not a theoretical book, but a stirring and emotional study in terms of people's lives, of actual experience, of tragedy and of love." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 N 4 '54 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

"Not only Pearl Buck's most important book, but, on many counts, her best book."

+ Kirkus 22:603 S 1 '54 400w

"It is an absorbing narrative told with warmth and humor and insight, often as moving as her best novels, with the easy grace and integrity notable in her biographies of her missionary parents. Written in modesty and humility, the book faithfully mirrors the mind and heart and strength of a truly admirable and distinguished American." Edgar Snow

+ Nation 179:426 N 13 '54 850w

BUCK, P. S.—Continued

"My Several Worlds' has a deep humanity. For Mrs. Buck's approach to life—and writing—is one of rich and loving tenderness quite untinctured with sentimentality. And her basic creed runs through every line she writes."

F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p1 N 7 '54
750w

"Candor, simplicity, sincerity are the hallmarks of Mrs. Buck's work, the necessary characteristics of a writer desiring to explain one society to another, or indeed, a society to itself. No doubt the immediate popular appeal of her books lay in the color and strangeness of their background, and in her gift for narrative. But Mrs. Buck's real concern has always been to reach across the gap between East and West, to bring the knowledge of each home to the other." Elizabeth Janeway

+ N Y Times p4 N 7 '54 1200w

"A rambling, discursive, and thoroughly delightful autobiography, which may well be one of the best books Mrs. Buck has written."

+ New Yorker 30:186 N 6 '54 160w

"This is not primarily a writer's record. Pearl Buck's prose is often loose and blunt. But it is persuasive. Here she is more concerned with putting over an idea or an emotion than with writing the perfect sentence. The personality that comes through this narrative is generous, wide-hearted, outgoing. The 'I' of the narrative provides in abundance for that visionary element in whose light our own experience can appear momentous and fresh." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 7 '54
1200w

"Those who have read all her books may feel that 'My Several Worlds' is her finest achievement. Those who have not can take it as the rich autumnal flowering of a varied and sensitive mind whose roots are in the common soil of all humanity." Margaret Parton

+ Sat R 37:17 N 6 '54 750w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 950w

BUCKINGHAM, NASH. Hallowed years. 209p
$3.50 Stackpole co.

53-10565

"Nash Buckingham is a Southern gentleman who likes to hunt birds and likes to talk about bird hunting. He hunted 60 years ago when the bag limit on ducks was whatever the individual hunter wanted to make it. . . This is a group of Buckingham hunting yarns, some of fact, some of fancy, told in the relaxed way of a man who has a good audience and who feels free to take his time." San Francisco Chronicle

"Nash Buckingham's reputation as a top-notch teller of stories of hunting wildfowl with gun and dog is well maintained in this latest collection of his yarns. He is a sportsman and a writer!" R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:67 Ja 1 '54 30w

"With the exception of one story, 'The Bigger They Come,' the tales make good reading. Hunters who have lived long enough to know what hunting was at the turn of the century should be particularly appreciative."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 21 '54
230w

BUCKLAND-WRIGHT, JOHN. See Wright, J. B.

BUCKLER, HELEN. Doctor Dan, pioneer in American surgery. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 381p il $5 Little

B or 92 Williams, Daniel Hale 54-6881

"This book tells the unusual story of Daniel Hale Williams (1856-1931), a highly versatile pioneer surgeon of white Negro-Indian blood, who, among many other things, (1) organized Chicago Provident Hospital for training Negro doctors and (2) performed the first successful heart operation (1893), and (3) became the first and only Negro charter member of the select American College of Surgeons (1913). Bibliographically valuable lists of primary and secondary sources." Library J

Booklist 51:12 S 1 '54

Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 40w

"Helen Buckler devoted a decade to the research and the writing of this splendid biography of Daniel Hale Williams, the pioneer Chicago surgeon, and it was worth every minute of it. The book is stormy and controversial but a book about a great Negro could not have been otherwise, for those words describe his career."

V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 20 '54
400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p36 D '54

"An inspiring, humane book."

+ Kirkus 22:222 Mr 15 '54 180w

"Miss Buckler offers an interesting biography which should be purchased by medical, college, and general public libraries." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:854 My 1 '54 150w

"Miss Buckler's story of Dr. Dan reads like a novel. With affection and a sense of human drama she depicts his early struggles to gain a livelihood, his rise to the status of foremost surgeon of his time, his efforts on behalf of his people, his betrayal by members of his own race, his last tragic years of physical helplessness and mental decline, and his burial in an unmarked grave." Bennett Epstein

+ Nation 179:136 Ag 14 '54 1000w

"Miss Buckler's canvas is a crowded one. But she handles the many personalities and events with vividness and skill. Writing with intense emotional conviction about her hero, she has produced an absorbing book." Frances Witherpoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 27 '54
600w

Reviewed by R. J. Dubos

N Y Times p1 Jl 4 '54 130w

"Despite its somewhat patronizing title, it is highly sympathetic; indeed, Miss Buckler's sympathies are so deeply engaged—particularly in her ferociously partisan discussion of the numerous quarrels (professional, political, and racial) that marked Dr. Williams' difficult career—that she almost succeeds in persuading us that he was as bumptious, as bumbling, and as unlovable as his enemies made him out."

New Yorker 30:84 Ag 14 '54 100w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat ■ 37:38 S 11 '54 700w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54
280w

Wis Lib Bul 50:178 Jl '54

BUCKLEY, PETER. Cesare of Italy [photographed by the author]. (Around the world today bks) 87p $2.75 Watts, F.

945 [914.5] Italy—Social life and customs
54-10912

Photographs and brief text show the life of Cesare, a little Italian boy who lives on Lake Lugano.

"An interesting, simply told story illumined by the author's beautiful photographs." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p24 N 14 '54
70w

+ Kirkus 22:710 O 15 '54 130w

"This is likely to be read only if material is needed on Italy—not for sheer enjoyment." M. S. Mathes

Library J 79:2494 D 15 '54 90w

"An unusual informational book for children of ten up. . . The author-photographer is a maker of documentary films who was with the U. S. I. S. in Europe in the last war. His friendly understanding of the place and people permeates his book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p32 N
14 '54 120w

BUCKLEY, WILLIAM FRANK, and BOZELL, L. BRENT. McCarthy and his enemies; the record and its meaning; prologue by William Schlamm, 413p $5 Regnery

973.92 McCarthy, Joseph Raymond. U.S.—
Politics and government—1945- 54-6342

A statement of the case of Senator McCarthy mainly as he himself sees it. "His attitude is that he is fighting a tough conspiracy, which has had more than a century of trial and error to learn how to function." (Sat R) Index.

Reviewed by John Sparkman
Ann Am Acad 296:169 N '54 470w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
Atlantic 193:63 My '54 4300w
Booklist 50:376 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by D. H. Wrong
Canadian Forum 34:113 Ag '54 850w

"A book which should be read by those who would canonize the Wisconsin center of controversy, by those who would damn him, and by those still perplexed by the maze of conflicting statements. It is much more than a book about Senator McCarthy, however; it is a study of the problem of Communist-inspired treason, which transcends any or all of the figures involved." Richard Reid

Cath World 179:157 My '54 360w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 4 '54
600w

"Messrs. Buckley and Bozell have written the most persuasive and thoughtful defense yet for Senator McCarthy and McCarthyism. They freely admit that the junior Senator from Wisconsin has made serious mistakes. Indeed, they are intelligent and candid enough to realize that the Senator deals very largely in what they call 'gratuitous sensationalism.' They argue that he is 'more uncouth than vicious.' And they believe he is performing a great public good." E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 14 '54 700w

"No other book or article approaches this work as a thoroughgoing, convincing indictment of McCarthy. This, of course, was not the authors' intention. . . . Buckley and Bozell are openly intent on justifying McCarthy and fortunately they are determined to do so on serious intellectual grounds. They therefore present the basic issues in terms of fundamental moral alternatives. The book is thus extremely useful, despite the authors' possession of a large and capacious sponge." W. V. Shannon

Commonweal 60:42 Ap 16 '54 1900w

Foreign Affairs 32:674 Jl '54 80w

"Authors are extremely astute, write well and easily, and have arranged their material so cleverly that this alone tends at times to mislead the reader. That they have not troubled to include some available data which would weigh on the side of some of those charged by McCarthy is perhaps not surprising—but regrettable, nevertheless. Not a book to read casually." Margaret Cooley

Library J 79:773 Ap 15 '54 150w

"No one would credit Messrs. Buckley and Bozell with making a more damning case against Sen. McCarthy than his critics, but they have certainly included much material on which an indictment could be drawn. What is disturbing about the book is that having done so, the authors still conclude that 'as long as McCarthyism fixes its goal with its present precision, it is a movement around which men of good will and stern morality can close ranks.'" H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p12 Ap 4 '54 850w

"This is the most extraordinary book yet to come forth in the harsh bibliography, pro and con, of 'McCarthyism.' Measured as a literary and polemical effort it is the most striking. . . . Here, at any rate, is proof that it is the young who are infinitely the more deadly—in purpose at least—of the species. Essentially what they have attempted is a defense both of Senator McCarthy and 'McCarthyism' and an argument, well written in the English language ■ it is, that will rather stagger those to whom that language has long expressed certain concepts of fair play which Messrs. Buckley and Bozell seem to think either out of date or not viable in a world of great peril." W. S. White

N Y Times p4 Ap 4 '54 2050w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 4 '54
440w

"As I read all this nonsense, it had a faintly reminiscent ring. The familiarity of the logic and tone haunted me for a moment; then I remembered the prototype. What Buckley and Bozell are doing is to write about McCarthy precisely as young fellow travelers twenty years ago were writing about the Communist leaders. . . . There is the same hysteria, the same sense of persecution, the same fascination with brutality and power—the same pattern of emotions, in short, and the same pattern of rationalization." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

— Sat R 37:15 Ap ■ '54 1600w

"Much has been written about the Wisconsin Senator, but little has been meaningful because the writers usually belabor some minor point, pro or con, or resort to ad hominem attacks which prove nothing but that men are not always what they are alleged to be." G. E. Sokolsky

Sat ■ 37:16 Ap 3 '54 1500w

Social Educ 18:334 N '54 10w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54
400w

BUDENZ, LOUIS FRANCIS. Techniques of communism. 342p $5 Regnery

335.4 Communism. Subversive activities
54-5642

"A study which covers Communist ideology and strategy as presented by the Marxist-Leninist classics and by current Communist documents, and which compares the early and modern schools of thought and action. Mr. Budenz also considers Communist teaching as the Communist himself would study it and analyzes Communist activities ■ the Communist is instructed to carry them out." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"There has never appeared such a superb analysis of Communist techniques, from both the theoretical and practical point of view, particularly as they apply to the United States. It is incumbent on political scientists who have been critical of congressional investigations of subversion to read this book with an open mind." A. T. Bouscaren

+ Ann Am Acad 296:173 N '54 450w

"[The book] stands out as distinctive in the mass of publications now appearing in its field—a solution for the problem of educators who are asking themselves how they may conveniently set up a required course on Communism in high schools and colleges." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 179:233 Je '54 210w

"One finds many interesting and little known facts in this encyclopedia of communist conspiratorial methods. For several years cards have not been issued to Communist party members, in order to make proof of membership more difficult. Instructions are often conveyed thru code statements in foreign communist publications." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My ■ '54
300w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My ■
'54 40w

BUDNEY, BLOSSOM. Kiss is round; verses; pictures by Vladimir Bobri. [30p] $2.50
Lothrop

54-7884

A picture book intended to teach the concept of roundness, with the aid of brief verses, to ages four to eight.

Booklist 51:67 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54
110w

BUDNEY, BLOSSOM—Continued

"With the text reminiscent of Miriam Schlein's work and art that is a clever combination of solids and lines, there is stimulating material here."

+ Kirkus 22:580 S 1 '54 90w

"Recommended to be read and shown to children of 3-6." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 79:2491 D 15 '54 70w

"This is a book to stimulate and sharpen a child's perception of forms, but first of all it is great fun. It is good to look at, for Bobri has illustrated it with an originality to match the author's. His color is bright but soft, his line is witty and his humor genial." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p44 O 24 '54 120w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:201 N 27 '54 60w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '54 50w

BUEHR, WALTER. Through the locks; canals today and yesterday; il. by [the author]. 64p maps $2.25 Putnam

627.13 Canals—Juvenile literature 54-5498

A brief history of canals and locks, with emphasis on the Erie and Panama canals. Contains pictures, maps, and charts. For grades 4 to 7.

Booklist 50:301 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by P. O. Marsh

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 70w

Horn Bk 30:254 Ag '54 110w

+ Kirkus 22:155 Mr 1 '54 90w

"Recommended especially for school libraries for readers in grades 4-8." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 79:782 Ap 15 '54 60w

"There are many very handsome pictures in black and white, some excellent maps, and a table of important modern canals of the world. A fine gift for young would-be engineers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 2 '54 80w

"Designed for children, the book will prove educational and entertaining to adults as well, and the author's many detailed, accurate illustrations, maps and diagrams make the text the more interesting." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:183 Jl '54

BUFF, MRS MARY (MARSH), and BUFF, CONRAD. Hurry, Skurry, and Flurry [il. by Conrad Buff]. 71p $2.75 Viking

Squirrels—Legends and stories 54-3654

Story of three squirrels and the course of their lives thru the four seasons, Spring to Winter. What they saw and heard and did is set forth in rhythmic sentences and many soft-toned sepia drawings. For ages 5-8.

Booklist 51:67 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 10w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"A happy companion to Dash and Dart is this new poetic story of forest animal life by these well-known collaborators. . . The story is related simply in short lines that have the rhythmic quality of verse and make easy reading for beginners." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:339 O '54 120w

Kirkus 22:383 Jl 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by M. H. Edmonds

Library J 79:2494 D 15 '54 70w

"A beautiful introductory nature book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p28 N 14 '54 290w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 28 '54 100w

"Simple rhythmical text, beautiful sepia drawings, and a sturdy binding combine to make this a distinguished nature-picture book which should appeal to five-to-ten-year-olds." E. A. G.

+ Sat R 37:82 N 13 '54 130w

BULEY, ROSCOE CARLYLE. American life convention, 1906-1952; a study in the history of life insurance. 2v 680;681-1397p il $15 Appleton

368.3 American life convention. Insurance, Life—History 53-7154

"A detailed history of the life insurance field's major organization, traced from its beginning as a group of 34 relatively minor companies, to its present position as principal association in the field, with a membership of 234 companies handling virtually all the life insurance business in the country." (Library J) Bibliographical note. Index.

"It is to be hoped that the two excellent volumes will put an end to the deplorable fact that life insurance is ignored by writers of American history books, even when presenting our economic and social development." Alfred Manes

+ Ann Am Acad 294:196 Jl '54 450w

"Profusely documented, well illustrated and indexed, this set will become part of any basic collection on the background and foundations of the insurance industry and an important contributor to the history of American economic activity." Paul Wasserman

+ Library J 79:210 F 1 '54 140w

"The activities of the ALC have provided vivid, personal experiences for many life company executives. They will enjoy reading this review of its growth, its meetings, and the speeches they made at those meetings, but the general reader will perhaps have less interest in those details. Professor Buley, who is an expert and accomplished historian, has much to say about this country's political, economic, and legislative affairs and their bearing on life insurance." J. O. Stalson

+ Sat R 37:18 S 4 '54 1200w

"[The] initial section is probably the best brief, scholarly account available of the life insurance business as a whole."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:171 Je '54 250w

BULLA, CLYDE ROBERT. Down the Mississippi; il. by Peter Burchard. 113p $2 Crowell

54-5614

Story of a boy who worked his way down the Mississippi on a log raft in 1850. There are words and music for four of the Mississippi river songs. For ages seven to ten.

"A tale that will certainly make young people think a little, a novel experience for many TV viewers." M. T. Kieran

+ Atlantic 193:84 Je '54 70w

Booklist 50:424 Jl 1 '54

"Peter Burchard's illustrations have a strength to them that make them fit companions to the stalwart text." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

Kirkus 22:112 F 15 '54 130w

"Excellent picture of life of this period of river trade and travel. . . Recommended." Helen Perdue

+ Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 70w

"Among the most successful writers of 'easy reading' is Mr. Bulla, who always tells a good story and not too short a one for those who still like big type, but are ready for plot and character. Boys of about seven to nine will find his new title almost his best." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 160w

"Clyde Robert Bulla tells his tale in the calm, straightforward manner of these Swedish people. Each of his four songs has the feeling of its subject." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p34 Je 6 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:215 O '54

BULLA, CLYDE ROBERT. Squanto, friend of the white men; il. by Peter Burchard. 106p $2.50 Crowell

B or 92 Squanto, Wampanoag Indian—Juvenile literature 54-9145

"A young biography, this is a simplified retelling of the story of Squanto, the Indian lad who was taken from Maine to England by Captain George Weymouth, in 1605, before even the Pilgrims came to New England." Kirkus

Booklist 51:137 N 15 '54

"This is a new and fresh perspective on one of the earliest chapters of our country's history, as well as an absorbing suspenseful story." M. M. R.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 110w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 60w

+ Kirkus 22:634 S 15 '54 140w

"Recommended." Edna Rose

+ Library J 79:2494 D 15 '54 80w

"Attractive short biography in large type."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p26 N 14 '54 30w

Reviewed by Miriam James

+ N Y Times pt2 p36 N 14 '54 160w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkhead

New Yorker 30:220 N 27 '54 50w

BULLA, CLYDE ROBERT. Star of Wild Horse canyon; il. by Grace Pauli. 86p $2 Crowell

53-8408

Story of a small boy, a horse which he loved and later owned, and of the time when the horse was lost. For ages seven to ten.

Booklist 50:225 F 1 '54

Kirkus 21:696 O 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by E. C. Alexander

Library J 78:2106 D 1 '53 60w

"Exciting practice reading for second or third grades." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 27 '53 20w

"For a tale of such small stature, Mr. Bulla achieves an extraordinary measure of suspense. Only the songs scattered through the story (though these are singable) break the otherwise excellent continuity." Jeanne Massey

+ N Y Times pt2 p38 N 15 '53 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:75 Mr '54

BULLINGHAM, ANN, pseud. See Jones, A. M.

BUNCE, WILLIAM HARVEY. Here comes the school train! 63p il $2 Dutton

379.173 Schools, Traveling 53-6085

A true story of the school trains of northern Ontario. Illustrated with photographs and line drawings. For ages six to ten.

"Unusual and very interesting." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 178:204 D '53 30w

Kirkus 21:533 Ag 15 '53 80w

"Several illustrations are exceptionally interesting, but the use of photographs of two different schools having pupils, rather than pictures of one school, is confusing. . . Recommended for all Canadian libraries and large collections in the United States." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 78:2226 D 15 '53 70w

"American school children of about seven to ten will find this an unusual, true story, its facts proved by the many photographs, to which the author adds line drawings. They will like the combination of railroad information, and wilderness and a six-pupil school."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N '53 180w

BUNTING, JAMES WHITNEY. Essentials of retail selling. 137p il $2.50 Bookman associates

658.87 Salesmanship. Retail trade 54-538

"A Wharton School graduate, Dr. Bunting has combined college teaching and business experience. This little volume is the result and was compiled with the assistance of educators, business men, store executives, research organizations, and students. It embraces all phases of retail selling from the point of view of the personal approach encountered in small or medium size retail establishments." Library J

Booklist 51:5 S 1 '54

Library J 79:906 My 15 '54 30w

BURCHFIELD, R. W., and BURCHFIELD, E. M. New Zealand. (Lands and people ser) 85p il col pl $1.50 Macmillan (N Y)

993.1 New Zealand

Concise history of New Zealand, describing the customs and achievements of the Maori and white races, as they have lived together peacefully for eighty years. Index.

Bookmark 13:231 Jl '54 20w

"Recommended for social studies in grades seven and up." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 79:1327 Jl '54 20w

BURFORD, ELEANOR. See Hibbert, E. B.

BURFORD, VIRGIL. North to danger; as told to Walt Morey. 254p $3.75 Day

B or 92 Diving, Submarine. Alaska—Description and travel 54-10452

True adventure story. The author went to Alaska to work and found plenty of it and excitement, too, from fish-pirating to deep-sea diving.

Booklist 51:172 D 15 '54

Kirkus 22:470 Jl 15 '54 130w

"Recommended as out-of-the ordinary authentic adventure for adults and teen-agers." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 79:1821 O 1 '54 90w

"So far as is recorded in this fascinating tale of adventure in Alaska, Virgil Burford never risked his life out of simple heroism. He did risk it constantly, but for two other reasons: (a) sheer delight in hazards; and (b) because that was the way you made the most money quickest in Alaska." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 N 14 '54 600w

"Most of his tales are about diving, and very interesting they are, too—especially those involving encounters with whales, sharks, and octopuses a couple of hundred feet down. A bluff and cheerful book, and a nice addition to the literature of extroversion."

+ New Yorker 30:153 D 18 '54 180w

Time 64:128 O 11 '54 130w

BURGWYN, MRS MEBANE (HOLOMAN). Moonflower. 186p $2.50 Lippincott

54-8781

A career story for girls of fourteen and older. At the end of her junior year in college Julie learned that her father was bankrupt. That fact, with its necessary readjustments, brought purpose into Julie's life. After graduation she was slated for a job in India where her college work in photography and art would be a help.

Booklist 51:65 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:13 O '54 10w

Kirkus 22:391 Jl 1 '54 180w

"The family, the farm, the atmosphere, the use of the moonflower as a symbol are well done. Without being a distinguished book, it is one with nice perceptions and a love story girls will like, meanwhile absorbing a lot of sound moral values." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 10 '54 170w

BURGWYN, M. H.—Continued

"Fine family relationships, and interesting and likable main character, and a revealing look into the lives of a neighboring Negro family are the book's good points. Thoughtful readers may feel that the outcome depends too much on unexpected strokes of fortune, too little on Julie's efforts." Elizabeth Hodges
+ — N Y Times p11 D 26 '54 140w

BURKE, ROBERT E. Olson's new deal for California. 279p $4 Univ. of Calif. press
979.4 Olson, Culbert Levy. California—Politics and government. Democratic party 53-11244

This study of Governor Culbert Olson's life and past in California's recent history is based on the author's doctoral dissertation. It describes California's transition from depression to prosperity, and Governor Olson's attempt to bring the new deal to his state, which last never became an actuality. Bibliography. Index.

"Although sympathetic, the book is not an 'official' biography. It is a valuable contribution to the recent political history of California." T. S. Barclay

+ Am Hist R 59:747 Ap '54 190w

Am Pol Sci R 48:570 Je '54 30w

"Dr. Burke's book will probably not attract a very large number of popular readers; but it constitutes a detailed account of one of the most interesting chapters in California's recent political history. The serious student will be grateful for his scrupulously painstaking record." R. D. Hunt

+ Ann Am Acad 291:164 Ja '54 600w

"Robert E. Burke has written an extremely vivid account of an era in California history that still affects directly the current political life of this State. . . It is refreshing to note that the University of California Press has graced a work of scholarship with excellent typography. The clean and expert design, from title page to index, adds immeasurably to the volume's readability." David Perlman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 18 '53 700w

"In addition to its interest as Californiana, Dr. Burke's book should be of value to students of state government, and to foreign observers seeking some understanding of American state politics."

+ U S Quarterly 10:90 Mr '54 220w

BURLING, MRS JUDITH (HART), and BURLING, ARTHUR HART. Chinese art. 384p 150il 8 col pl $8.50 Studio

709.51 Art, Chinese 53-10705

Study of Chinese art which includes: painting; porcelain; sculpture; jade; jewelry; embroidery; bronzes; lacquer; furniture; architecture; cloisonné; ivory; symbolism; and folklore. The book is full of anecdotes about collectors and collecting, much of it from the authors' own experiences. Bibliography. Index.

"There are many illustrations, frequent color plates, a bibliography, a table of dynasties, and an index. These tools, together with the readable text make this volume necessary for popular libraries and acceptable for learned collections as well. Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 79:456 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Written in a chatty, informative style, this is an eminently readable volume. For those fond of dipping into magazine articles it should prove to be especially delightful, for it is a better book to dip into than to read from cover to cover. . . There are anecdotes and aphorisms, touches of wit and wisdom drawn from standard translations and from conversations with their friends. If the more serious student would like to find the source of some remark he is out of luck, for most of the direct quotations are woven gracefully into the text without reference to the place of origin." J. G. Mahler
+ Sat R 36:47 D 19 '53 750w

"Because it is not essentially a work of reference it is very readable. The authors have spent some twenty years in China and have a happy knack of making clear the meaning of some classic piece with history and folk-lore from the past, and anecdotes of the present." G. P.

+ Spec p418 Ap 2 '54 120w

"While not the last word on a subject of such scope, 'Chinese Art' is an attractive approach to further specialized study, a survey for easy and pleasant reference." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 10 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p668 O 22 '54 450w

BURMEISTER, EVA ELIZABETH. Roofs for the family; building a center for the care of children [with drawings by the author]. 203p $3.25 Columbia univ. press

362.73 Milwaukee—Lakeside children's center. Children—Charities, protection, etc. 54-7788

"Another chapter in the story begun in the author's Forty-five in the Family [Book Review Digest 1949] this is the experience of moving into a new home. Miss Burmeister is the director of the Milwaukee Lakeside Children's Center, and her understanding of the need for security in the lives of children will be read about with appreciation by parents and teachers, as well as by social workers." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 50:391 Je 15 '54

"Like all social workers and other professional people, Miss Burmeister has biases growing, in part, out of her professional training and experience. The reader may not agree with some of the author's assumptions and practices. But the reader will not find this a dogmatic or know-it-all book; it is too full of wisdom for that." R. K. Kerckhoff

+ — J Home Econ 46:747 D '54 400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:172 Jl '54

BURNETT, WILLIAM RILEY. Captain Light-foot. 297p $3.50 Knopf

54-5976

The adventures of an eighteenth century young Irish highwayman in Kilkenny, Scotland, and Dublin.

Booklist 51:14 S 1 '54

"The sporting life and its high charge of courage and unruly virtue provides a superficial entertainment, awash in swash and just possibly buckling under."

Kirkus 22:345 Je 1 '54 180w

"The historical inaccuracies to which the author admits won't trouble anyone who enjoys the book. The serious reader will be frustrated. Burnett completely muffed a theme of dumb rebellion cross-hatched with selfish motive, when he had both plot and characters made to order." Karl Brown

Library J 79:1399 Ag '54 170w

"Interesting and full of suspense."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 15 '54 250w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p20 Ag 22 '54 500w

"A fine and high-spirited costume piece." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 11 '54 700w

BURNHAM, JAMES. Web of subversion; underground networks in the U.S. government. 248p $3.75 Day

364.13 [351.74] Communism—U.S. Subversive activities 54-7588

Based on examination of the records of Congressional investigations this work is an attempt to survey the work and methods of subversive elements in our government.

Reviewed by Nathaniel Weyl

Ann Am Acad 295:162 S '54 300w

"It would be less than just to call Mr. Burnham's new book a good digest of an enormous amount of material, deftly arranged, and neatly presented. It is indeed that, to begin with—but it is also a penetrating analysis which reveals the pattern of the fatal web spread for us by traitors and their associates." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 179:156 My '54 260w

"An outstanding scholar in the field of subversive trends, Prof. Burnham has performed the awe inspiring task of sifting the mountainous evidence gathered since 1948 by congressional committees which have probed the communist underground in Washington. . . It is not a pleasant tale that Prof. Burnham has assembled. Its overwhelming proof of wholesale treason has a chilling effect upon the reader. Espionage, subversion, sabotage, and terror are here in abundant doses." Willard Edwards

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 14 '54 500w

"Even today, at a modest distance from the series of events launched by Elizabeth Bentley and Whittaker Chambers, a careful reader who tries to be objective scarcely knows how to cope with a book like this. . . What [Mr Burnham] did was to stretch the net as far as the inclusion of peripheral or unproved cases would permit, and this does full justice neither to the persons named, nor to Mr. Burnham's objective. We may be permitted something less than the full rigor of a legal burden of proof when, as citizens, we are fighting Communist opinion or infiltration. But where we impute espionage we should be careful." S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 7 '54 600w

Foreign Affairs 32:674 Jl '54 60w

"An alarmed and assiduous compilation of faces and facts, the finger-pointing identification here will give you a chance to test the assertion that the public will not eat 'warmed-up spy'; actually it's very dull. But for those who read more closely, there is a dangerous abuse of the process of guilt by association and implication."

Kirkus 22:90 F 1 '54 190w

"That subversion has existed and still exists in the government no one questions, but Mr. Burnham has done little to clarify the efforts made to uncover it. He is repetitious, and unfortunately, in spite of early promises of an explanation of the Fifth Amendment, none appears. A further defect is the lack of comment on the methods used by investigating committees and the spectacles they have provided for Americans and their friends abroad."

Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:553 Mr 15 '54 140w

"The book offers few solutions, indeed, it raises a great many more questions than it answers. But it is precisely the job of finding answers to these questions which constitutes the greatest single task facing the free nations today. 'The Web of Subversion,' so ably outlined by Mr. Burnham, nevertheless presents a vital part of that picture clearly and concisely." H. A. Philbrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ap 25 '54 280w

"Mr. Burnham's book is more moderate and reasonable than the conclusions published by some Congressional committees. . . Mr. Burnham urges wider public knowledge and better public attitudes toward the conspiracy. Toward these ends, this book is a useful contribution."

E. D. Canham

N Y Times p21 Mr 21 '54 750w

"Mr. Burnham has tried hard to stick to known or alleged Communists and Soviet agents and has sought to resist the temptation to indict or belabor mere liberals. Yet, for all his attempts at restraint, his analysis is so fundamentally uncritical that the result is more misleading than it is illuminating." A. M. Schlesinger, jr.

+ Sat R 37:16 Mr 20 '54 1100w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 470w

BURNS, ARTHUR FRANK. Frontiers of economic knowledge. (National bureau of economic research) 367p $5 Princeton univ. press

330.4 Economics. U.S.—Economic policy 54-6068

"Essays which deal with the place of Keynesian thought in economic research, the role of consumer spending in economic fluctuations, recent progress in business cycle studies, and the pattern of long cycles in residential construction. The Chairman of President Eisenhower's Council of Economic Advisers, Mr. Burns also discusses the purpose, methods and findings of the National Bureau of Economic Research." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The publication of a collection of the scattered essays of a leading economist is not always a self-justifying venture; too often what results is a left-over supper of competent crumbs, nourishing only to a few scholars hungry enough to have done their own foraging long ago. The present volume, however, is an outstanding example of the value that such a collection can have. The essays collected here, linked by their common concern with business cycle research, convey a philosophy of economic research and an understanding of its processes far more convincingly than could a treatise explicitly devoted to the subject." H. G. Johnson

+ Am Econ R 44:939 D '54 1150w

Reviewed by William Jaffe

Ann Am Acad 294:190 Jl '54 550w

Reviewed by H. C. Kenney

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 17 '54 550w

"An excellent summary of the Bureau's works. . . Recommended for more profound understanding of present day economy." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 79:378 F 15 '54 100w

Management R 43:344 My '54 50w

Reviewed by Theodore Kreps

New Repub 130:19 Mr '54 1250w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr '54 50w

"Many people will probably be interested in 'The Frontiers of Economic Knowledge' not only for its economic content but for any light it sheds on the thinking and social outlook of its author, who now occupies the important position of chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. . . Readers will, indeed, learn much about Mr. Burns' approach to economics, but the essays making up the book were written before he assumed his present position, and they deal primarily with the problems of expanding our economic knowledge rather than with policy prescriptions." L. V. Chandler

N Y Times p29 Mr 7 '54 900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:207 Je '54 200w

BURNS, EDWARD MCNALL. David Starr Jordan: prophet of freedom. 243p $5 Stanford univ. press

B or 92 Jordan, David Starr 53-5525

"Although historians recognize David Starr Jordan, the first president of Stanford University, mainly for his contributions to science and his leadership in education, the author of this volume has attempted to portray him as social and political philosopher. Jordan is revealed here to have been a many-sided individual, one of the most versatile and stimulating personalities of his time, and a crusader for peace and democracy. The portrait sketched in these pages is drawn from a variety of sources, the most important of which are Jordan's own published and unpublished writings." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Jordan attempted to encompass a variety of fields that would have tested an Aristotle or a Leonardo da Vinci. Inevitably his thought had imperfections, but we can agree with the author's conclusion that 'the Stanford educator remains as one of the most fertile and inspiring geniuses of his age.' Professor

BURNS, E. M.—Continued

Burns's book is a fine piece of scholarship which all interested in the history of American thought will find rewarding." E. W. Lyon
+ Am Hist R 59:651 Ap '54 440w

"Making use of much primary material Mr. Burns has presented a well-written picture of Jordan's life with special emphasis on his ideas and 'causes', such as international peace etc. Subject matter, however, will make for limited appeal." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 78:918 My 15 '53 90w

"This is a study that should interest students of education and political science; it deserves recognition as a contribution to the better understanding of America's coming of age."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:392 D '53 200w

BURNS, WILLIAM ALOYSIUS. Horses and their ancestors; pictures by Paula Hutchison. (American museum of natural history. Publication; Whittlesey House bk) 62p $2.75 McGraw

636.1 Horses—Juvenile literature 54-8813

Starting with the dawn-horse, eohippus, no larger than a fox, this book follows the development of horses through the centuries up to the present. The author also relates the many ways in which horses have served men through history—in transportation and in war, in racing, in hunting, etc.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 194:96 D '54 50w
Booklist 51:89 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54 30w

"Comprehensive as well as interesting book. . . It is written in language easily understood by the middle graders; and it, like so much of children's nonfiction literature, is ageless in its appeal." R. E. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 220w

Kirkus 22:636 S 15 '54 100w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 79:2494 D 15 '54 70w

"We think most children who want this sort of information would like other longer books." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p14 N 14 '54 20w

BURNS, WILLIAM ALOYSIUS. World full of homes; pictures by Paula Hutchison. (Whittlesey house bk) 120p $2.50 McGraw

571.8 Dwellings—Juvenile literature 53-10625

Describes the various kinds of shelters in which men have lived the world over, and thruout the ages. For grades four to seven.

"School libraries in particular will find useful the suggestions for making models of some of the homes."

+ Booklist 50:208 Ja 15 '54

"Readable as it is, the book lacks sufficient information to be of much value in junior high school where such a unit is often taught." M. B. Snow

Library J 78:2226 D 15 '53 80w

"The book is rather loosely organized, but pleasantly written; it should be useful as supplementary reading for social studies projects and stimulating to young would-be architects." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 F 21 '54 190w
Wis Lib Bul 50:80 Mr '54

BURR, IRVING WINGATE. Engineering statistics and quality control. 442p il $7 McGraw 311.2 Statistics. Sampling (statistics) 52-13448

"Statistics addressed to engineering students. The applications of statistical techniques to the quality control of manufactured products is emphasized, but the book is not limited to quality control. It is instead a work of interest to scientists and technicians in any field where statistics methods may be applied to the analysis of data. It is distinguished by skillful interweaving of theory and applications and by a style that reads easily. Selected literature references are included. The author is Professor of Mathematics, Purdue University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"This book appears to be admirably well suited to its avowed purpose of serving as a textbook for college study by advanced students in engineering and physical science. . . As a reference it seems to have value only to those familiar enough with statistics to readily follow the terms and symbols."

+ Eng N 152:56 Ja 14 '54 130w
N Y New Tech Bks 38:76 S '53

BURSK, EDWARD COLLINS, ed. How to increase executive effectiveness. 163p $3.25 Harvard univ. press

658.386 Executives 53-12522

"This volume is the result of the 23rd National Business Conference at the Harvard Business School. The theme, 'Executive Effectiveness,' is based on development of responsibilities and skills that in addition to having their saleable aspects, also broaden the possibilities of the executive level. . . Experts in their fields present their points of view and show the values to be obtained by thoughtful reorganization and by the proper approach in a highly developed form of adult education, to improve the level of executive worth in all types of business. Selected bibliography." Library J

Booklist 50:234 F 15 '54

Reviewed by H. L. Roth
Library J 79:57 Ja 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker
Library J 79:1061 Je 1 '54 200w

"Aside from the help and stimulation which the book provides, it offers spiritual encouragement because it is evidence that a great many of our business and industrial leaders have encompassed much broader concepts of responsibility and are energetically working at the job of developing methods to grow men big enough to carry the loads." W. B. Given

+ Sat R 37:44 Ja 23 '54 800w

BURT, NATHANIEL. Scotland's burning. 300p $3.50 Little

54-5108

A first novel, the setting of which is a private school for boys in Pennsylvania. The central character is Tony, a sensitive boy, a good scholar, but no athlete. Tony hated the school, and the story describes his reasons.

Booklist 50:221 F 1 '54

"Finely written novel."
+ Bookmark 13:108 F '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 179:154 My '54 180w

"It is a haunting and quite profound story. In spite of the violence of the forces at work, this is recognizable, believable, as a boys' school, in contrast with many plays and novels in such settings so preoccupied with the subject of inversion and other student-faculty sexual intrigues as to bear no relation to the real and important life of schools." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ja 17 '54 420w

Reviewed by G. H. Favre
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 370w

Kirkus 21:718 N 1 '53 180w

"A psychological novel, written with poetic feeling, of the mental confusion, heartaches and loyalties of prep school life. For general readers." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 78:2212 D 15 '53 120w

"A sensitive and perceptive study of evil, fear, and responsibility... A first novel of real talent—well written, well conceived, and wholly credible."

+ Nation 178:37 Ja ■ '54 50w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 48:513 O 23 '54 240w

"This is an excellent book, told in a glowing and understanding retrospect. Mr. Burt writes with mature authority, creating characterizations and situations that are vividly believable... Here is a microcosm of the great world rendered with restraint and artistry." Gene Baro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 17 '54 450w

"The first half of the book is a convincing enough portrait of the artist as a young man, although a blurry one on the occasions when the narrator's mature and critical self is allowed to corrupt the purity of his presentation of himself as a defenseless boy of 14... It seems to me that the novel is weakened by the melodrama of its second half." John Brooks

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 17 '54 430w

New Yorker 30:114 F 20 '54 170w

"Written with great perception and in sensitive, genuinely distinguished prose. Yes, of course you get a finely done picture of the inner working of a boys' school, from students to masters; it's a picture any man who ever went to a preparatory school will recognize immediately, even though Mr. Burt chooses not to sensationalize, as so many have done with this background, by focusing his central figure's troubles on adolescent sex." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 20 '54 650w

"Nathaniel Burt shows himself the assured master of a lucid elegant style in his first novel... Unfortunately, Dickens, Thackeray, Forster, and Orwell have been to school before him, and have bequeathed their reminiscences with such rancor and exactitude that Mr. Burt's codicil only negligibly alters our portion of classroom experiences." N. M.

— + Sat R 37:35 F 27 '54 280w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 80w
Time 63:76 F 1 '54 400w

"A first novel of distinction and originality, Mr. Burt's modern 'morality' set in an exclusive boys' school in Maryland represents an interesting departure from the current trend of American fiction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p701 N 5 '54 600w

BURT, MRS OLIVE (WOOLLEY). Camel express; a story of the Jeff Davis experiment; il. by Joseph C. Camana. 178p $1.50 Winston 54-5424

Story of the importation of camels to be used in desert warfare in the American southwest, known in history as Jeff Davis' folly. The hero is young Obed Green, whose efforts to prove to the soldiers that the camels were superior for transportation met with little success. For ages eleven to fourteen.

Booklist 51:20 S 1 '54

Kirkus 22:115 F 15 '54 120w

"Fast-moving, well-written book... Recommended." Sonia Wennerblad

+ Library J 79:1236 Je 15 '54 30w

"'Camel Express' [is] praiseworthy for its unique topic and very probable sub-plots." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 22 '54 200w

BURT, MRS OLIVE (WOOLLEY). Peter's sugar farm; il. with photographs. 90p $2.50 Holt

633.6 Beets and beet sugar—Juvenile literature 54-5734

Photographs and text tell the story of the boy Peter growing up on a sugar beet farm in Colorado. For ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 50:363 My 15 '54

"Fine 5th and 6th grade reading."

+ Kirkus 22:113 F 15 '54 80w

"Recommended for elementary schools needing this information." N. S. Zipf

Library J 79:1236 Je 15 '54 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 16 '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 30w

BURTON, CARL D. Satan's rock. 262p $3 Appleton

54-9283

The Kentucky mountain country is the scene of this novel of young Griff Ruk's growing to manhood, with the aid of that nebulous creature, the Wild Girl.

"The plain talk of plain people reflects the harshness of the land and the life it affords and may offend if offense is looked for."

Kirkus 22:245 Ap 1 '54 110w

"Large adult collections and P.C." H. L. Leet

Library J 79:1057 Je 1 '54 80w

"This first novel by a young Kentuckian adds a fresh, strong accent of the hills to the growing cadences of Southern regional literature." Charlotte Capers

+ N Y Times p22 Je 13 '54 280w

BURTON, HAL. City fights back. 318p il $5 Citadel

711 Cities and towns—U.S. City planning 54-9343

"A nation-wide survey of what cities are doing to keep pace with traffic, zoning, shifting population, smoke, smog and other problems; narrated and edited from material developed by the Central business district council of the Urban land institute." Subtitle

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 21 '54 450w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54 240w

BURTON, HAL. Real book about treasure hunting; il. by Jean Michener. 190p $1.25 Garden City bks.

910.45 Treasure trove—Juvenile literature 53-7208

Stories and some legitimate information about hidden treasure and treasure hunting. For grades 6 to 8.

Booklist 50:60 O 1 '53

Kirkus 21:393 J1 1 '53 80w

"A 'fun education' book is the way one young reader classified it. Girls as well as boys will enjoy it heartily." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p14 D 27 '53 120w

BURTON, MAURICE. Animal courtship; drawings by Jane Burton. 267p $4 Praeger

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 54-6646

"A zoologist observes mating behavior throughout the animal kingdom, drawing some conclusions that should be of interest to psychologists and sociologists, as well as to the student of the natural sciences. He finds that there is a gradation in sexual behavior from the lowest to the highest animals which corresponds to structural changes, that there is nothing in the human make-up, physical or psychical, that cannot be traced back to its beginnings lower in the animal scale, and that, from the fishes on up to man, the choice of a mate is made largely on an increasingly complex basis of instinctive reactions, but that it is never wholly lacking in an emotional quality that may be called affection." Booklist

Booklist 51:6 S 1 '54

BURTON, MAURICE—Continued

"On the whole the book is highly informative; a good job of bringing the tomes of science within the scope of the layman."
John O'Reilly

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 S 19 '54
360w

BURTON, MAURICE. Margins of the sea. 212p il $3 Harper

591.92 Marine fauna 54-12172

A study of the small, obscure marine creatures that live in the ocean tidal zone. The author is a British zoologist. Index.

Booklist 51:165 D 15 '54

"A very interesting addition to popular literature on shore life. . . Himself a world authority on these strange animals, Dr Burton is naturally particularly informative about sponges." C. M. Yonge

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 16 '54
300w

"In spite of his erudition, the author writes in a simple style which permits easy and pleasant reading. Numerous illustrations consist of drawings which, for purposes of analytical study, often are preferable to photographs."
H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 120w

BURWELL, BASIL BECKETT. Our brother the sun. 352p $3.75 Hermitage

54-6811

"El Oro, the Golden One, is an enigmatic figure, a Yankee who had betrayed a Northern whaling fleet to the Confederates, and come to South America to escape his past. There he opposes his strange power over the natives in combat with Montenegro, a dictator and vicious paranoid. Soledad, an Indian girl with revolutionary leanings, spurs El Oro to an act of violence which makes him a martyr and hero." Kirkus

Kirkus 22:82 F 1 '54 70w

Nation 178:338 Ap 17 '54 140w

Reviewed by Whitney Betts

N Y Times p21 Ap 18 '54 320w

BUSCH, FRANCIS XAVIER. Enemies of the state. (Notable American trials) 299p $3.75 Bobbs

343.1 Trials 54-6055

Detailed accounts of four famous trials for crimes directed against the United States government. Contents: The Mary Eugenia Surratt case; The Teapot Dome cases; The Alphonse Capone case; The Rosenberg case. No index.

Booklist 50:350 My 15 '54

"Readers who enjoyed Busch's brilliant accounts of other celebrated trials will find the same type of presentation in this latest volume. Busch's revealing and perceptive mind reduces the complexities of these trials to simple news style reporting of them." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 28 '54
370w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 25 '54 40w

"The whole volume is commended alike to the connoisseur of crime and to the student of American history." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 14 '54 170w

"Mr. Busch is one of the good writers in this field. Many readers have made that discovery already and more will, as each succeeding volume comes along." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 24 '54
650w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Case of the burnt Bohemian. 202p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

53-13507

Detective story.

"Neatly grooved, slowly moving plot of many angles and cross-ties, involving a batch of colorful characters." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 F 7 '54
150w

"This is another of the garrulities of Ludovic Travers, and while much of it will be, for most readers, a sort of delaying action while Travers and Wharton sort calmly through possibilities to reach the glaring probability, there is quite enough diversion in Travers' calm quizzicality to keep one more amused than impatient." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 31 '54 140w

"This nonsense has a mildly agreeable background of artists and art-dealers in a genteel English Bohemia which Rodolphe and Mimi would never recognize." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p25 Ja 24 '54 130w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p29 F 14 '54
90w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 110w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. Case of the silken petticoat. 223p $2.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-11192

Detective story.

"Enjoyable narration of meticulous probing by the estimable London sleuth, Ludovic Travers, to link an extraordinary publicity stunt to a salacious novel with carefully shrouded murders." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54
20w

"Good tempered and well mannered."

+ Kirkus 22:321 My 15 '54 60w

"The proceedings are careful, dry, extended by all sorts of dodges and doubts before they settle at last upon the only possible murderer (all earlier candidates for murderer having been done in meantime). So that it is worthy in calculation, a little amusing in execution and flattish in conclusion." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 25 '54
70w

"Starts off more brightly than most Bush, but settles down into conventionalities. . . Ludovic Travers' detection is as desultory and inadequate as usual." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p17 J1 18 '54 50w

"Investigation meanders agreeably round the English countryside and over to France. Neither surprising nor urgent, this may be the thing for hot weather. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 15 '54
70w

"Holds up all the way." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 Ag 7 '54 20w

BUSH, GEORGE POLLOCK, and HATTERY, LOWELL HAROLD, eds. Teamwork in research; foreword by Howard A. Meyerhoff. 191p $4 Am. univ. press

507.2 Research 53-9900

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This little volume of proceedings of the Third Institute of Scientific Research and Development will have little interest for the sociologist, except, perhaps, to assuage his feelings of inferiority vis-a-vis the natural scientist. When the eighteen contributors to this discussion, most of whom are administrators of industrial or applied research, turn their attention to the essentially sociological problem of group effectiveness, they flounder, platitudinize, and display so little insight into the subject toward which they are addressing themselves as to suggest that sociology actually is a discipline with specialized knowledge not available to the educated layman on a common-sense basis." S. A. Starr

Am J Soc 59:592 My '54 500w

"For sociologists, the value of the book derives perhaps more from its raising an important problem than by its treatment of this problem. This is partly due to the fact that problems of teamwork in research within the social sciences are not examined but also because some important questions about the implications of a team research for the scientist are overlooked. The approach taken is to assume a given end and to consider what is necessary to achieve this end. What happens to the individual scientists who participate in the ensuing process would seem to warrant special attention. Yet, this question is scarcely touched upon in any of the papers comprising the volume." C. Y. Glock

Am Soc R 19:232 Ap '54 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:94 N '53

BUSH, WESLEY A. Paradise to leeward; cruising the west coast of Mexico; foreword by Charles A. Langlais [ed. and designed by Eugene V. Connett]. 140p il maps $7.50 Van Nostrand

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. Pilot guides 54-10378

"Mr. Bush, his wife, son and cocker spaniel Tuppin, recently sailed down the coast of Baja California and western Mexico in their Crocker designed gaff ketch, stopping at practically all of the small sea towns and anchorages along the way; Paradise to Leeward is the account of the voyage. Mainly technical and designed to be a handbook for anyone who wants to make a similar trip, the book abounds with Mr. Bush's maps and drawings of the coastline and these along with the textual information will be helpful navigation aids." Kirkus

"Though a certain dryness of style is a disappointing block to a broader feeling for the district, Mr. Bush is primarily a sailor's sailor and it is along these lines that his record of the Los Angeles to Acapulco jaunt will prove invaluable."

+ Kirkus 22:465 Jl 15 '54 150w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:2105 N 1 '54 30w

BUTLER, COLIN GASKING. World of the honeybee; with 2 colored photographs and 87 black and white photographs taken by the author. (New naturalist) 226p $4.50 Macmillan (N Y)

638.12 Bees [54-12293]

"The head of the bee department of an English experimental station describes the behavior, natural history, and social organization of the honeybee, bringing to his presentation, the results of both his own and others' research, and indicating desirable areas for further study. Nontechnical, and illustrated with excellent photographs taken by the author, the book will be of both general and specialized interest. Some of the material has appeared in English periodicals." Booklist

Booklist 51:6 S 1 '54

"Not only a brilliant piece of popularisation but is important in its own right as an exposition of a most suggestive theory, that of the 'queen substance.'"

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 30 '54 60w

New Yorker 30:154 S 11 '54 170w

"There can be nothing but the highest praise for the magnificent series of close-up photographs that Dr. Butler has made for his book; altogether, The World of the Honeybee is fully up to the general standard of the 'New Naturalist' volumes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p488 Jl 30 '54 360w

BUTLER, SUZANNE LOUISE. Vale of tyranny. 266p $3.50 Little

54-8279

A story of the Welsh border country, London, and Paris, from the 1850's to the beginning of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870. The central character is Thorn Drayton, whose early love for her ruthless cousin Rhys colored all her life, and lasted thru two marriages. It was not until Thorn discovered Rhys' intention to ruin her second husband that she was finally able to free herself from her infatuation.

Booklist 50:450 Jl 15 '54

Kirkus 22:272 Ap 15 '54 190w

"Throughout, the reader is an interested and entertained onlooker, comfortably sure that all will end well. Recommended for escape reading." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 79:1050 Je 1 '54 130w

"Miss Butler tells her story with an artless simplicity that makes no pretence at depth or profundity of characterization. Readers who enjoy a romantic tale that holds an attractive villain, a beautiful heroine and men of noble character who love her will find pleasure in the book."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 8 '54 320w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p18 Jl 11 '54 380w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54 200w

Wis Lib Bul 50:209 O '54

BUTOW, ROBERT JOSEPH CHARLES. Japan's decision to surrender; foreword by Edwin O. Reischauer. 259p $4 Stanford univ. press

940.5314 World war, 1939-1945—Japan 54-8145

"A study of one aspect of international diplomacy and of Japanese wartime internal politics. The main threads which run through this work are the effects of the 'unconditional surrender' edict of the Allies and the amorphous position of the Emperor in Japanese circles." Current Hist

"Invaluable study."

+ Current Hist 27:327 N '54 220w

"Highly recommended." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 79:1827 O 1 '54 140w

"This is impressive scholarship. The whole book is minutely documented and copiously annotated. Indeed, the wordage of the footnotes probably exceeds that of the text. The style, however, is flexible and bright and the material fascinating. Thus, while Mr. Butow has written what is essentially a book for the experts, he will not drive off the general reader." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p5 N 21 '54 650w

BUTTERFIELD, HERBERT. Christianity, diplomacy and war. 125p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

261 War and religion. Christianity and politics 53-13186

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"In this short volume the author presents a penetrating and forceful analysis that merits thoughtful rereading." Huntley Dupre

+ Am Hist R 59:971 Jl '54 350w

Booklist 50:231 F 15 '54

"Combined in Prof. Butterfield of the University of Cambridge are the attributes of a secular historian, a discerning philosopher, and a concerned Christian." L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ap 11 '54 70w

"It is not easy for Americans to listen while they are told that it is un-Christian to fight 'a war for righteousness.' It sounds especially strange to them to hear the old 'balance of power' politics of eighteenth- and nineteenth-century Europe extolled as serving the ends of morality and peace. Yet Professor Butterfield definitely deserves a hearing for what he has to say, and it is addressed both to Americans and to a substantial coterie of his fellow Englishmen." Tully Nettleton

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 22 '54 550w

BUTTERFIELD, ROGER PLACE, ed. Saturday evening post treasury. See Saturday evening post (periodical)

BUTTERS, JOHN KEITH, and others. Effects of taxation: investments by individuals. 533p $6.25 Harvard univ. Division of res.
336.295 Investments. Taxation—U.S. 53-5222
For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"The book is a splendid contribution to the works on the effects of taxation. It helps to fill a gap of long standing in tax literature."
C. W. Macy

+ Am Econ R 44:190 Mr '54 1050w

"Effects of Taxation on Investments by Individuals is, at its best, a suggestive and stimulating volume. The problems considered are both important and difficult. A large amount of quantitative data has been gathered and, to some degree, analyzed. The authors are scrupulously—almost painfully—honest and their conclusions do not outstrip the data gathered to support them. But a serious inadequacy lies in their basic data. . . . The authors seem completely oblivious to the problems of 'communication.' The volume has been compiled rather than written; charts and tables—some 16 of the former and 127 of the latter—heckle the text at every turn. In brief, the book is unreadable and in consequence, it is greatly to be feared that the numerous good things it contains will remain entombed unless someone more stylistically gifted repackages the product for popular consumption." R. T. A. Molloy

+ — Harvard Law R 67:1291 My '54 850w

"Important study."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:444 D '53 240w

BUTTS, ALLISON, ed. Copper. (American chemical society. Monograph ser) 936p il $20 Reinhold

669.3 Copper

54-7945

"The subtitle of this book is The Science and Technology of the Metal, Its alloys and Compounds, a true indication of the wide field covered. There are 46 signed chapters, all the work of established specialists. In addition to a full subject index, there is a name index which includes all of the authors of the cited literature." Library J

"An American Chemical Society Monograph, the book maintains the high standard expected in this series. It will undoubtedly be a standard reference for years useful to metallurgists, chemical engineers, chemists, etc." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1895 O 15 '54 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:52 Jl '54

BYRNE, JOHN FRANCIS. Silent years; an autobiography with memoirs of James Joyce and our Ireland. 307p il $4 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Joyce, James 53-9680

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Not altogether aware that his importance lies in having known Joyce, Mr. Byrne devotes the greater part of 'Silent Years' to his own verses, essays, and financial vision. The last quarter of a book which seems less autobiography than farrago consists of his plan for a cipher. But somehow from incoherence a portrait emerges. One is amazed again at Joyce's tolerance and at his capacity for things at all levels and of every kind. It may be that Joyce, fascinated by oddness, found Cranly irresistible." W. Y. Tindall

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 24 '54 400w

"After long silence, Byrne now contributes some of his own valuable background on Joyce, man and artist, including a fascinating account of his home at No. 7 Eccles Street, Dublin, around which so much in 'Ulysses' revolves. For its portion on Joyce alone, Byrne's volume is a treasure." D. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 28 '54 230w

Reviewed by Richard Ellmann
Sat R 37:18 Mr 13 '54 650w

BYRON, GEORGE GORDON NOEL BYRON, 6th baron. His very self and voice [his] collected conversations; ed. with an introd. and notes by Ernest J. Lovell, jr. 676p $7.50 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-13156

"Leaving aside the two principal records of the poet's conversations—those made by Thomas Medwin and Lady Blessington which Professor Lovell has reserved for separate editorial treatment and fresh publication—there are here assembled in chronological order the recollections and impressions of no less than some one hundred and fifty men and women who had the privilege of listening to Byron as he talked on all manner of subjects, from grave to gay, from lively to severe. The record extends from his first recorded words, at the age of five . . . to the last incoherent mutterings which his faithful servant could not understand as he lay on his death bed at Missolonghi." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 51:174 D 15 '54

Reviewed by R. M. Weaver
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 26 '54 250w

"A large, leisurely volume, this rambles in a way that is close to life itself and will provide its rich rewards to all with literary bent, to any whose odd hours are refreshed by new winds from literary storm gone by."

+ Kirkus 22:627 S 1 '54 170w

"The book must be read critically. . . . It is the first work of its kind on Byron and of great value to those seriously interested in him. Its source-book form will not attract a popular audience. For large public, college and university libraries." G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:2098 N 1 '54 150w

"I know of but one scholarly compilation at all comparable to Mr. Lovell's. This is 'Coleridge the Talker,' published fifteen years ago by R. W. Armour and R. F. Hawes. . . . These two poets, unlike in almost every other respect, are singularly alike in this respect, that it is safe to say that massive volumes such as 'Coleridge the Talker' and Mr. Lovell's valuable and interesting compilation could not be made from the extant records of the conversations of any other English poet." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 28 '54 700w

"One value of Mr. Lovell's method is that it engages the reader constantly in the fascination of paradox. An ultra-romantic with a sense of humor is, for example, almost a contradiction in terms. Byron embraced both terms without batting an eyelash. . . . A second major value of this compendium is to show that pettiness, vanity and hypocrisy were at least as endemic among Byron's interviewers as they were native to the poet himself. The story throws useful light on the difficulties of being human." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 N 28 '54 750w

"The result of Lovell's skilful editing is a unified and coherent narrative of Byron's conversational life throughout his mature years. Presented virtually in their entirety, the selections are arranged with admirable clarity in a dominantly chronological order. The whole provides a new and unique kind of biography of Byron—the famous poet as heard and seen by those who actually knew him."

P. G. Trueblood

+ Sat R 37:21 D 11 '54 900w

C

CABLE, J. WESLEY. Induction and dielectric heating. 576p il $12.50 Reinhold

621.39 Electric heating, Industrial 54-7342

"This book offers an organized treatment of the latest uses and applications of high-frequency heating in industry. Divided into two major sections, dealing with induction and dielectric heating respectively, the book contains sufficient theory to enable the reader to understand fully the basic phenomena applicable to both methods." (Publisher's note) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:1154 Mr 22 '54 20w
Library J 79:918 My 15 '54 10w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:42 My '54

CABOT, BLAKE. Motion of the heart; the story of cardiovascular research. 173p $2 Harper

616.1 Heart—Diseases. Medical research 53-11830

A layman discusses the advances, techniques, and goals of modern research on the heart. For the layman.

"Encouraged by the American Heart Association, Cabot, not a physician, undertook to explain the many research studies of the complex physiology of the heart and blood vessels now under way. . . . All this he interprets in language comprehensible to the layman (although it is not easy reading), and yet he meets the demands of the research workers who are notoriously glamour-shy and sticklers for accuracy. The format is a model of neat, beautiful, small bookmaking." H. E. Kleinschmidt
+ Am J Pub Health 44:945 Jl '54 270w

Booklist 50:253 Mr 1 '54

"Writing at times almost passionately, the author conveys the drama of events, is perhaps too romantic, but puts much that is worthwhile into his book."

+ Kirkus 21:779 D 1 '53 200w

"Recommended general reading." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:553 Mr 15 '54 170w

"An honest and very readable account—commendably avoiding the breathless approach common to medical reporting—of what is being done today to keep ailing hearts functioning and cut down the deaths from heart disease, still firmly entrenched ■ Killer Number 1." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p20 F 14 '54 470w

Wis Lib Bul 50:66 Mr '54

CADELL, MRS ELIZABETH. Around the rugged rock. 248p $3 Morrow

54-5208

After ■ twenty year separation from her English homeland, and a divorce and remarriage in Spain, Lorna remets her two charming grown sons at her Spanish home. Her second husband had died and Lorna was still beautiful, so her sons started ■ campaign to bring their father and mother together again. The rock of the title is Gibraltar.

Booklist 50:259 Mr 1 '54

"Deft, engaging tale."

+ Bookmark 13:132 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 21 '54 600w

"For a siesta rather than ■ fiesta, a soothing diversion."

Kirkus 21:767 D 1 '53 120w

"'Around the Rugged Rock' might be described as literary zabaglione. The ingredients are of the best—the freshest imaginable eggs, barely enough sugar, and a fine, dry Spanish sherry—and they have all been whipped together by a deft and practised hand, and removed from the fire at precisely the right moment. The result, soon consumed, leaves agreeable memories and a lingering inward glow." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 F 7 '54 650w

"It is a tale well told—fast, unexpected in its details (but certainly not unexpected in its conclusion), and at times embellished with some good comedy that originates (as all real comedy should) in character rather than situation." Nona Brown

+ N Y Times p26 F 7 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 80w

Wis Lib Bul 50:72 Mr '54

CADELL, MRS ELIZABETH. Cuckoo in spring. 214p $3 Morrow

54-6124

Light romance, the scene of which is England. Julian Hurst, at twenty-seven, had decided he would never marry, until he was thirty at least! The story is of Julian's meeting with a lovely spirited girl who changed his mind for him.

Booklist 51:14 S 1 '54

"A light, engaging tale."

+ Bookmark 13:237 Jl '54 20w

"Casual comedy and light entertainment, in a pleasantly patterned romance."

+ Kirkus 22:367 Je 15 '54 170w

"The story-telling is deft, the complications are ingenious, the solution of the mystery is surprising and satisfactory. 'The Cuckoo in Spring' should be received with gratitude by a host of addicts, lolling to a man—or more likely a woman—in one or another of those sybaritic contraptions for porch and terrace which are helping to make the hammock obsolete." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 22 '54 500w

"Elizabeth Cadell is one of the English authors who has been delighting readers on both sides of the Atlantic for some time. This new book ought to make her devoted followers as happy as larks. It is a delightfully daffy love story with a brashly charming hero, a spirited heroine who is quite his match—and a nice bit of mystery to add zest and pace. The mixture, in short, is very much as before—and the author's public will be the first to endorse it." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 29 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 90w

CAHN, EDMOND NATHANIEL, ed. Supreme court and supreme law [sponsored by New York univ. School of law] 250p $4 Ind. univ. press

347.972 U.S. Supreme court. Judicial review 54-6404

"At forum held at New York University six lawyers all professors, with one exception, combined their efforts to evaluate our American doctrine of judicial review, ■ established by Marbury v. Madison. In the papers presented under various headings such ■ 'Scope of Constitutional Review,' 'Review and Federalism,' 'Review and Majority Rule,' etc. results—and lack of results—of review by Supreme Court are examined. Most papers are followed by brief discussion and while contributions, naturally, vary, all maintain ■ high level." (Library J) List of cases. Index.

Reviewed by B. F. Cataldo

Ann Am Acad 294:177 Jl '54 800w

Reviewed by C. B. Swisher

Harvard Law R 67:1487 Je '54 1300w

"These thoroughly documented essays, even when evoking disagreement, will always prove stimulating. Too specialized for general readers, but strongly recommended for libraries serving lawyers, political scientists, and students in these fields." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:207 F 1 '54 140w

"Six diverse individuals—Willard Hurst, Paul A. Freund, John Frank, Charles Curtis, Ralph Bischoff and Mr. Cahn himself—united chiefly by a common devotion to human rights in an orderly democracy, have approached ■ highly controversial subject from different angles and reached a surprising degree of agreement." Irving Brant

+ New Repub 130:20 Mr 1 '54 310w

CAHN, E. N.—Continued

"Students of law, politics and history will probably take issue with many statements and conclusions in this book. But nobody will deny the brilliance, the insights and the learning embodied in 'Supreme Court and Supreme Law.'" S. K. Padover

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 21 '54 1150w

"The essays and discussions as a whole present a fair and lively examination of the problems and achievements of 150 years of constitutional review. The book is one of ideas rather than heavy scholarship and often shows a light touch. The symposia are a novel device for securing variety and spontaneity, and are a heartening reminder that scholars can state different points of view so as to produce light and not friction."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:218 Je '54 240w

CAIDIN, MARTIN. Worlds in space; with ill. by Fred L. Wolff. 212p $4.95 Holt

629.14353 [629.1388] Rockets (aeronautics). Interplanetary voyages 54-5439

"This volume, like similar works, presents a composite of information gleaned from technical reports, government publications, and more popular works. However, it provides a readable and factual account of the plans being advanced for interplanetary travel, and a discussion of the many technical difficulties which prevent the realization of such plans. The final chapter summarizes present-day knowledge concerning the positions and physical structure of planets of the solar system." Library J

"On the whole, this is the best general book about space flight since Willy Ley's 'Rockets, Missiles, and Space Travel' and Arthur C. Clarke's 'The Exploration of Space.'" Fritz Leiber

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 14 '54 280w

"Another fascinating survey of man's progress toward space travel. . . This is easier reading than Ryan's Conquest of Space." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:262 Ag '54 70w

"Here's a round-up of the creditable proposals, consequences and benefits of such a projected adventure that, with a widening public interest, will have a widened reading audience."

+ Kirkus 22:50 Ja 15 '54 160w

"Recommended." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:446 Mr 1 '54 140w

"'Worlds in Space' is worth the attention of a public that devours science fiction, largely devoted to space travel, as a corrective of the wilder fantasies of those who have followed in the footsteps of Jules Verne and H. G. Wells. Fred Wolff has done much to dramatize the narrative with imaginative, plausible and instructive illustrations." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p10 Mr 14 '54 650w

"Caidin's text is presented with an easy, flowing style, and though perhaps more optimistic than the facts allow, is a good summation of the whole subject to date." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 15 '54 90w

"'Worlds in Space' does not bring anything that cannot be found in recent print. But because of the large volume of existing literature this statement is by no means as harsh a criticism as it might seem to be at first glance. Few people will have read all the recent books and a rather large number of people will still have to start to acquaint themselves with the concepts of space travel. For those, 'Worlds in Space' is a good book with which to start." Willy Ley

Sat R 37:37 Je 5 '54 700w

Wis Lib Bul 50:67 Mr '54

CAIGER, GEORGE, ed. Australian way of life. (Way of life ser) 158p il $3 Columbia univ. press

994 [919.4] Australia—Civilization A54-1640

"[The book] has been prepared under the auspices of the International Studies Conference, at the request and with the financial assistance of Unesco. The seven eminent authorities who examine 'Australian Ideals and Values' under the headings of politics, economics, education, religion, the family, the nation, and the relation of Australians to the rest of the world, together present a view of Australian society, its history, aspirations and achievements." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Edward Littlejohn

Ann Am Acad 294:216 Jl '54 650w

Booklist 50:356 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 25 '54 40w

"For the earnest student 'The Australian Way of Life' will certainly provide a handy and authoritative survey of an emergent nation that is unique in its situation, history, economy, and culture. All nations, of course, are in a sense unique, and if it were to do no more than to remind us of this and underline it, the UNESCO series would be a welcome and timely addition to the world's libraries." J. A. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 6 '54 180w

Current Hist 26:256 Ap '54 110w

Foreign Affairs 33:166 O '54 30w

"The Australians are believed not to welcome criticism from outside their own country. But in [this] book there is plenty of criticism from within by the Australian writers, some of it pointed and severe, some of it humorous and witty." Richard Johnston

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 28 '54 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p75 Ja 29 '54 420w

CAIRNCROSS, ALEXANDER KIRKLAND. Home and foreign investment, 1870-1913; studies in capital accumulation. 251p $6 Cambridge

332.6 Investments. Investments, Foreign. Finance—Great Britain 53-11731

"The individual chapters in this volume cover a wide range of subjects, but they have a common theme—capital accumulation and the fluctuations that accompany it. Professor Cairncross's study of foreign investment and the dynamics of international trade has focused on two relationships: between foreign and home investment, and between the migration of capital and that of labour." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Cairncross is to be complimented for compressing so much into a readable volume of this size. He explains that to have used the work of the many who have recently worked in related fields would have involved further delay and required a longer book." G. A. Elliott

+ Am Econ R 44:412 Je '54 650w

"The lack of integration, as well as a number of trivial defects of composition (chiefly in the arrangement of tables and charts, which are numerous, and the imperfect and incomplete indication of sources), is probably attributable to the apparent haste with which the volume was put together after having lain dormant for a number of years. . . It may be significant that the chapter on the Victorian capital market, which is least dependent of all on a quantitative base, rates as perhaps the most interesting and informative of the lot. . . On the whole, these studies will attract and challenge economists with interests in many fields—statistics, history, cycles, growth, demography, and international relations—but few will wish to accept them uncritically." R. E. Cameron

+ — J Pol Econ 62:81 F '54 750w

Reviewed by T. S. Ashton
 Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 8 '54 250w
 Times [London] Lit Sup p87 F 5 '54
 1100w

CAIRNCROSS, ALEXANDER KIRKLAND,
 ed. Scottish economy; a statistical account of Scottish life by members of the staff of Glasgow university. 319p maps $6 Cambridge
 330.941 Scotland—Economic conditions.
 Scotland—Social conditions 54-4755

"A symposium of papers giving a quantitative, statistical picture of the social and economic life of Scotland." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 33:166 O '54 10w

"The first volume in the series of 'Social and Economic Studies' emanating from the University of Glasgow was a masterly study by the late Adam Collier of the problem of the Highland crofters. The new volume . . . makes less appeal to the general reader, inasmuch as the book has no clearly discernible theme. The value of the papers to the student of Scottish economy is that the writers have brought together, in up-to-date and handy form, most of the data relevant to an appreciation of current Scottish problems."

New Statesman & Nation 48:371 S 25
 '54 180w

"This is essentially a superior statistical handbook. Not many of its chapters will interest the general reader, as most of the economic information is presented rather raw. The sociological chapters ('Housing,' 'Crime' and 'The Churches') are the most interesting all round. They concentrate, of course, on what can be statistically shown, and are chiefly of value for their exemplary handling of the sources. The specialist, however, will give pride of place to Mr. A. D. Campbell on the Scottish national income: a pioneering work of great importance that faces all the problems of disentangling Scotland from the United Kingdom with ingenuity and fairness." Peter Wiles

+ — Spec p658 My 28 '54 700w

"The book contains twenty chapters on a great variety of economic and social topics. The guiding hand of Mr. Cairncross is evident throughout and he contributes a short but masterly introduction. Even so, the treatment is inevitably uneven and there are some gaps, partly because of lack of statistical material and perhaps partly because of the particular interests of Mr. Cairncross's team."

Times [London] Lit Sup p442 J1 9 '54
 650w

CALDER, PETER RITCHIE. Men against the jungle; il. by Eric Schwab. 232p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

959 [915.9] Asia, Southeastern. Technical assistance [54-1577]

"The account of a journey in Southeast Asia to report on the work of the United Nations special agencies. It was a trip to see Western techniques of medicine and agriculture being taught in a backward region, and Mr Calder witnessed and describes a great deal of interesting and constructive work." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by W. W. Cunningham
 Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 28 '54
 600w

Manchester Guardian p6 F 5 '54 300w

"At long last a lingering void on the book counters is filled. A connected, full-flowing narrative about what the United Nations has accomplished over the past six years through its Technical Assistance program was overdue, and the reading public is fortunate that it is Ritchie Calder who has put it together." Kathleen McLaughlin

+ Nation 178:387 My 1 '54 950w

"Men Against the Jungle is a saga of the technical assistance which is enabling men and women with less technical development to help themselves. It dramatically achieves what all the Blue Books, White Papers and voluminous U.N. documents have failed to do; it brings to life this struggle of men and women in all the countries which lie between the tropical jungles of British Borneo and the remote mountain valleys of Afghanistan." Dorothy Woodman

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:414 Mr 27
 '54 360w

"Mr. Calder is a superb writer of travelogues, with an eye for significant detail in exotic settings, and a special gift for vivid characterization in a few words. . . After reading this book, one has a new idea of the United Nations, and its unpublicized contribution to the welfare of mankind on the opposite side of the globe." Robert Trumbull

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 25 '54 750w

"This is obviously not a book for serious students of either South Asia or of technical cooperation, but is addressed to a public that listens to the 'better type' of radio and television programs. The author is revealed repeatedly as a man of great, if indiscriminating, warmth and energy. The bulk of the book is a sprightly precis of some of the developmental projects in progress from Afghanistan to Indonesia. It does not pretend to be a systematic appraisal of the efforts of various governments or various UN agencies in this respect. The case histories presented stress the positive contributions of technical cooperation and omit the negative. It is frankly a partisan but idealistic travel account." Cora Du Bois

Pacific Affairs 27:271 S '54 420w

"Perhaps because the journey was too long for one book or for other reasons which make journalism mostly an impressionistic art in miniature, the overall picture is uneven and irritating in parts. It is, nevertheless, a magnificently illustrated tract." J. H.

+ — Spec p529 Ap 30 '54 100w

"Mr Calder's book is the report of the journey, not in the language of statistics but in stories of human beings. Some of the statistics are there but they are never allowed to interfere for long with anecdotes and descriptions of manners and scenes. It is not a textbook by an expert but a lively account by a journalist. That is its value."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 12
 '54 900w

CALDER, RITCHIE. See Calder, P. R.

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. Love and money. 244p
 $3.50 Duell; Little

54-8309

This first-person narrative tells the story of a best-selling author's search for the ideal woman—a search which recurs each time he finds himself between novels. In the current instance he believes the woman may be the cocktail girl, Tess, and he pursues her from Florida to Louisiana, to Texas, and to Colorado, before finally giving up.

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 12 '54
 450w

"Unimpressive."

Kirkus 22:409 J1 1 '54 100w

"Recommended—for Caldwellians; this reviewer will stick with Spillane where things happen." Karl Brown

Library J 79:1503 S 1 '54 70w

"It is an interesting idea that Caldwell plays with, but it doesn't quite jell into the difficult mould of satire. . . Because Caldwell is a good story-teller, the book is readable in spite of its faults. Especially interesting and wryly amusing are the incidents where Rick is the pursued rather than the pursuer." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 26
 '54 650w

"There are occasional glimpses of a major subject beyond the popular-fiction contrivances of the plot, just as there were in 'A House in the Uplands.' Here they indicate that the novelist is motivated by a search for emotional reality, in the midst of a sort of Moscow-tour of the emotions. It is paralleled in the psychic emptiness of the girls, with their mixture of experienced sexuality and sexlessness. But this theme is underdeveloped, with the result that the tragedy of the girl is only implied, and the loneliness and restlessness of the writer become a conventional moodiness, broken by moderately lustful adventures that interest him less and less, and finally not at all." Robert Cantwell

CALDWELL, ERSKINE—Continued

N Y Times p4 S 12 '54 450w

"Erskine Caldwell's new novel takes several hours to read and unless you've got time on your hands it's hardly worth the effort. Caldwell achieved prominence for his chronicles of the decadent south—the South of 'Tobacco Road' and 'God's Little Acre.' This South has largely vanished, and its disappearance has deprived the author of his chief story source."

J. J. N.

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 180w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK). Never victorious, never defeated. 549p $3.95 McGraw

54-6731

"Novel built on the building of a railroad empire. . . The DeWitts, four generations of them, form the core of the novel, which spans some seventy five years. . . Cornelia DeWitt, daughter of Rufus who thought to inherit the power and could not forgive the brother who did, is seventy when the story opens. Then the pages of history turn back to her father's youth, and follow through her own flamboyant career, with the ramifications of a big sprawling family adding to the pattern of plot and counterplot." Kirkus

Booklist 50:358 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 179:313 J1 '54 250w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 9 '54 400w

"The book is better integrated, better written, than most of her recent work, and it has the intimate factual details of daily living in a luxury-loving era. A sure best seller."

+ Kirkus 22:127 F 15 '54 250w

"The chronicle of this royal family of industry is as full of contrasting light and shade and detail as a Victorian chromo. It roars along with the gusto of one of Interstate's original wood-burning locomotives, throwing off sparks and smoke. Its picture of the rise of American capitalism, both the plushy side and the seamy side of strikes and exploitation, provokes more interest than admiration for the actors and leaves ample room for controversy."

Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 2 '54 1050w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks
N Y Times p5 My 2 '54 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 15 '54 320w

"For 550 pages Taylor Caldwell succeeds in the astonishing feat of maintaining the reader's interest in the creation of a great railroad, the changing history of America from the Civil War through the Roosevelt administration, the political and economic philosophy of the time, and an intense and colorful account of the fortunes and the emotional and financial crises of the relatives, descendants, and friends of the family of Aaron DeWitt of Portersville, Pa. It is a feat which few writers could, or would attempt to accomplish today." Harrison Smith

Sat R 37:32 Je 5 '54 550w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p9C J1 11 '54 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 15 '54 120w

CALDWELL, TAYLOR. See Caldwell, J. T.

CALIN, HAL JASON. Rocks and ruin. 223p $2.50 Vanguard

54-6987

Detective story.

"All in all ■ pretty effective job." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 18 '54 170w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p27 Ap 25 '54 70w

"Perhaps overcomplicated, but a bit different from run-of-the-mill toughies." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 16 '54 50w

"Sprightly job, with good action, some odd characters. Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 37:37 Ap 24 '54 10w

CALLAHAN, CLAIRE WALLIS (NANCY HARTWELL, pseud). Blue for Illi; il. by Don Sibley. 213p $2.50 Holt

54-5738

A novel for teen aged girls. The heroine is a Hungarian girl, who had dreamed of living in America while she was a displaced person in Europe. The outcome of Illi's dream makes the story.

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 29 '54 80w

+ Kirkus 22:116 F 15 '54 120w

"An above-average novel for girls, this is smoothly paced, with true-to-life characters and situations." Anne Singleton

+ Library J 79:790 Ap 15 '54 60w

"It is not one of the best current books of its class, but very readable and charming."

L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 16 '54 180w

"Despite trite romances and some contrived incidents, this is a warm, sensitive book, with two real heroines and a large cast of appealing characters." Alberta Eiseman

+ — N Y Times p32 Je 6 '54 140w

CALLAHAN, MRS JENNIE (WAUGH). Television in school, college and community. 339p il $4.75 McGraw

371.335 Television in education 53-8992

"A report on current developments in educational television, showing how this new medium is being used by audio-visual specialists in the public schools, radio and TV directors in institutions of higher learning, libraries, and other agencies concerned with the education of people of all ages. This surveys successful programs which have been viewed in all parts of the U.S., giving the student information on the practical details of programming and production, along with a discussion of the educational aims to be served. Includes scripts on subjects varying from a first-grade reading lesson to space science; the bibliography lists theses, program schedules, government publications, and articles, as well as books." Booklist

Booklist 50:252 Mr 1 '54

"This is the soundest book on television in education that I have read. Highly recommended for education, audio-visual, television and large theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:985 My 15 '54 30w

"In the opinion of the reviewer, this book will be one of the classics of television literature. It is truly ■ sourcebook. I am sure it will take its place as the best and most conclusively written documentation of the 'year of decision' referred to in June, 1953, by Paul A. Walker, the chairman of the Federal Communication Commission, as 'the year which will decide education's stake in educational television in the United States.'" W. A. Wittich

+ School R 62:371 S '54 1000w

CALLAHAN, PARNELL JOSEPH TERENCE (PHILIP FRANCIS, pseud). How to serve on a jury. 80p $2; pa $1 Oceana

340.4 Jury

53-5766

"This simply written book will answer all the questions a prospective juror may ask: Must he, or she, serve? What occupations are exempt? What are the duties of a juror? etc. Charts by states and a glossary of legal terms add to the usefulness of this book in all libraries. Add it to the reference collection, but tell your borrowers about it." Wis Lib Bul

"Particularly well written, clarifying concept, functions and selection of a jury as well as duties and privileges of juror. In this small space most aspects of a trial are taken up, as far as they concern the juror." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 78:1421 S 1 '53 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:128 My '54

CALPIN, GEORGE HAROLD, ed. South African way of life; values and ideals of a multi-racial society; ed. under the auspices of the South African institute of international affairs. (Way of life ser) 200p il $3.50 Columbia univ. press

968 [916.8] South Africa—Civilization

A54-8905

Contents: The Afrikaans-speaking section, by S. J. du Toit; The English-speaking section, by Ronald Currey; The South-African Jewish community, by Phyllis Lewsen; The Bantu peoples, by S. B. Ngcobo; The coloured community, by G. J. Golding and F. P. Joshua; The Indian community, by G. H. Calpin; Education in South Africa, by O. D. Wollheim; Political institutions, by M. F. Prestwich; Political parties and trends, by René de Villiers; Economic factors, by Jan Goudriaan and D. G. Franzsen; Quo vadis? by David Marquard.

"The various contributions, as might be expected, do not have equal value, but their quality is on the whole high, and their respect for the facts admirable. . . The one defect of the book arises from the fact that most of its chapters seem to have been written in 1950, so that a number of critical developments, introduced to implement militant apartheid-ism such as the transfer of the education of Africans from the Department of Education to the Department of Native Affairs, are not mentioned." M. J. Herskovits

+ — Ann Am Acad 295:193 S '54 300w

Booklist 50:356 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 14 '54 130w

"It is good to see the history and hopes of the Afrikaner people of South Africa set forward as plainly and understandingly as it is by Dr. S. J. deToit, chief inspector of schools in the Orange Free State. Mr. Ronald F. Currey, headmaster of St. Andrew's College, Grahamstown, provides an effective counterpoint with his quick sketch of the place and problems of the English South African, whom he sees as a member of 'a creative minority' which he believes will be tested by 'its capacity to provoke and stimulate the best elements in the majority to imitate it.'" J. A. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 6 '54 380w

Foreign Affairs 33:169 O '54 20w

Reviewed by E. S. Munger

Geog R 44:614 O '54 240w

Reviewed by W. A. Hance

Pol Sci Q 69:292 Je '54 650w

"The book is frank and forthright in the summation of conditions in the country. Included among the contributors are spokesmen for the Afrikaans-speaking section, the English-speaking section, the Bantu peoples, the South African Jewish community, the colored community and the Indian community. Each writer states his case well." Richard Johnston

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 28 '54 650w

Reviewed by Carveth Wells

Sat R 37:11 Jl 10 '54 850w

CAMERER, DAVE, ed. Winning football plays. 192p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.33 Football

54-9170

"Twenty-one of the country's top football coaches have contributed to this handbook for fans, coaches and players. 63 plays are clearly described and illustrated while particular emphasis is put on the offensive and defensive material that each play exploits. . . Here are plays from the Split T, the Standard T, the Single Wing, the Flying or Winged T, and the T with various spacings, all cross referenced to permit easy comparison." (Publisher's note) Glossary.

Booklist 51:127 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 10w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:2337 D 1 '54 30w

"'Winning Football Plays' should be a boon for most college, secondary school and boys' club coaches—as well as for the football fan. It outlines and clarifies without talking down and, most unusually, assumes a basic intelligence on the part of the reader." Tom Denny

+ N Y Times p31 O 10 '54 160w

"The book [is] easy as pie to understand and gives the reader a pretty fair standard to compare the techniques of the leading coaches in the country." Al Silverman

+ Sat R 37:31 O 11 '54 60w

CAMERON, MRS ELEANOR. Wonderful flight to the Mushroom planet; with il. by Robert Henneberger. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 214p $2.75 Little

54-8310

Science fiction for young readers.

"This is it. This has everything a solar-happy youngster could ask for." M. F. Kieran
+ Atlantic 194:98 D '54 120w

Booklist 51:46 S 15 '54

Reviewed by Maurine Remenih

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 25 '54 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"Sounds a bit mad, but it's tops for reading."

+ Kirkus 22:387 Jl 1 '54 150w

"Recommended for the factual and the fanciful." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 60w

"Mrs. Cameron gives us a well written, truly exciting 'space' story." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 12 '54 110w

"Scientific facts are emphasized in this well-built story. Since they are necessary to the development of the story the reader absorbs them naturally as he soars with the boys on the mission to save the people of planet Basidium-X way out yonder." Jeanne Massey
+ N Y Times pt2 p30 N 14 '54 90w

"The scientific inquiry of youth today will find satisfaction from the moment each reader discovers that David likes 'Dr. Dolittle in the Moon' and becomes lost in his remarkable adventures. In one grade at Casis the children have drawn lots and are patiently waiting their turn to read it. In fact, a new favorite has come to challenge the popularity of the eccentric and amusing 'Miss Pickerell!'" A. B. McG.

+ Sat R 37:74 N 13 '54 200w

CAMERON, RICHARD MORGAN. Rise of Methodism: a source book. 397p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

287.09 Methodism—History

54-8668

An account of the beginnings of Methodism as revealed in the works and words of its early leaders John and Charles Wesley, George Whitefield, and others. Index.

"Persons who like their history written by its makers will find this book a mine of quotations." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 23 '54 50w

CAMERON, R. M.—Continued

"In the interests of the continuous story, the author has included material of limited intrinsic worth, while some very revealing documents are given all too brief treatment. But this is a most useful compilation; here can be found in some form many of the familiar and classic passages which illustrate the early years of the Methodist revival. Careful notes, useful tables, and an Index complete the work." R. T. Handy

+ J Religion 30:307 O '54 200w

"Chief value of this work is for the general reader to whom this material is not readily available. Most special collections contain the original source material which scholars prefer."

O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:619 Ap 1 '54 60w

CAMP, RAYMOND RUSSELL. Collier's book of hunting and fishing; il. by Ham Greene. 223p $3.95 Barnes, A.S.

799 Hunting. Fishing 54-5405

"Early in his opening essay Ray Camp states his main proposition: 'Almost any angler, public opinion to the contrary, has more brains than a trout. Therefore, it is reasonable to assume that he can outwit the fish.' From that point, Mr. Camp turns out in friendly prose a generous collection of angling know-how to guarantee his readers that almost any fish will end up second best. . . The final third of the book is an introduction to hunting." (N Y Times) The author is Wood, Field and Stream editor of The New York Times.

Bookmark 13:232 Jl '54 20w

"Informative articles for popular reading. Attractively illustrated. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1319 Jl '54 20w

Reviewed by Nathan Aleskovsky

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 4 '54 200w

"Raymond Camp is one of the best-known outdoor sports writers in this country—and with some reason. He combines several virtues. As an outdoor man, he seems constantly aware that he will be learning until the end of his days; as a writer, he realizes that unadorned information is likely to put readers to sleep—so his writing is spaced with anecdotes."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 21 '54 200w

CAMPANIS, AL. Dodgers' way to play baseball; il. by Tex Blaisdell [foreword by Walter F. O'Malley]. 256p $2.95 Dutton

796.357 Brooklyn. Baseball club (National league). Baseball 54-5030

"The purpose of this book is to teach the amateur, the semi-pro, and the professional how to play baseball correctly. It is written in language which will be understood by anyone from a teen-ager to a college graduate and is addressed to the player, the coach, and the physical director." (Publishers' note) The author is field supervisor and assistant field director of the Brooklyn Dodgers' spring training camp.

Booklist 50:314 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 21:813 D 15 '53 100w

"One of the best books on the game. For coaches and players. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:67 Ja 1 '54 30w

"It probably will be beneficial to all students, even if the Dodger way is not necessarily the perfect way. Especially to a Giant fan." Irving Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk p13 Je 16 '54 50w

CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER. Heart of Africa. 487p il maps $5 Knopf

967 Africa—Race question. Africa—Social conditions 54-5263

"Anecdotal ramble through the troubled lands south of the Sahara. . . Among the horrors that the author—a Scottish journalist who has lived in the Union of South Africa since 1937, and currently heads the Time-Life bureau at Johannesburg—gives us a lucid look at are the neo-Fascism of Dr. Malan and his bully boys, the pink-gin and six-gun antics of the planters of Kenya, and the powerhouse paternalism of the Belgian bureaucracy in the Congo. He also includes, if only to make the journey supportable, a hopeful glimpse of the experiment in self-government that is taking its first faltering steps on the Gold Coast and in Nigeria." New Yorker

Reviewed by W. O. Brown

Ann Am Acad 296:215 N '54 400w

"Mr. Campbell achieves a wonderfully readable and enlightening blend of solid factual reporting, vivid interviews, personal experience, and sharp, swiftly sketched profiles." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:81 Je '54 60w

Booklist 50:355 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 60w

Reviewed by K. R. E. Dobbs

Canadian Forum 34:69 Je '54 180w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 4 '54 170w

"It is noteworthy that almost every penetrating analysis of Africa today—and, in spite of Mr. Campbell's almost petulant pragmatism, his book deserves inclusion in this class—is pessimistic in tone." D. M. Friedenberg

+ Commonweal 60:250 Je 11 '54 1150w

"A vocal localizing that is fascinating and desperately instructive."

+ Kirkus 22:147 F 15 '54 230w

"It is an honest book that will earn him no love from those in power in the Union and British East and Central Africa. Some of his sketches, such as those of Sir Ernest Oppenheimer, the diamond magnate of the Union, of Premier Malan, and of Sir Roy Welensky, are deeply perceptive. Perhaps because he knows the eastern and southern parts of the continent best, his accounts of other regions are less successful." M. J. Herskovits

+ Nation 178:486 Je 5 '54 250w

"Penetrating and comprehensive study. . . It is recommended to anyone attempting to develop an interest in or planning to visit the Union of South Africa, the Portuguese colonies, British Central and British East Africa, Nigeria, the Gold Coast, French Equatorial Africa or the Belgian Congo." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p7 Je 27 '54 650w

"On the whole, an illuminating book, though marred at times by pretentious nonsense and a somewhat smart-alecky tone."

+ New Yorker 30:121 My 1 '54 170w

"The first part of Mr. Campbell's book will help the reader to understand the background. . . The second half of his book is very readable reporting, and reasonably authentic. But the reader can't help note that the bulk of the book goes predominantly into the selfish, sneering, sardonic, stupid elements present and active in almost every part of Africa. It goes little into the comprehending, creative, constructive elements that are also at work almost everywhere in that continent, among both Africans and Europeans. In this sense it is not balanced reporting." Emory Ross

+ Sat R 37:18 My 8 '54 800w

Reviewed by Thomas Hodgkin

Spec p638 N 19 '54 270w

"Although the book's message is fundamentally somber, the pages are lightened by many amusing personal experiences, and through it runs a bright thread of the keen wit for which many Scotsmen are famous. There are several pages of excellent photographs on the African scene." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 410w

CAMPBELL, ANGUS, and others. Voter decides. 242p $4.75 Row

324.73 Presidents (U.S.)—Election 54-3565

"Mr. Campbell's study, which was sponsored by the Social Science Research Council and financed by the Carnegie Foundation, assembles an impressive mass of data on almost every aspect of voting psychology, from ticket-splitting—one-third of the people sampled split their ballots in 1952—to money-giving. . . The major part of this volume, which is to be followed by others, is devoted to devising a new measure of voters' motivation in terms of (a) party loyalty, (b) concern over issues and (c) candidates." N Y Times

Reviewed by R. T. Bower

Am Soc R 19:786 D '54 850w

"Nobody who writes or speaks about the 1952 election should be taken seriously if he has not studied this book." D. D. McKean
+ Ann Am Acad 296:171 N '54 360w

"The authors are to be commended for including in the appendices the questions asked in the cross-section sampling together with other statistical information necessary for an accurate appraisal of the validity of their conclusions."

+ Current Hist 27:262 O '54 120w

"Unfortunately for the general reader, his report is addressed exclusively for other students to interpret. The writing is also needlessly burdened by technical jargon." Samuel Lubell

N Y Times p1 My 30 '54 200w

"It is to be hoped that the Research Center will undertake another study of this sort in advance of the 1956 elections. For to anyone who has been prompted at times to cry out, 'Oh for the meaning statistics obscure,' 'The Voter Decides' comes as an assurance that in the hands of skilled interpreters, statistics can crack open many mysteries." Sidney Hyman
+ Sat R 37:17 My 8 '54 360w

CAMPBELL, ARTHUR. Jungle green. 298p $4 Little

959.5 Communism—Malay peninsula. Malay peninsula—History 54-8283

"An outstanding documentary of a British military group in Malaya fighting Communist guerillas, mostly boys of 19 or so. With glamour of the East quickly dispelled, they soon learn that their conception of jungle fighting is as nothing compared to reality of either perils or hardships." (Library J) Glossary.

Booklist 51:10 S 1 '54

"This is an important book—of the utmost timeliness for bettering our understanding of conditions in Southeast Asia." H. S. H.

Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 20 '54 410w

Kirkus 22:283 Ap 15 '54 110w

"His description of the country is essentially iconographic, of people (military, civilian, and native) pedestrian. As for humor, there must be a British counterpart of the American's battlefield humor (frequently rugged and sometimes unintelligible to the civilian) which would have added materially to the heroic stature of these boys including the author. Recommended, but scan before multiple purchase." Karl Brown

+ — Library J 79:1312 J1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Derrick Singleton

Manchester Guardian p2 Ag 7 '53 300w
Nation 179:177 Ag 28 '54 100w

Reviewed by Michael Howard

New Statesman & Nation 46:352 S 26 '53 450w

"Jungle Green paints a comprehensive and exciting picture of the Malayan campaign. It is true in the sense that Major Campbell has selected incidents and characters from life for his materials, but it is typical rather than autobiographical, for the incidents did not all actually involve his company. A few, especially those concerning the soldiers' home life, are unconvincing and trite, and some of the hand-to-hand combat seems rather luridly portrayed. Despite these drawbacks, and allowing for some shallowness in discussing the background of the struggle, the book succeeds very well in its purpose." Taliaferro Boatwright

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 J1 18 '54 600w

"The Major writes astonishingly like an author of pulp fiction, but he knows the facts." Ira Wolfert

N Y Times p6 J1 18 '54 1000w

New Yorker 30:226 N 20 '54 130w

"The tone of the book is virulently anti-Chinese. . . It is worth noting that on September 2, 1953, the Malayan Chinese Association called upon all Chinese in Malaya to boycott the book because of its 'unfair and biased comments.' . . . The book, though a popular success today, may yet become one piece of evidence in a lengthy future indictment of recent policies in Malaya." Victor Purcell

Pacific Affairs 27:87 Mr '54 700w

"During lulls in the shooting, the book is fairly slack going. Somehow the author never quite manages to make his undoubtedly brave men and their loyal Malayan allies anything more than stereotypes. However, we haven't heard much about the war in Malaya and the operational passages are good military writing. It obviously hasn't been a piece of cake out there." J. M. Flagler

+ — Sat R 37:26 Ag 21 '54 240w

"Jungle Green gives a clear, harsh but on the whole inspiring picture of a citizen army at grips with Communism in Asia, and it will be read with interest and gratitude by all who want to know exactly what goes on in Malaya." Peter Fleming

+ Spec p135 J1 31 '53 550w

"This is an honest and profoundly modest book which can be recommended to those who have friends and relatives serving in Malaya and to others who wish to know what is being endured on our behalf."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p471 J1 24 '53 750w

CAMPBELL, CHARLES GRIMSHAW. Race and religion. 238p $3.25 British bk. centre

261.8 Race, Religion [53-11314]

"The author is concerned with the racial strains of the ancient peoples of the Near East, the ethnological complexities of the Hebrew people, the racial bifurcation of the Palestinian population from Joshua to Jesus, and the effect of the conflict between the two strains upon the development of Christianity." (Christian Century) Index.

"The book seems to be a curious blend of solid scholarship, questionable theory, critical acumen, unwarrantable conjecture, and earnest purpose. As to what the author calls Galilean Christianity, I'm for it, if I understand him; but I am not convinced of its Amoritic rootage or that the Albigensians were very good exponents of it."

Christian Century 71:48 Ja 13 '54 550w

"Remarkable book." L. A. Garrard

Hibbert J 52:198 Ja '54 650w

CAMPBELL, JOHN WOOD. Black Star passes. 254p $3 Fantasy press

53-12673

Three long stories about interplanetary troubles.

"Here is the earliest long work by the man who was later, as a writer and even more as an editor, to become the strongest single force in the creation of modern science fiction. But when he wrote these novelets for 'Amazing' in 1930 he was a nineteen-year-old sophomore at MIT." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p50 D 6 '53 140w

"No one can get interested in characters so sketchily drawn, so lacking in emotion and motivation. The time for such historical resurrections has long passed; only the small group of s-f fanatics who still live in the thirties will enjoy it." V. G.

N Y Times p43 N 8 '53 90w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 37:61 F 20 '54 20w

CAMPBELL, ROY. Mamba's precipice. 189p
$2.75 Day

54-7930

This story for young people is essentially a picture of happy family life on a summer's vacation in South Africa, set against a background of native habits and customs, and vivid pictures of wild life. The chief character is fifteen year old Michael whose summer adventures include the capture of a murderer and the killing of a leopard and a mamba which had been terrorizing the native farmers.

"An enormous amount of African living and wild life background this very active vacation, while strange animals and customs fill it with unusual material but it is definitely more blood-thirsty and terrifying than American holidays seem to be."

Kirkus 22:3 Ja 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:714 Ap 15 '54 30w

"An exciting, unusual adventure story. . . The story is so real that it sounds like a true record of such children and their doings, even the highly dramatic ending. It introduces a part of Africa never used before in a children's book to our knowledge. Both boys and girls of eleven to fourteen who like animals and are curious about far places will find it very rewarding. Young snake specialists, of course, should own it." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 25 '54 140w

"A loose-jointed, irritating and fascinating story. Not infrequently it reminded me of a nineteenth-century travelogue, for Mr. Campbell is relentlessly determined to cram in every possible bit of information concerning the flora and fauna of the region." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 7 '54 200w

Reviewed by Pamela Whillock
Spec p668 D 4 '53 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p16 N 27 '53 150w

CAMPBELL, WILLIAM EDWARD MARCH
(WILLIAM MARCH, pseud). Bad seed. 247p
$3 Rinehart

54-5130

"Rhoda Penmark at a years of age had a mind of her own and a will to match. Aged people doted on her splendid manners, but rogues knew her as one of themselves, while other children were afraid of her. Christine, her mother, suddenly discovers her daughter's horrible tendencies and also finds out that she is the murderess of two people who stood in her way. Christine resolves to check back and finds that she had been adopted and that the mother she had never known had also been a successful killer. Christine tries to stop the pattern in her daughter, but in the process dies herself." Library J

"Mr. March unfolds this tale of pure evil in a cool, matter-of-fact tone that has a chilling impact. Granted certain improbabilities, The Bad Seed is an almost impeccable novel of suspense." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:81 Je '54 160w

Booklist 50:249; 320 Mr 1 '54; Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Claire McLaughlin

Canadian Forum 34:120 Ag '54 160w

"The Bad Seed' would have been a stronger novel without this false premise—the granddaughter of a murderess is no more likely to be a murderess than the granddaughter of a seamstress, or anyone else. Apart from this flaw, however, The Bad Seed is a novel of suspense and mounting horror, which the reader who can close his eyes to March's unnecessary premise will enjoy as the work of one of the most satisfying of American novelists." August Derleth

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 11 '54 370w

Kirkus 22:130 F 15 '54 160w

"The author tells a horrible story in a way that is still appealing and may inspire fairly wide adult reading." H. L. Roth

Library J 79:623 Ap 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 O 5 '54 180w

"I am too ignorant of heredity to know whether his solution is in fact a solution; what struck me about it was something else: that it was mechanical and, being so, reduced a terrifying novel to a neat horror story; the moral issue had been burked. All the same, Mr. March's novel has great distinction, and his humanity and humour are delightful." Walter Allen

+ — New Statesman & Nation 48:513 O 23 '54 270w

"Dark, original, ultimately appalling, William March's extraordinary new novel is, on the obvious level, a straightforward, technically accomplished story of suspense. The manner of its telling—the dispassionate, exact, almost starched prose, with its occasional glints of sardonic humor—is an impressive achievement in itself. It lends some credibility to a narrative against which the imagination rebels; and toward the end, as horror is piled upon horror, it saves the book (or does it?) from falling headlong into absurdity. . . This is a novel bound to arouse strong responses, to generate vehement discussion, and so not easily to be forgotten." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 11 '54 550w

"An absolutely first-class novel of moral bewilderments and responsibilities nearest the heart of our decade." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 11 '54 700w

"Admirable book. . . Mr. March writes with fine, cold restraint, and his baby Gorgon might easily be the envy and despair of her rather less accomplished prototype in The Children's Hour. Undoubtedly one of the year's best."

+ New Yorker 30:151 Ap 10 '54 160w

"Marvelously as all this is told, there is one weak spot in it; not all readers will accept the author's putting the whole load on heredity—on the 'bad seed' that has skipped a generation and appeared again. Nevertheless, when it comes to managing horror expertly, Mr. March knows exactly what he is doing. So he does, too, when it is a matter of seizing the reader's attention and holding it." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 23 '54 750w

"I'm afraid Mr. March's last, The Bad Seed, won't help his reputation much. In many ways, it is a delightful novel, in others, a studiously frightening one, but it is not completely effective. It is beautifully written; the dialogue is sharp and true, and Mr. March's cynical look at a small group of the citizens of a town that may be Reedyville (he doesn't say) is a pleasure to behold. His thesis, however, is a questionable one." Merle Miller

+ — Sat R 37:33 Je 5 '54 650w

"The Bad Seed is terrifyingly good, not only because its theme is worked out so powerfully, but because every character is convincing. One has to believe that these appalling things took place exactly as the author says they did." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p478 O 15 '54 270w

"For unrelieved horror, William March's The Bad Seed deserves a shelf by itself. It is necessary to go back to LeFanu, Machen or the 19th-century gothic novelists to find its finished equal." Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 300w

"The Bad Seed cannot be put aside without lingering shivers. Despite its unnecessary plot complications, it remains a troubling case history of the transmittal of evil from one generation to another."

Time 63:117 Ap 12 '54 460w

Wis Lib Bul 50:211 O '54

CAMUS, ALBERT. The rebel [tr. by Anthony Bower] with a foreword by Sir Herbert Read. 273p $4 Knopf

170 Good and evil 51-13227

A philosophical essay on the meanings of rebellion and revolution, by the author of the novel, The Plague, which won considerable fame some years ago.

"The Rebel is a piece of reasoning in the great tradition of French logic. There is no trace of sentimentality, of rhetoric or of cant. The argument is vitalized by controlled passion and a literary style studded with flashing phrases and arresting aphorisms. But what, above all, is so exhilarating about Camus's essay is that here is the voice of a man of unshakable decency." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:85 Mr '54 550w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 10 '54 320w

Reviewed by Michael Harrington
Commonweal 59:428 Ja 29 '54 2050w
Kirkus 22:20 Ja 1 '54 270w

Reviewed by Louis Barron
Library J 79:384 F 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by Max Beloff
Manchester Guardian p4 O 30 '53 500w

"Camus' book is one of the extremely few that express the contemporary hour (cluttered with ephemeral report) yet profoundly transcend it. Although the present English version is imperfect, it is a good deal better than nothing." Waldo Frank

+ New Repub 130:19 Ja 18 '54 2000w

"Judged by analogous standards, The Rebel fails to live up to its foreword. As a 'work of logic,' it is unworthy of serious consideration. M. Camus's account of Marxism, for instance, is competent but jejune, and, unless I have missed an odd sentence, contains no reference to the colonial problem, an omission all the more extraordinary on the part of a Frenchman writing in 1952. There are, of course, a number of penetrating remarks, but the book is full of generalisations. . . In fairness to M. Camus, I must add that the loose and emotional texture of his thinking has probably been exaggerated by his translator." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:72 Ja 16 '54 1500w

"The book itself has that ardent personal involvement with ideas and that intellectual consideration of emotions, political and otherwise, characteristic of French reflective writing since Pascal. It is discourse at once abstract and eloquent, dialectical and mystical. It is a play—almost, one is tempted to say, a play of ideas, and one reads it as one might in Paris go to the theater to see a drama of Sartre, of Gabriel Marcel, for the enjoyment of an argument turned into a conflict of personality." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 10 '54 950w

"His essay may be called the logbook of the intellectual's pilgrimage to paradise on earth, the biography of that European rebellion which was born with the French Revolution—in a deeper sense its autobiography. This may explain two of the few weak points of this remarkable book. First, it neglects to return to one of the sources, the most important perhaps, of the ethical and metaphysical rebellion in our civilization: the eschatological prophetic message of Judaism. . . Second: the author, true to an honestly admitted self-restriction, has eliminated religious rebellion, which probably was the most inclusive of all." Manes Sperber

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 10 '54 1650w

"In the state of eloquent confusion that is commonly referred to as 'French clarity,' Albert Camus has written a puzzling but engrossing book about the political implications of absolutist ideas. His championship of human values against all the insidious totali-tarianisms is deeply moving, but the delight in paradox that leads him to describe Nietzschean nihilism as 'absolute affirmation' keeps the book's level of intelligibility to a minimum, and his conclusion, that each man's salvation must lie in his refusal to become a god, probably does not solve the problems of any large proportion of his readers."

+ New Yorker 29:101 Ja 23 '54 140w

"Unfortunately, some of the most provocative pages, on Stirner, Lautréamont, and the Surrealists, have been omitted. Nevertheless, for those who do not read French 'The Rebel' will be a noteworthy experience. They will find there by far the best discussion of the origins and implications of totalitarianism and at the same time meet in Camus a personality of unusual attractiveness and sincerity." Hans Kohn

+ Sat 37:14 F 13 '54 1100w

"M. Camus is so admirable a novelist and thinker that one must approach everything that he writes with respect. In The Rebel his aims are ambitious, and all the more respectable for that reason. If, as I believe, they have not been carried out entirely satisfactorily, that does not mean that their pursuit was not worth while or that the results of the pursuit are not worth reading." Rex Warner

+ Spec p674 D 4 '53 1550w

Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '54 380w

"For all that M. Camus is primarily concerned to worry a system of philosophy out of his study of rebellion, he writes more as a poet than as a philosopher, not at all in the sense that his style is lyrical—it is if anything the opposite, plain to the point of sometimes becoming pedestrian—but in the sense that it is for the odd remark, the sudden shaft of insight, the stimulus of a suggestion which enables us to find our own particle of truth, that we value him, rather than as the builder of a strong logical structure of thought, firm at every joint."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p809 D 18 '53 2100w

"It is unfortunate that this significant book should reach the American public in a translation unworthy of it. Small wonder if some readers find it opaque and murky, for the author's thought is betrayed and watered down more often than not. Though Camus himself is gifted with rare clarity of expression, translator and proofreader, through carelessness or ignorance, expose him here to attack on more than one score." Konrad Bieber

+ Yale R n 43:473 spring '54 900w

CANADAY, JOHN EDWIN (MATTHEW HEAD, pseud). Another man's life. 215p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

53-1941

Mystery story.

"A fastidious study in character, to which murder lends only a faint imprint, this is a civilized rationalization after the fact."

Kirkus 21:299 My 1 '53 100w

"What Mr. Head has had his principal character set down is a remarkable piece of sustained and shifting self-revelation and an extraordinarily adroit and intense performance held, virtually, within four walls and moments in four lives. 'Another Man's Life' is a mystery by designation, a novel by preoccupation and a soundly frightening piece of work in either category." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 22 '53 190w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p48 N 22 '53 160w

"A story at once grim and breath-taking, done with Head's surpassing skill." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 10 '54 40w

CANDY, EDWARD, pseud. See Neville, A.

CANHAM, ERWIN DAIN. New frontiers of freedom. 116p $2.25 Longmans

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Civilization. Liberalism 54-9203

"Nothing is more seriously misunderstood throughout the world than the nature of mid-century American capitalism. This brief book is a layman's summary statement of some of the elements which make the enterprise system as it evolves and operates in the United States one of the most meaningful facts for men everywhere." (Foreword) The author is the editor of the Christian Science Monitor.

Booklist 50:444 J1 15 '54

Bookmark 13:215 Je '54 20w

"A brief and attractively readable book." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 11 '54 750w

Kirkus 22:256 Ap 1 '54 200w

"A thoughtful, heartening book." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 25 '54 430w

"The book is too sketchy for Mr. Canham fully to develop his points, particularly in respect to the relationship between the development of our free enterprise system and the direction of American foreign policy. He is surely right in arguing that the middle way that we pursue at home has much to offer to the great masses of the world's people who are neither Communists nor convinced democrats." J. B. Oakes

N Y Times p10 My 23 '54 550w

CANNING, VICTOR. Handful of silver. 256p $3.50 Sloane

54-10895

In this novel of international intrigue two friends of army days are the central characters. David Fraser, now a schoolmaster, attempts to help his idol, Colonel Drexel, a member of the English Intelligence service. The plan is to hold the son of an Eastern potentate in a villa in the French Pyrenees until an English oil concession is safe. The plan is saved by David, altho he almost loses his life in the process.

Booklist 51:108 N 1 '54

"High marks for color and conscience in international intrigue."

+ Kirkus 22:453 J1 15 '54 180w

"A Handful of Silver' is an international intrigue thriller, is competently written, logically plotted, unflinchingly paced, and flamboyantly peopled with the best demimonde society. Highly recommended for armchair adventurers."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 10 '54 140w

"I can't find much life-and-death interest in whether Anglo-Media gets its oil concession renewed, which is the major issue at stake; I don't believe a word of the arbitrary love story; and I fail to see why the superficial, sentimental and uninventive Mr. Canning is priced and often reviewed as a straight novelist when he falls so well below most mystery writers in his knowledge of the art and craft of the novel." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p41 S 26 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 17 '54 40w

CANNING, VICTOR. Man from the Turkish Slave. 246p $3 Sloane

54-5545

"Tracking down a gang of jewel thieves on an island off the coast of Brazil creates an entertaining adventure story with a touch of melodrama when an earthquake both hinders and helps in catching the criminals. A very proper romance develops during the chase. An abridged version has appeared in the Toronto Star Weekly under the title, Trial by water." Booklist

Booklist 50:221 F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:132 Mr '54 30w

"Canning's readers will know what to expect in the way of swift pace, lively dialog, solid characterization, and convincing background. It's my feeling that the author relied a bit too much on natural phenomena for the solution of this plot. However, tho not up to the standard of 'A Forest of Eyes,' this is a good mixture of mystery, suspense, adventure, and romance." Robert Molloy

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 28 '54 250w

Kirkus 21:745 N 15 '53 120w

"Perhaps things come a bit too easy for Landers, even love. But the novel does have spirit and some very good characters, especially Quisto, patriarch of the island; Grazia, brave and fat, and Lesset, the chief 'bad guy.' This is by no means vintage Canning—but it still adds up to an evening of entertainment." V. P. Hass

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 24 '54 400w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 21 '54 90w

Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 50w

CANSDALE, GEORGE SOPER. Zoo book. 64p il $2 British bk. centre

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of. Zoology—Juvenile literature A54-8941

"Information about a variety of animals, large and small, found in most zoos, with their photographs. George Cansdale is Superintendent of the London Zoo." Library J

Booklist 50:373 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

+ Library J 79:712 Ap 15 '54 10w

"Page arrangement and difficulty of reading will limit its use with younger readers. Recommended for ninth grade up." G. P. Slocum

+ Library J 79:1239 Je 15 '54 70w

"The photographs are splendid. It is more for families or individual young enthusiasts with special interest in animal exploring and zoos than for the average public or school library." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 25 '54 140w

CAPLOW, THEODORE. Sociology of work. 330p $5 Univ. of Minn. press

301.4 Class distinction. Occupations

54-8208

"A study of the social roles and consequences that arise from the classification of men by the work they do, determined by an analysis of those productive activities which govern the allocation of social awards and deprivations. The author, a consultant on administrative problems, believes that a true conception of the division, structure, mobility, and motivation of the labor force is basic to an understanding of society. A brief statistical description of the American labor force is included in an appendix which, together with a rather comprehensive bibliography, adds to the reference value of a sociological tool useful to students, sociologists, economists, and business, industrial, and labor leaders." Booklist

Reviewed by G. C. Homans

Am Soc 19:806 D '54 700w

Booklist 50:391 Je 15 '54

"The work is a major contribution to the study of social structure." R. C. Stone

+ Social Forces 33:92 O '54 400w

CAPON, PAUL. World at bay; jacket and endpaper designs by Alex Schomburg. 208p $2 Winston

54-7726

Science fiction for young readers.

"Entertainment for the less sophisticated youngster." Mark Reinsberg
Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 N 14 '54
60w

Reviewed by L. T. Bulman
Library J 79:2499 D 15 '54 60w

"An action story that should satisfy any young reader's appetite for adventure." Sidney Lohman

N Y Times pt2 p10 N 14 '54 160w

"This sort of thing has been done well before, and Mr. Capon can claim originality only in the invention of some details. This, however, is a book of distinction in style and atmosphere. Mr. Capon has not hampered himself with anxieties about a child audience. Like The War of the Worlds, this is a story without limits of age; it is an adult novel in the way that all the best children's books are adult, in that it demands an intelligent appreciation of fluent and mature writing, consistent characterization and realistic values."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p v My 28 '54
150w

CARDEN, PRISCILLA. Aldo's tower; il. by Kurt Werth. (Ariel bk) 63p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

54-5200

A small Italian boy, tired of living with his family in a cold, damp cellar, goes in search of sunshine and warmth and so finds a new and better home for all.

Booklist 51:20 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54
70w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon
Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54
80w

"A book to be included in every six to twelve year old Christmas package."

+ Commonweal 61:206 N 19 '54 50w

"A heart-warming story."

+ Kirkus 22:338 Je 1 '54 80w

"The ending is too simple. Still it is true that if you want something hard enough you'll get it. Children everywhere understand this and will identify themselves with Aldo. Also they'll love his loyal dog, Whitey. The writing is easy—though slow in the middle—and there's lots of conversation. The type is large. The big pictures on every page—some in rather harsh full color—have a good feeling of mood and place." E. M. Graves

+ N Y Times p30 O 3 '54 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 28 '54
50w

CARDWELL, GUY ADAMS. Twins of genius. 134p $2.50 Mich. state college press

928.1 Cable, George Washington. Clemens, Samuel Langhorne. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-12009

A study of the association of two nineteenth century writers, Mark Twain and George W. Cable. Deals chiefly with their joint speaking tour in the 1880s, with some comments on their mutual literary influences. A collection of letters between the two is included in the volume.

Booklist 50:257 Mr 1 '54

"Mr. Cardwell's title comes from James B. Pond's billing of the readings. Cable and Mark Twain were anything but twins, and only one of them was a genius, but that is enough to make the book valuable and pleasurable reading." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Times p4 F 7 '54 550w

"None of the letters grouped here are impressive as literature but, since they are genuine expressions of the personalities of both correspondents, they reveal, collectively, a good bit about the authors who were so different in temperament and outlook."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:150 Je '54
240w

CARL, LOUIS, and PETIT, JOSEPH. Mountains in the desert; with a pref. by Raymond Coche. 318p il $3.95 Doubleday

966.1 [916.61] Tefedest range 54-7664

Popular account of an archaeological expedition to the Tefedest Massif in the Hoggar region of the Sahara. The objective was the re-discovery of certain prehistoric drawings and carvings reported by earlier explorers.

Booklist 51:37 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:3 O '54 30w

"Add another to the small number of first rate stories of high adventure, conducted with gallantry and reported with verve and humor."

A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 11 '54
350w

Kirkus 22:354 Je 1 '54 180w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1598 S 15 '54 60w

"Gallic humor prevents the authors from attaching any professorial weight to their venture. Rather like good journalists they enjoy the baffling contrasts civilization helped to create in the desert, whether during a native wedding lit by neon light, or at meal-time when the left-over sardine oil serves as their guide's favorite foot wash. They register tribal manners and customs and they note with gusto the many anecdotes previous desert emissaries left behind on their unending struggle against loneliness and frenzy. . . Occasionally, when face to face with the grandeur of nature or with the inventiveness of prehistoric artists, the travelers tell their story in glowing poetic terms, but never fail to come back to earth with an almost Thurber-like epigram." Curtis Lubinski

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 4 '54
400w

"Archaeology cum adventure, one might call this summary of the search—with no impulse to add, cum grano salis. For one of its chief merits is that, in carrying a high degree of excitement, it does so without straining; the spare, precise language paints a vivid canvas of the Sahara, its sunsets and silences, and of works left by men when giraffes and elephants roamed the world's greatest desert." R. C. Lewis

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 11 '54 300w

"A most attractive account of an expedition on camelback to the Tefedest Mountains of the central Sahara in search of some prehistoric rock paintings."

+ New Yorker 30:77 S 4 '54 120w

"By their careful reproduction of the prehistoric rock pictures of the Tefedest [the authors] have provided work for scholars who are better able to carry on their research into the early history of man within walking distance of the world's great libraries. The scholars, however, will not have as much fun as did these intrepid Frenchmen and their fascinating native helpers. As they tell of it, it seems to have been fun, though almost always fun with overtones and undertones of heartbreaking agony and tantalizing discomfort." Giles Hubbard

+ Sat R 37:19 Ag 14 '54 550w

CARLSON, MRS BERNICE WELLS. Fun for one—or two; il. by Raymond Abel. 159p $2; pa $1.35 Abingdon

790 Amusements

54-8452

Directions for about 200 play projects suitable for one or two children. Includes stunts, tricks, drawing, costumes, sewing, carpentry, gifts to make, collections, puppets, scrapbook, games to make, etc. For ages 8 to 11.

Booklist 50:301 Ap 1 '54

"Miss Carlson shows a sound understanding of children in her selection of amusing stunts, drawing activities and puzzles, which will appeal to a child's sense of humor." Sylvia Cassell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 1 '54
100w

CARLSON, B. W.—Continued

"A good book with which to entertain a sick-a-bed child or a well one. . . Any child who can read will be able to follow the clear directions himself; and adults and older boys and girls who take care of little children will find this a treasure trove of easily-carried-out ideas." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:109 Ap '54 80w

"All of the materials are simple, easy to obtain and even in a major activity like carpentry, basic instructions and directions for a few models are clear and offer room for initiative and good grounding for more intensive work."

+ Kirkus 22:3 Ja 1 '54 130w

"Recommended for children from 7 up and for those who work with them and for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 79:783 Ap 15 '54 60w

"A sensible home activity book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 6 '54 20w

Reviewed by Pat Clark

N Y Times p36 Je 6 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:141 My '54

CARLSON, NATALIE (SAVAGE). Alphonse, that bearded one; il. by Nicolas. 78p $2.50 Harcourt

Bears—Legends and stories 54-5151

"A French Canadian tall tale in which a bear recruit in the French army brings about peace with the Iroquois." Bookmark

"There'll be many a chuckle when your child under twelve reads Alphonse. It has a French Canadian folklore flavor with some extra ridiculous flourishes." M. T. Kieran

+ Atlantic 193:84 Je '54 20w

Booklist 50:325 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 20w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 18 '54 160w

"It is far above average and sure to have its place with boys and girls who will enjoy the absurd situations bound to result when a bear masquerades as a man." J. D. L.

+ — Horn Bk 30:174 Je '54 100w

"Another Canadian folk tale from the author of The Talking Cat (1952) has all the dry quips and dabs of humor needed to verify its credibility. . . Delightful thrills, illustrated with bravado by Nicolas."

+ Kirkus 22:197 Mr 15 '54 70w

"A long short story that is wonderful for story-telling, reading aloud, and individual enjoyment." Anne Izard

+ Library J 79:783 Ap 15 '54 80w

"It makes hilarious reading for beginning readers, and fine material for story tellers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 Mr 21 '54 240w

"We reread this rare little book with increased admiration for its succinct style and its apt use of delightful folk sayings. Many children will love it because it is an exciting bear story, with a fresh twist to its humor and plot. Others will appreciate the true French flavor and skilled phrasing." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 16 '54 150w

"The story is a little like a folk tale, though it is more consciously funny and sophisticated than true folk tales. The illustrations, by Nicolas, are most amusing." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p24 My 23 '54 70w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:208 N 27 '54 50w

"Parents who groan inwardly when ordered by their offspring to 'read it again' should welcome 'Alphonse That Bearded One,' for here is a hilarious tall tale of unusual originality." H. A. M.

+ Sat R 37:54 My 15 '54 160w

Spring'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:139 My '54

CARLSON, RAYMOND, ed. Flowering cactus; an informative guide, illustrated in full-color photography, to one of the miracles of America's Southwest; photographs and technical data by R. C. and Claire Meyer Proctor; sketches and design by George M. Avey. 96p $7.50 McGraw

583.47 Cactus

54-11983

"All the main species of cactus found in the United States portrayed in eighty full-color photographs by R. C. and Claire Meyer Proctor and in the drawings of George M. Avey. Raymond Carlson's commentary furnishes information on the cactus and on the Southwest where it is found." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:165 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 20w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 D 5 '54 20w

"The improbable coloring of some of the cactus blossoms seem even more so in one or two of the plates, as if true rendition has been sacrificed for effect. . . On the whole, however, this is an outstanding contribution to a field of beauty which is receiving greater recognition each year. The book has a keyed map of the Southwest telling where the major species grow and a list telling when they are in blossom." Charles Raudebaugh

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 5 '54 220w

CARNAC, CAROL. See Rivett, E. C.

CARNOVSKY, LEON, and others, eds. International aspects of librarianship. 124p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

020.4 Library cooperation 54-11303

"Papers presented before the eighteenth annual Conference of the Graduate Library School of the University of Chicago." (Subtitle) "The 10 papers present a survey of library development in various countries outside the U.S., of acquisition problems, distribution of American publications abroad, and the American contribution to foreign library establishment." (Booklist)

Booklist 51:31 S 15 '54

Special Libraries 45:354 O '54 10w

CAROE, SIR OLAF KIRKPATRICK. Soviet empire; the Turks of Central Asia and Stalinism. 300p maps $5 St Martins

957 Soviet Central Asia—Politics and government 53-13331

"In the Pamir mountains a narrow finger of Afghanistan separates the Soviet Union from what was formerly British India. Since 1947 the Moslem state of Pakistan has replaced the British Empire, yet to the north of the Pamirs in the five Soviet Republics of Turkestan Moslems continue to be part of a non-Moslem empire. Will this region, the size of half the United States, primarily inhabited by Eastern Turkish people, follow the path to independence that most of the other Moslem states have taken? Sir Olaf Caroe, formerly head of the foreign service of the Government of British India, examines this question in [this book]." Sat R

"This is a valuable book. It is the only account in English of the history and present status of a vital region. . . Sir Olaf's emphasis on the human spirit, not on mere policies and statistics, is important. In other ways, the book is disappointing. Halfway between a popular and a scholarly work, it is neither another Schuyler nor the thorough study of Turkistan that we need today. Sir Olaf has left considerable material untapped. . . The footnotes, unfortunately, are so incomplete as to be irritating. Soviet Empire is nevertheless a good job. It should not only provide students of Russian history with useful material and viewpoints but should prod them to continue investigation of a crucial area they have too long disregarded." R. H. Davison

+ — Am Hist R 59:712 Ap '54 240w

Am Pol Sci R 48:591 Je '54 40w

"Sir Olaf's volume is not only very well written, it is also well documented, with an extended bibliography of materials from Russian, Soviet, and Turkish sources, among others, for assistance in further research and study on this problem. . . It may well be hoped that the volume will have a wide reading." H. N. Howard

+ Ann Am Acad 294:223 Jl '54 460w

Booklist 50:275 Mr 15 '54

Reviewed by Paul Wohl

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 19 '54 550w

"A skillful and perceptive treatment of a fascinating and complex region."

+ Current Hist 26:125 F '54 110w

Foreign Affairs 32:515 Ap '54 30w

"The author had a distinguished career on the Northwest Frontier of India. He has studied with care all the facts that are known about the last fifty years of Turkestan history, much of them based on Soviet publications. Even so he only partially lifts the veil, but his general conclusions seem eminently sound." M. P. Price

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 8 '54 550w

Reviewed by K. Ziliacus

New Statesman & Nation 46:826 D 26 '53 900w

"Sir Olaf's enthusiasm for the natives of Central Asia, which makes his work interesting to follow, has also its drawbacks. In his endeavor to glorify the native, the author is often unfair to the Russian conqueror, especially in the Tsarist regime, ignoring or minimizing its real accomplishments, and accusing it of practices which indeed were the fault of every nineteenth century imperial power. He also overestimates the power and the accomplishments of native nationalism. . . Sir Olaf Caroe's book is a welcome addition to the scanty English language literature on this fascinating subject." Richard Pipes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p10 N 29 '53 700w

"It is a beautifully written book of wide and unimpeachable scholarship, which casts a deep glance into the soul of the Turkish race." Hasan Ozbekkan

+ N Y Times p6 N 29 '53 800w

"A scholarly but lively work." Alexander Melamid

+ Sat R 37:18 F 6 '54 330w

"To become an expert even on a modest scale in the affairs of Central Asia is the work of a lifetime. It is not surprising that most western books about Central Asia, at any rate in recent times, have not risen above the level of travellers' tales and have left the reader to seek for a few grains of solid information in a haystack of popular history and picturesque description. Sir Olaf Caroe evidently set out with the intention of producing something better. But time has been short; and he has been severely handicapped by the all-pervading atmosphere of the cold war, by lack of any but the most superficial knowledge of the Russian sources, and by excessive reliance on the Turkish side, on a single book—the lengthy memoirs of Professor Togan of Istanbul."

Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 1 '54 750w

CARPENTER, FREDERIC IVES. Emerson handbook. (Handbooks of American literature) 268p $4 Hendricks house 191 Emerson, Ralph Waldo

"Going beyond the reference needs of assessing the multitudinous Emersonian scholarship and providing a serviceable guide to his works, Mr. Carpenter, in his third study of Emerson, has written a judicious essay in reappraisal. . . Mr. Carpenter has tried to measure Emerson against our needs. By showing that a philosophy which had its root in an earlier America is still a potent ideal and that many of the ideas Emerson pioneered for his generation have found their way through channels of influence into ours, he affirms once more the viable protestantism, individualism, and activism of American thought." New Eng Q

"This is a book to be used and re-used."

J. L. Blau

+ J Philos 50:702 N 5 '53 210w

"Mr. Carpenter does not sufficiently recognize how Emerson's vision satisfied the necessities of dualism. He emphasizes Emerson's orientalism and pragmatism. . . Although he believes that an author is influenced most by the ideas of his time, Mr. Carpenter merely points in the direction of German romanticism and the native intellectual traditions. He does not, for example, as cogently define Reason and Understanding as he does mysticism and pragmatism. Nor does he show the range of Emerson's influence, limiting it mostly to acknowledged literary giants. The omissions are perhaps admissible even in a handbook as excellent as this one." Sherman Paul

+ — New Eng Q 26:546 D '53 1000w

U S Quarterly Bk R 9:416 D '53 160w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. History of Soviet Russia; v 4, The interregnum, 1923-1924. 392p $5 Macmillan (N Y)

947.083 [947.084] Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-. Communism—Russia (51-1610)

"Leon Trotsky provides the central figure of E. H. Carr's fourth volume in his monumental history of the Russian revolution. . . The dying Lenin, unable longer to control his ambitious colleagues, hovers in the background of the year 1923. Carr finds Trotsky, Zinoviev and Stalin, with Kamenev content with a less ambitious role, moving across the scene to place themselves in a position to assume the mantle. None dared to move openly lest he be struck down by the indignant mass for trying to displace the leader who was expected to recover. Intrigue and secrecy fill the pages of the account of the triumvirate of Zinoviev, Kamenev and Stalin as it makes common cause against Trotsky, who was feared as the most likely successor to Lenin." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

"Recommended for all collections on Soviet Russia." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:2444 D 15 '54 160w

"The fourth volume of Mr. Carr's history of Soviet Russia is the best of the series. Events and policies, measures and men, are merged into a coherent whole. Earlier volumes often gave the impression that what took place in Russia between 1917 and 1923 was an academic discussion of political theory. The reader had constantly to be reminding himself that a great empire was disintegrating, millions of men were dying, society was being reshaped. Here reality is much nearer the surface." A. J. P. Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:396 O 2 '54 1100w

"Carr's thesis will probably arouse the partisans of the historic figures concerned. Carr admits to not having used many American libraries as he did for his first three volumes. . . [He] weaves foreign and domestic events into an interrelated pattern which sounds authentic in the light of what is now known and considering the difficulties of reconstruction of the period, sometimes from sources which cannot have benefited from afterthought and self-justification, his account seems to be remarkably sound." J. N. Hazard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 5 '54 800w

"The transition from Lenin to Stalin, ■ confusing and dramatic stage in the evolution of the Soviet dictatorship emerges for the first time in clear and objective outline in Mr. Carr's masterly analysis." P. E. Mosely

CARR, E. H.—Continued
+ N Y Times p3 N 28 '54 900w

"Professor Carr, an exceptionally knowledgeable guide through the labyrinths of the Kremlin mentality, writes with his usual clarity, authority, and detachment. His work is obviously going to be definitive."
+ New Yorker 30:146 D 18 '54 200w

"Volume Four is less likely to arouse controversy than the three preceding volumes. There is still an occasional turn of phrase to remind us of the author's impatience with liberal democracy, of his admiration for Lenin, and even of his sympathy with certain aspects of revolutionary romanticism. But these predilections are of little account in the period with which we are here concerned." David Footman
+ Spec p502 O 22 '54 650w

CARR, EMILY. See Carr, M. E.

CARR, H. GRESHAM, ed. Flags of the world. 209p il col il $10 Warne

929.9 Flags 53-10878

"The fifth edition of a work that first appeared 'over sixty years ago.' The fourth edition by V. Wheeler-Holohan, appearing in 1939, is the basis for the present revision by H. Gresham-Carr, Fellow the Royal Geographical Society of London. . . The present edition has 16 chapters. They cover the Royal Standard and Standards of the Royal Family; Our National Flag, the 'Union Jack,' the Red Ensign; Flags of the Queen's Representatives and the Public Departments; Flags of the British Commonwealth of Nations; Flags of the Royal Navy and the Royal Marines, the White and Blue Ensigns, the Sea Cadet Corps Ensign; Flags and Colours of the British Army; Flags of the Royal Air Force, Royal Observer Corps Ensign and Air Training Corps Ensign, Civil Air Ensign; House Flags of the Shipping Companies; Yacht Flags; Flags of Corporations and Public Bodies; Signal Flags and the International Signal Code; Flags of the United States of America; Latin-American Flags; Flags of Asia and Africa; Flags of Europe and the United Nations. There is an introductory chapter, a bibliography and an index. Except for areas for which new information is required, much of the text is identical with that in the 1939 edition." Subscription Bks Bul

"The text is in simple, direct, style easily understood though heraldic terms are occasionally used. The Table of Contents headings are descriptive of chapter content. . . Flags of the World is inclusive, up to date, and informative. Its emphasis is British but flags of other parts of the world are presented with all pertinent facts. The material is well organized and the excellent illustrations, numbering nearly 500, extend the text. Flags of the World is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:39 Jl '54 1100w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Third bullet, and other stories. 213p $2.75 Harper

54-6008

Collection of short detective and mystery stories. Contents: The third bullet; The clue of the red wig; The house in Goblin wood; The wrong problem; The proverbial murder; The locked room; The gentleman from Paris.

Booklist 50:453 Jl 15 '54

Kirkus 22:215 Mr 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 48:368 S 25 '54 60w

"'The Third Bullet' is a sample of virtuoso juggling which begins by startling and manifests itself in a growing pyramid of 'impossibilities.' Even if its solution is taller still (caught out of the empyrean) one can't discount the amusement of the show that preceded it. . . As a collection of tales they multiply 'impossibility' (which is still Mr. Carr's happiest vein) strenuously and they lack the dazzling simplicity which characterizes Carr at his best. But read amblingly and with distractions as they were designed to be read, they tease our interest agreeably enough." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 My 30 '54 170w

"The title story is a short novel, published over fifteen years ago in England as a separate volume but now appearing for the first time in an American book—a somewhat conventional but admirably detailed and intricate locked-room puzzle, ranking as good Grade B Carr. The six short stories are more imaginative and individual." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p18 My 30 '54 150w

"The whole book is a delight." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 18 '54 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 Jl 17 '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 80w

CARR, M. EMILY. Heart of a peacock; ed. by Ira Dilworth; line drawings by the author. 234p $4 Oxford

B or 92

[54-7911]

Emily Carr was a Canadian artist and writer who died in 1945. This book contains a number of sketches and short stories—some dealing with her own childhood, her friends and her pets, others with Northwest Indian life, etc.

"To know Miss Carr better is of course to know all the lively animals and birds she mothered and the reaction of her family and friends to their antics. . . There are some Indian stories told with a simplicity and understanding that is very moving. But it is not just her subject matter that holds your interest; it is her unique ability to create word pictures, to say only just enough and to say it with vividness and originality." Y. M. H.

+ Canadian Forum 33:260 F '54 170w

"Humorous, sad, gay, bitter, and tender, with no trace of sentimentality. Readers of Klee Wyck (1941) will welcome this collection. Recommended." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 79:453 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Taken separately, many of the sketches are slight; as a whole, they reveal a writer whose simplicity is deceptive; a stubborn original. Their sentimental streak is offset as much by their curious economy of phrasing as by the author's shrewd understanding and judgment. Those who enjoy these tales would do well to look up the three or four previous books of Emily Carr for the light they throw on her life and on her work."

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:334 S 18 '54 270w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25 '54 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p436 Jl 9 '54 900w

CARRENO, JOSE SUAREZ. See Suárez Carreño, J.

CARRINGTON, HERWARD, ed. Week-end book of ghost stories. 280p $3.50 Washburn

Short stories—Collections 53-11373

A collection of ghost stories, most of them dealing with telepathy and clairvoyance. There are a few humorous ghost stories included.

Booklist 50:167 D 15 '53

Kirkus 21:598 S 1 '53 60w

"Dr. Carrington has made such valuable contributions to the non-fictional literature of the supernatural that one can only regret this ill-advised incursion into fiction." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 D 13 '53 110w

"Excluding the old chestnuts, there are five or six genuinely creepy and well-executed stories among the 20 in this volume. . . The editor would have done better to collect his few good numbers into a smaller, less-expensive book." L. G. O.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 21 '54 160w

Time 62:114 D 7 '53 600w

CARROLL, MRS GLADYS (HASTY). One white star. 246p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-13018

"A three generation pattern repeats itself in the story of Laura Craig, the child in the triangle of mother, daughter and granddaughter; and later the wife and mother, standing in the middle between her child and her mother; and finally, the mother, demanding a life of her own, and pushing her daughter out, just as she begins to know her. Once again Mrs. Carroll has turned back to New England, first a farmhouse setting, where a marriage of different backgrounds was going on the rocks. Then a simple town house, where Laura lived with her mother and grandmother. Finally, a handsome brick house, where Paul Lesley, popular minister, brought Laura, and then asked of her that she let him put his idealism ahead of his humanity." Kirkus

Booklist 51:74; 108 O 15 '54; N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:60 D '54 30w

"In her new book Mrs. Carroll has done two things. The first, and obvious one, is to tell a story packed with incident and modest drama, capped with a surprise ending. The second is to enclose in words the interplay of events and thoughts on a sensitive child, and show how it molded a woman's character. How valid this unraveling of the tangled threads of the past is in 'One White Star,' seems at least debatable. The detached reader finds himself wondering if the psychology has not been tailored to fit the character, rather than vice versa." N. E. Taylor

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '54 500w

"Sometimes it is too objectively remote, but often it comes to grips with real issues. The story lives through successive portraits, particularly some of the minor figures on the periphery. . . There is something, but not enough, of what Mrs. Carroll did so memorably in As The Earth Turns, a capturing of a way of life in a fundamentally American setting. While it is hard to put a finger on why this stands out above the books she has done in between, it seems to me that it has a kind of wisdom and philosophy that today needs. Not a great but a good book."

+ Kirkus 22:546 Ag 15 '54 280w

"A skilful novel, well told in fluent dialogue and realistic detail. . . There is another phase to the ending, a surprise one that is almost too much of a surprise, but Mrs. Carroll is an old hand at telling a story and, despite the fact that she offers neither complexity nor obscurity nor symbolism nor profound sociological and psychological meaning, readers who enjoyed her 'The Earth Turns' and 'Dunbrook' will probably not be disappointed in this one." C. R. Sumner

+ Sat 37:41 O 30 '54 200w

CARROLL, JOHN BISSELL. Study of language; a survey of linguistics and related disciplines in America. 289p $4.75 Harvard univ. press

407 Language and languages 53-5067

"This book is concerned with the whole range of phenomena to which we ordinarily refer when we use such terms as language, speech, and communication. More specifically, it is concerned with those particular problems or aspects of language, speech, and communication which by reason of either their theoretical or their practical significance have become the central points of interest for certain groups of scientists, scholars, and educators." (Intro) Bibliography, Index.

"This book will be of great value to both linguistic analysts and workers in related fields. The former can, to a certain extent, find a 'mirror for linguistics' in Carroll's work, and can come to realize—in a way that many still fail to do—the broader implications of their work. The latter can learn the extent of the findings of linguistics, and how it bears on their particular problems. Both can profit from Carroll's view of the future and suggestions for specific projects. In short, this book is to be recommended most highly to anyone interested in the study of language." R. A. Hall

+ Am Anthropol 56:509 Je '54 500w

"Don't be misled by the apparent brevity of this fine book. It is small, but the type is also small—and the content is rugged. It is a help for all scholars, repeat scholars, interested in the behavioral sciences, as well as for communication engineers and linguists." Walter Coutu

+ Am Soc R 19:508 Ag '54 300w

Reviewed by S. Lambert

Canadian Forum 34:70 Je '54 60w

"The book is almost uniformly excellent, particularly in its wide knowledge of the literature and researches of individual scholars."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:50 Mr '54 160w

CARROLL, LEWIS, pseud. (CHARLES LUTWIDGE DODGSON). Diaries; now first edited and supplemented by Roger Lancelyn Green. 2v 604p il $7.50 Oxford

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-8453

"These volumes give us Charles Dodgson's account of his whole life from his becoming a fellow of Christ Church at the age of 23 until his death at the age of 65, with the exception of part of the summer of 1867 (when he visited Russia), the last three months of '55 and the years of '58 to mid-'62 (the journals for which are lost)." N Y Times

"Dodgson did not write his diaries with a view to publication. It is probable that most readers will not find them a book to read straight through. Read for five minutes to half-an-hour at a time, kept as a bedside or bedside book, they will provide much pleasure, besides presenting a living picture of an entertaining, interesting, and intensely likeable Victorian Englishman." P. J. Henniker-Heaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 1 '54 850w

"Mr Green seems to have made an admirable job of his editing, and the only quarrel with his incorporation of so many notes in the text is that square brackets within square brackets, in addition to Dodgson's own round ones, tends to confuse the eye a little. Yet it has the charm of being itself a somewhat Carrollish device." Norman Shrapnel

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 F 1 '54 850w

"It looks very much as if the publication of these diaries would put an end to the increasing tendency to indulge in dark suspicions when discussing either Carroll's life or work. At least all suspicions seem destined to remain no more than suspicions. His life was nothing worse than innocently fussy and, to all appearances, happier than most Victorian lives commonly were or most contemporary lives commonly are. Bernard Shaw once remarked that if you can't get rid of a skeleton in the closet the best thing to do is to make it dance. That is precisely what Dodgson-Carroll did." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 178:262 Mr 27 '54 1350w

"The reader of Lewis Carroll's Diaries will find nothing not already in Collingwood's Life—the only full-length biographer to have seen them up to now—and the reason why they have not appeared before is that no one was interested in them. The fact is that Carroll was a dull diarist. . . What is now published is informative only in a negative way and leaves the mystery of Lewis Carroll, if there is a mystery, exactly as it is." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman 3 Nation 47:259 F 27 '54 2400w

CARROLL, LEWIS—Continued

"Without Mr. Green's editing, the diaries would be dull indeed. He has identified every name mentioned in them, frequently with anecdotes, drawn from the reminiscences of contemporaries, that are more interesting than the text they illustrate." Delancey Ferguson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 4 '54 950w

"To be frank, I think only the most devoted Lewis Carroll fans will be able to get through them for, considered simply as a diary, it is probably the dullest ever published. Roger Green has done his best, by adding explanatory comments, quotations from letters, reminiscences by others and seventeen of Dodgson's magnificent portrait photographs: this editorial material is inserted into the original text in the same size of type, separated from it only by brackets which one frequently overlooks, but, since it is usually more interesting than the text, this procedure seems to me justified." W. H. Auden
+ — N Y Times p4 F 28 '54 1500w

New Yorker 30:128 Mr 20 '54 280w

"A set of duller diaries can scarcely be imagined. But if you are a Carrollian, reading them will be like entering a turnstile into a well-remembered lane where you capture again a sense of youth and joyousness." Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 28 '54 700w

"Despite a few gaps in the record, most of them satisfactorily filled by his devoted and capable editor, these private journals answer nearly all the questions one is likely to want to raise about Lewis Carroll. The author of 'Alice' emerges from an era of large families as the undisputed Dean of Victorian Uncles." Carlos Baker
Sat R 37:31 My 1 '54 700w

"There is no fresh clue to the genesis of Alice, no sign of a literary influence or a satiric intention. Dodgson mentions his writing in the same tone as 'a little solid geometry in the morning'. . . In his industrious efforts to fill up gaps Mr. Green has occasionally crowded in too many names and a few obvious explanations; it seems a pity that he has left out prayers, 'outpourings and self-accusations,' because all this is part of Dodgson." Margaret Crosland
+ — Spec p187 F 12 '54 750w

Time 63:98 Mr 29 '54 1300w

"As a human document, as a supplement to knowledge about the Alice books or to our understanding of academic life in nineteenth-century Oxford, the diary is scarcely worthy of the patience and scholarship bestowed on it by the editor. . . While this much must be said, it is nevertheless true that the owners of the diary—Carroll's nieces—were right to publish." Times [London] Lit Sup p136 F 26 '54 1450w

CARROLL, MRS RUTH (ROBINSON), and CARROLL, LATROBE. Tough Enough [il. by Ruth Carroll]. [60p] $2.75 Oxford

Dogs—Legends and stories 54-12073

Picture story book about Tough Enough, a lively puppy belonging to a little boy called Beanie. Tough Enough got into so much mischief that he was in danger of being punished, until the day when he saved Beanie and his friend Annie Mae. For grades two to four.

Booklist 51:20 S 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 150w

"A good story and with fine pictures. . . There are some thrilling moments in this book which will richly satisfy any small boy or girl between the ages of seven and ten." R. E. Donlon
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

Commonweal 61:204 N 19 '54 20w

"Although there is nothing original about the plot, the book is to be recommended for the warmth and liveliness of the story and the fine bookmaking with its attractive and appropriate gray-green illustrations." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:329 O '54 120w

Kirkus 22:529 Ag 15 '54 80w

"This title, plus the irresistible dog portrait on the cover, and the wealth of pictures within, over, around and through the text—busy big scenes, quiet mountain scenes, lots of active animals—will prove alluring." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 19 '54 230w

"This is a tale that grows on rereading. The many illustrations, done in the smoky blues of mountain moods, enable young children to follow the story in pictures. The prose reads aloud well, and lyrical descriptions of the setting give the story a substance that even fifth and sixth-graders will recognize." Rose Friedman
+ N Y Times p44 O 17 '54 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 14 '54 60w

CARSON, GERALD. Old country store. 330p il $5 Oxford

658,874 Country stores. U.S.—Social life and customs 54-5290

"A fascinating history of the civilizing influence of the American country store and of the place of the merchant, drummer, and traveling salesman in the American community from 1790 to the 1920's. Combining sociological and historical research with folklore and humor, the author has compiled a delightful treasury of merchandising lore which will evoke nostalgic memories in a generation familiar with the country store as the center of community life." Booklist

"General analysis is not the author's purpose; instead of offering dates, statistics, and summarized facts, he attempts to convey a sense of the sight and smell of goods on the storekeeper's shelf, and he lingers fascinated over the sharp trading which kept his subjects solvent. The Old Country Store is thus an impressionistic, though generally accurate, sketch, rather than a documented chapter in the record of the merchandising revolution in the United States." R. A. Lively
Am Hist R 60:198 O '54 320w

Booklist 50:313 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:215 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by R. D. Cahn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 23 '54 410w

"The old country store is part of the Eden of many mature Americans, and they will be especially grateful to Mr. Carson for his admirable recreation of a beloved institution. This book is a winsome addition to our social history. In both thoroughness and interest, it is a model of what such a study should be." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ap 15 '54 1000w

"The humor of this book is infectious. . . This informal history of the country store should provide unmitigated pleasure for all sorts of readers. The 'old fogey' will enjoy it as a spectacle of a vanished life to which he himself may, in some measure, have been a witness." John Cournos
+ Commonweal 60:125 My 7 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:218 Mr 15 '54 150w

"From the picture of the cracker barrels and huge hand coffee grinder which comprises the frontispiece, to 'Zanzibars' in the index, this is a book not to be missed! . . . The bibliography included as well as the list of acknowledgments indicate the careful research work which preceded the writing of this delightful book." R. L. Vormelker
+ Library J 79:1404 Ag '54 290w

"Taking his cue from the village store as the center of sociability and story-swapping, the author has written a homely chronicle full of bursting with anecdote and folk-say. Two chapters, Sittin' Round the Old Store Stove, with its tall tales and weather wisdom, and

One for a Man, Two for a Horse, with its patent and folk medicine, are pure folklore. The strength of the book, however, lies in the way in which Mr. Carson balances folklore with history, comparing folk with historical data and versions." B. A. Botkin

+ Nation 178:364 Ap 24 '54 850w

"Mr. Carson's book, as its title indicates, is a threnody, a fondly composed epitaph for the old-time, small-town general store. His memorial is tender, perceptive and, moreover, is so deftly written that none of the truly stupendous amount of information he presents ever clogs or delays the easy flow of his story. My sole objection, which is exceedingly trivial compared to my enthusiasm for 'The Old Country Store' is that the obituary is slightly premature." F. F. Van de Water

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 18 '54 1100w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p7 Ap 18 '54 950w

"This unusual book is not, as its title almost inescapably suggests, another nostalgic reconstruction of the spit-and-whittle forum. It is, rather, a lively but sure-footed socio-historical study, the first of any consequence that we have had, of a uniquely American commercial phenomenon."

+ New Yorker 30:120 My 1 '54 160w

"Mr. Carson is a digger; he has gone to sources and got the facts rebuilding his picture of the country store as the scientist puts together a dinosaur from a handful of miscellaneous bones. His portrait is a labor of love, too. The country store is gone, never to return, but here the author reconstructs it beautifully, with affection and understanding in every line of his narrative." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '54 650w

"We need more books like this, and we need this one urgently." C. M. Wilson

+ Sat R 37:26 My 1 '54 950w

"Entertaining and informative, the volume will appeal to all students of the American past, and, in particular, to those readers who lived through the era of the country store's greatness."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:171 Je '54 200w

CARSON, ROBERT. Quality of mercy. 307p $3.50 Holt

54-5443

Tho in plot and action a detective story, this is also a study of two characters—the man who is hunted, and the man, a private detective employed by an insurance company, who hunts him down.

"This story of detection is realistically presented, constantly engrossing, and powerfully climactic." Warren Beck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 16 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:209 Mr 15 '54 140w

"Mr. Carson tells a tolerably good story very well indeed. . . . And all his characters—with the possible exception of Smith, the putative murderer—are convincingly, and engagingly alive." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 11 '54 450w

"Mr. Carson has written a smooth, cinematic novel, full of bluff and fascinatingly evil protagonists. Addicts of the genre owe him a debt of gratitude." Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p12 My 30 '54 350w

"A word of praise ought to be said for the realistic impact of the story. Its details, sometimes repetitious, have a kind of newspaper immediacy. Its police interrogatories are especially vivid. Commendable, too, is Mr. Carson's non-glamorous representation of the activities of a private investigator. The love story seems forced to this reader, but it is not fundamental (though love is, obviously) to the central content of this grimly entertaining novel." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 37:37 Je 12 '54 600w

CARSTEN, FRANCIS LUDWIG. Origins of Prussia. 309p $4.80 Oxford

943 Prussia—History

[A54-4860]

"In spite of all that has been written in the last fifteen years about 'Prussianism,' its causes and consequences, [this] is the first thoroughgoing attempt in the English language to disentangle the roots of the peculiar Prussian political structure which became a dominant factor in European politics in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The problem is both sociological and historical; and Mr Carsten rightly spares us the numbing detail of German political history in order to concentrate on the shifting class relationships between the fifteenth and seventeenth centuries which placed the Junkers in the saddle." Manchester Guardian

"This is a close scholarly study that leaves the reader divided between regret at the dryness of its report and the gratitude it inspires for its clarification of the development in the main socio-political areas of early Brandenburg-Prussia." Ferdinand Schevill

+ — Am Hist R 60:95 O '54 490w

"A story which, for all its careful collation of fact, is intensely interesting." Geoffrey Barraclough

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 23 '54 550w

"Dr. Carsten has written, largely from original sources, and with a detachment that would have delighted Ranke as much as it would have puzzled Droysen, a book which will be of permanent value to historical students, the more especially since it is the only one in any language to cover the whole of this rather intractable but not unrewarding field." L. A. M.

+ Spec p629 My 21 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p259 Ap 23 '54 1200w

CARSTENS, GRACE. Born a Yankee. 250p $3 Macmillan (N Y)

53-13540

Kate Fyfe, last of a long line of native Cape Codders is the heroine. Her father, who was old when she was born, had hoped for a son to continue the name and inherit the museum-like Fyfe house. So the burden fell on Kate and for years she accepted her fate and acted the part of the family drudge. When she was thirty-four and thought she saw the last of her three suitors slipping away, Kate finally declared her freedom.

Booklist 50:193; 204 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:132 Mr '54 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:154 My '54 180w

"Cape Cod novels are a dime a dozen these days. But here is one that stands well above the general run. Mrs. Carstens, who obviously has profited from her 17 summers on the cape, has written a delightful and decidedly amusing book in which she has succeeded in catching the character of both the natives and the summer visitors. Perhaps neither of these groups will be exactly happy with their portraits, because she does not hesitate to use acid in her etching, but each will think the other group admirably and fairly portrayed." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 14 '54 370w

"An engrossing, tightly told story with a fine feeling for regional character."

+ Kirkus 21:795 D 15 '53 240w

"The author shows a freshness of style and a flair for describing landscapes, but these virtues are hardly enough basis for recommending the book." Shirley Barker

+ Library J 79:204 F 1 '54 100w

"Born a Yankee" is a remarkable first novel and an unusually good novel in any group in both the pungency and interest of the story and the skill of the telling. People who knew New England and in particular Cape Cod will delight especially in Mrs. Carstens' vivid descriptions and her acute and humorous observations. And practically every one, I believe, will be amused." Mary Ross

CARSTENS, GRACE—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 14 '54 550w

"Although Kate tells her story herself, there can be no doubt but that this is Beniah's book. He roars his way through it, preposterous and horrifying to the end. Lovers of Cape Cod will probably never feel the same toward it after reading 'Born a Yankee.' Miss Carstens has thrown a pretty grim pall over its shores in telling her tale of frustration and wasted years." J. P. Quehl

N Y Times p26 F 14 '54 500w

New Yorker 30:125 Mr 20 '54 80w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 180w

CARTER, EVERETT. Howells and the age of realism. 307p $5 Lippincott

813 Howells, William Dean. Realism in literature 54-6101

The purpose and theme of this work is stated in the Prologue as follows: "This is the history of the growth of sensibility of a man and of an age, and part of the biography of ourselves. It is the story of the growth of the mind of William Dean Howells; but this writer, even more than most writers, was made by and helped to make his age. And his age happens to be the age when much of the complexity of modern America was born."

Booklist 51:102 N 1 '54

"The scholarly Everett Carter makes out a perfectly plausible case for naming the era in which Howells dominated the American literary scene as the Age of Howells. He is less persuasive, however, in presenting Howells as having other than historical meaning for the present generation." John Cournos

+ — Commonweal 61:230 N 26 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:426 J1 1 '54 210w

"With this book Everett Carter, Assistant Professor of English at the University of California, establishes himself among our more talented young literary historians and critics. He has given us a clear and sensitive study of one of the most admirable figures in our literature—William Dean Howells. . . The book as a whole is written in a perhaps overbrisk style, but there is a commendable clarity throughout, and an unusual sustaining of interest. Perhaps this is because Mr. Carter is careful at each stage to define his critical terms. Few critics have shown such courtesy to their readers." Leon Edel

+ N Y Times p4 N 14 '54 800w

"Mr. Carter writes lucidly. His book is stimulating and swarming with ideas." Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 28 '54 140w

"One cannot always be sure whether Mr. Carter writes from a genuine passion for his subject or from an academic concern to 'cover' a subject. For while his 'Howells and the Age of Realism' has all the minor virtues, being sensible, careful, and compact, it is so organized as to be hopelessly academic." Irving Howe

+ — Sat R 37:28 O 23 '54 1400w

CASE, LYNN MARSHALL. French opinion on war and diplomacy during the Second empire. 339p $6 Univ. of Pa. press

940.28 France—History—Second empire, 1852-1870. Public opinion—France 54-5009

"Napoleon III was extremely sensitive to public opinion and had his own version of a Gallup poll in the form of regular reports from the prefects and procureurs généraux. These reports, as well as other manifestations of public feeling, were carefully studied and consulted before important decisions were made. . . Professor Case gives an impressive list of instances in which public opinion decisively influenced the actions of Napoleon III." Am Hist R

"Professor Case writes in a judicious and scholarly fashion, is fully aware of the limitations of the sources available, and does not attempt to draw unwarranted conclusions. Moreover, he has uncovered much new material and is able to correct many older views of the diplomacy of the Second Empire." Melvin Kranzberg

+ Am Hist R 59:922 J1 '54 550w

"Professor Case feels that in matters of foreign policy both then and now, the men at the top are usually more competent and far-sighted than the masses; that in such matters, 'Jacques and his fellow compatriots . . . can only help in making blunders.' Whether or not this rather pessimistic view is justified, Mr. Case's book deserves to be praised—and, better still, to be read. It is a valuable addition to the scholarly literature on the Second Empire." Gordon Wright

+ Ann Am Acad 295:198 S '54 400w

"Although the author has not digested the whole formidable mass of documentation, he has sampled it extensively and thoroughly enough to render his findings convincing. With the exception of the Mexican affair, all of the momentous problems of French foreign policy which arose during the years 1853-70 are dealt with here. This is a most valuable work for the specialist in the field."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:162 Je '54 400w

CASELL'S encyclopaedia of world literature; ed. by S. H. Steinberg. 2v 2,086p $25 Funk

803 Literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. Authors 54-1255

"The work consists of three parts. Part One contains histories of the literatures of the world 'from oral traditions and first records down to the latest trends.' . . Part Two comprises biographies and (more or less selected) bibliographies of the world's writers down to 1900, Part Three those of twentieth-century authors." (Sat R) "First edition published in 1953 under title: Cassell's Encyclopaedia of Literature." (Library of Congress card)

"From the standpoint of anyone professionally concerned with literature [this is] this year's most welcome addition to the reference shelf." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:100 O '54 200w

"Valuable reference tool."

+ Bookmark 13:180 My '54 40w

Reviewed by J. B. Sheerin

Cath World 179:480 S '54 200w

"A new, large, good reference work is always welcome. Funk & Wagnalls have earned the gratitude of scholars and libraries by publishing, at a reasonable price, an excellent encyclopedic work on the literature of the world since the first records." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 2 '54 320w

Kirkus 22:285 Ap 15 '54 160w

"A literary reference work of great richness and variety; librarians will find a score of different uses for it. . . Some entries and exclusions seem a bit eccentric; Alfred Noyes is left out, but we get the New Zealander John Cawte Beaglehole, author of 'several histories of notable elegance and scholarship'; Kathleen Norris is here, but not Rumer Godden. . . Mark Van Doren is included, but not Carl; Stephen Benét is here, as of course he should be, but his brother William appears only as an appendage to Elinor Wylie. . . While it seems necessary to note these details, the reviewer is nevertheless lost in admiration at this compilation. . . These two thousand pages open up ten thousand attractive vistas, though many of them will be closed to all but a multilinguist. The Encyclopaedia will be immensely useful in all libraries which can afford to buy it." E. F. Walbridge

+ — Library J 79:1228 Je 15 '54 450w

"The contributors have been given a fairly free hand; the results are often refreshing."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 13 '53 140w

"It is a compilation as admirable as it is impressive, and it does, quite simply, take the whole of world-literature as its province. . . Its range of subject is remarkably complete, and for the most part, as far as one can tell from following one's own lines of interest, very adequately covered." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:799 D 19 '53 1000w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 18 '54 50w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p29 My 2 '54 240w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 8 '54 600w

"It is free from the national bias that usually warps the yardstick for 'importance' used in even the most well-meaning 'world' books. . . In short, here is a most valuable addition to the reference libraries of a great variety of people: teachers running into problems outside their own special field, students in search of source material, book reviewers and editors forced to meet deadlines, publishers and public-relations men (who may use Part Three as an excellent 'Who's Who') and, of course, librarians. But beyond all that these two volumes may prove to be for a good many 'readers' what I found them to be—a fascinating work in which to browse." Robert Pick

+ Sat R 37:38 Mr 20 '54 550w

"On the whole, this encyclopaedia is a worth-while book, proper in its method, valuable in its catholicity, but damaged by an uneven choice of contributors and a tendency towards jejune literary chit-chat." J. D. Scott

+ — Spec p765 D 25 '53 650w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 120w

"There is some question for whom this work is suitable. Generally speaking, the conciseness of the articles would make it less useful to scholars or specialists, but they might find the bibliographies helpful although incomplete. The immature student and the casual reader are more likely to find the articles sufficiently informative even though they may not be able to comprehend some of the obscure statements and unexplained terms. . . The publishers' claim that this encyclopaedia 'makes available to the student of comparative literature factual and critical matter for which recourse would otherwise have to be made to a large number of individual sources, both English and foreign' is substantiated by the evidence, even though the material is not always treated as thoroughly as in those other sources. Cassell's Encyclopaedia of World Literature is recommended for general reference use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:49 O '54 1900w

"This remarkable compendium is oecumenical. . . The New World has hardly been called on for more than its own output. This is surprising, and regrettable, in view of the prominence of American literary critics. . . The biographical section of this dictionary is valuable for its facts and especially for its bibliographies, but on the whole—there are many signal exceptions—literature is strangely to seek. It is only fair to add that 'literature' is liberally interpreted: in the modern section we find Einstein, Havelock Ellis, and Sir James Murray the lexicographer."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p674 O 23 '53 1150w

CASSIDY, CLAUDIA (MRS WILLIAM JOHN CRAWFORD). Europe—on the aisle. 231p $3.50 Random house

940 [914] Europe—Description and travel 54-5956

Narrative account of European travels and experiences. Author is the drama and music critic of the Chicago Tribune.

Booklist 50:318 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 14 '54 450w

Reviewed by Harvey Olson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 13 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

"A romp for the somewhat serious and informed music and drama audience veteran."

Kirkus 22:51 Ja 15 '54 180w

"Recommended for large theatre collections." George Freedley

Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 20w

"There is a thin thread of theatre-and-music interest running all through, but it boils down to a traveler's report on Europe that is only accented along those lines. Miss Cassidy is often in such places as Capri, Cannes, Monte Carlo, and Nice and talking precious little about theatre and music, principally, I would judge, because there is little of it to talk about right there. Her stays in those gentle areas are by no means lost and she does nice things with description." H. A. S.

+ Sat R 37:37 Jl 3 '54 250w

CASSIRER, ERNST. Platonic renaissance in England; tr. by James P. Pettegrove. 207p $3.50 Univ. of Tex. press

192 Cambridge Platonists 53-10835

A translation of Die Platonische Renaissance in England und die Schule von Cambridge published in Leipzig in 1932. It is an attempt "to understand the experience of religion by placing that experience in relation to the empiricism of the natural scientist. Cassirer sees in the work of the Cambridge Platonists a crucial attempt to free religion from theological dogmatism on the one side and a purely scientific approach to nature on the other." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"We must be grateful for so excellent a translation of a work which at first appeared in German sixteen years ago. But there is one grave defect in Cassirer's method. He spends far too much time in telling us who influenced the Cambridge Platonists and whom they influenced, far too little in telling us what they actually said. Cudworth at least was a philosopher of some acumen and his arguments on religious belief deserve a less scanty treatment than Cassirer gives them." A. C. MacIntyre

+ — Manchester Guardian p10 Mr 3 '54 170w

"Dr. Cassirer's learned, ill-written, comprehensive study goes further than his predecessors in setting the Latitude men in their historical place in the movement." Rose Macaulay

New Statesman & Nation 47:708 My 29 '54 1000w

"The Cambridge Platonists of the second half of the seventeenth century have hitherto been usually studied in isolation. It is the chief merit of the late Professor Cassirer's [book], now admirably translated by a former pupil, that it shows them in the development of European thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p205 Mr 26 '54 600w

CASTLE, JEFFERY LLOYD. Satellite E one. 223p $3 Dodd

54-11231

Science fiction.

"Would make a good Christmas present for an egg-headed schoolboy." Maurice Richardson

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:554 O 30 '54 80w

"In the hands of the adept, a cliché may turn into a surprising discovery. Jeffery Lloyd Castle has written a story of earth's first satellite with such integrity, accuracy, verve and lucidity as to invest tired extrapolations with the enchantment of reality." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p39 N 28 '54 200w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 12 '54 120w

CASTOR, HENRY. Theodore Roosevelt and the Rough Riders; il. by William Reusswig. (Landmark bks) 182p $1.50 Random house

973.89 Roosevelt, Theodore—Juvenile literature. U.S. Army. 1st cavalry (volunteer). U.S.—History—War of 1898 54-5160

"A rousing tale of the Spanish-American war in Cuba as experienced by the dynamic Teddy and his cavalry regiment." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) There is a school edition titled Teddy Roosevelt and the Rough Riders, published by E. M. Hale and Company, priced at $1.68.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 20w

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54 60w

"The author writes of T. R.'s Cuban expedition with a nice sense of historical proportion and a dry humor." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 28 '54 100w

"In the familiar format of the Landmark Series, a colorful picture of the United States of the late nineteenth century is presented in this brief account of Teddy Roosevelt and his part in the Spanish-American War. In a terse, epigrammatic style Mr. Castor weaves skillfully the politics, the slang, the economic and military life of a growing United States typified by that informal and oftentimes humorous organization the Rough Riders." N. R.

+ Sat R 37:86 N 13 '54 90w

CASTRO, AMERICO. Structure of Spanish history; tr. by Edmund L. King. 689p il $9 Princeton univ. press

946 Spain—History 53-10149

"This work is a revised, amended and extended version of Spain in Her History, published in Spanish in 1948. Castro is emphatic in stating that he has not written a history of Spain and her civilization or the psychology of the Spanish people. He has tried to show that for an understanding of Spain of 1500 and today (although practices differ today from those some 500 years ago, the spirit does not) one must realize what is authentically Hispanic in her culture." Library J

"The Structure of Spanish History is the kind of work that mature scholars produce, the summation of many years of study and thought by Américo Castro. A Spanish version (España en su historia, Buenos Aires, 1948) was published six years ago. The work now offered in translation is enlarged and strengthened and deserves to rank as the definitive edition." C. E. Nowell

+ Am Hist R 60:92 O '54 800w

"For the large public and university library." J. A. Borome

+ Library J 79:854 My 1 '54 210w

"It is a brilliant book, by a writer greedy for ideas and arguments, and quick to point them with crowds of facts and quotations from his enormous reading in Arabic, Hebrew and Spanish authors. If Dr. Castro repeats himself in the effusive tradition of the Spanish essayists, he is bursting with encyclopaedic vitality." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:548 O 30 '54 1150w

"The book has been written almost as a confession of faith and the author's passionate argumentation makes it very readable. . . Professor Castro has succeeded in compiling a detailed study of Spanish medieval thought, but his attempt to reevaluate the general significance of Spanish culture is rather one-sided." Bohdan Chudoba

+ — Sat R 37:15 Je 12 '54 750w

"Dr. Castro's study was widely recognized on its first appearance as a new and epoch-making approach to the understanding of Spain. To its original approach to the whole problem of historical understanding, and to an ever-deepening interest in 'the theoretical problem of history,' are due both the considerable expansion of the text and the change of title in the present version. The work is addressed now not only to the student of Spain but to the historian as historian, and Professor King has performed a most useful service in making it available to the English-speaking world, in a text marred less by the very occasional mistranslation than by the difficulty of turning a highly individual Spanish style, moving on a level of great intellectual subtlety, into equally sensitive English."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p655 O 15 '54 1450w

"The Structure of Spanish History' is an impressive work, full of original ideas and sound documentation, written with an authentic Iberian passion, in spite of its studious objectivity—only I cannot help admitting that I found the manner more Teutonic than Castilian, nearly always a bit ponderous and sometimes quite obscure. It is a work that not only bears rereading but indeed demands it." T. G. Bergin

+ — Yale R n s 44:133 autumn '54 650w

CASTRO, NESTOR. Handbook of window display. 194p il $8.50 Architectural bk.

659.15 Show windows 54-6398

"The author, a designer and teacher with wide experience, gives his instruction in perspective, lettering, color techniques, and window dressing and paper sculpture in an easy to follow manner. Use of display fixtures, backgrounds, lighting effects, papier-mâché, floor plans and elevations, is emphasized." Library J

"A practical book which will prove most helpful to beginners and experts alike." R. L. Vormelker

+ Library J 79:1317 Jl '54 80w

"Throughout, the author never forgets the fundamental point—that a display window and everything in it has just one purpose; to sell goods. His handbook is as practical a manual to that end as can be imagined." McA. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 28 '54 250w

CATTON, BRUCE. U. S. Grant and the American military tradition. (Library of American biography) 201p $3 Little

B or 92 Grant, Ulysses Simpson 54-6860

A straightforward, sympathetic biography of Grant, not neglecting his early and personal life story, but naturally concentrating on his services to his country as soldier and president.

Reviewed by K. P. Williams

Am Hist R 60:196 O '54 340w

Reviewed by Wood Gray

Ann Am Acad 296:177 N '54 300w

Booklist 50:339 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 50w

"A masterly and thought provoking biography, fully as good as 'A Stillness at Appomattox.'" B. P. Thomas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 18 '54 550w

"I have the impression that Mr. Catton wrote this sketch, not because he thought there was need for another book about Grant, but in order to write the last 60 pages, which deal with Grant as President." Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 71:552 My 5 '54 440w

Reviewed by Denham Sutcliffe

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 5 '54 550w

Current Hist 27:62 Jl '54 120w

"All in all, while frankly admiring, this biography strikes a happy balance in assessing both the soldier and the man. With the Lloyd Lewis' definitive biography unfinished, this fills a real need."

+ Kirkus 22:95 F 1 '54 300w

"As always Mr. Catton writes brilliantly and resourcefully—particularly so for the Civil War period; more details and historical estimates of Grant's activities during his two presidential terms would have been welcome." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:619 Ap 1 '54 90w

"Written simply yet eloquently, this book brings Grant to life, making plain both the scope of his military achievement and his tragic failure as President."

+ Nation 178:468 My 29 '54 330w

"Mr. Catton's efforts to soften Grant's fall from the pinnacle of military success to the depths of political failure are praiseworthy but not successful. He succeeds only in making him into a rather pathetic figure, strikingly like that one which came slumping back to Galena a few years earlier. His thesis is that the very qualities which made Grant a great general caused his ruin as President. Yet it is quite clear that if Grant possessed all the virtues and abilities ascribed to him as a person only a few pages back, some of them should have been apparent in civil life as well as in the army. It is quite clear that the study of this phase of Grant's life has not gone far enough when an era of flagrant corruption, of heartless reconstruction and aimless drift can be spoken of as only 'disappointing.'" Avery Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 30 '54 900w

"This is the first volume in a new series. The aim of the series is to provide brief, authentic, human interest sketches of key Americans and their times. In his portrait of Grant, Catton has launched the series with such a dazzling display of talent that those who follow him will be hard put to match his example." B. I. Wiley

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 25 '54 600w

Reviewed by T. H. Williams

+ Sat R 37:21 My 8 '54 850w

"Mr. Catton comes to this work fresh from his superb three-volume history of the Army of the Potomac, and displays here the same fluent style and penetrating thought that made the previous books outstanding contributions to an understanding of the Civil War." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54 700w

Wis Lib Bul 50:177 Jl '54

CAUDILL, REBECCA (MRS JAMES STERLING AYARS). House of the Fifers; decorations by Genia. 184p $2.75 Longmans

54-7564

Story of Monica, aged 15, and the summer she spent (at first against her wishes) on her uncle's farm in Kentucky.

Booklist 50:405 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 10w

"A fine picture of farm life and rich characterizations mark this excellent novel for older girls." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 11 '54 50w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p36 D '54

"A book enriched with a united family's sharing of happy experiences as well as disaster." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:183 Je '54 160w

Kirkus 22:64 F 1 '54 130w

"With an acceptable, standard plot and excellent characterization, this is recommended for school and public library collections." Anne Singleton

+ Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 60w

"Excellent, modern girls' book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 16 '54 250w

"The beneficial effects of a visit to the old home place is a theme not uncommon in junior novels, but Rebecca Caudill has brought to this story a lively sense of place and people that lifts it above the average." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p32 Je 6 '54 130w

Reviewed by Augusta Baker

Sat R 37:30 Jl 24 '54 140w

CAVANNA, BETTY. See Headley, E. C.

CECIL, LORD DAVID. Melbourne [Eng title: Lord M]. 3 pts in 1 450p il $5 Bobbs

B or 92 Melbourne, William Lamb, 2d viscount 54-9486

The first two parts of this biography were published in 1939 with title The Young Melbourne (Book Review Digest 1939). The present study brings the life story of this famous Victorian to his death in 1848. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 194:88 O '54 700w

Bookmark 14:3 O '54 30w

"Thruout, one feels the personality of the biographer, who writes with grace and clarity, who knows all and understands everyone, who is a comfortable Olympian, an altogether good companion." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 19 '54 550w

"It is a wonderful story and David Cecil tells it wonderfully well. The first two parts of the book were published in 1939 under the title 'The Young Melbourne,' a volume hailed as one of the masterpieces of biography. The story of Melbourne and Victoria thus is but a part of a fascinating study of a man and his times. It rounds out the picture that the author gave previously of the young Melbourne." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '54 850w

"The unexpected accession of the young Victoria, distrustful of her mother, lonely and dangerously earnest, made Melbourne her sole, prime, semi-paternal advisor. There was a romantic attachment. Platonic in its purity, sentimental in its simplicity, Elysian and engaging, it is beautifully and memorably described by Lord David Cecil." J. A. Lukacs

+ Commonweal 61:293 D 10 '54 950w

Reviewed by Roger Fulford

Manchester Guardian p12 O 8 '54 700w

"The high lights of the historical background are vividly painted; the subsidiary figures are sharply observed. . . Sympathetic as the portrayal is, it does not gloss over Melbourne's shortcomings."

+ Nation 179:410 N 6 '54 370w

Reviewed by C. G. Bolte

New Repub 131:19 O 25 '54 1750w

"The basis of a good biography is selection. Lord Melbourne sprawled through life with such apparent inconsequence that even his closest acquaintance found him unpredictable. Yet every reader, as he closes this book, will feel he knows the man through and through. That is the proof of Lord David Cecil's success. In his hands all the random threads are drawn dexterously together." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:476 O 16 '54 1000w

"Fifteen years ago, when the first half of this volume was published as 'The Young Melbourne,' one reviewer proclaimed it the best biography since Lytton Strachey's 'Queen Victoria.' Now that the work stands completed and may be judged as a whole the verdict is vindicated. 'Melbourne' will take its place as one of the best—perhaps as the best—life of a British statesman written in our time." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 19 '54 1150w

"Lord David Cecil's biography is both an admirable picture of the age and a well-balanced study of an odd and gifted character." Peter Quennell

+ N Y Times p7 S 19 '54 750w

"If conservative biography still remains the best hope for the future of the art, Lord Cecil's 'Melbourne' ranks as one of the best examples." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 10 '54 850w

CECIL, DAVID—Continued

"It is beautifully written; it is eminently readable; it is all one could reasonably ask for as a biography designed as a work of art."
George Dangerfield

+ — Sat R 37:21 O 9 '54 850w

Reviewed by J. G. Watson
Spec p625 N 19 '54 950w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54
700w

Time 64:128 O 11 '54 850w

CECIL, HENRY, pseud. (HENRY CECIL LEON). According to the evidence. 216p $2.50
Harper

54-8939

"A remarkably industrious English sex maniac, who has killed at least three young women, is captured, tried, and acquitted after the death of a fourth. When he does away with two more, however, a tough-minded ex-Commando decides to take matters into his own hands, and pushes the murderer over a cliff. He, too, is caught, and things look rather bleak for him at his trial until a defense adviser named Low, assisted by Colonel Brain confuses the jury to the point of imbecility." New Yorker

Bookmark 14:9 O '54

"Witty and enormously entertaining diversion." Drexel Drake
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54
20w

Kirkus 22:349 Je 1 '54 60w

"Here is an entirely enchanting piece of skulduggery by the legal Mr. Cecil, who has conceived it wryly, written it very brightly and made it as funny as it is unpredictable." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 8 '54
200w

"In According to the Evidence Henry Cecil has created an amoral comedy of murder and law to delight anyone who relishes the essays of Edgar Lustgarten, the Misleading Cases of A. P. Herbert, or the legalistic novels of Cyril Hare." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 1 '54 120w

"The moral is probably questionable, but Mr. Cecil tells his story with humor and tension."

+ New Yorker 30:68 J1 31 '54 110w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 15 '54

100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p469 J1 23 '54
160w

CEDER, GEORGIANA DORCAS (ANA DOR, pseud). Joel, the potter's son; il. by Helen Torrey. 95p $2 Abingdon

54-8446

Discontented 12 year-old Joel left his father's pottery shop in Cana to go to Jerusalem for Passover. There he met a boy from Nazareth. The story centers around the impact of this meeting with Jesus upon Joel.

Booklist 50:345 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 4 '54
180w

Commonweal 61:201 N 19 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:1 Ja 1 '54 120w

"This well-told story presents a good picture of Palestine. Format is attractive with appealing illustrations by Helen Torrey. Ages 9-12. Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:783 Ap 15 '54 70w

"Boys under twelve will find this absorbing. The theme of the potter's work is subtly handled."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 My 16
'54 140w

"An interesting approach to biblical history." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 1 '54 60w

CELINE, LOUIS FERDINAND, pseud. See Destouches, L. F.

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, ed. Encyclopedia of modern American humor; drawings by Doug Anderson. (Hanover House bk) 688p il $3.95 Doubleday

817.08 Humor. Short stories—Collections
54-11449

An anthology of humorous essays, parodies, poetry, scenes from comedy hits, short stories, anecdotes, and excerpts from novels, all of American derivation.

Booklist 51:170 D 15 '54

Reviewed by J. T. McCutcheon
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 28 '54
500w

Christian Century 71:1554 D 22 '54 100w

Reviewed by J. A. May
Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '54
230w

"The material is for the most part regionally and generically arranged, time has not staled its sparkle, and it's pleasant pickup reading which you may also find hard to put down."

+ Kirkus 22:653 S 15 '54 100w

"For public and college libraries." H. L. Leet

+ Library J 79:2205 N 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 D 5 '54
160w

"The Cerf reader is 'modern American humor' because its editor has 'violent distaste' for the early variety with its dependence on bad spelling and faulty grammar. So he excludes Artemus Ward and Petroleum V. Nasby, then includes such recent torturers of speech as Milt Gross and Roark Bradford. Mr. Cerf has done other funny things. He calls his collection 'an encyclopedia,' and it's no more encyclopedic than a Harlem River Division timetable. . . . The book may be heavy to lug around, but it's good bedside table. And if it's to remain in suburban guest rooms or physicians' waiting rooms, it'd better be chained down." S. T. Williamson

+ — N Y Times p3 N 21 '54 320w

"It's a very good time. I think, for just such a collection. As Mr. Cerf himself notes, Americans just haven't been laughing enough in the last few years, nor, as he shrewdly adds, at the right things. Mr. Cerf's 'Encyclopedia' should help remedy that situation, no two ways about it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 15 '54
550w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54
360w

CESBRON, GILBERT. Saints in hell; tr. from the French by John Russell. 312p $3.75 Doubleday

54-6246

A novel based on the lives of the worker priests of France. Father Pierre, whose story is traced here, was the son of a miner. He lived and worked among the poorest of the poor, struggling to save the souls of people, whose main efforts were bent on keeping alive.

Booklist 50:320 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 179:311 J1 '54 200w

"Despite its flat characters and simplified construction Saints in Hell is worth reading, for it is not dull, and it tells of a human situation and a contemporary problem that is of the greatest importance." Edwin Kennebeck

+ — Commonweal 60:301 Je 25 '54 600w

Kirkus 22:80 F 1 '54 220w

"A rare novel, beautifully written and extremely moving. Highly recommended." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 79:1058 Je 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 N 10 '53 240w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 46:648 N 21 '53 90w

"An unusual and illuminating insight into the condition of France." Edmund Fuller
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 11 '54 450w

"The story of one of these 'Catholic comandos' is reverently and beautifully told here by Gilbert Cesbron, a young French novelist who has written several prizewinners. . . . A soul on its way to martyrdom and sainthood is laid bare before us. The author goes about his task with utmost seriousness. No humor or real gaiety relieves his picture. Yet the gloom is mitigated by the love for mankind that emanates from Pierre and by the sense of comradeship and solidarity that he develops among his wretched flock. Cesbron's achievement is an inspiring portrait of a godly man sharing the lot of a suffering humanity." Laurent LeSage
+ Sat R 37:19 Ap 10 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 2 '54 260w

"The general effect is that of pious fiction and the characters, symptomatically, lack individual flavour. The problems of poverty are dealt with on a Christmas Carol level: all that is needed is a change of heart by the rich."

Times [London] Lit Sup p737 N 20 '53 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:180 Jl '54

CHABER, M. E., pseud. See Crossen, K. F.

CHADOURNE, MARC. Anahuac: tale of a Mexican journey [tr. by Jean Stewart]. 196p il $4 British bk. centre

972 [917.2] Mexico—Description and travel [54-13197]

Impressions of Mexico, especially the resurgence of its ancient culture, by a French novelist.

Booklist 51:128 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:3 O '54 20w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:1599 S 15 '54 70w

"One may have to go elsewhere for a more satisfyingly detailed picture of modern Mexico; but for a vivid impression of the rural Indian way of life, and for colourful descriptions of the country scene, M. Chadourne would be hard to improve on. Some good photographs are included." R. P.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 31 '54 120w

"M. Chadourne writes with vigour and has been well served by his translator, but he is never content to observe, he must interpret. This time he is interpreting Mexico. A large portion of his interpretation consists of sneers at the way the citizens of the United States choose to live, about which M. Chadourne patently knows little. The cumulative effect of M. Chadourne's running commentary on his own movement is to make one doubt if he really saw very much." Oswald Wynd

Spec p178 Ag 6 '54 100w

"By far the best part of the book is the last third, where the author gives an account of a journey into the little-visited country of the Mixtecas and of a trip to Yucatan. The immediacy of the description and the observation are far more revealing of the country than all the general comment that has gone before."

Times [London] Lit Sup p503 Ag 6 '54 600w

CHADWICK, NORA (KERSHAW) (MRS HECTOR MUNRO CHADWICK), ed. Studies in early British history, by H. M. Chadwick [and others]. 281p $6 Cambridge

942.01 Great Britain—History—Anglo-Saxon period, 449-1066 [54-2222]

"Studies by six Cambridge scholars concerned with life in fifth-century Britain. Three chapters, brought together from among the papers of the late Professor H. M. Chadwick, deal with the end of Roman Britain, with Vortigern, and with the foundation of the early British kingdoms. Professor K. H. Jackson writes on the British language during the period of the English settlements, Mrs Rachel Bromwich on the character of the early Welsh tradition, and Mr P. Hunter Blair on the Bernicians and their northern frontier. Mr Owen Chadwick deals with the evidence of church dedications in the early history of the Welsh Church, while Mrs Nora K. Chadwick discusses the intellectual contacts between Britain and Gaul in the fifth century." Manchester Guardian

"Frankly for the specialist. It consists of eight studies by six of England's most eminent scholars in the field." B. D. Lyon

+ Am Hist R 60:75 O '54 210w

"Valuable collection of studies. . . . This is a book which will be of interest to a wider circle than that of Celtic specialists, and to students of literature as well as to historians." F. E. H.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 4 '54 180w

"The eight essays in the volume all reflect the individual scholarship and the teaching of the late Professor H. M. Chadwick of Cambridge. . . . The volume as a whole forms a contribution to British history written from the British standpoint."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 S 17 '54 950w

CHALMERS, HENRY. World trade policies [the changing panorama, 1920-1953; a series of contemporary periodic surveys] foreword by J. B. Condliffe. 546p $7.50 Univ. of Calif. press

337 Commerce—History. Commercial policy 53-11236

"This book reproduces, largely in their original form, a series of periodic surveys (annual, except in two cases) of the foreign trade policies of the various nations from 1920 to 1953. The surveys, which in recent years have been published in the Foreign Commerce Weekly, deal with changes in tariffs, import restrictions, exchange controls, bulk purchasing and other aspects of the commercial policies of foreign countries. They reflect the wide and detailed knowledge that came to the author from his long tenure as chief of the foreign tariff division of the Department of Commerce." Ann Am Acad

"By having republished these extraordinary studies in book form the University of California Press has rendered a real service. They will provide invaluable reading for courses in foreign trade; they will be most helpful to the researcher seeking orientation in a vast field; and they ought to be a source of real enlightenment to anyone concerned with the trade policies of the nation—of whom there are many, to judge from the wide interest in the Randall Report." J. V. Spielmans

+ Am Econ R 44:683 S '54 750w

Reviewed by I. B. Kravis

Ann Am Acad 293:180 My '54 260w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:76 Mr '54 170w

CHAMBERLAIN, NARCISSA. Old rooms for new living; photographs by Samuel Chamberlain. 130p $4.50 Hastings house

747 House decoration 53-11684

"Being a collection of early American interiors, authentic in design, various in period, and suitable for today's living; this is a treasury of tradition for the home decorator." (Subtitle) The book is chiefly devoted to photographs by Samuel Chamberlain with explanatory captions and introductory text.

Bookmark 13:82 Ja '54 40w

"Whether you want to transform a barn, freshen up a flat, or just cope with a 'dissatisfied corner' or a 'problem nook,' Mrs. Chamberlain supplies a plethora of stunning ideas." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 270w

Kirkus 21:782 D 1 '53 160w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 31 '54 80w

CHAMBERLAIN, NEIL WOLVERTON. Social responsibility and strikes; assisted by Jane Metzger Schilling. (Yale labor and management center ser) 293p $4 Harper

331.892 Strikes and lockouts. Public opinion 53-8535

"Aiming to 'reorient the concept of social responsibility from the ethical and moral connotations with which it has been surcharged,' the author declares that the 'conception of social responsibility is dependent upon the existence of a correlative authority supplied with sanctions.' Thus he proceeds to examine the problem of public opinion and its influence on social responsibility in industrial relations." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"This volume represents an important contribution to the study of strike effects. Both in its method of analysis and in its effort to quantify, it marks a substantial advance over the mere listing of industries whose continued operation is thought vital enough to justify governmental intervention." Joel Seidman

+ Ann Am Acad 294:192 J1 '54 50w

"In the opinion of this reviewer, Professor Chamberlain's thoughtful contribution compass points us out of the morass of terminological indefiniteness toward the firmer ground of defined standards of the relationships of labor, management, and the public in an evolving, maturing society." Lyman Judson

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '54 600w

"An important scholarly work. . . Will interest the scholar or theoretician, not the practical man. Purchase for large labor collections or student use." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:457 Mr 1 '54 100w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:101 Mr '54 240w

CHAMBERLAIN, NEIL WOLVERTON, and SCHILLING, JANE METZGER. Impact of strikes; their social and economic costs. (Yale labor and management center ser) 257p $4 Harper

331.892 Strikes and lockouts 53-11958

"A second phase of the study of the effect of strikes on the public, by the Assistant Director of the Yale Labor and Management Center. A scale of 'urgency' has been worked out which is supposed to be a measure of the severity of the impact. Various types of strikes are analyzed and compared on this scale. Based on these comparisons the author concludes that the effects do not in most cases justify government intervention. However, he believes that more adequate guides are needed to determine the amount and kind of intervention and control." Library J

Reviewed by Jack London

Am Soc R 19:641 O '54 350w

Booklist 50:412 J1 '54

"A technical study of interest to students of labor problems, not to the general reader or the newcomer to the subject." D. K. Oko

Library J 79:988 My 15 '54 100w

"Although a first step in strike-impact theory, this study has major significance. The method—which provides a rough estimate of the impact of past strikes, but not of future strikes—needs refining. Its greatest value is to show the need for reexamination of the bases for present public strike policies." J. P. Goldberg

Pol Sci Q 69:612 D '54 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 13 '54 110w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel

Sat R 37:31 S 4 '54 290w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 120w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. Soft skies of France. 159p il $5 Hastings house

944 [914.4] France—Views 53-11683

About 150 photographs of France, with a brief introduction and short commentaries on the pictures. The foreword explains that the photographs were chosen from more than 5000 taken during the travels of three summers.

"Superb photographs. . . Mr. Chamberlain's photographs picture the sky and catch the ever shifting cloud formations which give French architecture its peculiar luster and, shall we say, incorporeality. Moreover, they seem actually to hint—right through their blacks and grays—the subtle color of French sky and air, field and stone." Neil Martin

+ Christian Science Monitor D 3 '53 370w

Kirkus 21:708 O 15 '53 130w

Reviewed by William Murray

Sat R 36:52 Ja 2 '54 30w

"Mr. Chamberlain has the artist's instinct for what will make a good picture, and what won't and this is probably his masterpiece, so far." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C D 6 '53 200w

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. Beyond containment. 406p $5 Regnery

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. Russia—Foreign policy 53-9618

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by W. G. Carleton

Am Pol Sci R 48:586 Je '54 650w

Reviewed by E. D. Graper

Ann Am Acad 293:164 My '54 400w

"A very readable and illuminating piece of analysis." F. H. U.

+ Canadian Forum 32:256 F '54 200w

Current Hist 26:378 Je '54 100w

"A somewhat uneven review of the causes and gradual development of the 'cold war,' including the first two months of the post-Stalin period. The author presents forceful reasons for looking 'beyond containment,' but is cautious in offering suggestions as to the proper alternative policy to follow."

Foreign Affairs 32:331 Ja '54 40w

"An effort that does little credit to a noted observer of some twenty years ago and that illustrates again what has been happening in recent years to one wing of American journalism."

— Nation 178:115 F 6 '54 250w

"The book's argument is based quite as much on a cavalier disregard of the entire factual record of these years as it is on impassioned and transparent prejudices." Sidney Heitman

— Pol Sci Q 69:157 Mr '54 500w

CHAMBLISS, ROLLIN. Social thought; from Hammurabi to Comte. 469p $5 Dryden

301 Sociology—History 54-10267

"Intended primarily as a textbook for college students, this volume attempts to survey the significant statements found in ancient cultures and in classical Eastern and Western philosophy concerning social organization and values. The criterion of selection has been that of isolating cultures, philosophers, and doctrines which have had recognizable significance in later, especially modern, history." Ethics

"Offered primarily as a textbook in the history of social thought this volume is a welcome addition to the literature. Rather than attempt to cover all men and times, Professor Chambliss has selected a few thinkers and periods that to him are among the more important and has made a reasonably full presentation of the background and ideas of each." J. M. Foskett

+ Am Soc R 19:314 D '54 380w

"The exposition is direct, simple, and easily manageable by college students, although perhaps the tendency throughout the book is to simplify too much. . . The book aims merely at providing an initial acquaintance with social thought; and the author has accomplished this modest aim." J. A. Torres

+ Ethics 65:74 O '54 140w

CHANDLER, ANNA CURTIS. Story-lives of master artists; with twenty-three reproductions from paintings. 1953 ed 256p $3.75 Lip-pincott

927 Artists—Juvenile literature 53-5426

"The publisher states that from her previous books Story-lives of Master Artists, first and second series, the author has selected for the present volume the 20 biographies which have proved to be favorites with boys and girls. Partial contents: Filippi Lippi; Leonardo da Vinci; Dürer; Reubens; Frans Hals; Anthony van Dyck; Velazquez; Vermeer; Gainsborough and Reynolds; Stuart; Corot; Millet; Whistler; Homer; Abbey. Grades 6-9." Booklist

Booklist 50:190 Ja 1 '54

"The use of the book is somewhat limited because the stories appeal to children in the 9-12 group, but it is not intended to be read by children so young. The vocabulary is too advanced and the format of the book is visually uninteresting to children. To be most effective it should be read aloud, preferably enriched by various visual aids."

Horn Bk 30:353 O '54 220w

"Both pictures and arrangement seem to me not as good as in the old edition. For libraries that don't have the old edition." Phyllis Fenner

Library J 79:150 Ja 15 '54 50w

Sat R 37:53 F 13 '54 20w

CHANDLER, RAYMOND. Long goodbye. 316p $3 Houghton

Detective story.

54-5278

"The Long Goodbye has not quite the same sparkle and bounce as Chandler's early novels, not quite the same profusion of similes that pucker the senses like an electric shock. But the somewhat quieter plotting makes for a more thoughtful tone, a deeper cut. I think that Mr. Chandler's fans will get their money's worth." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:82 My '54 480w

"Chandler, a literary roughneck, is probably the most polished exponent of this form of highbrow-lowbrow entertainment and has few equals if many imitators."

Kirkus 22:17 Ja 1 '54 90w

"In The Long Good-Bye there is one jarring note of sentimentality; but Mr. Chandler's language has lost none of its impetus, the rhythm of his prose is superb, and the intensity of feeling he packs into his pages makes every other thriller-writer look utterly silly and superficial." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman ■ Nation 47:47 Ja ■ '54 180w

"This is Mr. Chandler's longest novel to date, one of his most meticulously plotted and by some stretches his most corrosive. What he gives us here is painful if exciting pleasure." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 4 '54 270w

"Perhaps the longest private-eye novel ever written (over 125,000 words!), it is also one of the best—and may well attract readers who normally shun even the leaders in the field." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 25 '54 200w

"The author's mannerisms have seldom been more pronounced; the story which has to do with nymphomania in exalted circles as much as anything else, hardly seems worth all the bother."

— New Yorker 30:135 Mr 27 '54 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 9 '54 50w

"Usual excellent job by classic performer; perhaps his best." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 Ap 24 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p7C Mr 28 '54 450w

Time 63:98 Mr 29 '54 250w

"Mr. Chandler is such an admirable storyteller, with such powers of making his scenes and situations palpable, that it is easy to overlook much that is improbable in their contrivance. In this book there are signs of strain when for instance, he tries to explain just why a person who committed a murder should employ the very detective who is committed to solving it and there are other matters which take a good deal of believing. But the illusion is still strong and the old mixture of realism and convention has lost little of its potency."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 1 '54 300w

Wis Lib Bul 50:136 My '54

CHAPMAN, EDWARD ARNOLD. Eddie Chapman story [told to] Frank Owen [with some further facts censored by the War office and reconstructed by George Voigt]. 242p $3.50 Messner

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Secret service 54-10582

"Eddie, a safecracker in very bad odor with British authorities, fooled the German Intelligence during the war by pretending to help them, while doing a wonderful job for the British; but when he wanted to publish his full memoirs, the War Office said 'no.' Now, patched up by George Voigt, the full account is published here." Library J

"Frank Owen, an English newspaper man, has written this first person story for Chapman. It is as fantastic as any spy thriller to come out since the war." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 31 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:556 Ag 15 '54 210w

"Since this is first-person Chapman, one may observe that he writes pleasantly, though with a cultural background controverting this reviewer's stereotype of a safecracker. . . Eddie has fun eating and drinking and pretending, and so will the reader—to a degree." Karl Brown

Library J 79:1500 S 1 '54 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 1 '53 150w

Reviewed by Peter Blake

N Y Times p43 N 14 '54 700w

CHAPMAN, FREDERICK SPENCER. Living dangerously. 253p il $3 Harper

B or 92 Adventure and adventurers

54-6009

A British adventurer, soldier, and explorer, describes some of his experiences: hunting in Greenland and Lapland; mountain climbing in Tibet; and as a saboteur behind the Japanese lines in Malaya. Index.

Booklist 50:338 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 18 '54 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

"These reminiscences, sometimes small in scope, sometimes spectacular, make pleasant reading."

+ Kirkus 22:57 Ja 15 '54 250w

"Somewhat stolid." W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:631 Ap 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Anthony Smith

Manchester Guardian p4 F 27 '53 190w

Reviewed by Ralph Chapman

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 4 '54 450w

"Those who prefer to live their lives dangerously in armchairs will take the book to their hearts." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 25 '54 700w

Reviewed by Richard Garnett

Spec p287 Mr 6 '53 750w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:131 My '54

CHARLOT, GASTON. Qualitative inorganic analysis; a new physico-chemical approach; authorized translation from the manuscript of the 4th French edition by R. C. Murray. 354p il $7 Wiley

544 Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative [54-11798]

"Tells how the teaching and practice of qualitative analysis can be put on an entirely new basis by concentrating all the methods which modern physical chemistry and quantitative analysis, especially colorimetric analysis, make available." Chem & Eng N

Chem ■ Eng N 32:2991 J1 26 '54 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:67 S '54

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. Saint in Europe. 191p $2.75 Doubleday

53-11654

Seven short stories about the Saint's adventures in various parts of Europe.

Kirkus 21:683 O 1 '53 60w

"An odd lot, familiar and pretty tired." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 D 13 '53 40w

"Once again the Saint happily hijacks boodle from the ungodly; and if he occasionally shows an unexpected tenderness toward a possible victim, it is for his reasons and not society's. It's all wild and exuberant fun. One hopes it presages a full-length Saint novel in the near future." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 D 27 '53 200w

"In several cases he is so blasted noble you can hardly stand it. Of course he's still incredibly handsome and wily—but the glory's departed." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ja 17 '54 70w

"He's as flip as ever." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 36:33 D 19 '53 20w

CHASE, EDNA WOOLMAN (ALLOWAY) (MRS RICHARD NEWTON), and CHASE, ILKA. Always in Vogue. 381p il $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Vogue (periodical) 54-10774

For nearly sixty years Edna Woolman Chase was on the staff of Vogue, most of the time as editor-in-chief. In her autobiography she describes her experiences here and abroad, and the changes which the years have brought in the editorial policy of Vogue; and illustrates the record with many photographs and drawings. The author's daughter, Ilka Chase, has helped her mother in the writing of the book.

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:55 D '54 30w

Reviewed by Eleanor Page
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 24 '54 300w

Reviewed by Kathleen Cannell
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 18 '54 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

Kirkus 22:568 Ag 15 '54 240w

"This success story has depth and appeal and will be read quite generally by the many who have always known Vogue but may have been unaware that Edna Woolman Chase has guided it through fifty-nine exciting years. The style is as gay as Vogue, itself." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 79:2100 N 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by Margaret Lane
New Statesman & Nation 48:664 N 20 '54 750w

"The approach here is just right, the authors having checked and balanced one another. . . . As a production, the book is the smooth professional job you would expect from its distinguished source." E. H. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 24 '54 750w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
+ N Y Times p22 O 31 '54 900w
New Yorker 30:221 N 20 '54 180w

"The young aspirant to the world of fashion as a career will find sound advice. And any woman, whatever her income, will be the better dressed for pondering Mrs. Chase's thirteen rules for smartness. The book has much to offer in many directions, but the clear and lasting impression is the portrait of an important and invincible woman." Agnes Rogers

+ Sat R 37:22 O 30 '54 1050w

"Partly written by the author's daughter Ilka, herself a successful writer and broadcaster, this fascinating story tells how the vision of a promised land where international fashion, presided over by good taste, would reign supreme, has come to pass."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p707 N 5 '54 420w

CHASE, JAMES HADLEY, pseud. See Raymond, R.

CHASE, MARY ELLEN. White gate; adventures in the imagination of a child; decorations by Nora S. Unwin. 185p $3 Norton

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Maine—Social life and customs 54-12828

Essays in which the author records her memories of three years of her childhood on the coast of Maine. The time of the recollections is the end of the last century.

Booklist 51:102 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:55 D '54 40w

"She has written about her childhood lovingly and with a sense of beauty and the reader will want to return to the book again and again." Walter Harding
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 7 '54 250w

"Many a kernel of wisdom may be found in this book that could help with a child's necessary home education." R. E. Donlon
+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 11 '54 600w

"For general purchase. Certainly this must be included in all collections for beginning writers." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1885 O 15 '54 130w

"Writing with quiet humor and a fine clarity and exactness, Miss Chase conjures up a shimmering and affectionate picture of a pattern of existence whose like we shall not see again. In doing so, she arouses in us a nostalgia equal to her own, and the suspicion that the very simplicity of that pattern, and its closeness to the basic stuff of life, must have made it far more nourishing to a child's imagination than the cluttered and complicated patterns of today." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 7 '54 650w

"In smooth, seemingly effortless prose that comes only from hard work, Miss Chase recaptures a world that no longer is." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p5 N 7 '54 700w

"A short and quite lovely book. The tone is nostalgic, lyric, and generally joyous, but the warmth and color of the memories are combined with an earthy, and even harsh reality."

+ New Yorker 30:225 N 20 '54 80w

"To create a nostalgic mood is relatively easy, but to bring back the whole magic of childhood is much more difficult. Miss Chase does this, and the fact that she does is the reason why 'The White Gate' will find so many friendly readers." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 24 '54 600w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 330w

CHASE, SALMON PORTLAND. Inside Lincoln's cabinet [his] Civil war diaries; ed. by David Donald. 342p $6.50 Longmans

973.71 Lincoln, Abraham. U.S.—History—Civil war 54-7475

President Lincoln's Secretary of the Treasury kept a diary of his years in office. The excerpts here recorded cover the period from December 9, 1861 to May 1, 1865. They contain glimpses of the problems, frictions, and opposing opinions of the personnel around Lincoln during the Civil war, and give a picture of an upright but very grave man. Index.

"A penetrating, forty-five page assessment of Chase serves as the introduction to the volume. It makes no pretense of adding anything new to the Chase saga, but it is concise, comprehensive, and balanced." C. R. Wilson
+ Am Hist R 60:130 O '54 550w

"The serious, unemotional, and impersonal style is apt to relegate this book more to student use than to general reading, although the reader with a strong interest in the period may find this of considerable value."

+ Booklist 50:289; 357 Ap 1 '54; My 15 '54

Reviewed by R. P. Basler

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 4 '54 500w

"The Chase diaries are a revealing self-portrayal by Lincoln's Secretary of the Treasury, Salmon Portland Chase. David Donald has produced a good volume with these diaries and his added Introduction, running comment and footnotes. The diaries might well be called an unintentional confession of frustration produced by obsessive ambition." R. G. Lindstrom

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 3 '54 450w

"A good reference book for scholars."

+ Kirkus 22:149 F 15 '54 130w

"Of major importance for American history collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:619 Ap 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by D. C. Mearns

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 30 '54 650w

"In this book the diaries become available again, this time in their entirety, in an authentic text, with practically every person who is mentioned in them adequately identified and with obscure passages clarified by the editor's explanations. In fact, the alchemy of David Donald's editing gives this book merit beyond that of the diaries themselves." B. P. Thomas

N Y Times p3 My 30 '54 800w

Reviewed by R. F. Nichols

Sat R 37:22 Je 19 '54 750w

CHASE, STUART, and TYLER, MARIAN (MRS STUART CHASE). Power of words. 308p $3.95 Harcourt

400 Language and languages. Communication 54-5980

"This book grew out of an earlier work, The Tyranny of Words, published in 1938." (Foreword) "It is the purpose of this book to interpret significant findings about language and communication, to point out applications of these findings and the need for further scientific study." (p 10)

Reviewed by W. R. Catton

Am Soc 19:615 O '54 500w

Booklist 50:292 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 7 '54 350w

"His book ranges from linguistics to semantics, from group dynamics and experiments to machines that think and gobbledygook. The work is one step toward a theory of communication which can help man understand his fellows and get along with them." J. W. Carty

+ Christian Century 71:1206 O 6 '54 900w

"An important book, rewarding the close reading it demands."

+ Kirkus 22:29 Ja 1 '54 340w

Nation 178:264 Mr 27 '54 280w

"Persons with a genuine desire to sharpen their own perceptions as well as their ability to convey information will find this treatise an excellent instrument. It gives in plain and vigorous language a number of rules that every speaker and writer ought to bear in mind at all times; for if they were carefully followed there would be far less useless and mischief-making language burdening the air." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 14 '54 750w

"A comprehensive, plainly written book."

+ New Yorker 30:131 Mr 27 '54 160w

Reviewed by Jim Walls

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 4 '54 440w

Reviewed by Quincy Howe

Sat R 37:13 Mr 6 '54 1200w

"Sociologists who read the book will want to use it in their teaching. It is informative, stimulating, and constructive, an example of good clear communicating." L. M. Brooks

+ Social Forces 33:93 O '54 230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:64 Mr '54

CHASTAIN, MADYE LEE. Dark treasure; il. by [the author]. 208p $2.75 Harcourt

54-8570

This mystery story for young girls has for its heroine, Melissa Spenlow living in New York city in the 1850s.

Booklist 51:46 S 15 '54

Kirkus 22:338 Je 1 '54 100w

"An interesting story for fifth- and sixth-grade girls." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 80w

"The portrait of an impulsive, warm-hearted, happy child is well done. The details of her busy days are given with an infectious joy in life." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 17 '54 220w

"Lissa's resourcefulness (perfectly plausible) resolves a desperate situation for Andy and furthers a romance for Aunt Abbie. The suspense and humor of Miss Chastain's excellent period piece make an enticing tale." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p36 O 31 '54 150w

"When Miss Chastain writes of Lissa dashing after the volunteer fire companies, attending the launching of a new clipper, or visiting Barnum's Museum, the story has humor and charm. There is much of interest, too, in the everyday activities at home and school. As such, it is a period piece with great appeal. It is unfortunate that the author introduces a highly improbable plot halfway through the book, and has it solved in a most unlikely manner by Lissa." Mildred Phipps

+ Sat R 37:35 S 18 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 50w

CHATTERJEE, MANMATHA NATH. Out of confusion [foreword by Arthur E. Morgan; introd. by Harry Elmer Barnes]. 165p $3 Antioch press

301 Civilization, Occidental. Social sciences 54-6175

A retired professor of social sciences discusses a philosophy in which the values of East and West are combined. Dr Chatterjee, formerly of Antioch college, here "makes available to the general reader [his] illuminating thoughts and stimulating questions on the modern problems of man in his relation to self, society or state, and to God." (Springf'd Republican)

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee

Ann Am Acad 295:184 S '54 360w

Booklist 50:271 Mr 15 '54

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 110w

CHATTERTON, RUTH. Pride of the peacock.
315p $3.95 Doubleday

54-8917

"The peacock of the title is a beautiful woman whose pride gets in the way of her happiness. In this story of contemporary marriage practically all of the principals change partners in a highly civilized manner. When the curtain falls the outlook is hopeful for all concerned. Before this cheery end is in sight, however, the three leading characters run through a good deal of mental anguish." N Y Times

Booklist 51:14 S 1 '54

"A mature and absorbing story of love, marriage, and destructive self-will." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 22 '54
300w

Kirkus 22:367 Je 15 '54 160w

"This is probably the most sparkling and best written of the novels by this actress-turned-author. She has abandoned immediately controversial subjects to tackle the problems of love, marriage, and divorce in this country. Her findings are uneven but she has made even an over-written novel fascinating." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1511 S 1 '54 130w

"In earlier novels Miss Chatterton has studied problems of disloyalty and intolerance. 'The Pride of the Peacock' is not so ambitious: an interesting but not remarkable group of people handle their difficulties in no more than average ways. The pleasure of the book lies in this very fact. As we recognize the generous husband, the disturbed young girl, even the impulsive and charming wife, we appreciate the warmth and understanding of the author's analysis." Caroline Tunstall

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 22 '54 270w

"As summer reading this pastiche is diverting enough." Charlotte Capers
N Y Times p21 Ag 22 '54 400w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 360w

CHEKHOV, ANTON PAVLOVICH. Unknown Chekhov; tr. with an introd. by Avrahm Yarmolinsky. 316p $4.50 Noonday

54-9075

A collection of twenty stories and other writings of Chekhov, hitherto untranslated.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:78 Je '54 40w

"Whether the story is a slight sketch or a full narrative, there is always the same honest effort to present men and women caught in the energies of their humanity. . . . Includes selections from a trip Chekhov made to the convict island of Sakhalin, fascinating accounts of life in prison in Russia, and terrifying, too, in their contemporary suggestions." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 11 '54 60w

"Chekhov was rather addicted to the use of substandard speech for comic or other effects, which makes translation difficult. To one unacquainted with the Russian language outside its military terms, Mr. Yarmolinsky's translations appear to be conscientious if not always inspired. His pithy introduction is excellent." David Burnham

+ Commonweal 60:300 Je 25 '54 600w

"One interesting point revealed in Mr. Yarmolinsky's informative introduction is that a New York periodical was the first to print a Chekhov story in the English language. . . . Anyone about to embark on what he fears may be an uncomfortable journey, as well as those who consider the author of 'The Cherry Orchard' to have been a pessimist, should read Chekhov's account of how his coach staggered through that wilderness of mud and flood between Tomsk and Kozulka. . . . While expressing gratitude to Mr. Yarmolinsky for this one volume in English, let us hope it is not the last of 'The Unknown Chekhov' to be translated by him." James Stern

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 18 '54 850w

"The twenty-five stories, excerpts, and fragments Avrahm Yarmolinsky includes in this volume, 'The Unknown Chekhov,' are translated into English for the first time. They most certainly make a valuable contribution towards a fuller and better understanding of Chekhov's artistic genius." Marc Slonim

+ Sat R 37:16 Je 12 '54 1050w

Time 63:112 Ap 5 '54 130w

CHEKHOV, ANTON PAVLOVICH. Woman in the case, and other stories; tr. by April Fitz-Lyon and Kyril Zinoviev and with an introd. by Andrew G. Colin. 189p $2.75 British bk. centre

A volume of stories hitherto untranslated into English. Contents: The woman in the case; A visit to friends; Appropriate measures; The boa-constrictor and the rabbit; History of a business enterprise; 75,000; The mask; An unpleasant incident; The eve of the trial; Sinister night; The lodger; The dream; Out of sheer boredom; A disagreeable experience; His first appearance; Holy simplicity; The diplomat; Mutual superiority; Taedium vitae; Other people's trouble; A reporter's dream; One man's meat; The guest.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 193:78 Je '54 40w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 11 '54 230w

New Statesman & Nation 47:139 Ja 30 '54 260w

"All the stories are not of equal quality, but even at his second-best, Chekhov is better than his imitators."

+ Time 63:112 Ap 5 '54 130w

"It is claimed that none of the 23 stories by Chekhov in this volume, all of which appeared in Russian periodicals during his lifetime, has previously been translated into English. This is less surprising, perhaps, than may appear, since the great majority belong to the humorous trifles of the final stage of Chekhov's apprenticeship, under the title of 'Chekhonte,' to the boulevard magazines of St Petersburg. . . . The introduction to the volume, by Mr. Andrew Colin, is well meant but rather crudely written."

Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 8 '54 350w

CHENEY, CORA. Skeleton cave; il. by Paul Galdone. 108p $2 Holt

54-5735

Ten-year-old Davy, living in Alabama, found the skeleton of an Indian in the cave on his grandfather's property. Both grandfather and Davy were much elated, but Davy's harassed mother almost spoiled things by refusing to let the boy return to the cave. This story for ages eight to eleven tells how Davy managed to bring his family good fortune in spite of warnings.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 8 '54 120w

Kirkus 22:2 Ja 1 '54 80w

"An adventure story sure to appeal. . . . Recommended for 8-11-year-olds." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 79:389 F 15 '54 40w

"It is a short book, in large type. One might call it good practice reading for reluctant readers, who will be lured by the title and the dramatic cover picture of Davy with his flashlight." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 18 '54 100w

"Davy's novel scheme, his venturesome trip to Birmingham and an unexpected turn of events make lively reading and develop the point woven into the plot. Farm background and anthropological flavor lend substance to the story, and Paul Galdone's drawings carry but the home-spun quality of the characters." Rose Friedman

+ N Y Times p11 J1 4 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 30w

CHERNER, NORMAN. How to build children's toys and furniture; drawings by the author. 144p $3.95 McGraw

684.1 Furniture. Toys 53-12441

Contents: Factors affecting your child's toys; Plans and ideas for toys; Factors affecting your child's furniture; Plans and ideas for furniture; How-to-do-it techniques.

Booklist 50:373 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:232 J1 '54 30w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 120w

"Recommended for all 'how-to' collections." G. H. Flinn

+ Library J 79:2212 N 15 '54 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:48 My '54

CHERRILL, FREDERICK RUPERT. Fingerprints never lie [Eng title: Cherrill of the Yard]. 248p il $3.95 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Finger prints. Crime and criminals—Great Britain. Detectives—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-12696

"The former Superintendent of the Fingerprint Bureau of New Scotland Yard reviews his life in terms of the cases which crossed his microscope and brings with it much of the deliberate dedication with which he served for forty years." (Kirkus) Index.

Kirkus 22:516 Ag 1 '54 200w

"The cases Mr. Cherrill cites are almost all unfamiliar and his manner of reporting them (in a style almost as ex-officio as the rest of the shelf) is pleasingly pawky. The volume is more than ordinarily interesting and, of course, sensational in a nice, quiet way." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 10 '54 130w

"Cherrill includes a good if brief history of fingerprint identification... but devotes most of his chapter to his own personal case-book of those crimes in whose solution he was directly involved... These solid accounts of cases are interspersed with anecdotes and reminiscences in less serious vein, with numerous photographs, and with too few of Cherrill's own sketches." A. B.

+ N Y Times p42 N 28 '54 500w

"Grade A." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:63 N 6 '54 20w

"Had he chosen, Mr. Cherrill might well have had a successful career in letters, for he writes ably, with a sense of timing and a flair for the dramatic. All is neat and orderly, thorough and methodical, as befits a man in his profession. Some will find an excess of minute and vicious detail, but some of the reports are in lighter vein, too. A number of photographs help relieve the strain of unusually small type." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 230w

"His autobiography has shortcomings. The writing is sometimes thin, as, for instance, when he floridly summarizes matters which the reader feels might well have been more dramatically presented... The book's faults lie in its presentation and, of course, are inherent in its nature, for the fingerprint expert's role in criminal investigation is a limited one. Mr. Cherrill does his best to put his own work in perspective and tries to do justice to the part played by other officers, but he lacks narrative sense. He writes more naturally and interestingly of his fishing exploits than of crime."

Times [London] Lit Sup p423 J1 2 '54 450w

CHESKIN, LOUIS. How to color-tune your home. 203p col il $5 Macmillan (N Y)

747 House decoration. Color 53-13461

"Director, Color Research Institute of America here addresses the layman on 'the importance of color as a factor in human happiness.' Color phobias, the psychology of black, white, gray, colors for blondes, red-heads, brunettes and the 'mature white-haired person.' Bright illustrations and color-charts." Library J

"Overemphasis detracts from the effectiveness of the discussion of the psychological effect of color on the human nervous system; nevertheless the book should be helpful to readers who want some other guide than trial and error to color harmonies in home decoration."

Booklist 50:235 F 15 '54

"This author's latest efforts seem directed to the homemaker, though there is some information which verges on the technical. As such, no doubt, it can arouse interest and, for the critical and thoughtful person, it can serve as stimulation for better living with color. Mr. Cheskin's addiction to conventional recipe type color schemes results in an apparent lack of tolerance for originality in color combination. The book is generally interesting reading." J. K. Shearer

+ J Home Econ 46:611 O '54 140w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1316 J1 '54 30w

CHESSMAN, CARYL. Cell 2455 death row. 361p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Crime and criminals—California 54-8475

"Labeled a 'criminal genius,' the author of this deeply disquieting personal story [was] scheduled to die on May 14 in San Quentin's gas chamber at the age of 32 for two kidnap-robberies and attempted rapes in violation of California's 'Little Lindbergh' law. Protesting his innocence in fact and in law, he has held death at bay for almost six years in an astonishing display of skill as a 'prison lawyer.'" N Y Times

Booklist 50:378 Je 1 '54

"This is a book which it is difficult even to describe or characterize in 300 words, much less review it. It is so many books in one that the only precise thing which can be said about it is that it is surely the crime book of the year—or almost any year. It is not an exaggeration to say that it is the most literate and authentic thriller in autobiographical crime literature with which the reviewer has come into contact in many years. This will probably constitute its greatest appeal to its largest reading audience. It also provides a rather good cross-section of conventional criminality, both juvenile and adult, in the Los Angeles area in the late '30s and '40s." H. E. Barnes

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 9 '54 550w

"The book is extraordinary in its vividness, its sordid and often meaningless detailing of crime, its usually objective viewing of himself. Often self-consciously 'highbrow' in references, quotations, etc., it gradually takes on the sweep of sheer melodrama in the story telling, while rarely stirring the emotions beyond the sense of shock and credulity. He has a lot to say—and his points drive home. Shock techniques, crime comics in action, these one has to saturation. Sociologists and criminologists may well find it a human document of real significance."

+ Kirkus 22:257 Ap 1 '54 350w

"Though the reader may consider the book a calculated endeavor to gain publicity and possibly reprieve, he cannot help but be strongly affected by the power and inevitable rectitude of its message." Louis Barron

Library J 79:855 My 1 '54 250w

"Chessman's story is strange and terrifying. It gives a great deal of insight into a criminal's mind, yet makes the reader uneasily aware that the author is not being completely honest with him. To his credit, Chessman neither begs for sympathy nor cries for mercy. But in playing to the end the role of a lone rebel against the world he causes the reader to view him as almost unbelievable and inhuman. In flamboyant, melodramatic style he gives his version of his short-lived life of crime." Walter Arm

CHESSMAN, CARYL—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 2 '54 500w

"Caryl Chessman's autobiography shows that he was less than a genius in the black arts of crime. In crisp underworld jargon, he operated as a 'pickle-tricker' (a small time stick-up man). On the literary side, however, he must be credited with a highly readable document liberally enriched with authentic underworld lingo, gems from the philosophy of the penal dusk and sparkling contributions in the field of criminological thought." Frank O'Leary

N Y Times p28 My 2 '54 450w

"In prose that is simple, and sometimes brutal, Chessman exposes the workings of his strange and brilliant mind. Like many another tinged with madness, he is a clever writer." G. A. Barker

San Francisco Chronicle p15 My 2 '54 850w

"Obviously punishment offers no solutions to the problems posed by such disturbed personalities as that of Caryl Chessman. Behind much anti-social behavior lies the unwitting desire for punishment which will justify further and more intense criminal acts. What is the solution, then? At present society does not have the answers, but perhaps in time they can be discovered. That is exactly why 'Cell 2455, Death Row' is of such importance. It provides basic material out of which new findings may come." Wenzell Brown

+ Sat R 37:36 My 22 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:177 J1 '54

CHESTER, ALLAN GRIFFITH. Hugh Latimer, apostle to the English, 261p $6 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Latimer, Hugh, bp. 54-5010

A biography of that key figure of the English reformation, Hugh Latimer, who was the most influential preacher in England during the period which began shortly after 1517 and ended with the accession of Queen Mary in 1553. Bibliography. Index.

"Scholarly, documented and eminently readable." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p26 F 28 '54 110w

"Although the factionalism of the historical sources make objectivity difficult to achieve in the analysis of persons and events of the English Reformation, Professor Chester has succeeded unusually well in attaining dispassion. His interpretation is scholarly, his statements are carefully documented, and his presentation of Latimer and the English scene is both accurate and interesting."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:151 Je '54 240w

CHESTER, EDMUND ALBERT. Sergeant named Batista. 276p $3.50 Holt

B or 92 Batista y Zaldívar, Fulgencio. Cuba—Politics and government 53-10728

A biography of Fulgencio Batista, Cuban leader, who has led two revolutions, in 1933 and 1952, and has held the center of the stage in Cuba for twenty years. The author is an Associated Press correspondent in Cuba, and a personal friend of Batista. Index.

Booklist 50:202 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 7 '54 500w

Current Hist 26:190 Mr '54 40w

Foreign Affairs 32:519 Ap '54 20w

Kirkus 21:751 N 15 '53 180w

"A well-written, favorably slanted biography of a man Americans should know more about, this is the first full-length biography of Batista in English. Recommended for larger public libraries." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 79:143 Ja 15 '54 160w

"It will take more than a rosewater biography to cover up his throttling of the press, rough treatment of critics, army domination. And Mr. Chester, who mourns over the pilferings of Grau and Prio, does not mention Batista's much-discussed winnings. . . One hears of these things in Havana, but perhaps they are all lies. But enough of such carping. Every man is entitled to the sort of biography he enjoys. But one query is to the point, why should not this panegyric have been written in the first person singular, and signed 'Batista'?" Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 17 '54 850w

"The writing is repetitious and lacks the strength of incisive prose. But the book does present an intimate picture of one of Latin America's most brilliant and colorful personalities." G. B.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 18 '54 190w

"Mr. Chester's excursions into the field of diplomatic history, especially Cuba's relations with the United States, are lucid if not always well balanced. But the book is well written, clear, and penetrating so far as it goes. It is worthwhile reading for anyone who wishes to learn what has occurred in this lovely island since the early days of the Good Neighbor Policy, when many people in the U.S. first became aware of this trouble spot on our doorstep." A. C. Wilgus

+ Sat R 37:17 F 6 '54 950w

CHEVALLEY, GABRIEL, and others. Fore-runners to Everest. See Dittert, R.

CHIANG, YEE. Silent traveller in Dublin; il. by [the author]. 146p $7.50 Day

941.5 [914.15] Dublin—Description 53-13353

"Again the Silent Traveller, with his brush and palette and Chinese philosophy behind the eye of his beholding, has enhanced a familiar city. Twice Chiang Yee paid visits to his friends Lord and Lady Longford, who run the Gate Theater in Dublin. This book is his accounting of the fruitful hours of a memorable visit." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:202 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by J. M. Flynn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 7 '54 240w

Reviewed by Rod Nordell

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 24 '53 650w

Reviewed by Louis MacNeice

New Statesman & Nation 46:570 N 7 '53 60w

"With nothing new in fact added, the Silent Traveller delightfully lets one be in two places at once, and entangles his Irish discoveries of writers and birds and flowers with Chinese story tellers, vines and trees and ducks. . . The Silent Traveller finds in Dublin, too, soft lights and purling waters to be focused on and painted, like Chinese scrolls." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 D 6 '53 400w

"It is for its stories, for its serene, charmingly oriental illustrations and for scraps of extraneous information such as how the 'monkey-puzzle' came to be introduced into the British Isles that this volume is worth reading—although few, I fear, even at this season, would consider so short a book worth so tall a candle." James Stern

+ N Y Times p4 D 27 '53 700w

New Yorker 29:89 Ja 9 '54 120w

"The quality of the book, of course, is not to be described in the guidebook sense, since this is never what Chiang is after. What this book does—what all of them do—is to remind the reader, to his advantage, that there can be other points of view than his own about places and matters he has never thought of excepting in the familiar terms. Here is a man looking at Western civilization much as you might look at some ancient Chinese town, and reflecting it as you might reflect such a new and strange place." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 24 '53 600w

"Altogether it is a cheerful, friendly, and unlabored book, and it will probably tell the traveler as much or more about Dublin, its customs and its people, than the most industrious notetaker could achieve." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 36:48 Ja 2 '54 360w
Spring'd Republican p40A D 13 '53 110w

CHIARI, JOSEPH. Poetic drama of Paul Claudel. 186p $3.75 Kenedy

842 Claudel, Paul 54-7833

"Claudel is an influential and prominent figure in France not only because of his exceptional literary ability but also because of his public service. At one time he served as French ambassador to Japan. Professor Chiari, now at the University of London, is one of our leading interpreters of contemporary French poetry. He gives us here not only an interpretation of Claudel's leading works but also deals at length with the respective functions of poetry and drama and their relation to one another. The author throughout compares the poetry of Claudel with that of Eliot, noting the religious note struck by both of them. He emphasizes the deep religious convictions of Claudel as a Catholic mystic and examines their nature and implication at length." Kirkus

"Mr. Chiari is good when he writes about Claudel; infinitely dreary when he writes about himself. When he takes pages to give his own views of time, eternity and God, the reader-reaction can only be to close the book with a so-what. Which is a pity. For, in this century that turns more and more to the abstract in painting, because everything is seen more and more structurally, Claudel's vision, of all the different levels of love and suffering in the Soulier de Satin, for example, is exceedingly apposite." Anne Fremantle

+ — Commonweal 61:257 D 3 '54 1000w

"A book which will be of interest primarily to devotees of modern poetry."

Kirkus 22:722 O 15 '54 150w

"As Dr. Chiari says, there cannot but be something repellent in this idea of a God-Fisherman who raises his creatures to him with a hook in their hearts; it implies a cruelty which does not befit God. . . It is part of the strength of Dr. Chiari's study that he explores this dilemma with such keen and yet charitable insight. . . The chief weakness of this book is its ill-balanced construction. It takes Dr. Chiari nearly fifty pages to reach the fringe of his subject, and a great deal of this introductory matter is taken up with pressing a distinction between 'drama' and 'tragedy' which is, to say the least, somewhat arbitrary."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p654 O 15 '54 650w

CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Greatest sport stories; ed. by Arch Ward. 448p $5 Barnes, A.S.

796.082 Sports 53-8307

Stories of all types of sports events reported by the Chicago Tribune from 1847 to the present, and selected by the present sports editor. Index.

Booklist 50:162 D 15 '53

Reviewed by Bill Fay
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 8 '53 950w

"Good for reference." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 79:69 Ja 1 '54 20w

"A good history of the big events of the last century." I. T. Marsh
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p42 D 6 '53 30w

CHICAGO. UNIVERSITY. Graduate library school. Core of education for librarianship; a report of a workshop held under the auspices of the School, Aug. 10-15, 1953; ed. by Lester Asheim. 68p pa $1.50 A.L.A.

020.711 Library schools and training 54-563

"This report is a summary of discussions, conclusions, and recommendations of a group of librarians and library educators with respect to the body of information and knowledge common to the several specialized aspects of librarianship. The 60 participants met in a workshop at the University of Chicago, August 10-15, 1953. The larger group worked in five committees each concentrating on one of the following phases of library training: (1) undergraduate level; (2) graduate level; (3) work with children and young people; (4) librarianship in subject fields; and (5) general library practice." Library J

"Although the report does not claim that the recommendations are new or startling, it deserves the careful attention of persons interested in education for librarianship, either as teachers or administrators." R. H. Logsdon

+ Library J 79:1292 J1 '54 320w

"We have here an excellent report of group thinking. The fact that one reviewer disagrees with some of the conclusions, did participants in the workshop, does not detract from its contribution but simply indicates that this statement does not supply the final answer. The report is so organized that the reader can follow the thinking of the group, in a sense participating in the process. This is a worth-while exercise for all of us who are interested in the core of library education or, indeed, interested in what we are as librarians." L. A. Martin

+ Library Q 24:268 J1 '54 850w

CHIDSEY, DONALD BARR. Lord of the Isles. 287p $3 Crown

54-6630

A historical novel of Hawaii in 1820 in the days of the Dowager Queen Kaahumanu. A group of American missionaries arrive to bring Christianity to the laughter-loving islanders. Among the missionaries is the young recently-widowed Ann. The chief trader proves to be an old friend of Ann's, but he is also the Queen's lover. The story is of the working out of the triangle.

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 23 '54 310w

"This combination of religion, romance and history may satisfy the popular taste."

Kirkus 22:160 Mr 1 '54 170w

"A rousing if predictable story. Aside from its entertainment value it gives a knowledgeable picture of a vanished culture."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 1 '54 350w

"Nowadays it's a rare historical novel that draws a smile on purpose. Donald Barr Chidsey's 'Lord of the Isles' is one of the welcome realities. . . Moreover, his blue-eyed Yankee trader and his spunky female missionary are two very likable human beings." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p26 My 9 '54 350w

CHILDS, MARQUIS WILLIAM, and CATER, DOUGLASS. Ethics in a business society. 191p $2.75 Harper

261.8 Christianity and economics. Church and social problems. Ethics. 54-6442

"This is the capstone of a six-volume inquiry into ethics in relation to modern economic life conducted under the auspices of the National Council of Churches of Christ and its antecedent body, the Federal Council. 'Ethics for a Business Society' utilizes material from the four books already published and from the two concluding volumes which will appear shortly. . . After describing the social and economic system of the Middle Ages, [the authors] point out how Protestantism, fused with science and technology, helped to break down old restrictions upon economic activity and to unleash the pursuit of gain. They properly show that in many instances the new religious ethic glorified the new idea and furnished a type of Christian apologetic for natural laissez-faire and the unadulterated pursuit of narrow individual self-interest." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

CHILDS, M. W.—Continued

"This little book, with all its religious side lights, might well be called 'social economics.' It is well and interestingly written—one of the most significant books I have read recently. It would be most worthwhile reading for students, and I venture to assert, even for most economists." John Ise

+ Ann Am Acad 294:196 J1 '54 400w

Booklist 50:370 Je 1 '54

"Messrs. Childs and Cater have done much more than summarize six meaty volumes. Once again they show what journalism at its best can do. They wrote 'not a part of the study series itself, but rather our interpretation and reflection' on it, putting the whole thing in perspective. This is a job of original thinking, and is the result of lively intelligence playing upon the materials in these volumes." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 29 '54 750w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 21 '54 50w

"The authors, both experienced journalists, write vividly and well." P. H. Douglas

N Y Times p16 Ap 11 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:125 My '54

CHIN, KEE ONN. Silent army [Eng title: Ma-rai-ee]. 259p $2.50 Longmans; pa 35c Ballantine

53-8759

Story of the Japanese invasion of Malaya, and of Malayan guerrilla warfare. Told in the first person by a Malayan Chinese teacher.

Booklist 50:100 N 1 '53

Kirkus 21:496 Ag 1 '53 190w

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p40 O 25 '53 230w

"The story is cast in the form of a novel, and the author is to be congratulated on his powers of narration, his ability to sustain suspense and his command of colloquial English. This reviewer found himself unable to lay the book down until he had come to the last page." L. A. Mills

+ Pacific Affairs 27:86 Mr '54 300w

"Attractive in its integrity, convincing and horrible in its detail, this cleanly-built story has less the quality of fiction than of a dramatized report. Lacking in individual characterization, it nevertheless portrays the character of an epoch—and one which lies immediately at the root of the Malayan problem today." Tangye Lean

+ Spec p642 N 14 '52 80w

"The four chapters that describe the hero's interrogation and torture by the dreaded Kempei are put down with a literalness admirable in its intentions, but lacking in any kind of emotional effect. The terrors are all set down, but the significant details that might make them truly terrible are missing. Perhaps the author added to his difficulties by his courageous decision to write Ma-rai-ee in English; for it must be said that his use of the English language is always stilted and occasionally comic."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 21 '52 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:31 Ja '54

CHINN, HOWARD A. Television broadcasting. 700p il $10 McGraw

621.3889 Television broadcasting 52-9440

"A comprehensive account of the technical aspects of television broadcasting. It covers such matters as television cameras and related studio equipment, transmission systems, and the planning of television studio buildings. The treatment is primarily descriptive. However, the book is addressed not to general readers, but to such persons as technicians working in television studios, persons preparing for this field, and others in need of fairly detailed information on how television programs are put on the air. The author is Chief Engineer of the Audio-Video Division of the Columbia Broadcasting System." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:386 F 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:14 Ja '54

CHIPPERFIELD, JOSEPH EUGENE. Greeka, eagle of the Hebrides; drawings by Larry Toschik. 236p $3 Longmans

Eagles—Legends and stories 54-6666

Sketches the life story of a golden eagle, from his fledgling days on the island of Skye to his full maturity. For ages twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 51:65 O 1 '54

"A rare book for nature-lovers." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:336 O '54 120w

"A thorough-going job, its length will demand, and repay, interest."

+ Kirkus 22:117 F 15 '54 80w

"More than in his former dog stories, the author interprets the thoughts and feelings of his hero, and it seems to us that the great bird's dreams at the zoo imply more memory than he has elsewhere attributed to him. He also becomes more poetic but in this he rises well to the challenge of the powerful bird and the wild scene. Many over twelve will re-read the book for its beauty, aside from its exact nature study." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 1 '54 240w

"The story is stirring and romantic. Unfortunately the impact on the reader, except for the clean, cold, thrill of flight, which Mr. Chipperfield reproduces with considerable brilliance, is too often weakened by lavish descriptions and ornate prose. The author is obviously a keen student of ornithology and a passionate lover of the Highlands. It is regrettable that his long sentences are so studded with unfamiliar and Scottish words that the book is difficult reading for even the adult American reader." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 1 '54 120w

CHODOROV, FRANK. The income tax, root of all evil; introd. by J. Bracken Lee. 116p $2 Devin-Adair

636.24 Income tax 54-9968

Arguments against the Federal income tax, and for repeal of the Sixteenth Amendment.

"When the fateful Ides of March roll around most Americans are inclined to indorse the sentiment expressed in the title of this book. But few would possess the background of economic, historical, and philosophic knowledge which has enabled Chodorov to compose a most formidable and many sided indictment of the federal graduated income tax." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 16 '54 290w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 80w

CHODOROV, JEROME, and FIELDS, JOSEPH. Anniversary waltz; a new comedy. 186p il $2.75 Random house

812 54-10970

A play about an American husband and wife who want to celebrate their fifteenth wedding anniversary in peace, but find things all mixed up when their children and other relatives come into the picture.

Booklist 51:127 N 15 '54

"This is a brassy farce-comedy about marriage which will have wide community theatre interest. It is recommended to public libraries serving this public." George Freedley
Library J 79:2337 D 1 '54 10w

CHORPENNING, MRS CHARLOTTE (BARROWS). Twenty-one years with children's theatre [foreword by Maurice Gnesin]. 112p il $3.50 Children's theatre

792.92 Chicago. Art institute. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman memorial theatre
54-10268

"About twenty-two years ago, Mrs. Charlotte B. Chorpenning sent me the manuscript of her now famous play The Emperor's New Clothes. It was the first children's play I had ever produced. Close contact with the author during the rehearsal period resulted in my inviting her to take charge of the children's productions in the Goodman Memorial Theatre. She proceeded to stage some eighty productions during the twenty years that followed. . . Mrs. Chorpenning has written an account of what she learned from the children and how she utilized her knowledge." Foreword

Booklist 51:9 S 1 '54

"This book is essential for children's rooms (for the librarians not the public), and theatre collections. Can not be too highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 79:1321 J1 '54 50w

CHRISTENSEN, CARL ROLAND. Management succession in small and growing enterprises. 217p $3.25 Harvard univ. Division of res.

658.16 Business management. Executives
53-12292

"Case histories show what steps small firms can take to limit, but not always eliminate, problems raised by the retirement of the company's chief executive. How non-family executives may be made to feel they have a substantial stake in the company and how policy formulation and administration may be kept under review are also covered." Library J

"The report is one that should be read and pondered by every owner or chief executive of a small enterprise." H. S. Person

+ Ann Am Acad 293:178 My '54 440w
Library J 79:908 My 15 '54 60w

"Executives of medium-sized and small firms will find much to ponder here; moreover, social scientists in general, as well as historians, can profitably leaf through this compact and rewarding study."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:208 Je '54 200w

CHRISTIAN values and economic life [by] John C. Bennett [and others; foreword by Charles P. Taft]. (Series on ethics and economic life) 272p $3.50 Harper

261.85 Christianity and economics. Christian ethics
54-6443

"One of a series of six by the Study Committee of the Federal Council of Churches on Ethics and Economic Life, the present volume is arranged in four sections: a preliminary statement of principles by Bishop Oxnham, a resumé of the findings reported in the other five volumes, some international implications, and a joint study of the main issue. Other volumes will consider goals of economic life, organizational revolution, social responsibilities of business man, American income and use, and American economy—attitudes, opinions." (Library J) Indexes.

Booklist 51:121 N 15 '54

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 14 '54
100w

"A very important volume of special interest to economists and Christian businessmen."

+ Kirkus 22:477 J1 15 '54 210w

"A useful summary of the issues but requiring further amplification to relate general principles to technical problems. Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 79:1226 Je 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 179:411 N 6 '54 40w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Perilous journeys of Hercule Poirot. 3v in 1 306,326,298p $3.50 Dodd

This omnibus volume contains: Mystery of the Blue Train, Death on the Nile, and Murder in Mesopotamia.

Booklist 51:135 N 15 '54

"These are welcome revivals of the simon-pure detective story at its most masterly." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p41 S 26 '54 80w

"Good for new readers and veterans alike." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 70w

"Tried and true." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:46 S 16 '54 20w

"M. Poirot, Mrs. Christie's famous creation, is as suave and astute as ever. These leisurely tales, written 20 years and more ago, confirm the English author's standing as one of the most ingenious and imaginative in the mystery field." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 110w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Pocket full of rye. 211p $2.75 Dodd

53-10256

Detective story.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 25 '54
140w

"For the very reason that it is a masterpiece of cunning, A Pocket Full of Rye will outrage many of those whom it cruelly bamboozles. But before they squeal, let me advise them to turn back to an early page, where they will find one of those deliciously ambivalent sentences that Mrs. Christie so thoughtfully inserts for those with eyes to see and wits to comprehend." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:47 Ja 9 '54 250w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 4 '54 110w

"This is the best of the novels starring Christie's spinster-detective, Miss Marple." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 18 '54 170w

"This is not one of the author's best books, but it is still a model of complex skulduggery in genteel surroundings."

+ New Yorker 30:135 Mr 27 '54 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 25 '54
70w

"Smooth as mellow port." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:35 Ap 17 '54 30w

"Improbable, but so competently written that it is much above the standard." Raymond Postgate

+ Spec p768 D 25 '53 90w

"Miss Christie has a reputation for playing fair with the reader who likes to assume detective responsibility, and also for being one too many for him. In the present case it may be felt that the hidden mechanism of the plot is ingenious at the expense of probability, but the tale is told with such confidence that (like murder itself, in this pastoral atmosphere) it does not matter very much."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p773 D 4 '53
260w

CHRISTIE, RICHARD, and JAHODA, MARIE, eds. Studies in the scope and method of The authoritarian personality. (Continuities in social research) 279p $4.50 Free press

301.15 Authoritarian personality. Personality 54-8151

"This collection of papers by Jahoda, Shils, Hyman and Sheatsley, Christie, Lasswell, and Frenkel-Brunswick is the second volume in the Free Press series Continuities in Social Research. It focuses upon that monumental study of anti-Semitism, The Authoritarian Personality [Book Review Digest 1950], published by Adorno, Frenkel-Brunswick, Levinson, and Sanford in 1950." Social Forces

"Despite the incisiveness of its criticisms, this book as a whole is likely to leave one with a feeling of greater respect, not less, for the parent work. This is not only due to the substantive contribution of Lasswell and Frenkel-Brunswick; it is also due to the fact that the conspicuously negative critics, Shils, Hyman and Sheatsley, and Christie are rarely disdainful, rarely out to demonstrate their own erudition, but rather engaged in a meticulous, sometimes laborious task of criticizing a very significant work in order that it may be improved." F. R. Westie

+ Am Soc R 19:610 O '54 950w

"While the exact nature and dimensions of authoritarianism remain obscure after the wealth of research stimulated by the book, its conclusions are probably pretty close to the mark for a first approximation. But situational and group membership factors, Christie holds with Hyman and Sheatsley, are more important than the California authors thought." M. B. Smith

Ann Am Acad 294:198 J1 '54 500w

"On the whole this book is much less creative than critical. Lasswell's contribution is an exception. . . . Stringent criticism of research, as exemplified in this volume, is certainly necessary if social science is to advance. Perhaps the 'continuities' aimed at could be better achieved if future volumes in the series would strive for greater historical and theoretical depth." H. G. McCurdy

Social Forces 33:92 O '54 390w

CHRISTOPHER, MATTHEW F. Lucky baseball bat; with il. by Robert Henneberger. 123p $2.50 Little

54-5141

This baseball story for young readers tells how Marvin, a new boy in town, won his way in his favorite sport.

"It may seem somewhat slick for Marvin, the new boy, to become a star hitter in the Grasshoppers League; however, he learns a real lesson and earns the friendship he wants when he realizes that it isn't a 'lucky' bat but his own skill that is responsible for his success." Harry Molter

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 40w

Kirkus 22:113 F 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:699 Ap 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 50w

CHUBB, THOMAS CALDECOT. Cornucopia, 1919-1953. 262p $4 Fine editions

811

53-13348

"A collection of poems written between 1919 and 1953 and in part reprinted from previous volumes. The author, a graduate of Yale, has been a journalist, farmer, yachtsman, civic leader and Renaissance scholar. His verses, couched in vigorous and sometimes adventurous meters, reflect the varied interests, opinions and prejudices of an abundantly fulfilled nature." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ja 31 '54 40w

"In 'Cornucopia,' Thomas Caldecot Chubb gives us a variety of subject-matter and displays a wide experience in life and literature and an ability to dramatize this experience." J. S. Untermeyer

+ N Y Times p16 F 28 '54 180w

"No clear direction yet appears: the poet seems, except for a romantic predilection for the sea, American landscapes, footnotes of history, and 'a wonder that he could not disclose,' to be blown about by the winds of time. . . . In all fairness, it must be added that Mr. Chubb can turn out individual poems that are effective." G. P. Meyer

Sat R 37:18 J1 24 '54 320w

CHURCHILL, SIR WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Churchill reader [his] wit and wisdom; constructed from his own sayings and writings and framed with an introduction by Colin R. Coote; with the collaboration of P. D. Bunyan. 414p $5 Houghton

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-10086

An arrangement of more than 2000 quotations, ranging over sixty years, selected from the writings and speeches of Sir Winston Churchill. They are grouped under such headings as: On himself; On his dislikes; On Russia; On his likes; On parliament and parties; On policies and politics; On the English language; On war; On men in war; On the monarchy; On India; On America. Index.

Booklist 51:177 D 15 '54

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '54 550w

"Sir Winston Churchill is, after all, the greatest man alive today and we need have no doubts about the judgment of history on that score. By coincidence or otherwise, we have here a compilation, stretching over sixty years, of many of the wise, wonderful, foolish and provocative things he said and wrote. He will be judged by his deeds, but some of the words he used to express himself will be as imperishable as the English language." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p20 N 21 '54 650w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:31 D 4 '54 40w

CHURCHILL, SIR WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Stemming the tide; speeches 1951 and 1952; ed. by Randolph S. Churchill. 379p $5 Houghton

942.085 Great Britain—Politics and government. Great Britain—Foreign relations 53-9258

This volume, one of a series edited by his son, contains fifty speeches delivered during the years 1951 and 1952, after Churchill's return to power. "As usual, they cover a wide range of subjects from the death of George VI, to Anglo-American relations and on, and were made before private as well as public groups. Many are familiar but equally many are less so, and some are important as historical documents." (Library J)

Booklist 50:201 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:103 F '54 10w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 7 '54 230w

"The speeches are historical documents of fundamental importance. More than that, they are specimens of rhetorical felicity and forensic eloquence that are not easy to match in our times. After all, Sir Winston did not get a Nobel prize for literature because he has been an efficient statesman. He got it because he is an artist of extraordinary power with the written and spoken word."

+ Christian Century 71:303 Mr 10 '54 100w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 21 '54 750w

Foreign Affairs 32:516 Ap '54 10w

"These [speeches] are vigorous, sensitive and often witty as the Churchillian style has become familiar to us. One often wishes these volumes had been indexed, since quotations are taken from the speeches so frequently. Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 79:140 Ja 15 '54 110w

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 30 '53 50w

"All the power, persuasiveness, and parliamentary skill that have made Churchill the greatest orator of our age flash forth repeatedly in these pages. Here are passages that match in nobility and grandeur the best of his earlier prose." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 31 '54 600w

"It is only when Sir Winston speaks for himself in 'Stemming the Tide' that the full flavor of the great Englishman is evoked. These fifty speeches in 1951 and 1952 reflect the Prime Minister as no leisurely, respectful monographs can ever do. Here he is, the real, the irrepressible Winston; bouncing, determined, magnanimous, shrewd and emotional." Drew Middleton

+ N Y Times p18 F 28 '54 240w

New Yorker 29:102 Ja 30 '54 230w

Reviewed by R. K. Webb

Pol Sci Q 69:277 Je '54 500w

Reviewed by H. J. Fairlie

Spec p63 Jl 10 '53 1200w

Springf'd Republican p4D Ja 3 '54 90w

Wis Lib Bul 50:30 Ja '54

CHUTE, MARCLETTE GAYLORD. Wonderful winter; il. by Grace Golden. 216p $3 Dutton 54-8857

Young Sir Robert Wakefield, called Robin, lived in Suffolk, with his three maiden aunts. He was a lonely boy until the day he rescued a spaniel puppy, and when the aunts refused to let him keep the dog Robin fled to London with his pet. There he lived for a season with the Heminges and took small parts in Mr Shakespeare's plays. When the Burbages were about to lose their theater Robin returned home, master of himself and his household. For ages eleven to fourteen.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 50w

Booklist 51:114 N 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p30 N 14 '54 160w

"If in this new tale too much is unquestioned and no apparent search set up for a runaway boy who is heir to a considerable estate, it is still a good story." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:435 D '54 160w

"Delightful and authentic, this is a story which lends immediacy to the past and brings an incentive toward further study of this period."

+ Kirkus 22:534 Ag 15 '54 150w

"Miss Chute keeps her facts as exact as in her adult books, but adds well imagined vignettes of people. The relation of Robin to Shakespeare as a man and as a writer is most able. She is clever to have Robin a well taught young baronet, for only such a boy would wonder about the play, the players and their relation to the audience as he did, and long to possess the first-printed copy of 'Romeo and Juliet'. His talk with Shakespeare on 'loving' and 'seeing' things and people is a rare bit of illumination about literature." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p2 N 14 '54 450w

"This book is satisfactory in every way, being full of action and human beings, and told in a wonderfully clear and easy style. Miss Chute knows so much about the times and, it seems, so much about people, that no part of the story is educational—only authentic and warm and witty." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times pt 2 p34 N 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:213 N 27 '54 50w

"Good feeling for family life, the excitement of the theatre, London and London crowds, and a corner-of-the-eye view of Shakespeare are in this book. Black-and-white illustrations support the story and mapped end-papers show locations of London landmarks important at this period." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:91 N 13 '54 90w

CITIZENSHIP EDUCATION STUDY, DETROIT. Schools and the development of good citizens [prepared by] Stanley E. Dimond [and others] the final report of the Study. 215p $3.50 Wayne Univ. Press, 4841 Cass St, Detroit 1

370.19 Citizenship. Education—Aims and objectives

"The emotional adjustment of pupils is the most important factor in the quality of citizenship." Such is the major conclusion here stated in the final report of the five-year Citizenship Education Study recently completed by the Detroit Public Schools and Wayne University. A 'good citizen,' according to the Study Staff, is emotionally well adjusted, and gives allegiance to the ideals of democracy. He practices democratic human relations, uses critical thinking to help solve social problems, and uses knowledge to 'facilitate the process of democratic living.' Around these aspects of citizenship the final report is organized." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by F. J. Brown

Ann Am Acad 292:185 Mr '54 440w

"The report is clearly written and well organized, with excellent chapter summaries. It should be of special interest to those concerned with curriculum improvement."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:214 Je '54 260w

CLAIRMONT, GLENN. John Sutter of California; decorations by L. Vosburgh. 185p $2.50 Nelson

B or 92 Sutter, John Augustus—Juvenile literature 54-9878

Partially fictionized treatment of "the Swiss dry-goods clerk who, dreaming of a western empire, reached California after incredible hardships. He founded New Helvetia in 1839, site of present Sacramento, on a land grant from the Mexican government. Relations with Indians, discovery of gold on his mill site in 1848, his loyalty to United States, provide interesting sidelights." (Library J)

"An important story of a great epoch." M. J. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 50w

"Within its limitations, excellent."

+ Kirkus 22:445 Jl 15 '54 120w

"Good for junior high units on westward expansion or as a western or pioneer story." M. W. Reid

+ Library J 79:2256 N 15 '54 90w

"The whole drama of the Sutter period in California—including the discovery of gold—is excellently retold by Miss Clairmonte." Richard Johnston

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 14 '54 80w

CLARK, ALFRED ALEXANDER GORDON (CYRIL HARE, pseud). Death walks the woods [Eng title: That yew tree's shade]. 235p $3 Little 54-5137

Detective story.

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

"Delightfully entertaining introduction of characters and welding of incidents into shocking murder shrewdly solved." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 Mr 28 '54 150w

+ Kirkus 22:85 F 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman Nation 47:506 Ap 17 '54 170w

CLARK, A. A. G.—Continued

"Mr. Hare, who has a bright eye and a sharp ear, assembles for the venture a cast of locals and interlopers who have a pungent diversity and a vigorous capacity for serio-comic disagreement and perturbation. The consequence is a pleasing amble." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 21 '54 160w

"Here is a fine formal detective story, with a technically brilliant solution demanding the attention of all connoisseurs of construction; and here is also a delightful novel of the life of an English village where once dwelt a Great (if forgotten) Victorian." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 4 '54 90w

"Again the solution turns on a nice point of law. And, as always with Hare, the characterization and the dry, delicate wit make a well-plotted mystery into a completely charming novel." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 18 '54 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 30w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 60w

"A perfect mystery of which the solution is wholly satisfactory and completely infuriating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Mr 19 '54 140w

CLARK, ALFRED ALEXANDER GORDON (CYRIL HARE, pseud.). Suicide excepted. 219p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12836

Detective story.

"Is equal in interest to Mr. Hare's other detective stories, and that puts it in very good company indeed." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 24 '54 90w

"A 15-year-old Cyril Hare novel, more conventional and less witty than Hare's later work, but adroit in its manipulation of three amateur detectives desperately trying to change a suicide verdict to murder, and distinguished by a plot-twist which I'll wager Christie wishes she'd thought of." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p40 N 7 '54 50w

"This item in the Murder Revisited series is another rewarding discovery." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 21 '54 40w

"Brainy and brisk." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 20w

CLARK, MRS ANN (NOLAN). Blue Canyon horse; il. by Allan Houser. 54p $2.75 Viking

Horses—Legends and stories 54-12161

Story of a little Indian boy and the young mare who was his special care. When she escaped for a season to join a group of wild horses the lad was disconsolate. But later the mare returned, leading her colt, and the boy was happy once more.

Booklist 51:21 S 1 '54

"A book for all the family to enjoy and treasure." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p47 N 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 30w

"A moving story of great beauty. It should be read aloud—and children will want it more than once. Obviously both the author and the Indian artist love the country of the canyon and the mesa; together they have made this one of the outstanding books of the fall." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:330 O '54 90w

"The pictures by an Indian artist, Allan Houser, capture the quality of the setting and text. Not a book for an action-loving child, but for one to whom the rhythmic oneness of thought and text add meaning. Possibly more children at the read aloud level will like this than the second and third grader towards whom the publisher directs it."

+ Kirkus 22:436 Jl 15 '54 180w

"The simple text has a quiet beauty with its fine rhythms and repetitions. It is set in short lines. The strong, etching-like line cuts on every page are by an Indian artist who teaches in the same Indian school with Mrs. Clark." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p7 N 14 '54 290w

"It is a simple story but a moving one, dealing with elemental needs and mirroring clearly the wild setting. Told in the lyric style which distinguished 'In My Mother's House' this has beauty and literary value, as well as appeal for young horse lovers. The illustrations by Allan Houser, an Apache Indian, are swift and strong." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p38 O 10 '54 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 14 '54 100w

"Once again, out of her abundant experience and affection, Mrs. Clark has written a story of the country and children she knows so well. In beautiful, rhythmic prose that is a delight to the eye and ear she writes the simple, but moving story of a little mare that deserts her devoted young master to run free and wild with the herd." L. G.

+ Sat R 37:70 N 13 '54 190w

CLARK, DENIS. Black Lightning; the story of a leopard; il. by C. Gifford Ambler. 144p $2.50 Viking

Leopards—Legends and stories 54-703

In this life story of a black leopard born in a cave on the island of Ceylon, the other jungle animals also receive attention. The author lived on Ceylon as a young man. For ages ten to fourteen.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 11 '54 50w

"A sensitively written story." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:184 Je '54 100w

Kirkus 22:119 F 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow

Library J 79:783 Ap 15 '54 90w

"This makes an outstanding animal story for readers of ten or eleven on up. It adopts the point of view of a wild creature without sentimentality; though it must romanticize and invent, the style is so fine that we believe it as a record. It is comparable to those popular stories of Theodore Waldeck about 'The White Panther' of South American jungles and the 'Lions on the Hunt' in Africa." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 16 '54 240w

"His story is exciting and credible, filled with accurate and beautiful detail, and never softened by sentimentality." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 21 '54 140w

"A narrative, outstanding among animal tales for its writing and rich background (Ceylon), that should absorb ten- to fourteen-year-old naturalists." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:211 N 27 '54 70w

"The author's knowledge of the island and his love of its creatures have given vividness and authority to his writing. There is wonder in the telling of the story and a remarkable identification with the animals of the jungle." A. O. M.

+ Sat R 37:66 My 15 '54 230w

CLARK, GLENN. Windows of heaven; graphic editing and all photographs unless otherwise stated by Lucien Aigner. 188p $3.95 Harper

242.2 Devotional exercises 54-8940

"Dr. Clark has selected meditations from his works and matched them with photographs.

Fitting quotations from Scripture highlight each of the 84 prayers. In make-up, the print is on the left page, and the photograph is on the facing right." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 51:32 S 15 '54

"This is an unusually attractive volume of daily meditations. The author is well known as one of the leading teachers of the art of prayer. . . . The photographs of children are natural and appealing, while those of the out-of-doors are most striking. This would be a most appropriate gift book to a spiritually minded person."

+ Kirkus 22:629 S 1 '54 190w

"A good candidate for the memorial shelf or gift list."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:201 O '54

CLARK, JAMES ANTHONY. Three stars for the colonel. 265p il $4 Random house

B or 92 Thompson, Ernest Othmer 54-6650

"Here James Anthony Clark, whose column 'Tales of the Oil Country' is a special feature of the Houston 'Post,' tells the story of Ernest O. Thompson and of the development of Texas' petroleum industry in which Thompson played a decisive role. During the tumultuous days of East Texas oil discovery Thompson was the newest member of the Texas Railroad Commission, an organization which has a great deal to say about how much oil the United States shall produce. He was the father of effective petroleum conservation. He rescued billions of barrels of oil and stopped an industry-government maneuver for Federal control of oil. He was also a hero in World War I, and the fighting mayor of Amarillo." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 51:4 S 1 '54

"Sympathetic, readable biography."

+ Bookmark 13:232 J1 '54 20w

"Specialized, but with the flavor of a traditional American success story."

Kirkus 22:284 Ap 15 '54 200w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 27 '54 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 31 '54 220w

"Mr. Clark's book is a satisfying portrait of a kind of man who is little recognized in our country: the honest, competent, and devoted appointed public servant." T. E. C.

+ Sat R 37:41 Ag 21 '54 260w

CLARK, LEONARD FRANCIS. Marching wind. 368p il maps $5 Funk

951.47 [915.147] Amne Machin mountains. Mountaineering. Tibet—Description and travel 54-9738

"In 1949, the author set out to find the Amne Machin, a fabled mountain in Central Asia, reputedly higher than Everest. . . . In this book, Mr. Clark tells how he coaxed a Chinese Nationalist general to stake him to an expedition to the Amne Machin (its name does not appear in the gazetteers), and how he found the mountain and measured it." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 51:172 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 60w

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 26 '54 280w

"Much of the temper of the tribes who inhabit Tibet, 'citadel of isolation' is revealed; the reporting is straightforward and credible; it's a frank, lively answer to a stay-at-home's wanderlust."

+ Kirkus 22:523 Ag 1 '54 280w

"The trouble with this man is that he goes so far wrong on dozens of trifling matters, particularly when he undertakes to strike an academic pose and lecture on such matters as ethnology, that he seriously undermines his credibility. (I have listed in the back of my book twenty-nine cases in which he misinterpreted what he saw and heard). But whether his near-scientific observations are worth a hoot, or a whoop, or a poop, Clark came back with a fine story to tell." Rodney Gilbert

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 19 '54 900w

"'The Marching Wind' is not only an important book, but as a narrative of high adventure on Tibet's bleak plateau, it makes fascinating reading." R. C. Andrews

+ N Y Times p28 N 21 '54 650w

"He is a vigorous writer with the same gift, or weakness, for grandiose verbiage that got Marco Polo in trouble with his fellow-Venetians, and a shorter account of his journey to the Amne Machin, published in a magazine, received choice abuse from several explorers and mountaineers. With this book, he seeks vindication."

New Yorker 30:184 O 9 '54 160w

Reviewed by Jim Walls

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 7 '54 850w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 170w

CLARK, LEONARD FRANCIS. Rivers ran east. 366p il maps $5 Funk

981 [918.1] Amazon river valley 53-10787

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by Francis Huxley

New Statesman & Nation 48:700 N 27 '54 550w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 21 '54 80w

"Credible or not, a completely engrossing book."

New Yorker 29:98 Ja 16 '54 260w

"The author has a tight, intense, yet vividly descriptive style of writing that has transformed the fascinating material of his quest into an absorbing experience for the reader. . . . But 'The Rivers Ran East' is far more than a mere tale of true adventure. The valuable information it presents, all from the pen of a trailblazer, will be a bible to future explorers and scientists who dare to enter the jungles of South America." Betty Bredin

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 3 '54 650w

"While I repeat that it is a thrilling story, I simply don't believe that at least two of the 'cities,' those immediately above and below the Pongo, haven't been well known all along to local inhabitants, passing travelers, and many others. The editors, too, should have taken greater pains. While Clark may be right in his spelling of many Spanish words as opposed to mine (as for instance in saying patrón instead of patrón), much of his Spanish is definitely wrong." E. P. Hanson

+ — Sat R 37:65 Ja 23 '54 550w

CLARK, MARK WAYNE. From the Danube to the Yalu. 369p il map $5 Harper

951.9 Korean war, 1950- 54-6010

A sequel to the author's Calculated Risk (Book Review Digest 1950). This volume contains an account of General Clark's experiences as commander of the United Nations forces in Korea during the fifteen months just prior to the truce. Index.

"Now retired from the Army, Mark Clark has written an outspoken account of his stewardship as UN Commander-in-Chief in Korea—a brisk, authoritative, and enlightening history of the last phase of the Korean War." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:80 Je '54 370w

Booklist 50:377 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 30 '54 450w

"Mark Clark's book [is] an illuminating and interesting story. Some of the author's opinions are open to question as when he suggests that we might have sent Chinese Nationalist divisions into the Korean fighting. But for the most part, the account adds materially to what is already known and understood about the Korean experiment. And it serves to emphasize once again the tremendous burdens which, because of the times, the United States Government is forced to place upon the shoulders of its servants." G. W.

CLARK, M. W.—Continued

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 3 '54
650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 Ag '54

Current Hist 26:378 Je '54 110w

Foreign Affairs 32:683 Jl '54 20w

"It is much more than just a record of events. It is a penetrating and fearless commentary on the basic weaknesses of American policy that made possible the burgeoning growth of Soviet power. . . This is a closeup of the political along with the diplomatic and military operation as is possible today. There's an immense amount of absorbing analysis and detail of successive moves and countermoves, personalities, conflicts, advances and setbacks; there's the actual record of the case histories taken from the released prisoners, which formed the backbone of Lodge's report to the U.N. And throughout General Clark does not hesitate to speak his mind."

+ Kirkus 22:216 Mr 15 '54 360w

"There are no indiscriminate attacks on governmental policy or defection of duty in relation to the conduct of the Korean War and, despite his strong feelings in the matter, Clark writes more restrainedly than might be expected. His record of the Korean Armistice talks is arresting, and his suggestions for a Pacific counter-part of NATO are well presented. Recommended." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:983 My 15 '54 130w

"Written with unflinching good humor and in the lively style which characterized his earlier volume, 'Calculated Risk.' This is a thinner and less continuously absorbing book than its predecessor. In part this is to be explained by the fact that the author, who proved in 'Calculated Risk' that he is very good at describing battles, has little opportunity to demonstrate this gift here, for the period of intensive fighting was over by the time he arrived in the Far East." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 2 '54
900w

"'From the Danube to the Yalu' does not add much that is new to the Korean record. And unlike General Clark's first book, it is marred by hasty writing and annoying chronological back-trackings. But it is valuable as a perceptive account of history in the making and for its generally sound judgments and conclusions." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p3 My 2 '54 1100w

New Yorker 30:144 My 8 '54 240w

Reviewed by Jack Foisie

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 23 '54
700w

"It gets off to a beautifully brisk start as he describes how he gave Marshal Konev the strong-arm treatment during his time in Austria. Thrilling momentarily to the old Clark pace, the reader settles back. Thereafter, for most of its length, the book wallows around. That is a great pity, for Clark ■ a soldier is one of the more significant figures of our day." S. L. A. Marshall

+ Sat R 37:22 My 15 '54 700w

Reviewed by G. M. O. Davy

Spec p504 O 22 '54 470w

Time 63:104 My 3 '54 750w

"The book contains a penetrating portrait of Mr. Syngman Rhee and a warm tribute to the R.O.K. Army. . . The progress and conclusion of the truce talks are recorded in some detail, together with the story of the return of the prisoners of war. General Clark's views on the Japanese, on military training, on how to deal with Communists and on how we should have employed the Chinese Nationalist divisions in Formosa are all given with soldierly confidence, and merit critical study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p584 S 17
'54 1400w

Wis Lib Bul 50:135 My '54

CLARK, RANDOLPH LEE, and CUMLEY, RUSSELL W., comps. Book of health; a medical encyclopedia for everyone. 836p il $12.50 Elsevier

613 Hygiene

[53-7247]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"In spite of undesirable features in the format and errors in the Index and in spelling, this work seems definitely superior to the average home medical book. Because of up-to-dateness of information, comprehensive treatment, inclusion of subjects uncommon to this type of book, such as medical history and sanitation, the unusual amount of biographical material, the many good illustrations and charts, and the combination glossary and index, The Book of Health is an excellent reference tool. It is recommended."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 25:33 Jl '54 1250w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEER. All the best in Spain and Portugal. 372p il $4.50 Dodd 946 [914.6] Spain—Description and travel.

Portugal—Description and travel 53-9597

Gives information on hotels, restaurants, local customs, and other guidebook data for Spain and Portugal. Map on endpapers. Index.

Booklist 50:142 D 1 '53

"It does the job it sets out to do in Mr. Clark's always efficient way."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 3 '54
40w

"I am not convinced all of the best is included. In an effort to cover everything, span two countries, and include their extremities—Madeira, Majorca, Tangier, the Canaries, Spanish Morocco, and Andorra—some information has been lost. Upon occasion a mere listing of hotels by category must suffice when a short description of a few might give the traveler ■ better idea of what will suit his personal preference. . . On the other hand, there are occasional lapses into the author's own asides about life in general that add to the overall folksiness of his style." H. A. S.

+ — Sat R 36:41 D 19 '53 280w

Wis Lib Bul 50:131 My '54

CLARK, THOMAS CURTIS, and CLARK, HAZEL (DAVIS), eds. Golden book of immortality; a treasury of testimony. 232p $2.50 Assn. press

237.2 Immortality

54-8447

"A compilation of short extracts from the writings of thoughtful persons in various professions, dealing with the theme of eternal life. This anthology is not a forum, presenting the arguments pro and con. It is a composite affirmation of faith." Christian Century

"Having spent what were to be the last months of his life in compiling, with the collaboration of his wife, a book on immortality, Thomas Curtis Clark went on to explore in person the field which he had hitherto envisioned only by the faith of a Christian and a poet. It will be a source of deep satisfaction to his many friends, and of strength and comfort to many others, that he left behind this legacy of hope." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:302 Mr 10 '54 750w

"A source book for preachers and a means of comfort and faith to the bereaved."

+ Kirkus 22:187 Mr 15 '54 180w

"This inspirational volume will certainly provide comfort and quietude in times of sorrow, pessimism and crisis." G. A. Panichas

+ Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54
240w

CLARK, WILLIAM BELL. First Saratoga; being the saga of John Young and his sloop-of-war. 199p $3.50 La. state univ. press

973.35 Saratoga (sloop of war). Young, John. U.S.—History—Revolution—Naval operations 54-7333

The first Saratoga was a sloop of war in the Continental navy. This account records all that is known about the ship and its captain, John Young. After playing an important role in raids upon British shipping the sloop disappeared in a storm in West Indian waters. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Clark has done a memorable job in assembling the parts of a mosaic from many and sparse sources, both as to the man and the ship. The captain steps out of his pages as a vigorous, driving seaman, but most especially as a man who did some genuine naval thinking, both on the handling of a single ship, and on questions of naval strategy. It is both a pleasure and a benefit to have him rescued from the shadows for us." Fletcher Pratt

+ Am Hist R 59:1022 J1 '54 240w

"Readers interested in naval history will find this worth reading." Richard Philbrick

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 7 '54 90w

"The saga of Captain John Young and his sloop-of-war does an excellent job of resurrecting a forgotten hero of the Revolution."

+ Current Hist 26:256 Ap '54 100w

Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54 110w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:172 Je '54 200w

CLARK, WILLIAM HORACE. Gardening for color. 212p $2.95 Little

635.9 Gardening 54-8307

"Introductory chapters lay the groundwork of basic principles of color, and the basic thinking of the author along lines of purpose, procedure, materials. He warns continually that all gardening requires planning and work, and continuous attention; while gardening for color requires even more specific planning and work and continuous attention. But the end result should mean color from March to November, while even late Fall and Winter can have color in bark and twigs, in berries and fruits. Trees, shrubs, vines, flowering bulbs, perennials, and annuals for fill ins are given full measure. Extensive lists, specialized and general, but all linked by focus on color." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 51:99 N 1 '54

"The gardener anxious to paint an attractive scene with living plants will find Clark's handy volume a stimulating one replete with helpful hints." Art Kozelka

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 12 '54 70w

"Tops in the field."

+ Kirkus 22:378 Je 15 '54 210w

"You'll have to make the usual allowances for California, of course; our special climate has long been a frustration for the Eastern garden book publisher. But Mr. Clark's general principles are applicable anywhere, and his book can be very helpful to Californians as well as others. One interesting section is that on the single-color garden, which is something you may not have thought of." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 13 '54 90w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 150w

CLARKE, ARTHUR CHARLES. Expedition to earth. 165p $2; pa 35c Ballantine

53-12766

Eleven science fiction stories.

Booklist 50:280 Mr 15 '54

"Genuine space fiction, in which the probabilities of natural science are respected, rather than space fantasy, in which imagination is given free play." P. J. Henniker-Heaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 24 '53 340w

Kirkus 21:721 N 1 '53 50w

"You'll find every aspect of Mr. Clarke in this book, from the technological 'Superiority,' which is recommended reading in graduate classes at M. I. T. as 'particularly helpful in illustrating basic points on system design' (and which is also a delightfully sardonic story of character) to the philosophical 'Second Dawn,' a brilliantly conceived and developed epic fragment of the history of a race with high intelligence but no tool-manipulating organs." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 20 '53 230w

"Each of these eleven stories is, in its own way, a perfect expression of this author's wide-ranging talent." J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p24 F 14 '54 180w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 13 '54 280w

CLARKE, ARTHUR CHARLES. Going into space [Eng title: Young traveller in space]. 117p il $2.50 Harper

629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages. Rockets (aeronautics) 54-8941

The author tells the history of rocket development; man's achievements in dealing with the physical laws that govern the universe; the construction of a space ship and the prospect of establishing temporary and permanent space stations above the earth's stratosphere. For junior high and high school readers.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:97 D '54 50w

Booklist 51:137 N 15 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 N 14 '54 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"Learned and lively account of possible inter-space travel by a noted British physicist."

+ Commonweal 61:200 N 19 '54 10w

"This is good fare for the space-minded."

+ Kirkus 22:490 Ag 1 '54 120w

"Rare in juvenile, or indeed any, non-fiction is writing that is at once clear, simple and precise. Arthur C. Clarke's adaptation of his space studies for young readers is therefore trebly welcome." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 28 '54 100w

"Arthur C. Clarke is one of the original space enthusiasts, and it is only natural that he should gloss over a good many of the obstacles. At least his book is written in clear, non-mathematical language. It contains no factual errors or irresponsible nonsense, and this is more than can be said about most space books." J. N. Leonard

+ N Y Times p28 D 12 '54 180w

"This painstaking and readable volume is scientific writing of a high order for any beginner of over eleven." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:219 N 27 '54 60w

CLARKE, ARTHUR CHARLES. Prelude to space. 166p $2.50 Gnome press; pa 35c Ballantine

54-7257

Science fiction.

Booklist 50:322 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

"An astronomical documentary. . . More science than fiction."

Kirkus 22:84 F 1 '54 60w

"Probably the most elementary and certainly one of the most richly moving of recent sci-

CLARKE, A. C.—Continued
tific novels, equally absorbing to the novice reader and to the most ingrained aficionado."

H. H. Holmes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 21 '54 150w

"Exciting and engrossing novel. . . . One of the best space-flight novels yet written. It is a find for every science-fiction fan." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 28 '54 150w

CLARKE, JOYCE, and DICKSON, SALLY.
Woman's guide to financial security. 185p $2.75 Barrows

332 Finance, Personal 53-9663

"Presents in simple terms the basic facts about social security and pension plans, savings accounts, life insurance, real estate, stocks and bonds, mutual funds, etc. Money talk, index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:178 Ja 1 '54

Bookmark 13:30 N '53 10w

"The authors own a nationally known public relations firm and have had the assistance of outstanding financial experts in the preparation of this book. The reviewer feels this book will be helpful to the women for whom it was written." D. G. Van Bortel

+ J Home Econ 46:346 My '54 250w

"Perhaps the most useful feature in each section is the note in which disadvantages of each type of investment are carefully set down. That and the outstanding commonsense approach are the notable characteristics of the book. This is the kind of advice, simply given, which can do one thing, perhaps the most important and useful of all. It can help people who do not know their way around in the language of investment and finance not to make the kind of mistake which can be costly. I'd imagine that the authors would be happy if their book accomplished this alone, though it does much more." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 9 '54 500w

CLAUSEN, LUCY WILHELMINE. Insect fact and folklore. 194p il $3.50 Macmillan (N Y) 595.7 Insects, Folklore of insects 54-11100

"A compilation of legends, proverbs, superstitious beliefs, folklore and facts about insects. From Lepidoptera to Siphonaptera the information is systematically arranged but informally presented. In each chapter, brief basic knowledge about a particular order of insects is expanded by the legendary and anecdotal material. The extensive bibliography attests to the thorough way in which the author has assembled the information." Library J

Booklist 51:33 S 15 '54

Reviewed by H. B. Ellis
Christian Science Monitor p9 O 13 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:261 Ap 1 '54 170w

"Recommended." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:977 My 15 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 11 '54 30w

"An engaging attempt by a lecturer on entomology at the American Museum of Natural History to set the record straight on the most numerous, the most adaptable, and the most willfully misunderstood of all our fellow-creatures."

+ New Yorker 30:86 Ag 21 '54 160w

CLAVERING, MOLLY. Mrs Lorimer's family. 249p $3 Longmans

53-11642

The scene is the Scottish border and Mrs Lorimer's family is definitely county. Among the difficulties Mrs Lorimer has with her family is the problem of Guy's marriage. Guy, her only unmarried child and rather a favorite, wants to marry a quiet little person with a new-rich background. Surprisingly enough it is Mrs Lorimer's husband, who seldom makes decisions, who solves a good many of their problems.

Booklist 50:185 Ja 1 '54

Kirkus 21:640 S 15 '53 150w

"Molly Clavering obviously knows every country lane in a village like Threipford and all about families like the Lorimers. The plot, the talk, the descriptions and the tempo are all gently refined—and as English as good tweeds." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p56 D 6 '53 320w

"Recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:31 Ja '54

CLAYTON, JOHN BELL. Walk toward the rainbow. 308p $3.75 Macmillan (N Y) 54-12922

"This novel by an excellent story-teller follows a booze-battler through his second nervous breakdown after he and his wife separate. With a childhood trauma and various complexes to draw on, he is in a bad way till rescued by three people and a city, San Francisco." Library J

"Characterization is good, scene is excellent. Welcome, bona fide realism after so much unreal output. Recommended for all fiction collections." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 79:2329 D 1 '54 80w

"John Bell Clayton has a gift for description that recaptures the Virginia countryside of his youth, the eager sense of discovery that marked his college days, the garish beauty of a sick man's first vision of San Francisco. It is a pity that the substance of his novel is so hackneyed." Caroline Tunstall

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 D 5 '54 330w

"Mr. Clayton's manifest qualifications include compassion, a fine sense of selection and form, a style charged with verve and a discipline acquired through a newspaper career and two novels prior to this one." Frances Gaither

+ N Y Times p42 O 24 '54 400w

"His 'Wait, Son, October Is Near' is still the best novel of the three to my way of thinking, but Mr. Clayton is most certainly a novelist with something to say, and a good writer to boot. His explorations into the damaged psyche have so far held up remarkably well, and in this newest novel he may well have completed his say on that theme. If he has, it will be extremely interesting to see what he tackles next." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 10 '54 550w

"John Bell Clayton is a deft and able professional who has proved himself in his 'Six Angels at My Back,' and his account of the novelist's attempt to hold himself together with second is vivid and real and frightening. One suspects, however, that he would have done better to keep the novelist out of his book and put the book's problems into another character—say a nice banker or a nice real-estate agent." Pat Frank

+ Sat R 37:17 D 11 '54 230w

CLEARY, BEVERLY. Henry and Ribsy; il. by Louis Darling. 192p $2.50 Morrow 54-6402

In this third book about Henry Huggins and his dog Ribsy, Henry had a challenge. If he could keep Ribsy out of trouble for two months his father promised to take him salmon fishing. There follows a series of laughable adventures, for Ribsy did not understand about the promise. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 51:21 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:12 O '54 20w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p24 N 14 '54 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

+ Kirkus 22:435 Jl 15 '54 100w

"There's fun on every page, and the pictures are equally real and funny, the combination irresistible." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p7 N 14 '54 200w

"Few writers for children can handle everyday comedy so briskly and so realistically as Beverly Cleary. . . It's no wonder that real-life contemporaries of Henry—and of Ellen Tebbitts and Otis Spofford—recommend Mrs. Cleary's books enthusiastically." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p34 S 26 '54 160w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:211 N 27 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '54 150w

Sat R 37:78 N 13 '54 150w

CLEEVE, BRIAN TALBOT. Night winds [Eng title: Birth of a dark soul]. 244p $2.75 Houghton; pa 35c Ballantine

54-5698

"[A story] of modern Johannesburg [which] centers on a robbery in the home of a rich Jewish businessman who has a highborn English wife. The robbery is plotted by a Chinese, and his gang includes two Negroes and two men who are part Negro." New Yorker

Booklist 50:320 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:11 Ja 1 '54 180w

"Mr. Cleeve, in his novel of life in modern Johannesburg, has presented a picture of misery probably not ever equaled save by our own Mr. Erskine Caldwell's social vignettes. Unfortunately, both Mr. Cleeve and Mr. Caldwell have a point to make, but they approach it in such an orgy of exaggeration that the whole thing fails to become believable." Sylvia Stallings

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 11 '54 550w

"Steadily written, ugly, mildly gloomy story." New Yorker 30:116 F 27 '54 120w

"A compact work, swift in its development, shrewd, though not profound in its character portrayal. . . In spite of the story's dramatic tightness and many revealing social and personal insights, the book lacks depth. This may be the limit of Mr. Cleeve's vision, or the lack of a deeper root." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:16 Ap 17 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 40w

"The theme is a piece of advocacy too slick, too easy, because the characters dreamed up by the author are never strong enough to challenge his supremacy."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p533 Ag 21 '53 70w

CLELAND, JAMES T. True and lively Word. 120p $2.50 Scribner

251 Preaching

54-6304

"One who has spent several years in teaching theological students to preach now gives a larger audience an interpretation of preaching. . . Dr. Cleland realizes importance of process of 'digging, turning over, and sifting a passage of Scripture in order to find real Word of God,—pulling eternal out of temporal and temporal out of eternal.' But important as this [is], the preacher himself, he believes, must be the Word re-incarnated." (Library J) Index.

"Lectures on preaching, delivered to Episcopalian students by a Presbyterian who normally works for the Methodists as professor of preaching at the divinity school of Duke University. With this ecumenical start, one expects a broadly intelligent treatment of the subject, and that expectation is not disappointed."

+ Christian Century 71:739 Je 16 '54 70w

"A very readable and quotable book for those concerned with the transmission of the message of religion to men of our day."

+ Kirkus 22:193 Mr 15 '54 130w

"Recommended for Theological Seminary and libraries building subject to meet local needs."

O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:542 Mr 15 '54 160w

CLEMENT, HAL, pseud. See Stubbs, H. C.

CLEWES, WINSTON DAVID ARMSTRONG. Peacocks on the lawn. 224p $3 Dutton

54-5039

An English bachelor, in Ireland on holiday, comes on a broken down railroad and becomes interested in the story back of it. In time he learns most but not all, of the story, and finds his own happiness. The time is the turn of the century.

Booklist 50:358 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:185 My '54 50w

Kirkus 22:79 F 1 '54 200w

"The style is a bit irritating, the chapters seeming to alternate between present and past. However, the characters are all very real and there is charm in the Irish settings and true knowledge of Irish ways. Recommended as light reading." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 79:385 F 15 '54 60w

"Mr. Clewes has written a sad and tender little book, sparked with charming pictures of Irish county life in the early nineteenth-hundreds. . . Hammock-reading days may still be some way off, but 'Peacocks on the Lawn' will do very nicely on a long spring afternoon." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 4 '54 330w

"Mr. Clewes has set it down, lightly and lovingly, in this compassionate and perceptive story of disillusioned hopes and fond fancies gone awry. Lightly because he has an expert touch, and lovingly because he is that rare phenomenon, an Englishman at ease with the Irish, a writer who appreciates their natural good manners, a man they are willing to trust with secrets they would withhold from a lesser novelist—like Harmer." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 4 '54 240w

"Mr. Clewes, a deft writer, makes a delightful summer novel out of all this."

+ New Yorker 30:131 Ap 3 '54 50w

"Lively and acute, with a quick and nice turn of phrase." R. D. Charques

+ Spec p480 O 10 '52 310w

"The story is told in a series of flashbacks, which represent Harmer's successive discoveries but do not actually correspond with them. This is a well-trying method of construction, and Mr. Clewes handles it with assurance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 10 '52 270w

CLINTON, SIR HENRY. American Rebellion; Sir Henry Clinton's narrative of his campaigns, 1775-1782, with an appendix of original documents; ed. by William B. Willcox. 658p maps $7.50 Yale univ. press

973.341 U.S.—History—Revolution. U.S.—History—Revolution—Personal narratives, British

54-5094

"This book [is] by the man who commanded the British forces in the American colonies during four years of the Revolutionary War. Sir Henry's military career was ill-starred, and in 1782, when he left these shores, he was pretty much under a cloud. He devoted twelve years to writing his memoirs—a sort of apologia pro bello suo, in which he defends his actions and excoriates those of other British generals. . . The manuscript, which has been lying in the library of the University of Michigan, has been edited by Professor William B. Willcox." New Yorker

Current Hist 27:387 D '54 120w

"By means of superb editing and a brilliant introduction the editor has raised this 'Narrative' to an important place in the literature of the War for Independence." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 26 '54 850w

"During the last twelve years of his life, a choleric, middle-aged, stout man toiled to write an apology for his efforts as a British general in the War of the American Revolution. That disgruntled warrior was Sir Henry Clinton and the product of his long labor, now published in full for the first time, is an event of top-drawer importance for anyone interested in the history of the period." Lynn Montross

CLINTON, HENRY—Continued

+ N Y Times p42 N 14 '54 350w

"One of the things [the editor] had to contend with was the opacity of Sir Henry's prose, and a thorough reading of the book is still a task for scholars. However, skimming through produces some rewards, among them Sir Henry's description of his dealings with Benedict Arnold."

New Yorker 30:191 N 6 '54 160w

"Clinton's narrative, now published in full for the first time and skillfully edited by Professor William B. Willcox of the University of Michigan, may be a little late in helping save Clinton's reputation, if indeed that were possible. But it is still sufficiently timely for United Nations strategists to read and reflect upon and try not to repeat all his mistakes."

W. M. Wallace

+ Sat R 37:14 D 18 '54 700w

Time 64:116 N 8 '54 750w

CLIPPINGER, FRANCES. Rocket in the night.

369p $3.95 Random house

53-9717

Novel based on the rise to fame of a Hollywood actor-director, and the unhappy fortunes of the women he meets along his way. The scene is New York and Hollywood.

"Here is a shrewd novel, hard, swift, bitter; a story of people who hate themselves and bore themselves, destroying all finer impulses in their hearts as they battle for power. I read it with shudders of morbid fascination." Fitzroy Davis

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 11 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:160 Mr 1 '54 180w

"The sensitivity, knowledge and imagination of a keen observer are obvious in this delineation of an enfant terrible. . . Miss Clippinger offers an interested reader a chance to reconstruct prototypes for her hero, Darwin Hayes, and his coterie." A. H. Weiler

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 4 '54 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 23 '54 200w

CLOU, JOHN. Caravan to Camul. 383p $3.75

Bobbs

Jenghis Khan—Fiction

54-6494

Historical novel dealing with the early years of Jenghiz Khan. The story's hero is Kisil, soldier and philosopher in the Khan's entourage.

Booklist 50:419 Jl 1 '54

"This is an interesting story of adventure filled with much detail of those strange places and times."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 25 '54 140w

"An able, soundly researched historical novel." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 4 '54 280w

"Since the developments of today in Central Asia are having important effects on the world-wide scene, and may have even greater influences in years to come, this well-written book by Mr. Clou has a special informative value as well as a high entertainment quotient."

H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 200w

CLYMER, ELEANOR (LOWENTON). Chester;

il. by Ezra Jack Keats. 141p $2.50 Dodd

54-8749

Chester Bassett wanted two things: a football suit and a really good camera. This story for ages eight to twelve shows how he got both.

Booklist 51:89 O 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"An entertaining story, full of amusing dialogue, the day-to-day doings of small boys, and—incidentally—a good deal of information on the mechanics of taking and developing pictures." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p26 S 19 '54 120w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 14 '54 40w

COATES, JOHN. Patience. 213p $3 Macmillan

(N Y)

54-9058

Patience was a very innocent young married woman, mother of three small children, living in the St John's Wood section of London. Patience's brother Lionel, with his exaggerated ideas of Sin, started a train of events when he told his sister about her husband's affair with another woman. What happened thereafter to Patience makes the story.

"A fresh, witty, sophisticated story of life today." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 18 '54 290w

"Sort of silly if you look at it one way but for some giddy and amusing moments this has a certain spark."

Kirkus 22:129 F 15 '54 130w

"Like Patience, Mr. Coates wanders far afield from the ordinary and logical, and this is exactly what makes his book a delight."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 4 '54 450w

"Mr. Coates' sense of humor is very wry and very entertaining. He draws his characters with artful precision; he sets the stage, and manages the scenes with all the skill of a ballet master." D. R. McD.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 20 '54 220w

"John Coates has a delicious way with words; his tongue-in-cheekish portrait of Patience is good-humoredly satiric. But when Patience discovers that she has been missing something in her seven years of married 'submission' to Edward, Mr. Coates drifts from his mood of lightweight satire, off into fairly misty sentiment." Martin Levin

+ — Sat R 37:34 Ap 24 '54 230w

"Mr. Coates maintains his light touch, raising smiles where other writers might raise frowns; and, while his primary purpose is to entertain, the sanity and happiness of his story make it more valuable than many solemn studies of man's way with woman and woman's way with man." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p90 Jl 17 '53 140w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Mountain bride; an incredible tale; il. by George W. Thompson.

153p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

54-7068

A legendary story of Maine. Sylvia, part Indian, disappears for a time and when she returns to her father's cabin, she is bearing a child, offspring of a secret marriage. When the little daughter is still young Sylvia again meets the spirit of Katahdin and this time returns with gifts, for herself and her child.

Booklist 50:380 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:219 Je '54 20w

"The characterizations in this graceful and intriguingly implicative fantasy are clear cut and also subtle, and the simply rendered scenes have poetic overtones. Man's spirit is mythically set forth; the primitive and the civilized contend and yet endure each other, and a possible equilibrium between impulse and reason, vitality and order, nature and humanity is persuasively suggested." Warren Beck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 1 '54 260w

"This incredible tale based on Indian legends told in the lonely area around Katahdin mountain in Maine will be read by those young people for whom other fantasies—Green Mansions, Portrait of Jennie, etc.—have held a strong appeal." G. P. Slocum
Library J 79:1674 S 15 '54 60w

"This is Elizabeth Coatsworth's third 'Incredible Tale,' and here she reaches the more awful, the more important lore. Here the fears and the inventions of this particular locale give way to world wisdom or imaginings, joining hands with basic myths of the Ancient World. It is not an easy thing to do to bring into a modern time and family (even part-Indian) this kind of thunderous happening; but Elizabeth Coatsworth has great skill at it; she has brought again into the consciousness those strange, never-quite-answerable longings, dreads, convictions, of the heart; the necessity to bind humanity to other strata of creation, above, below, effecting universal unity." L. T. Nicholl

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Je 20 '54 550w

"Legendry is a tricky and elusive business. There's something about a legend that calls for not only its own language of statement but its own terms of belief. It makes slanting references to and oblique contacts with reality, but the exciting thing about a memorable legend is its summation—the keen, clear light it throws upon human strength or frailty. And that, perhaps, is where Miss Coatsworth's latest 'incredible tale' failed to persuade this reader. Reaching for reality, it missed the exaltation that would have lifted it into the beyond, the poetic certainty of the really incredible." Hal Borland

N Y Times p21 Je 27 '54 320w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck
Springf'd Republican p12D J1 18 '54 180w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Sod house; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 64p $2 Macmillan (N Y) 54-12898

Story of a family of German immigrants who settled in Kansas a hundred years ago to find freedom for themselves and to help make Kansas a state free from slavery. For ages six to eight.

Booklist 51:155 D 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p47 N 14 '54 80w

+ Kirkus 22:481 Ag 1 '54 120w

"This is a clear, simply-told tale with the simplest of morals: Fight for what you consider right."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 14 '54 50w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 60w

COBB, DAVID. Drawing and painting seascape, shipping and waterside scenery. 166p il $7.95 Pitman

741.6 Ships in art. Sea in art. Marine painting 54-2705

"An artist's observations, suggestions, and illustrations of techniques in drawing and painting water effects and motions, ship and boat construction and motions, coastal scenery, and seascapes. Numerous line, pen, and wash drawings, and colored plates are used to illustrate the author's approach to the problem under discussion. Intended to promote both the techniques and the appreciation of marine art." Booklist

Booklist 50:395 Je 15 '54

"Here is a book for the advanced artist who is interested in painting the sea, waterside, shipping, and all that pertains to the area. Not so much a how-to-do-it lesson, altho there are tips worth remembering, but rather a series of talks on where and how to look for the real 'picture.' The author is well versed in all the aspects of shipping and the behavior of water." G. S.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 4 '54 90w

COBLENTZ, EDMOND DAVID, ed. Newsmen speak; journalists on their craft; foreword by Joseph A. Brandt. 197p $3.50 Univ. of Calif. press

070.8 Journalism

54-6473

"Largely in their own words, several leading American publishers, editors, reporters, cartoonists, news agency directors and advertising men relate the theories and techniques of the newspaper press. Edmond D. Coblentz, editor of half a century of association with William Randolph Hearst, has made a representative selection on the fundamentals of his skill." Library J

Booklist 50:349 My 15 '54

"Journalists, aspiring and experienced, will find passages worth reading more than once. Newspaper readers will gain a quick overview of the thinking and processes behind news-making." J. W. Stein

+ Library J 79:978 My 15 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune R p12 Je 13 '54 30w

"All contributors are American except Lord Northcliffe, and his crackling comment on the shortcomings and triumphs of his own papers explains his inclusion. His is the most pungent and pointed and practical criticism of newspaper performance in the book. Anyone can see in Northcliffe's notes a natural genius for journalism. Most of the pieces are short, and nearly all have the journalistic quality of being easy to read fast." L. M. Lyons

+ N Y Times p21 My 23 '54 420w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '54 270w

COCHRAN, JACQUELINE (MRS FLOYD ODLUM). Stars at noon; with Floyd Odium as wingman. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 274p $4.50 Little

B or 92 Aviators—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-8316

An informal biography of Jacqueline Cochran, the famous aviatrix, beginning with her poverty-stricken youth in Florida, and tracing her rise to her present peak of success.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 194:92 O '54 260w

Booklist 51:53; 81 O 1 '54; O 15 '54

"In his foreword, her husband, Floyd Odium, says, 'Jacqueline is the most interesting person I've ever known.' The readers of her autobiography will agree." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 17 '54 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

"The success story of an era sparkles with the vigor and decisiveness of a great woman and pilot."

+ Kirkus 22:463 J1 15 '54 280w

"Her story is simply written, as direct and engaging as she is, and as her husband must be, since he has assisted and encouraged her. For the moment all other success stories are dimmed by the brightness of this one, which may be purchased by all libraries. It will be read by young and old." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1890 O 15 '54 170w

"Fascinated by Miss Cochran's story, we finish 'The Stars at Noon,' wanting to know more about this extraordinary woman than her first-person recital gives us and hoping that some later biographer will satisfy our curiosity." Judith Crist

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 17 '54 500w

"If her book is weak in character drawing (Miss Cochran is apt to dismiss a person as kind or evil) it more than makes up for it in the wealth of information about world conditions and aviation. . . 'The Stars at Noon' gives the reader a fine, wholesome feeling of respect for the author. I only wish Jacqueline Cochran had told more about some of the people and places she has known." T. S. Winslow

+ N Y Times p5 O 17 '54 950w

COCHRAN, JACQUELINE—Continued

"Throughout, of course, Miss Cochran dominates the book. She does it, with little introspection or egotism, by her enthusiasm, her interest in anything she comes across, and her willingness to tackle any job put to her." L. B. Johnson

+ Sat R 37:18 N 6 '54 800w

"Nothing has blunted her zest for living and search for new experiences, and it is because of these qualities, plus the fact that she still observes the world in which she finds herself with the naive delight and curiosity of a little girl, that 'The Stars at Noon' possesses a refreshing and healthy quality." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 550w

COCHRAN, LOUIS. Row's end. 245p $3.50
Duell; Little

54-6887

"In 1935, when Gus Turner came home from the University of Mississippi to spend his Christmas vacation, he found Delta City in the throes of the depression. With no relief from the depression in sight, land owner and tenant farmer alike were at their 'row's end.' Before Christmas day, Gus had seen despair, violence, and death in Delta City." Library J

Kirkus 22:213 Mr 15 '54 160w

Reviewed by J. D. Marshall

Library J 79:1058 Je 1 '54 70w

"The author writes with understanding and pity of problems still far from resolved."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 S 5 '54 140w

Reviewed by Charlotte Capers

N Y Times p10 J1 4 '54 300w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 12 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 80w

COCHRAN, THOMAS CHILDS. Railroad leaders, 1845-1890; the business mind in action. 564p maps $7.50 Harvard univ. press

385.1 Executives. Railroads—U.S. 52-9383

"The author projects the opinions and attitudes of 60 principal railroad executives active in the United States during the second half of the last century. The study is based upon first hand research into letters written by the men studied, and makes for an interesting inventory of attitudes and ideas in such areas as: ownership and controls, entrepreneurs and stockholders, the customer, competitor, labor, public opinion, and government. The writer [is] a professor of history at the University of Pennsylvania." (Library J) Index.

"Anyone working in business history will certainly want to consult Professor Cochran's volume, but, more important, anyone concerned with human habit patterns and motivation, either past or present, will find this type of investigation interesting. While the book can hardly be recommended as light reading for a hot summer afternoon, it is significant in opening attractive vistas of types of information and of techniques that may well become vitally important for future historians." R. E. Riegel

+ Am Hist ■ 59:648 Ap '54 470w

Reviewed by W. F. Cottrell

Am Soc R 19:498 Ag '54 1100w

"The book is well organized. The assumptions are clearly stated at the outset. . . The book is extensively footnoted—50 pages of fine print at the back. Also there are some 275 pages of selections from the letters of the 61 presidents. The index is full and helpful. Although a book of this kind must of necessity be somewhat disjointed, Dr. Cochran has done everything possible to make it cohesive. Historians critical of nineteenth-century businessmen should read this book and qualify their sweeping condemnations." D. L. Kemmerer

+ Ann Am Acad 292:169 Mr '54 600w

Reviewed by Paul Wasserman

Library J 79:210 F 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. E. Riegel

Pol Sci Q 69:299 Je '54 300w

"The book does not undertake the impossible task of tracing the executives' histories as managers, but it presents a clear guide to their attitudes. Excerpts from letters, occupying half the volume, show even more clearly than does the preceding useful synthesis, the thinking of individuals. Both the content and the technique of this well-executed volume will interest economists, business administrators, historians, and sociologists."

+ U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:172 Je '54 400w

Reviewed by J. E. Sawyer

Yale R n s 43:624 summer '54 550w

COCHRANE, LOUISE, and COCHRANE, PETER. Digest of British history. 127p il $2 McKay

942 Great Britain—History

A bird's-eye view of English history, written around the reigns of its various kings and queens. Each chapter has a dated table of people and events. Contains many illustrations. Index.

Booklist 51:36 S 15 '54

"Into the space of a long magazine article, the authors have compressed the social and political history of England, yet they have contrived to retain flavor and color." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54 20w

COCTEAU, JEAN. On the film; a conversation recorded by André Fraigneau; tr. by Vera Traill. 140p il $3.50 Roy pubs.

792.93 [791.4] Moving pictures 54-6508

Conversations in which Jean Cocteau discusses his theories, observations, and criticisms on the motion picture.

"Some of M. Cocteau's remarks may follow a tendency of creative people, when asked to explain their work, to straight-facedly pull the public's leg. Some may provide ammunition for those who think him more arty than artistic. Still the movies need experiments in things besides new dimensions." Rod Nordell

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 19 '54 370w

"Recommended for cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1321 J1 '54 50w

"Jean Cocteau is a lively and fluent conversationalist, and his ideas are always stimulating and provocative. . . Unfortunately the basic fact about Cocteau's films is that they are not, either literally or financially, popular. Their appeal is limited, their audience specialized. This in no way detracts from the excitement of a 'Sang d'un Poète' or 'Orphée'; but to build a theory of film from such works is like the blind man describing an elephant from its tail." Arthur Knight

Sat ■ 37:33 Je 26 '54 600w

"It is not a repetition of the Diary of a Film and the making of La Belle et la Bête, but there is a great deal of detail about the making of Orphée and other films which will be of great interest to those who are mainly interested in Cocteau as a film-maker." M. C.

+ Spec p723 Je 11 '54 240w

"It seems a little unfortunate that two artists of the quality of M. Clair and M. Cocteau should have been willing to allow their opinions on a medium they have done so much to develop, to appear in such a casual, one might almost say such an impromptu, form. M. Cocteau is uncompromising in his approach to the cinema. He insists that for him it is a powerful weapon for the projection of thought, even into crowds unwilling to accept it. . . There is no doubt that he is finding an increasing audience and he refers hopefully to the numerous film societies which ask to see his works over and over again."

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 Ap 2 '54 420w

COE, LLOYD. Boku and the sound; il. by [the author]. 29p $2 Crowell

53-8409

Picture-story book for five-to-seven-year-olds. It tells the story of the little chimpanzee in the jungle who fell in love with the sound of a drum and went to investigate.

"In a very unfrighting way this story brings a child right into the heart of a jungle. The strange boom-boom the little 'chimp' hears is a sound the youngster will like to imitate himself." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 193:83 Je '54 30w

Kirkus 22:151 Mr 1 '54 60w

"Story is slight but pleasant. . . Recommended for 5-7-year-olds." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:139 My '54

COFFIN, HENRY SLOANE. A half century of Union theological seminary, 1896-1945; an informal history [foreword by Henry P. Van Dusen]. 261p $2.50 Scribner

207.747 New York (city). Union theological seminary 54-6526

"No one is in a better position to write the story of Union Theological Seminary over the past fifty years than Dr. Coffin whose connection with that institution as student, instructor, professor and President dates back to 1899. As an educational institution can best be interpreted in terms of the personalities who had a leading part in its life it is natural that Dr. Coffin should outline the history of the Seminary by way of thumbnail sketches of its more recent presidents: Charles Hall, Francis Brown, Arthur Cushman McGiffert. (The story of Dr. Coffin's presidency is told by Dr. Morgan P. Noyes). Included also are descriptions of the distinctive contributions of its professors, living and dead, such as George William Knox, Charles O. Fagnanci, James E. Frame, Thomas C. Hall, Ernest F. Scott, Eugene W. Lyman, Robert E. Herner, James Moffatt, Reinhold Niebuhr and Paul Tillich. Interpolated are accounts of the various theological disputes in which the Seminary was involved and of the successive trends in curriculum and student life." Kirkus

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1399 N 17 '54 180w

"Told in Dr. Coffin's trenchant style with characteristic humorous touches, this is a book which students, alumni and friends of this great institution and the great men who have made it will treasure."

+ Kirkus 22:193 Mr 15 '54 200w

"This informal history by the school's president-emeritus will have interest for friends of the seminary and other readers as well." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p21 Ag 15 '54 70w

COFFIN, TRISTRAM. Your Washington; ed. by Gordon Carroll. 151p $3 Duell; Little

917.53 Washington, D.C.—Description 54-5144

Anecdotes from history, folklore and personal reminiscences enliven these brief chapters on notable buildings and sites in and around Washington.

Booklist 50:416 Jl 1 '54

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by Leon Harpole

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 27 '54 30w

"The trouble with sight-seeing is that most people find they have been out of school too long. They stand before the statues, gaze at the monuments, thrilled and deeply moved by what they see. But too often they wish they could remember more about what those great men said and did. This is where Mr. Coffin's book proves its worth. Small enough to carry in the hand, it is a combination guide, history and memento. In a series of brief chapters it gives the background that brings fresh significance to these marble edifices." Emilie Tavel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 6 '54 260w

Kirkus 22:144 F 15 '54 120w

"There are other books about Washington, and this will not be the last written about the city. It will, however, be a long time before a better book than this one is written about our capital. Highly recommended for all libraries." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:767 Ap 15 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Je 6 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:179 Jl '54

COHEN, ELIE ARON. Human behavior in the concentration camp; tr. from the Dutch by M. H. Braaksma. 295p $5 Norton

940.547 Concentration camps. World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German 53-13294

"In an authoritative, fully-documented study, Dr. Cohen, a Dutch physician who was himself a prisoner at Auschwitz, has produced a remarkably dispassionate account of life in the German concentration camps. His great contribution lies in his analysis of the mentality of the prisoners and the SS. Basing his conclusions on his own experiences as well as on books and articles by many other inmates, Dr. Cohen attempts to answer two questions: what enabled the prisoners to withstand the horrible treatment and what caused the SS men to perpetrate the monstrous acts of barbarity?" Library J

Reviewed by M. M. Willey

Ann Am Acad 294:200 Jl '54 650w

Foreign Affairs 32:507 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by Louis Barron

Library J 79:60 Ja 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by John Cohen

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 27 '54 420w

"There is a certain lack of coherence in Dr. Cohen's presentation of his material, and his psychological techniques cannot fully encompass the enormous issues he has tackled—after all, psycho-analysis was developed to deal with individuals, not nations. In fact the pure reporting of a Kogon is sometimes more telling than an effort at interpretation. But this book is an affirmation of human values, if only for the reason that it was written at all, and not to be assessed in normal terms." Adam Curle

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:50 Jl 10 '54 850w

"The story within these pages is horrible to the verge of incredibility, even to one familiar with the basic facts about concentration camp life. . . To those who suggest that it was only a bad dream, Dr. Cohen's solid, documented treatment—so objective that at times it is almost dull—is the best answer. The horrors have been described before, however, and Dr. Cohen's most valuable contribution, I believe, is in the psychological field." Telford Taylor

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 3 '54 450w

Reviewed by H. M. Champness

Spec p151 Jl 30 '54 430w

COHEN, HENNIG. South Carolina gazette, 1732-1775. 273p $6 Univ. of S.C. press

975.7 South Carolina—Intellectual life. South Carolina—Social life and customs. South Carolina state gazette and Timothy's daily advertiser, Charleston 53-10179

"This is a study of the Southern colonial newspaper of which the longest and most complete file has been preserved (by the Charleston Library Society). A brief account of the South Carolina Gazette is followed by chapters on various phases of cultural life—'Club Life and Societies,' 'Teachers,' 'Doctors,' 'Artists,' and other topics. In each case there is a list of 'First Notices' of the subject, which 'deal with aspects of culture for which repetitious items have no significance,' or 'Notices,' which 'deal with aspects of colonial culture for which repetitious items are significant.' An appendix, containing biographical sketches of the editors of the newspaper, is followed by a list of works cited and an index." Am Hist R

COHEN, HENNIG—Continued

Reviewed by Christopher Crittenden
Am Hist R 59:466 Ja '54 200w

"In the pages of this remarkably fine book with an unnecessarily perfunctory title, the reader will discover a plenitude of information about an important colonial newspaper. . . . At least half the chapters add to our knowledge of early American music, to a greater or lesser degree. . . . It is a pleasure to report that Dr. Cohen's writing can be recommended for its skill and charm as well as for its erudition."

Irving Lowens

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 10:634 S '53
350w

COHEN, I. BERNARD. Benjamin Franklin: his contribution to the American tradition. (Makers of the American tradition ser) 320p $3 Bobbs

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin 53-9874
For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by Hal Bridges

Am Hist R 59:639 Ap '54 140w

"Required to compress Franklin's contribution into some three hundred pages, of which one-quarter consists of introductory material and three-quarters of selections from his writings, Mr. Cohen should be commended for his courage in undertaking what would seem an impossible assignment. Unable to cover every aspect of Franklin's many-sided personality, he has chosen to emphasize his early life and program of self-improvement, his activities on behalf of civic welfare, his scientific work, and his defense of American rights against British encroachments. . . . On the other hand, he has not included any of Franklin's writings on economic theory or his discussions of the specific quality of American society, so that the more radical side of Franklin's thinking has been somewhat overlooked and Franklin appears as a more conservative citizen than he was in actuality." H. B. Parkes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 7 '54
330w

"One of the merits of Mr. Cohen's book is the fact that many readers will finish it with the thought that they had never really known Franklin at all. Ben was in danger of becoming, if not already become, an impersonal myth. Here is the flesh and blood man, the mind and the heart as well as the evidence of constructive leadership." R. A. Brown

+ Social Educ 18:92 F '54 140w

"The selections are drawn alike from the familiar and indispensable passages in the standard editions of Franklin and from his uncollected and recently identified writings. The volume succeeds well in its professed aim of 'showing to Americans in the mid-twentieth century how Franklin expresses some of our most cherished ideals.'"

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:3 Mr '54 230w

COHEN, MORRIS RAPHAEL. American thought; a critical sketch; ed. and with a foreword by Felix S. Cohen. 360p $5 Free press

191 Philosophy, American. U.S.—Intellectual life 54-10667

"A study of reflective thinking in America, this is divided into nine parts: The Background of the American Tradition, American Ideas on History, Scientific Thought, Economic Thought, Political Thought, Legal Thought, Religious Thought, Aesthetics, and General Philosophy." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"As one would expect, there are repetitions and omissions. The author includes no note on the philosophy of Morris Cohen; yet what binds these fragments together as a positive achievement and what lends them status and significance is the image they give us of the mind of their author, a skeptical, gentle and incisive philosopher committed to the corresponding categories of chance, love and logic." Maurice Natanson

+ Christian Century 71:927 Ag 4 '54 1150w

"The late Morris Cohen has bequeathed to his countrymen an outstanding discussion of all facets of reflective thought in the United States."

+ Current Hist 27:191 S '54 130w

"The sketch is truly a critical one, and Morris R. Cohen was a superb critic of matters intellectual. Readers of his many books and reviews will find few surprises in this volume, but it is well that coming generations should have the benefit of his incisive comments upon his philosophical contemporaries. It is only to be regretted that he did not live to carry his immense task closer to completion." H. A. Larrabee

+ J Philos 51:441 Jl 22 '54 1900w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 11 '54
30w

"The distinguished philosopher put in twenty years on this ambitious critical history of American thinking in all fields, but it was still unfinished when he died in 1947, and his son, Felix S. Cohen, assembled it for publication before his own death last year. Even now the work is scrappy and incomplete—parts of it are obviously raw lecture notes—and it not only neglects psychology and sociology entirely but skimps woefully on literature and art. The writing, however, is often spirited, wise, and incandescently clear."

+ — New Yorker 30:76 S 4 '54 120w

"In spite of the title, these essays make no pretense at covering the field of American thought; rather they relate to certain aspects of this complex theme in which Mr. Cohen was particularly interested. Every page contains stimulating and often original reflections. Incomplete though it is, this book is an example of American critical thought at its best." N. D. Palmer

+ Social Studies 45:310 D '54 550w

"In general, it should be noted, the book is dated. Most of the work included was done before the Second World War, and consequently the volume lacks the perspective gained from the vastly important developments since then. This unavoidable defect is of minor consequence. Morris Cohen's 'American Thought' is a notable contribution to the understanding of our country and does honor to the memory of a distinguished scholar. We are indebted to Felix Cohen for skilful arrangement and careful editing." R. H. Gabriel

+ Yale R n s 44:278 winter '55 600w

COKER, ROBERT ERVIN. Streams, lakes, ponds. 327p il $6 Univ. of N.C. press

574.92 Fresh water biology. Water 54-13071

A survey of the composition of inland surface waters, and a study of the life they contain. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:146 D 1 '54

"Streams, Lakes, Ponds, will be a valuable reference for conservationists, public health workers, engineers, agriculturists, biologists and others concerned with problems of water and water management." A. C. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 28 '54
100w

COLBY, CARROLL BURLEIGH. First rifle (how to shoot it straight and use it safely) il. by [the author]. 48p $2 Coward-McCann

799.31 Rifles. Shooting 54-6321

"This book is a full, illustrated course on what a young rifleman should know before going on the target range or out hunting. Different kinds of rifles and ammunition, basic shooting positions, squeezing off the trigger are only a few of the lessons made easy to understand by one hundred sketches and drawings." N Y Times

"Strong emphasis on care and safety mark a useful primer for that inevitable stage in the lives of many children, when they want their first gun."

+ Kirkus 22:63 F 1 '54 80w

"Book would be helpful to beginners of any age, but juvenile format and presentation will restrict to a younger audience. Recommended where there is a known demand." Robert Van Benthuyzen

+ Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 60w

"A fine companion to his successful book 'First Fish.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 6 '54 40w

"'First Rifle' is a roundup of instruction on gun safety, how to shoot straight, and above all, what not to shoot at. Studying it should qualify any boy to take his place in the proud company of American riflemen." H. C. Rubicam

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:141 My '54

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD. Attempts at general union; a study in British trade union history, 1818-1834. 217p $3.50 St Martins

331.88 Trade unions—Great Britain

[53-11924]

"A specialized study of one of the earliest abortive movements in Britain to join all local trade unions into a single 'General Trade Union.' The author's point of departure is the Webbs' History of Trade Union, which Cole finds particularly inaccurate in its description of the previous attempts at 'General Union' before the famous rise and fall of the Grand National Consolidated Trades Unions, under Robert Owen, in 1833-1834. This then is the story of John Doherty, of the years 1829-1833, and the story of early trade unionism, particularly in Northern England." Current Hist

Current Hist 25:375 D '53 70w

"Professor Cole upsets the sequence repeated in innumerable books and presents a more coherent story, but it is a pity that he did not push his inquiries a little farther. A few hours' research into the Manchester papers of the critical years would have given him many more details of Doherty and his activities. . . Mr. Cole has, however, blazed the trail and his study—especially its treatment of the Yorkshire evidence—should encourage the collection of all the scattered sources, notably the local newspapers, that is still so much needed."

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 10 '53 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Jl 31 '53 500w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD. History of socialist thought; v 2: Marxism and anarchism, 1850-1890. 482p $6 St Martins

335.09 Socialism—History (53-1067)

This second volume in a proposed series of four in the author's A History of Socialist Thought covers a period of forty years, 1850-1890. (For volume one see Book Review Digest 1953). Select bibliography. Index.

Current Hist 27:190 S '54 250w

Reviewed by Cecil Sprigge

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 16 '54 600w

"Professor Cole has spent too much time in recent years producing rather thin popular 'guides,' so that it is good to welcome his return to the main track of scholarship. This new work, perhaps the most ambitious of his prolific career, provides us with both a lucid summary and a critical interpretation of a huge mass of Socialist literature, much of it indigestible but of no less historical importance on that account."

+ Nation 179:237 S 18 '54 430w

"To say the least, this book falls short of its aim. It is intelligent, competently written, seldom tedious, well-informed, and enlightening. These are its virtues. But it is also very ill-organized. . . It would be easy for a reader who went to this book as a guide to the evolution of radical ideas to come away most confused—unable to understand why Marxism, the creed of a handful led by a cantankerous prophet in 1850, achieved its position of influence in Germany by 1890; or how the ideas of the anarchists, given almost as much space by Cole, failed in competition with those of Marx; or why, indeed, one radical personality or idea is more important than another." Robert Lekachman

+ — New Repub 131:22 S 13 '54 360w

"The amount of reading and thinking that went into this book of nearly 500 pages is startling, yet the arrangement is so clear and the trend of the argument so vigorous, that there is little overcrowding. Rarest of all in a book of this sort is the kindness with which Cole handles thinkers whose outlook is far removed from his own." H. N. Brailsford

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:672 My 22 '54 100w

"He is factual, thorough, and in a slightly chilly and detached way, sympathetic. Perhaps he is sometimes a little too detached: in writing of figures like Herzen and Lassalle, he is frankly impatient of the intrusion of their private lives into their political thought. He is far more interested in movements than in ideas. His chapters on the First International and on the Paris Commune are among the best in the book, his chapter on the ideas of Marx and Engels the weakest."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 4 '54 1300w

COLE, STEWART GRANT, and COLE, MILDRED WIESE. Minorities and the American promise; the conflict of principle and practice; with a foreword by William Heard Kilpatrick. (Bureau for intercultural education publication ser: problems of race and culture in American education) 319p $4.50 Harper

301.45 [323.173] U.S.—Foreign population. National characteristics, American. Minorities 54-8942

"The Coles explore our cultural history and the significance of our ethical heritage, evaluating our efforts to develop out of many people 'one nation indivisible.' They show where these efforts have failed, maintaining that the concept of America as a 'melting pot' falls short of the democratic promise. And they survey the most effective practices at work today to improve relationships between individuals and groups." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 51:124 N 15 '54

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1520 D 15 '54 1500w

"On the whole a generalized and highly theoretical study, but its specific examples and its theme of free inquiry and humanized education establish its value."

Kirkus 22:304 My 1 '54 200w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:266 S 25 '54 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 12 '54 100w

"It is refreshing to find a book in this field which offers so much of documented fact and orderly analysis, and it is no discredit to the Coles that they fail at times to penetrate the deeper issues. This is true, for instance, of their discussion of religious tensions. It may also be noted that some of the conditions the book describes are a little too sharply etched, as, for example, in the case of Washington, D.C., where racial injustice has indeed been grievous, but where it is not true that all the churches have been 'strictly Jim-Crow.' But these are minor defects. The Coles have given us a valuable study." A. P. Davies

+ — N Y Times p25 O 3 '54 420w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 29 '54 50w

COLE, S. G.—Continued

"Perhaps the Coles are correct in their belief that two decades is an insufficient time for such a philosophy to have emerged. But one wishes that they had devoted more of this volume to this necessary aspect of democratic philosophy than to a review of the ABCs of group relationships, regardless of how valuable the latter might be to the neophyte in the field." E. N. Saveth

Sat R 37:19 D 25 '54 750w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 400w

COLE, TAYLOR, ed. European political systems. 699p college ed $6 Knopf

342.4 Europe—Politics

52-5080

Each of the six sections consists of several chapters written by authorities. Countries covered are: Soviet Russia; Eastern Europe; Germany; Italy; Great Britain; and France. Bibliography. Index.

"A new comparative government text by an extremely able group of scholars. . . Much more attention than is customary is given to matters of ideology and political theory and the analyses of the systems of government are made deeper and richer in consequence."

+ Am Pol Sci ■ 48:577 Je '54 70w

Booklist 50:69 O 15 '53

"Every teacher of modern history and social science finds it useful to have an up-to-date textbook for his own use on foreign governments. This book, edited by Taylor Cole, fills the need so far as modern Europe is concerned. . . The style of the book, absence of diagrams and pictures, make it essentially unsuitable for high school students. It is probably a useful volume for the high school library and for student and faculty reference."

H. A. Bone

+ Social Educ 18:46 Ja '54 200w

COLEAN, MILES LANIER. Renewing our cities. 181p il $2.50 Twentieth century fund

711.4 Cities and towns—U.S.

53-9616

"A housing expert's report on a survey he made of cities in the U.S., showing how and why they grow or deteriorate, and suggesting means by which slums and derelict areas can be eliminated, and what can be done through planning to develop a community where better living conditions prevail. This brief but comprehensive report is the basis for a forthcoming documentary film on the American city." (Booklist) Index.

"Despite its uncertain theoretical basis, those interested in improving urban living could hardly fail to profit by a reading of this little book." R. T. Daland

+ — Am Pol Sci R 48:569 Je '54 400w

"The author thinks that research is not an end in itself, but that action should be the objective of research. This point of view could well be used when planning and redevelopment are discussed in urban sociology texts." S. W. Blizard

+ Am Soc R 19:233 Ap '54 220w

"Here is a book that is really written for 'the general reader.' It is based on the most careful fact finding. It is brief and clear and inexpensive. What it presents can hardly fail to challenge any one who is concerned about our cities. The interests of tenants and landlords, of industrialists and strap-hangers, of tax-payers and city officials are all considered."

S. A. Queen

+ Ann Am Acad 291:178 Ja '54 360w

Booklist 50:115 N 15 '53

"This is must reading for every city official and civic leader. It is the best and most thoughtful statement of its kind." C. L. Gardner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 29 '53 400w

"The book's major limitation is that the perspectives of the sociologist, the psychologist, and the architect have little place in Mr. Colean's analysis. . . As in many surveys, so much ground is covered here in so few pages that concrete situations receive but brief and scattered comment, and this reduces the general usefulness of the book."

— Nation 178:16 Ja 2 '54 290w

"Mr. Colean's concisely written summary of the present status of urban planning, although of primary interest to students of urban sociology, housing problems, and metropolitan planning, is, at the same time, a guide and challenge to action for all forward-looking citizens."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:101 Mr '54 240w

COLEMAN, ELLIOTT. Golden angel; papers on Proust. 128p $3.50 Coley Taylor, Inc, 145 E. 63d St, N.Y. 10

B or 92 Proust, Marcel

54-9610

"Although Marcel Proust was brought up in the Roman Catholic faith, the complete absence of God from his world has long been accepted by most readers. But Elliott Coleman, once ordained in the Anglican Church, has in a series of eight delicately turned essays attempted to reveal Proust as, at least subconsciously, a deeply Christian writer." N Y Times

"The blurb on the jacket of Professor Coleman's book, designed to indicate the central thesis, 'Proust, as Christian—and Catholic—artist,' is far more blatant than any claims made within the text itself. It is, therefore, somewhat misleading. The subtitle of the book, 'Papers on Proust,' is over-modest, because the eight chapters are all concerned with the spiritual meaning of Proust's novel, with evidences of his religious sensitivity, with an effort to show 'that Proust is more Christian than anything else.' The book is subtly and delicately conceived, and no revolutionary thesis is put forward." Wallace Fowlie

+ Commonweal 61:70 O 22 '54 700w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 25 '54 60w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p28 O 10 '54 200w

"For all of Mr. Coleman's admirable intention, his proof is not equal to his thesis. We agree that Proust was ingeniously preoccupied with a search for lost time; but that his rationale was exclusively moral awaits further proof." E. A. Bloom

Sat R 37:42 O 30 '54 240w

COLEMAN, HERBERT STENNETT, Model-making [Eng title: Modelmaking for boys]. 87p il $2 Crowell

680 Mechanical models

53-9408

"These plans and detailed instructions for six models (yacht, galleon, marine steamplant, cargo liner, cabin monoplane, and airliner) are definitely for a mature, serious hobbyist. There is, as well, very practical advice for the beginner to instill the 'spirit of modelmaking' by photographs and text. First printed in Great Britain, [1949] this lists for further reading British magazines and format and point of view are more adult than we would normally expect in a book for boys." Library J

Booklist 50:325 Ap 15 '54

Kirkus 22:202 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Recommended where needed." Anne Izard

+ Library J 79:1670 S 15 '54 90w

COLEMAN, MRS SATIS NARRONA (BARTON). Another Dancing time; music for rhythmic activities of children; il. by Vana Earle. 32p $2.75 Day

372.21 Musical meter and rhythm—Juvenile literature

54-5882

A companion volume to Dancing Time (Book Review Digest 1952). This book contains fourteen simple piano accompaniments for rhythmic games with children. For kindergarten thru grade three.

Booklist 50:301 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13
'54 60w

"The fourteen tunes are simple, easily played, and suggest varied movements: for pretending to be ponies, jumping frogs, a merry-go-round, or creeping tortoises; for climbing trees, taking a nap, and bouncing balls. The silhouette drawings bordering each tune are graceful suggestions for action." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:254 Ag '54 80w

"Perhaps more formalized than a book like Marion Abeson and Charity Bailey's Playtime With Music, this has its own charm and impetus for developing rhythmic senses."

+ Kirkus 22:109 F 14 '54 80w

"Useful for teachers in primary grades, music teachers, and parents. Not a book for children to use themselves." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 70w

"A new book by Satis N. Coleman is always welcome, particularly for those teaching in nursery schools." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 6 '54 20w

"The selections are well worth learning. All are within the listening and interpreting abilities of the child from kindergarten through third grade. Most of them will also give pleasure to the nursery school child." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 29 '54 320w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. All that glitters. 189p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5271

"All-out straightforward plot-counter-plot involving the MVD, the Bonn Security Police, a gang of Berlin crooks, a pair of Polish fanatics—and of course Thomas Elphinstone Hambledon." N Y Times

Bookmark 13:133 Mr '54

Kirkus 21:749 N 15 '53 20w

"Very much what Manning Coles has led us to expect through the past fifteen years, but here the moves are considerably less mechanical than they have been in recent tales about Tommy. It is all thriller of course, its bits of excitement pelting one upon the other, all of them held together by the most volatile and chancey glue." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 31 '54 180w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p26 Ja 10 '54 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 31 '54 70w

"Familiar mixture of international mayhem and mirth." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:52 Mr 13 '54 10w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. Brief candles. 252p $3 Doubleday

54-6788

A fantasy in which the ghosts of a pair of cousins, killed in France in 1870, accompanied by the ghost of a pet monkey, materialize in 1953 to help a pair of their descendants.

"A delightful whimsical ghost-story."

+ Horn Bk 30:359 O '54 80w

"A brace of merry revenants, these may present a strange appearance to Coles' past followers but their kind deeds are equalled by their restrained humor. Tidy."

+ Kirkus 22:243 Ap 1 '54 120w

"A joyous romp that is by no means to be missed." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 23 '54 120w

"The publishers call this 'a spoofing, spook story' and 'a tale that proves to be considerably quicker than dead.' And this time it seems they haven't stretched things a bit." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 18 '54 180w

COLLANS, DEV, pseud. See Winchell, P.

COLLIER, SARGENT F. Down East; Maine, Prince Edward island, Nova Scotia and the Gaspé. 148p il $5 Houghton

974.1 [917.41] Maine—Description and travel. Prince Edward island, Nova Scotia—Description and travel. Gaspé district, Quebec 53-11199

"Filled with the legends and flavor of a quaint, unspoiled region, this charming quarto, enhanced with beautiful photographs, describes a 14-day automobile tour from Camden, Me. through Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and the Gaspé, ending in Quebec. Map on endpapers." Bookmark

Booklist 50:236 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:82 Ja '54 40w

"An entertaining and instructive description of Acadia." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:631 Ap 1 '54 40w

"Most of the photographs are good and a few are excellent, but the text is superficial and gives indications of hasty writing." E. S. Dodge

+ New Eng Q 27:268 Je '54 70w

"A superior book full of very practical advice. . . But you don't have to take the trip in order to enjoy Mr. Collier's wit and vast fund of entertaining information." William Murray

+ Sat R 37:52 Ja 2 '54 40w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Spring'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 160w

"Chatty and informative, it is a welcome departure from the conventional 'travelog'."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:29 Ja '54

COLLIER'S world atlas and gazetteer; presenting the world in its geographical, physical and commercial aspects. 472p il $17.50 Collier

912 Atlases

Map52-910

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"All of the state maps are clear, and those for the nations or groups of nations are unusually full for the space to which they are assigned. Maps of Canada and its provinces give a feeling of the spaciousness one experiences in that country itself. Among the special maps of interest the comparative ones on Europe and Asia showing territory transfers after World War II are well done. . . The index is a fact-finder in every sense. . . Appraised critically against the whole line of atlas literature Collier's new Atlas clearly belongs in library and home as an integral part of the basic reference collection." Louis Shores

+ Sat R 37:36 Mr 20 '54 800w

"The publishers of Collier's World Atlas and Gazetteer have assembled material adequately to accomplish their aim of showing the interrelationships of man and his environment through the presentation of regional maps and the textual emphasis upon interrelations. . . The population figures given in the index show the use of the 1950 United States Census reports. Checks of these, of the state descriptions, and of spot entries in the 'World Index' reveal few discrepancies and often timeliness. . . In view of its world coverage, current maps, and extensive Index, Collier's World Atlas and Gazetteer is recommended for libraries and for home use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:1 Ja '54 1400w

COLLIN, HEDVIG. Good-luck tree; il. by [the author]. 127p $2.50 Viking

54-4133

The story of three girls who build their own house to be used as a studio on land near Copenhagen. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 51:89 O 15 '54

COLLIN, HEDVIG—Continued

"Plotless in a sense, for the concentration is almost solely on the house, but it's a tasty slice of Danish life and youthful enthusiasm." Kirkus 22:443 J1 15 '54 120w

"Girls of about eleven to fourteen will read the book for its innate happiness, its people, young and old, who have the creative spirit." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 24 '54 180w

COLLIN-SMITH, JOYCE. Locusts and wild honey. 316p $3.95 Little

54-6871

"A historical novel of South Africa during the early and middle nineteenth century. It recounts the adventures of pioneers, of the clashes with the natives, of the clashes amongst themselves. The Dutch, the French, and the English try colonization and succeed, as delineated here." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 50:419 J1 1 '54

Kirkus 22:164 Mr 1 '54 120w

"This is a novel of frontier life, with many of the same dangers and rigors that once existed on our own frontier, but in a vividly different setting. It has interest as an interpretation of both past and present events, as well as the eventful story of a large, vigorous and highly varied family." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune R p6 My 1 '54 360w

"This is a novel and not history, and one must not measure these fictional incidents with too rigorous a yardstick. Nor can one blame Miss Collin-Smith for floundering in the deep waters of Afrikaans spelling and nomenclature. What matters for the reader is whether the story lives up to the promise of its flamboyant jacket. The answer is Yes. This is a technicolor romance with action, passion, color and a truly exotic setting. But as serious fiction this dark horse is an also ran." John Barkham

+ — N Y Times p27 My 16 '54 500w

"Miss Collin-Smith has been a reporter on British newspapers and an intelligence officer in the royal armed forces. Her book is done in the pleasingly graceful, lucid style characteristic of the better British writers." H. B. H.

+ Springfield Republican p7C Je 6 '54 180w
Wis Lib Bul 50:136 My '54

COLLINS, JAMES DANIEL. History of modern European philosophy. 854p $9.75 Bruce pub.

190 Philosophy, Modern 54-9092

"Here, in one book, are the philosophers who have shaped the thinking of the western world for almost five centuries. Short biographies and selected bibliographies are included." Wis Lib Bul

"Philosophy cannot be separated from its own history, nor can a sharp distinction be made between the creative philosopher and the historian of philosophy. . . It is one of the merits of James Collins' new book that it gives explicit recognition to this fact. And although the book is intended to be a text for university students, it makes a conscious search for the present truth at the same time as it records the past. Precisely because of the scope of his method, Collins is here faced with a tremendous task: not only of describing a vast and crucial area of Western intellectual history, but of criticizing and integrating it from his own point of view as well." Michael Harrington

+ Commonweal 60:71 Ap 23 '54 1550w

"Larger libraries will certainly have use for this volume; smaller libraries will check closely for reader interest and similar works already on their shelves."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:125 My '54

COLLINS, JAMES DANIEL. Mind of Kierkegaard. 304p $4.50 Regnery

198 Kierkegaard, Soren Aabye 53-10152

"A sympathetic Roman Catholic philosopher here concentrates on the 'mind' of Kierkegaard, which means the structure of his thought apart from the question of his personal life. He believes that Kierkegaard's position can be understood better when viewed against a fuller and more detailed account of the thought of his time than is usually provided. He is convinced also that Kierkegaard's writings served in large measure as needed correctives of the philosophical idealism and Protestant theology of his day." Christian Century

"Collins' study of existence and of its philosophy is both careful and provocative. His insight into S. K.'s understanding of the church is, for me, better than that of Jolivet. A discriminating bibliography adds to the value of the book. . . This work is mainly for well trained philosophers, summoning them to a deeper rethinking of the relation of existential to rational thought." N. F. S. Ferré

+ — Christian Century 71:19 Ja 6 '54 750w

"Within the limitations imposed by Kierkegaard's own purpose and manner, James Collins has written a study which is always well-reasoned and often brilliant." Michael Harrington

+ Commonweal 59:289 D 18 '53 650w

"Undoubtedly many more books will be written about Kierkegaard than have thus far appeared. But none will be of more value, it is safe to say, than this volume by a young Catholic scholar." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p6 F 7 '54 600w

Reviewed by D. M. Mackinnon

Spec p716 D 3 '54 850w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:63 Mr '54 220w

"Kierkegaard's basic discovery about human experience sounds deceptively simple: that the unique, subjective self in each one of us is an absolute modifier of what we call objective truth. . . To a thinker of this sort, a study like 'The Mind of Kierkegaard' is too limited to do justice. For James Collins is concerned with Kierkegaard's ideas, and for Kierkegaard these were never an end in themselves. Still Mr. Collins is orderly, assured, and never provincial. For those interested in a quantitative count of Kierkegaard's relation to formal philosophy in the past 150 years, his book's usefulness will not soon be displaced." Robert Phelps

+ — Yale R n s 44:137 autumn '54 350w

COLLIS, JOHN STEWART. Triumph of the tree. 276p $3.50 Sloane

634.94 Trees

54-5546

A history of trees from the silent fern forests of millions of years ago, to the present when mankind, at last sensing what trees have meant to his life in the past, has awakened to the necessity of reforestation and conservation.

Booklist 50:272 Mr 15 '54

"Delightfully written."

+ Bookmark 13:155 Ap '54 30w

"The author unfortunately spoils a perfectly good book with a lot of theological twaddle. . . There is a true Nature mysticism, but this is not it. God's activity in Nature is immanent and constant, but theories of animism, or pantheism or divinized matter such as you find in this book are a far cry from belief in a Father In Heaven and His Son who redeemed the world."

+ — Cath World 179:159 My '54 220w

"Collis does not always qualify his statements and so is not always dependable. For instance, in speaking of birds he writes, 'Their residence is in the trees.' Such occasional lapses, however, do little to mar the excellence of this appealing and informative nature writing." Anna Campbell

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 11 '54 140w

Kirkus 21:753 N 15 '53 180w

Reviewed by E. M. Cole

Library J 79:140 Ja 15 '54 150w

"An absorbing blend of almost poetic sensitivity and sharp criticism of egotistical human attitudes marks this newest of Mr. Collis' pleas for a saner world. One may hesitate to call him essentially a conservationist, a philosopher or a master of deeply significant prose. But there can be small doubt that 'The Triumph of the Tree' is a powerful and valuable indictment of man's arrogance toward the keystones of his natural environment." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk M p11 Mr 28 '54 470w

"This remarkable and beautiful book is not about soil, although the dreadful effects of the disappearance of soil are graphically described. It is not even, fundamentally, about trees, although most of its pages are devoted to the fascinating story of trees in relation to the rest of nature, including man. The philosophic core of the book is the broad theme that in order to live at all, man must try to live in harmony with nature, for 'nature always has the last word.'" J. B. Oakes

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 14 '54 1000w

New Yorker 30:134 Ap 3 '54 160w

Reviewed by P. B. Sears

Sat R 37:21 Mr 6 '54 650w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p8C Jl 25 '54 320w

COLLISON, ROBERT LEWIS WRIGHT. Indexes and indexing. 155p $2.50 De Graff
029.5 Indexing 53-11010

"A guide to the indexing of books, and collections of books, periodicals, music, gramophone records, films, and other material, with a reference section and suggestions for further reading." (Subtitle) The author is reference librarian of the Central Reference Library, City of Westminster (England), and a Fellow of the Library Association. Index.

Booklist 50:46 O 1 '53

"A capital little volume to own, largely because it takes the mystery out of indexing and substitutes a sound philosophy with acceptable techniques. Offers useful information." Karl Brown

+ Library J 78:1427 S 1 '53 70w

"This is an extremely useful little book written by a practicing-and-preaching British librarian and bibliographer, on the indexing of books, periodicals, and audio-visual materials. The section on music and phonorecords, like the other sections, is lamentably brief—lamentably, because Collison's indexing logic and general approach to the subject are so clearly and pleasantly stated." Arminé Dikijian

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:315 Mr '54 140w

COLMAN, EDWARD ABENHEIM. Vegetation and watershed management; ■ appraisal of vegetation management in relation to water supply, flood control, and soil erosion; sponsored by the Conservation foundation. 412p il maps $7 Ronald

631.4 Watersheds. Water conservation. Soil conservation 53-12202

"The basic implication in this book is that vegetation is an important factor in the determination of water-yield from land, in the control of erosion and the prevention of floods. The author has made a critical presentation of the results of research studies and has also pointed out gaps in the basic knowledge. His authoritative delineations of areas in which more research is needed are probably as valuable as his summaries of research already done. Although not designed for general popular reading, the style of the book is not severely technical." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 50:216 F 1 '54

"Of interest not only to conservation workers but also to agricultural and water supply engineers."

+ Library J 79:914 My 15 '54 30w

"Conservationists, engineers responsible for the planning and management of watersheds, foresters in charge of public forests and range, and lay readers with advanced interests in conservation of natural resources, will find the book of interest."

+ N Y New Tech Bk 39:9 Ja '54

"For the student, teacher, practitioner, legislator, and interested citizen, the book is a must."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:270 Je '54 240w

COLQUHOUN, ARCHIBALD. Manzoni and his times. 281p $5 Dutton

B or 92 Manzoni, Alessandro [54-5028]

The first biography in English of the author of the famous Italian novel I Promessi Sposi. There is a chapter on the novel, including contemporary criticisms; and another on Manzoni's ideas and influence on the modern Italian language. Bibliography. Index.

"This is not a scholar's book, as shown by minor blemishes: Mr. Colquhoun habitually writes 'mutual' for 'common,' sometimes 'conscience' for 'consciousness'; he misdescribes Benedetto Croce as an 'agnostic,' and misquotes (losing its point) the famous epigram of Foscolo against Monti. There are one or two shaky renderings from the Italian and some Italian or Latin misspellings. But readers who like to be shown round a panorama of Italo-French culture by a guide who shows zestful and sincere interest can be recommended to read 'Manzoni and His Times.'" Cecil Sprigge

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 13 '54 650w

"It is a thorough and scholarly book suggesting a complexity of character which somehow never quite broke surface in Manzoni's life or writing." Geoffrey Brereton

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:273 S 4 '54 700w

"Mr. Colquhoun has served Manzoni well; this is not only the first biography in English but it is a much better one, fairer, more objective, and more informative than any single Italian work I can think of." T. G. Bergen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk M p3 Ag 8 '54 800w

"There is, to be sure, a good sized library on Manzoni in Italian but little about him is available in English, wherefore this biography fills the need. If, as Mr. Colquhoun definitely states, 'The spirit of a human being is too diverse to fit into any biographical pattern,' he succeeds nevertheless in giving a well rounded portrait of his human being, Manzoni, and in fitting it gracefully into a sturdy frame of events." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 22 '54 900w

Sat R 37:43 O 30 '54 360w

"The problem of the biographer is that Manzoni's vitality is far more evident in his great book than in his personal life. For those who do not know I Promessi Sposi, his biography is rather Hamlet without the Prince. Readers of the novel who turn to the biography to relate the man to his work as one can do so fruitfully with a writer like Stendahl, are likely to be disappointed. Manzoni gives nothing away. In their disappointment they will find themselves driven back again to I Promessi Sposi. Which, after all, is just as it should be." D. S. Carne-Ross

Spec p790 Je 25 '54 370w

"In spite of the title, we do not find here a broad consideration of an epoch, but only so much as may be useful in order to follow Manzoni's evolution. This is probably all the reader of a biography wants and it seems a pity that an old-style title has been resurrected. . . In spite of what appears to be some lack of proportion and some minor errors this biography, by its serious consideration of the influences, particularly the religious and philosophic influences, in Manzoni's life, helps us to a better understanding of the author of I Promessi Sposi and should be read by the many who have grown to appreciate this great novel in Mr. Colquhoun's translation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p404 Je 25 '54 1050w

COLUM, PADRAIC. Collected poems. 214p 15
Devin-Adair 821 53-13044

A revised edition of the collected poems of Padraic Colum, with additional poems. For first edition published by Macmillan in 1932 see Book Review Digest 1932.

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 17 '54
30w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 78:2220 D 15 '53 80w

"Padraic Colum is a folk-poet, or but one step removed from the folk. His verse (it is but rarely charged with the special verbal magic we have come to define rather exclusively as 'poetry') is well-made, but it is made to be sung, perhaps to the accompaniment of some rustic musical instrument in a tavern or under a maid's window, rather than read. . . Colum's effects—as for instance in such a poem as 'Girls Spinning,' when one is neither familiar with the sound of a spinning-wheel nor with the songs that are probably part of the web of this occupation—can be pretty specialized." Selden Rodman

N Y Times p12 N 29 '53 220w
New Yorker 30:147 My 8 '54 80w

Reviewed by Hugh Kenner
Poetry 83:357 Mr '54 110w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 25 '54
300w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R 37:30 Mr 6 '54 90w

COLUM, PADRAIC. Vegetable kingdom. 47p
$2.75 Ind. univ. press 821 54-6208

"Using words instead of pigments, the Irish poet has executed a series of still lifes in verse. He salutes flowers and trees the world over, familiar and exotic, with an exactitude of visual detail that would have delighted Cézanne. Each poem is a separate species, obeying its own laws of form, meter, and rhyme; each radiates from its center into associations with ritual, history, literature, and art." Booklist

Booklist 50:447 Jl 15 '54

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 70w

"A capable book, but dull."
Nation 179:218 S 11 '54 350w

"These pieces too often seem closer to idle free-association than to achieved forms. There is a wrong simplicity as well as a right one. In a good poem there is a sense that many possibilities have offered themselves and been rejected. The poetic mind makes choices. When those choices are better, richer and more felicitous than we could have foreseen, we are lifted to admiration. When a poem is simple in this sense it is the simplicity of selection." John Ciardi

N Y Times p4 Ag 1 '54 300w
Reviewed by G. P. Meyer
Sat R 37:18 O 9 '54 500w

COLUMBIA Lippincott gazetteer of the world. World guide. See Rand McNally and company

COLUMBIA-VIKING desk encyclopedia; comp. and ed. at Columbia university by the staff of the Columbia encyclopedia; William Bridgewater, editor-in-chief. 1092p il maps $7.95 thumb indexed $8.95; de luxe ed $12.50 Viking 031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 53-7954
For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Cleveland Open Shelf p36 D '54

"The scholarly resources of Columbia University have played a big role in the compiling of this fairminded and comprehensive book."
+ Commonweal 59:387 Je 15 '54 70w

"The type is pleasant and there is an adequate system of cross-referencing. For a single-volume at this price it is remarkably good, but it may not be very useful in England because it contains too many minor American entries and too few minor European ones."

Manchester Guardian p6 S 17 '54 130w

"The recently published 'Columbia Viking Desk Dictionary' should prove a most welcome addition to the home, especially the small apartment, and to the office reference shelf. A wealth of information from the popular 'Columbia Encyclopedia' has been condensed into a compact, easy-to-handle volume worthy to take its place next to your favorite dictionary, atlas, and other handbooks for quick information. . . For puzzle fans, businessmen, writers, and the 'just curious,' this is the outstanding reference-book buy of the year." E. E. Kirkland
+ Sat R 37:37 Mr 20 '54 600w

"The editors have succeeded in their attempt to produce a handy, up-to-date, authoritative, desk-size encyclopedia. The Columbia-Viking Desk Encyclopedia is recommended for the home, the office, school libraries, and other libraries which do not have the second edition of The Columbia Encyclopedia as well as those which need to supplement their collections with a modern, inexpensive, quick-reference tool."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:20 Ap '54
1250w

COLVIN, HOWARD MONTAGU. Biographical dictionary of English architects, 1660-1840. 821p $12.50 Harvard univ. press

927.2 Architects A54-7082

Consists of the biographies of hundreds of English architects, alphabetically arranged, with lists of their buildings. "At the beginning there is an essay on the architectural profession during the period, and at the end a series of lists of crucial office-holders, both in the Works and elsewhere." (Spec) "With more than a thousand entries of architects or master-builders, there are of course plenty of obscurities who contribute little to the tale of over 7,000 buildings that is listed—but part of the interest of the book is that with the help of the cross-references between the two separate indexes of 'Persons' and 'Places' you can hunt down the authorship of buildings you know all over the country, and at last hand out praise or blame to those now known to be responsible." (Manchester Guardian)

"The word 'Dictionary' in a title is a little forbidding; but Mr. Colvin's work is the most fascinating book that has come into my hands for some time. . . To anyone traveling about England, or to an American visitor to these shores, it can be, if properly used, invaluable, exciting, and instructive." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 S 2 '54
1000w

"If in his prefatory note the erudite Mr Summerson can commend Mr Colvin's architectural 'Who's Who' as superseding all others in comprehensiveness and detail and can go on to say that none of the arts in England has been served with such finality, it is safe to announce that the gap so long conspicuous in our row of reference books has at last been handsomely filled, so far at least as 1660 to 1840 are concerned." Clough Williams-Ellis
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 31 '54
360w

Reviewed by John Summerson
New Statesman & Nation 48:369 25
'54 380w

Special Libraries 45:354 O '54 20w

"Perhaps the most impressive thing about this book is the variety of the sources laid under tribute, and in particular the extensive use made of manuscript material. The book is admirably designed for use; the system of cross-referencing (including a detailed topographical index) is efficient and painless. . . Though neither literally nor metaphorically ponderous, this is a work of acute and exhaustive scholarship, completely indispensable to those concerned, by whom it will even be read with pleasure." M. J. C.

+ Spec p127 Jl 23 '54 390w

"Here is the up to date reference-book, with good indexes both of persons and of places: a work of painstaking scholarship, yet pleasantly readable: a work embodying, in condensed form, the long-established facts together with the latest discoveries. Much of the new information has been gathered by the editor himself, and much of it has not been published before. Students of the next hundred years will find in these pages the signposts to what they are seeking, and the groundwork of knowledge on which their further discoveries will be founded."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p700 N 5 '54 1350w

COLWELL, ERNEST CADMAN, and TITUS, ERIC LANE. Gospel of the spirit; a study in the Fourth Gospel. 190p $2.50 Harper

226.5 Bible. N.T.—St John 53-8367

"Contrary to the position taken by many writers on the Fourth Gospel, including the great Moffatt, Colwell and Titus defend the present order of the Gospel as correct and consistent with John's methodology. They allow for minor dislocations, but maintain that the Fourth Gospel is a carefully created work of art and that its pieces fit snugly together. . . The authors recognize that the Fourth Gospel is not 'historical,' and maintain that a merely factual Gospel would be static, whereas the Fourth Gospel is dynamic 'because of the doctrine of the Spirit.'" Christian Century

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlman

Ann Am Acad 290:171 N '53 450w

Reviewed by Neil Crawford

+ Christian Century 71:144 F 3 '54 800w

"To be highly recommended for its fresh approach to the subject and for its arresting style."

+ Kirkus 21:624 S 1 '53 150w

COMBINED MEXICAN WORKING PARTY. Economic development of Mexico. See International bank for reconstruction and development

COMMAGER, EVAN CARROLL (MRS HENRY STEELE COMMAGER). Tenth birthday; with drawings by Don Sibley. 186p $2.25 Bobbs

54-10845

Stories of how a series of little girls, of five generations of one family, spent their tenth birthdays. The first day was in 1844, the last in 1950.

"Each child, each place, and period come alive in a lovely book." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p24 N 14 '54 120w

"A volume of social history brief but rich in details of lessons and story-books, food and costume." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:431 D '54 100w

"The author's sense of the region, [South Carolina] her use of contemporary slang from Civil War days till now and her emphasis on the importance of having a family to help celebrate a birthday in bad times as well as good, raise this book above the ordinary." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times pt2 p34 N 14 '54 90w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

+ New Yorker 30:213 N 27 '54 60w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 30w

COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE. Freedom, loyalty, dissent. 155p $2.50 Oxford

323.4 Liberty. Civil rights 54-7131

Five essays, written for different occasions over a period of six years. Their theme "is the necessity of freedom in a society such as the American; the point of view is practical and pragmatic." (Preface)

Booklist 50:335 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 30w

Reviewed by G. M. Craig

Canadian Forum 34:115 Ag '54 360w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 9 '54 140w

"The book is a stand for individuality and private enterprise of the mind. As such it is welcome at a time when various totalitarian tendencies are coming to the surface of American thinking to be destroyed." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 4 '54 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 Ag '54

Current Hist 26:317 My '54 110w

Kirkus 22:255 Ap 1 '54 160w

"It is not so much what this book says as what it fails to say which constitutes its weakness. Some of the things it says are very true, and well worth saying as a preface to an analysis of the concrete problems of freedom and security here and now. With respect to these problems, for me the profoundest sentence in the book reads: 'The greatest danger that threatens us is neither heterodox thought nor orthodox thought, but the absence of thought.'" Sidney Hook

New Repub 130:18 My 24 '54 3300w

"In spite of the skill and eloquence of our intellectuals in books like this one of Mr. Commager's, or Mr. Davis' recent 'But We Were Born Free,' one sometimes feels that they are in fact preaching to the converted. . . Mr. Commager's message needs above all to get across to the people who think McCarthy is a great man, or at least a necessary one. . . Perhaps indeed, the man in the street inclines, on the whole, to the side of the angels; Mr. Commager would seem at times to believe he does. If so, then a little more persuasion and a little less indignation, a little less injured surprise at having to deal with the subject at all, a little less constant deadly seriousness, a little more humor, even a little more vulgarity, might carry greater conviction to the hesitant many who need conversion." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 My 30 '54 650w

"Mr. Commager's provocative book constitutes an admirable primer on just what is the essence of Americanism." John Oakes

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 25 '54 750w

New Yorker 30:143 My 8 '54 200w

"This is not only provocative but also a convincing book, an effective antidote to the volumes by James Burnham and William F. Buckley recently reviewed in these pages. It may persuade some citizens that the hour has arrived for us to return to fundamentals, to the encouragement of that liberty which has made us great. The case for freedom of speech has not in our day been more vigorously and honestly presented." C. M. Fuess

+ Sat R 37:38 My 1 '54 700w

Reviewed by H. L. Dante

Social Educ 18:287 O '54 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Jl 23 '54 2750w

COMMERCIAL TRADES INSTITUTE, CHICAGO. Practical upholstery. 296p il $5.95 McGraw

684.1 Upholstery 52-11506

Step by step instructions on the upholstery of many types or pieces of furniture. Numerous illustrations. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 50:160 D 15 '53

Bookmark 13:84 Ja '54 20w

"This book will serve as a practical guide to experienced teachers and extension workers as well as homemakers and novices. Its easy-to-follow directions make it an outstanding handbook for the beginner, while the perfections of detail make it a valuable addition to the library of the nonprofessional upholsterer." Marilyn Langford

+ J Home Econ 46:610 O '54 220w

"Unfortunately, upholstery with foam rubber is not discussed, and the plastic covering materials are relegated to a short appendix. The book is outstanding, however, for its descriptions of upholstery operations on all kinds of conventional furniture with the older, standard materials." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:148 Ja 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bk 38:97 N '53

COMMONWEAL (periodical). Catholicism in America; a series of articles [by William P. Clancy and others]. 242p $3.75 Harcourt

282.73 Catholic church in the U.S. 54-5256

"The essays assembled in this book first appeared during 1953 as a series of articles in The Commonweal, a weekly review published and edited in New York by lay Catholics. Like The Commonweal, none of the contributors to this volume is empowered in any way to speak officially for the Church. They are, with two exceptions, Catholic laymen who have undertaken merely to set down their own thoughts on various aspects of American Catholic life." Editors' note

Booklist 50:349 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:180 My '54 30w

"If the layman is to fulfill his sacred duties to the Church, he must observe his surroundings realistically, report his findings candidly, and manifest his needs. This the various writers have done. We may sometimes disagree with their estimates, or question some detail of their solutions. But we can be heartily grateful that the Catholic laymen of our country have produced so enlightening, always stimulating, and sometimes provocative a collection of papers." J. T. McGinn

+ Cath World 179:315 Jl '54 400w

Kirkus 22:177 Mr 1 '54 130w

"That the promise of the volume's stated purpose is fulfilled so successfully is a tribute to the contributors' objectivity and frankness in dealing with their assigned topics. Such a book as this can do much to create mutual understanding and trust among all faiths." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:983 My 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. M. Brown

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 25 '54 1000w

"In a time of accentuated conflict between religious groups in America the importance of this Commonweal symposium can scarcely be exaggerated." Ernest Johnson

+ N Y Times p6 My 2 '54 950w

Wis Lib Bul 50:127 My '54

CONDRIY, WILLIAM MORETON. Thoreau. 114p $3.50 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Thoreau, Henry David 54-11703

A brief biographical study of Thoreau, marking the centenary year of the publication of Walden. Based on published sources, the book furnishes no new facts. List of Thoreau's writings. No index.

Booklist 51:38 S 15 '54

Nation 179:219 S 11 '54 80w

"Agreeable and informative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p559 S 3 '54 190w

CONFERENCE IN SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY, UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA, 1952. Group relations at the crossroads. See Sherif, M., and Wilson, M. O., eds.

CONIBEAR, FRANK. Devil dog; il. by John Scott. 214p $3.75 Sloane

Dogs—Legends and stories 54-7084

Punch, the Devil dog, was a superb sled dog but because of early mistreatment he hated men. Rory Leigh takes on the task of taming Punch with kindness. The scene is the Mackenzie River country.

Booklist 50:455 Jl 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"The Indians and half-breeds are depicted as a rather unsavory lot. However, the vigorous descriptions of dog teams, fur-trading, and life in the Canadian Northwest will certainly hold anyone who likes dogs and outdoor adventure."

Horn Bk 30:359 O '54 80w

"A northland tale which while familiar has an authentic tone."

Kirkus 22:162 Mr 1 '54 120w

"This fascinating tale obviously has been written by a man who himself has been many times on the Mackenzie River trail behind nine or ten dogs harnessed into the intricate webbing of a Nome hitch." R. L. Neuberger

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 11 '54 310w

CONIL, JEAN. Haute cuisine. 579p il $8 De Graff

641.01 Cookery

"A gastronomic guide to classical menus and dishes, with digressions on regional specialties, Oriental cookery, and the joys and responsibilities of connoisseurship and epicureanism." Subtitle

"Very few libraries will need it but clubs and large libraries will find it a dictionary of value. It should stand next to Brillat-Savarin's Gastronomy." K. T. Willis

Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by Margaret Lane

New Statesman & Nation 46:728 D 5 '53 130w

CONKLIN, GROFF, ed. Science-fiction thinking machines: robots, androids, computers. 367p $3.50 Vanguard

Short Stories—Collections 54-6995

An anthology of science-fiction composed of stories and one play (R.U.R.). The examples were chosen to illustrate the various lines of thought about robots.

Kirkus 22:215 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Another good Conklin anthology, well off the beaten track. . . For science fiction and rental collections." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:770 Ap 15 '54 90w

"Any anthology edited by Groff Conklin is worth reading. . . This latest is as good as any of its three predecessors in quality of stories included, and even better in the excellence of its editorial comment. I should never have thought that so much first-rate stuff on robots and their relatives remained unanthologized." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 11 '54 230w

"The book is distinguished by the veteran anthologist's notes on each type's status and development in imaginative literature." J. F. McC.

N Y Times p38 S 12 '54 270w

"The selection of stories is representative, and has most of the classics in the genre, including 'R.U.R.' which first gave the word robot to the language, and ends with a valuable bibliography of robot stories." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 18 '54 160w

"A remarkably fine collection." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:14 Ag 7 '54 90w

CONNALLY, THOMAS TERRY. My name is Tom Connally; as told to Alfred Steinberg. 376p il $5 Crowell

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-9157

The life and work of this senator from Texas, which covers all phases of his life from boyhood in the 1880's on a cotton farm in Texas, to the present. Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:99 N '54 500w

Booklist 51:81 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:3 O '54 20w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 31 '54 550w

"The trouble with the second half of the book, dealing with his foreign policy role, compared to the first half of the book which tells about Tom Connally the politician, is that you never learn what he had for dinner while foreign policy was being made. The familiar sense that he is in his natural element is missing. The color fades until the only humanity left is a homely story now and then, from his Texas boyhood. The story of his rise as a politician makes fascinating reading." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 8 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:508 Ag 1 '54 130w

"Recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1496 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker

Nation 179:336 O 16 '54 1500w

"The redoubtable Tom Connally, of Texas has crowned his career with a book so frank and unabashed, so shrewd in some spots and so blandly innocent in others, and withal so good-humored that it is hard to classify. It is excellent entertainment, but it is at the same time a treatise on government, not as it should be, but as it is." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 12 '54 700w

"Senator Connally was noted both for his wit and for his razor-sharp tongue in the rough-and-tumble debate on the Senate floor. Neither faculty is dulled in this collection of his memories and anecdotes that serve to illuminate the events of his time." W. H. Lawrence

N Y Times p26 O 17 '54 850w

"Every now and then among these crowded pages one wants to stop and catch one's breath, for Senator Connally has a lot to tell and, understandably, a desire to set forth his role in the shaping of the nation's course in its most eventful and dangerous years. . . His memoirs give insight into the manner of the democratic compromises between the legislative, executive, and judicial branches. I'm glad the old warhorse wrote the book." Hodding Carter

+ Sat R 37:36 O 11 '54 700w

"The senator's comments give a running account of recent history, told in a casual, off-hand manner. More fascinating are the shrewd characterizations of people with which the book abounds. Mr. Connally has known most of the political leaders of the nation during the last three decades and he has worked closely with many of them. His honest and outspoken appraisals help to make this lively volume as unusual in the field of literature as Mr. Connally's own career has been in the field of politics." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 '500w

Reviewed by R. S. Babcock

Yale R n s 44:313 winter '55 450w

CONNOLLY, CYRIL, ed. Golden Horizon. See Horizon (periodical)

CONNORS, DORSEY. Dorsey Connors' book: gadgets galore! 238p il $2.95 Pop. mechanics 680 Gadgets 53-9418

"Presents some of the varied economical, time-saving ideas demonstrated on the author's TV program over WNBQ-NBC. Illustrations." Bookmark

Booklist 50:180 Ja 1 '54

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 10w

"The index devised in a helpful manner makes use of Dorsey's slogan, 'Don't throw it away,' by listing pages containing new uses to which common articles and materials can be put. The comprehensive illustrations add greatly to the interest value of the book." Beulah Rodgers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 15 '53 170w

CONRAD, EARL. Gulf Stream north. 253p $3.50 Doubleday

54-6787

"Author Earl Conrad pits a simple crew of Florida Negroes against schools of unpalatable fish called menhaden, and gives their humble ordeal moments of tragic dignity. . . More a novel by courtesy than by craft, Gulf Stream North makes what its characters do seem a good deal more real than what they are, makes the special idiom they talk most real of all." Time

Booklist 50:400 Je 15 '54

"It is not the incidents which give the book its power—but rather the integrity of the characters and their relationship to one another, as well as a lack of polemics which lends eloquence to the treatment of the race question."

+ Kirkus 22:210 Mr 15 '54 130w

"Mr. Conrad uses his narrative to explain the nature of an obscure area in our economic life, to describe the primitive nature of the fishing crews, to convey the dramatic story of a bad-luck cruise, but above all to express the speech of his people. And it is wonderful talk. The documentary basis of the novel gives it a solidity that is rare today, while the skill of Mr. Conrad's craft makes it a pleasure to read, and his Negro fishermen are remarkable and rewarding personages."

+ Nation 179:56 Jl 17 '54 370w

"An utterly absorbing fictional treatment of the huge but little-known menhaden fishery that thrives along the southeastern coast of the United States." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p4 My 9 '54 360w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 140w

Time 63:118 My 10 '54 440w

Wis Lib Bul 50:180 Jl '54

CONRAD, JOSEPH. Tales of land and sea; introd. by William McFee; il. by Richard M. Powers. 695p $2.95 Garden City bks.

"Shorter masterpieces in fiction by the Polish adventurer and writer ranging in length from short stories like Gaspar Ruiz and The Brute to short novels like The End of the Tether and The Nigger of the Narcissus. Some of the choices, like Youth or Heart of Darkness, have been frequently anthologized; others, like Freya of the Seven Isles, are strangers to most collections." Booklist

Booklist 50:145 D 1 '53

"Rich harvest."

+ Kirkus 21:684 O 1 '53 160w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ja 17 '54 30w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times p45 N 8 '53 40w

"Who chose and arranged these 12 is not disclosed, but the selection could hardly have been improved on as examples of the kind of writing in which he was most talented, the long short story." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 15 '53 330w

CONSTABLE, WILLIAM GEORGE. Painter's workshop. 172p il $5 Oxford

751 Painting

54-1765

"The methods by which pictures have been painted from the Middle Ages up to recent times. Emphasis is placed on such matters as the artist's materials and techniques, the physical structure of a painting, the study of light, the various changes which time and the hand of man make in the appearance of a picture, and the work of the restorer." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Gary Sheahan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 28 '54 50w

"The knowledge, the understanding, the wisdom of a scholar shines through the exposition of Mr. Constable." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 250w

CONSTABLE, W. G.—Continued

"Should prove a useful introduction to the craft of painting for artist and layman alike." L. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 19 '54 200w

"Much more in the book might have been better discussed and illustrated; it is an unhappy surprise that an excellent project in such good hands should not have resulted in a book of permanent value." Lawrence Gowing
New Statesman & Nation 47:640 My 15 '54 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 7 '54 40w

"There are the many processes of painting—wax, pastel, water-color, fresco, tempera and oil—techniques widely varied and also important for a lover of art to understand. All this information, which will make the painter practice his craft more intelligently and the layman look at pictures more perceptively, is to be found in Mr. Constable's invaluable handbook." John Walker

+ N Y Times p5 J1 4 '54 450w

"Mr. Constable's great triumph in this book is that he has done away with a good deal of the mystery while, if anything, accentuating the fascination. Long connected with the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, as Curator of Paintings, he is well equipped to write of his subject, and he manages throughout to keep his treatment of it informal, and his whole account . . . is as engrossing, as it is informative."

+ New Yorker 30:134 Mr 27 '54 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p372 Je 11 '54 550w

CONSTABLE, WILLIAM GEORGE. Richard Wilson. (English master painters) 306p 160pl $12.50 Harvard univ. press

759.2 Wilson, Richard

A biography and critical study of the work of an eighteenth century English painter. Includes 364 reproductions of the artist's works. The author is director of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Notes on plates. Index.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:456 Mr 1 '54 140w

"The long critical labours that this book necessitated will have been well worth while if they free Wilson's reputation from some of the commonplace works attributed to him and give us a clearer conception of a remarkably independent and original painter." Stephen Bone

+ Manchester Guardian p2 Ag 18 '53 250w

Special Libraries 45:41 Ja '54 10w

"This book on Wilson is a work of immense and—so far as the laymen can judge—accurate scholarship." John Berger

+ Spec p204 Ag 21 '53 900w

"Unquestionably Richard Wilson is one of the most important and decisive books about a British artist to have appeared during this century, and it is gratifying to find that the publisher has spared no pains to devise a presentation worthy of its content. Inevitably it is a bulky volume, for it contains a great deal of matter, but because it is well arranged and nicely printed it is always easy to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup pviil Ag 6 '54 3700w

CONTENAU, GEORGES. Everyday life in Babylon and Assyria [authorized translation by K. R. and A. R. Maxwell-Hyslop]. 324p il $5 St Martins

913.35 Babylonia—Social life and customs. Assyria—Social life and customs 54-10269

A survey of Mesopotamian civilization between 700 and 530 BC. The book is divided into four parts: General information (the country, inhabitants, language, history, etc.); King and State; Mesopotamian thought; and Religious life. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 71:1338 N 3 '54 200w

"The book fulfils the promise of its title in being easily accessible to the tourist in the past and not merely to the professional traveller. It is excellently translated. The map could be improved." D. R. Gillie

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 20 '54 420w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 30 '54 40w

"There are inevitably, in a book of this length, omissions and slips. . . These however, are small blemishes in a work which admirably fulfils the author's expressed purpose; it is sufficiently detailed, but not overladen, for the ordinary reader and apart from occasional lapses entirely trustworthy. It is also provided with a number of excellent illustrations, all extremely well reproduced. In conclusion, the translation deserves every praise. It is scrupulously accurate and eminently readable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p504 Ag 6 '54 900w

CONYN, CORNELIUS. Three centuries of ballet. 248p il $6.50 Elsevier

792.8 Ballet

52-12854

"Cornelius Conyn, not too well known in this country, was a ballet and art critic in Paris for the Dutch press and since the war has lived in Australia. His [book] was originally published there in 1948. The present edition is augmented, with considerable revision. Mr. Conyn has intended this book for the beginner, to those 'who are interested in the story of the development of various dance styles throughout the last three centuries.'" Sat R

"The collection is worth reading for its glimpses into the manifold activities of dance around the world, as one writer sees them. It is worth owning for occasional reference, and for its gallery of pictures." Margaret Lloyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 31 '53 600w

"It may be that Mr. Conyn has attempted too much. The reader is left at the end with a mass of uncorrelated names, dates, works: ■ big tapestry without a unifying design." R. K. Sat R 37:20 My 15 '54 160w

COOK, GLADYS EMERSON, and SUTTON, FELIX. Big book of cats. [24p] col il $1 Grosset

636.8 Cats—Juvenile literature 54-8543

Large colored pictures and brief descriptions of ten breeds of cats. Contains a chapter on the training and care of pet cats. For ages nine to eleven.

Reviewed by Juanita Walker

Library J 79:1236 Je 15 '54 70w

"In this colorful 'Big Treasure Book' the artist can draw some of her cats almost life size. How well she does them, and what a wonderful lot they are!" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 18 '54 160w

COOK, LLOYD ALLEN, and COOK, ELAINE (FORSYTH). Intergroup education. 392p $5.50 McGraw

370.19 Intercultural education 53-9876

"It is assumed by the authors of this book that one of the notable trends in modern education is the addition of a fourth 'R' to the traditional curriculum. This 'R' is for 'relations'—human relations. Acting upon this assumption, the Cooks have produced a textbook for use in the training of teachers, at all levels, in the field of intergroup education. This field, as they conceive it, encompasses race and ethnic relations, class relations, and international relations. The major emphasis is upon contacts across racial, religious and nationality lines." (Am Soc R) Index.

"Teachers who agree with the Cooks as to the implications of the American Creed and are willing to accept the action role will find the book useful. Those who disagree probably won't be teaching intergroup relations!" L. M. Killian

Am Soc ■ 19:816 D '54 400w
Booklist 50:312 Ap 15 '54

COOK, ROBERT C., ed. See Presidents of American colleges and universities

COOKE, DAVID COXE, ed. Best detective stories of the year, 1954. 258p $2.95 Dutton

Short stories—Collections (46-5872)

Contents: The case of the irate witness, by E. S. Gardner; Graveyard shift, by Steve Frazee; Little things like that, by Roy Vickers; "My queer Dean," by Ellery Queen; The bystander, by Oliver La Farge; The revolution racket, by Leslie Charteris; Mugger murder, by Richard Deming; The killer is loose, by John and Ward Hawkins; The dead run, by W. J. Wallace; The attacker, by Morton Wolson; Small homicide, by Evan Hunter; Kill and run, by Frank Ward.

Kirkus 22:322 My 15 '54 90w

"Like its predecessors, the selection seems pretty arbitrary, but nearly all the tales are at least readable. . . Of the lot I fancied most Steve Frazee's story about a harassed police dispatcher ('Graveyard Shift') and the slippery excitement of W. J. Wallace's pellmell chase, 'The Dead Run.'" James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p6 Jl 18 '54 170w

"In all, this 1954 volume is the most varied in style and most even in high quality of this series to date, and strongly recommended." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 18 '54 290w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 15 '54 40w

"Choice collection." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:37 Ag 7 '54 20w

"There are no show-stoppers in particular this year, but there is plenty of entertaining reading." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p12D Jl 18 '54 50w

COOKE, DAVID COXE. Fighting Indians of the West. 208p il $2.95 Dodd

970.2 Indians of North America—Biography 54-12018

The story of the "winning of the West" as seen in the lives of eleven Indian chiefs: Mangus Colorado; Cochise; Victorio; Nana; Geronimo; Little Crow; Red Cloud; Roman Nose; Sitting Bull; Crazy Horse; and Chief Joseph. For teen aged and older.

"Mr. Cooke, in a vivid, moving story, has given new depth and understanding to the western Indian wars in his portrayal of the lives of 10 notable chiefs." B. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p38 N 14 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p26 N 14 '54 50w

"The book is firmly on the side of the Indians, stressing how Indians were cheated, had lands stolen from them, and when they agreed to retire to reservations, were herded there like cattle, suffering under unsympathetic agents who were too busy to remember their problems." D. A. Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 14 '54 130w

COOKSON, JOHN. Before the African storm. 279p $3.50 Bobbs

960 Africa—Politics. Africa—Race question 54-6506

"Between 1947 and 1952 Mr. Cookson was in the Belgian Congo as English editor and program consultant to the Belgian equivalent of the Voice of America—the Belgian National Broadcasting Service. From his base in Leopoldville he travelled widely both south and east, and now he presents his findings. The very title of his book, 'Before the African Storm,' sets the focus for his country-by-country examination of the forces at work and the tensions disturbing the continent. Through thumbnail sketches of some patches in the crazy quilt of Africa, he spells out the A.B.C.'s of past, present, and possible future." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:355 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 30w

Reviewed by K. R. E. Dobbs

Canadian Forum 34:69 Je '54 200w

"For the growing number of Americans who are becoming aware of Africa but who are confused by its vast size and great diversity, here is a useful, readable primer on Africa's modern problems. Unlike many books, it has not bitten off more than the uninitiated reader can chew, but it leaves him with something of the flavor of Africa and, as solid nourishment, some understanding of its immediate problems that he sees in the daily news dispatches." William Bascom

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 2 '54 450w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 4 '54 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 Ag '54

Reviewed by M. J. Herskovits

Nation 178:486 Je ■ '54 230w

"A sound study of Mau Mau and conditions in Kenya illustrates how the discontent of educated and semi-educated Africans can be harnessed to witchcraft, and driven tandem by agitators for their own political ends. How is the smouldering tension to be quenched before it bursts into a continent-wide flame? Mr. Cookson presents the case for giving non-colonial powers a hand in policy-making and assistance, on the ground that the four major colonial powers, and South Africa, cannot be expected to carry the whole burden of developing Africa and allying her people with the democratic world." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 11 '54 800w

Reviewed by C. L. Sulzberger

N Y Times p7 Je 27 '54 70w

"John Cookson is a good writer. . . He uses almost none of the newspaper interview style employed by Mr. Campbell. His book is rather more reflective and interpretative. His Congo treatment is based on wider acquaintance and wider knowledge than Mr. Campbell had or at least used. . . He writes, 'Central Africa is having an industrial revolution over one hundred years later than the countries in whose hands its destiny has so far lain'. By calendar measure it may be a hundred years. But by cultural, spiritual, political, economic measure it is about 3000 years later. For much of the African mass is about where some of the neighbors of the Old Testament children were three or four millennia ago." Emory Ross

+ — Sat R 37:18 My 8 '54 360w

"Cookson has attempted to cover a great deal of ground (literally and figuratively) in less than 300 pages. While undeniably informative, the book leaves an impression of being rushed to completion." J. J. N.

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 200w

COOLEY, DONALD GRAY. Science book of wonder drugs; il. by William Draut. 247p $2.95 Watts, F.

615 Drugs. Antibiotics

54-6544

"The story of modern miracle drugs: how they were discovered, their early and contemporary history, the innovators, the improvements, and the possible future of other pharmaceutical materials. Cooley traces the progress of the study of the human machine and how to treat its ailments and enhance its efficiency. The sulfa drugs, antibiotics, vitamins, and hormones come in for full discussion." Wis Lib Bul

COOLEY, D. G.—Continued

Booklist 50:445 J1 15 '54

"A straightforward handling of a text in which the concentration of information is high, this is a record of recent achievement which does not neglect the unlimited potential ahead. Illustrated, to no great advantage, in line."

Kirkus 22:92 F 1 '54 140w

"Style and vocabulary better for adult than high school readers, but advanced students, especially those with some knowledge of chemistry, will find the book interesting. Recommended with this reservation for high schools and without reservation for public libraries." Dorothy Schumacher

+ — Library J 79:1327 J1 '54 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 25 '54 50w

Wis Lib Bul 50:129 My '54

COOLIDGE, MRS OLIVIA E. Egyptian adventures; il. by Joseph Low. 209p $3 Houghton 53-10989

Twelve stories of life in ancient Egypt for ages twelve and older.

Booklist 50:422 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 J1 25 '54 110w

"A distinctive contribution to historical fiction for young people. . . Readers may regret that certain stories end when the stage, alive with believable characters and arresting situations, seems set for expanded adventure." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:251 Ag '54 140w

Kirkus 22:267 Ap 15 '54 180w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:715 Ap 15 '54 20w

"The author of this distinguished book draws on her rich background to give us twelve exciting, colorful stories of everyday life in ancient Egypt." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 79:1239 Je 15 '54 70w

"Fascinating book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 16 '54 280w

"Mrs. Coolidge knows the background well; she uses it easily—setting, classes, superstitions, magic, folk tales—and so is free to use her further knowledge of human beings with equal ease. There are few books on Egypt for young readers; 'Egyptian Adventures' is a welcome addition." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 1 '54 170w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:214 N 27 '54 80w

"Miss Coolidge has used Egyptian paintings and inscriptions from which to reconstruct stories, develop plots, and draw characters. Through details of everyday living and descriptions of people and places, she has recreated the spirit of a country and a period." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:65 My 15 '54 160w

Wis Lib Bul 50:144 My '54

COOMBS, CHARLES IRA. Skyrocketing into the unknown. 256p il $4 Morrow

629.14353[629.13338] Rockets (aeronautics). Airplane engines 54-6381

"A survey of American rocket and jet aviation designed for anyone interested in aeronautical progress. Begins with the vivid picture of a test pilot in action; provides simple background explanations of the nature of the atmosphere, the elementary laws of motion, the theory and operation of jet-and-rocket-powered aircraft, protective equipment for pilots, research plane testing, and penetration of the sonic barrier; recognizes the records already established, and concludes with an indication of the still unsolved problems of high altitude, supersonic flight. Contains 114 large, descriptively captioned photographs and diagrams." Booklist

Booklist 51:65 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:13 O '54 10w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 N 14 '54 200w

Reviewed by Herbert Nichols

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '54 380w

Commonweal 61:200 N 19 '54 30w

"An excellent introductory book."

+ Horn Bk 30:360 O '54 70w

Horn Bk 30:438 D '54 80w

Kirkus 22:492 Ag 1 '54 120w

"Dramatically presented with the aid of 141 superb photographs is the story of research and experimentation in the field of space study, possible only through the teamwork of military and civilian personnel, during recent years." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 79:2256 N 15 '54 100w

"There are many recent books on rockets and jet planes, but none yet as handsome and widely appealing as this. The large type text is in an excellent style, easy without condensation, good reading for any age over twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p12 N 14 '54 320w

"Mr. Coombs' coverage of the science of rocketry is quite complete. He discusses the rocket planes that were first flown successfully in this country just ten years ago and he also writes about the large rocket liners that will carry passengers on transcontinental and transoceanic flights in the years to come. In addition, he does a fine job of filling in the gaps between the rocket flights of the past and future." B. K. Thorne

+ N Y Times p28 D 12 '54 180w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:220 N 27 '54 50w

"Mr. Coombs, who has written many sports stories for boys, now gives an excellent introduction to the whys and hows of jet and rocket flight, the most recent developments in high-speed aviation, and the possibilities of space travel." Lilian Morrison

+ Sat R 37:84 N 13 '54 130w

COOMBS, CHARLES IRA. Young infield rookie; il. by Charles H. Geer. 188p $2.50 Lantern press (N Y)

"Little League baseball is most important to Ken Douglas and Amos Jackson, a colored boy who lives in the neighborhood, but Ken must first overcome fear from having his jaw broken while playing baseball. Both boys make the team and convince Lefty Gregory, a Big League player who thinks he is through with baseball, to coach their team. Then the two ball players regain confidence in themselves." Library J

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 9 '54 10w

Kirkus 22:113 F 15 '54 70w

"An extremely interesting story, genuine in character values, with appeal to boys 9-12." Averil Randall

+ Library J 79:634 Ap 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by David Dempsey

N Y Times p16 J1 18 '54 60w

COON, CARLETON STEVENS. Story of man; from the first human to primitive culture and beyond; line drawings by Richard Albany; photographs by Reuben Goldberg. 437p maps $6.75 Knopf

572 Anthropology

53-9458

"A noted anthropologist traces the development of human civilization and appraises present knowledge of prehistoric and primitive peoples and cultures. Maps, photographs, drawings. Glossary, index." Bookmark

Booklist 51:146 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 20w

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 14 '54
300w

"Coon feels we have the power to preserve as well as to destroy our environment and ourselves, if we but use it. Perhaps little of this is new, but this is a fresh and absorbing approach."

+ Kirkus 22:651 S 15 '54 250w

"Professor Coon's book is a valuable addition to this class of writing, and a particularly good essay on the Old and the New Stone Ages, and on the early civilizations of the Mediterranean culture area." Joseph Bram

+ Library J 79:2321 D 1 '54 170w

"The book is a magnificent, very personal, highly stimulating, provocative shout in favor of the future of mankind." Margaret Mead

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 12 '54
950w

"This is the first comprehensive anthropological account of human history which is both readable and authoritative." Clyde Kluckhohn

+ N Y Times p3 N 7 '54 1100w

"A richly rewarding book."

+ New Yorker 30:219 N 13 '54 200w

"This book will renew the reader's faith in the future of man. We may confidently join Professor Coon in the faith that man will conquer all obstacles and that he will move forward according to schedule." Ashley Montagu

+ Sat R 37:26 N 20 '54 800w

COOPER, DOUGLAS, comp. Courtauld collection. See London. University. Courtauld institute of art

COOPER, DUFF, 1st viscount NORWICH. See Norwich, A. D. C.

COOPER, JAMES FENIMORE. Leatherstocking saga; ed. by Allan Nevins; il. by Reginald Marsh. 833p $8.50 Pantheon bks.

"The five Leatherstocking novels—'The Deerslayer,' 'The Last of the Mohicans,' 'The Pathfinder,' 'The Pioneers,' and 'The Prairie'—have been arranged in chronological order, and focused on the epic figure of the scout and trapper. Leatherstocking's life thus reflects America's development from a lawless wilderness to the beginnings of an urban civilization. Prof. Nevins has eliminated repetitious passages and scenes not related to Leatherstocking's career and character, without changing Cooper's style." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 51:132 N 15 '54

"Here are hours of delight, an escape into the wonderful wilderness of colonial America, in the company of the immortal Natty Bumppo, known more lethally and euphemistically as Deerslayer, or Hawkeye, and his company of noble warriors, some quite aboriginal. Prof. Nevins has edited the Leatherstocking Tales for today's readers, without vitiating the powers of the master story teller, nor robbing his work of nostalgic qualities." Lloyd Wendt

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 10 '54
450w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 2 '54
650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Kirkus 22:635 S 15 '54 170w

"Cooper is famous enough, and the book has been so well reviewed as an adult item, that we forgo comment. Many a boy from fourteen up would enjoy this compendium because of its very able cutting, which omits passages not relating to Leatherstocking's career, also 'love scenes, humorous scenes not convincing to the contemporary reader, and repetitions.' What could be more sensible! Clever, too, are the summaries and maps that precede each adventure, and the chronological table. Mr. Nevins' most interesting introduction probably would appeal chiefly to adults." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p34 N
14 '54 200w

"Whether or no Mr. Nevins's obvious labor of love will initiate a Cooper revival is problematical. Certainly his is a good way to go about trying. This much is certain: A lot of people who have heretofore taken their Cooper on trust will read this book and go on from there." J. T. Winterich

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 14 '54
800w

"Mr. Nevins has linked in this one volume the portions of these books which have pleased him most, omitting or briefly summarizing passages which do not concern Bumppo and such superfluities as reveal Cooper's affected mannerisms, lush sentimentalities and painfully forced humor. The books are wisely arranged. . . This may be somewhat confusing to the student of the development of Cooper as a writer. . . The result of the editing and arrangement, however, is a unified and artistically high-lighted portrait of the simple and noble master of forest lore whom readers from nearly all nations of the world have long regarded as the supreme characterization in American literature." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Times p5 O 3 '54 1500w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinhead

New Yorker 30:200 N 27 '54 130w

"A thoroughly good piece of work, it seems to me, a narrative in which the action moves far faster, in which nothing of the essential story has been lost, and which is far better keyed to today's readers, young or older."

J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 29 '54
600w

"The connecting passages are well and penetratingly done, and the result is an enormously readable and united sweep of narrative which gives the modern reader the whole great saga of that long lost frontier of Indian wars and exploration which Cooper told so superbly." P. I. Wellman

+ Sat R 37:23 N 20 '54 800w

"People and events stand out clearly and compellingly, and the background of the American scene comes grandly alive."

+ Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 150w
Time 64:66 D 27 '54 260w

COOPER, MRS LOUISE (FIELD). Cheerful captive, or the nine days' astonishment; il. by Paul Galdone. 280p $3.75 Harcourt

54-9719

"This is the account of a wealthy woman's desire to live 'sideways,' which is a bit confusing to all her family and friends since she had and could have almost anything she desired and her husband delighted in making her happy. So she decides she must go away and be alone for a time, and heads for a seashore resort when the season is almost over. At the shore this wife with too much energy finds a queer collection of fellow boarders but tries being friendly and succeeds beyond her expectations." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 51:83 O 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 79:1831 O 1 '54 70w

"Louise Field Cooper manages this domestic fluff charmingly. For utter inconsequence, there are probably few books to match it, and perhaps 'The Cheerful Captive' might better have been told in a short story, but Hennie is a delightful scatterbrain, and the relationships between husband, wife and children are marvelously tolerant and funny. The reader obviously won't remember the Stacpoles, but he will enjoy every minute spent reading about them." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 O 17 '54
550w

N Y Times p37 O 10 '54 220w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54
100w

COOPER, PAGE. Thunder; il. by Edward Shenton. 218p $2.50 World pub.

Horses—Legends and stories 54-5346

"Emphasizes the friendship of a white and a Negro boy who are both devoted to the training and welfare of a thoroughbred race horse, a son of Man O' War." (Library J) For grades 5 to 8.

Booklist 50:405 Je 15 '54

Kirkus 22:66 F 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:708 Ap 15 '54 30w

"The story is rich in character and incident. Suspense is provided not only by the concern that Thunder may prove 'accident prone' but also by personality conflicts and tense situations which arise even in a community remarkably free from racial and provincial prejudices." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p33 Je 6 '54 140w

COOTE, COLIN REITH, ed. Churchill reader. See Churchill, W. L. S.

CORBETT, MARY K. Girl of Urbino. 223p $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

Historical novel of Renaissance Italy, for teen-age girls.

Booklist 50:186 Ja 1 '54

"A top-notch mystery."

+ Kirkus 21:585 S 1 '53 150w

"Though dialogue seems stilted occasionally, the color, historical background, and philosophy of the period could scarcely be better described in a teen-age novel. Excellent introduction to the Italian Renaissance. Should appeal to girls in grades 8-10." C. A. Hulton

+ Library J 79:213 F 1 '54 110w

"The pages seem overcrowded with characters who never really come alive. Not recommended." R. O. Bostwick

— Library J 79:213 F 1 '54 50w

"The period is portrayed with accuracy and sparkle in a rousing story." Isabelle Lawrence

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 17 '54 120w

CORBIERE, TRISTAN. Selections from Les amours jaunes; tr. with an introd. and notes by C. F. MacIntyre. 242p $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

841

54-6472

"Corbière's poetry first published in 1873, went unnoticed until Verlaine included a selection in 'Les Poètes Maudits' (1884). Laforgue later praised Corbière's stripped style and harsh, scornful tone, and modern taste has come to relish the originality of this eccentric young Breton, who died in 1875, at the age of twenty-nine. Mr. MacIntyre's versions keep close to the difficult language and compressed form of the originals (which are included), and he adds sympathetic commentary and a bibliography." New Yorker

"A generous selection from certainly the most irreverent and the most puckish of the French poets brilliantly made into English verse." John Ciardi

+ Nation 179:236 S 18 '54 20w

New Yorker 30:188 O 9 '54 100w

"Mr. MacIntyre is already an esteemed translator of Baudelaire, Verlaine, and Rilke. The Corbière poems present to the translator tremendous problems in vocabulary, rhythm, and style. Mr. MacIntyre's renderings are poems, and they are at the same time close in accuracy and timbre to the French original." Wallace Fowle

+ Poetry 84:351 S '54 1750w

CORBIN, WILLIAM, pseud. See McGraw, W. C.

CORNELL, BETTY. Teen-age knitting book; in collaboration with the Institute for hand knitting, incorporated. 148p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall

646.2 Knitting 53-6366

Directions for knitting a number of articles teen-agers can use themselves or give as gifts.

Booklist 50:223 F 1 '54

Reviewed by Letty Leitner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 14 '54 40w

CORNELL, BETTY. Teen age popularity guide; il. by Abbi Damerow. 146p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

646.7 Beauty, Personal. Girls. Conduct of life 53-10967

A fashion model who began as a tubby-teen, offers advice to teen-agers on a variety of matters from dieting and make-up, to first dates and etiquette when traveling or visiting. Part of the material appeared in Betty Cornell's Glamour Guide for Teens (Book Review Digest 1951).

Booklist 50:186 Ja 1 '54

"Her last chapter entitled 'Personality' is particularly effective and could well be used as discussion material for club groups of teen-age girls." Phoebe Forrest

+ J Home Econ 46:124 F '54 340w

"Recommended for young people's collections." M. L. Turk

+ Library J 78:2110 D 1 '53 80w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 8 '53 70w

CORREY, LEE, pseud. See Stine, G. H.

CORSON, EDWARD MICHAEL. Introduction to tensors, spinors, and relativistic wave-equations (relation structure). 221p $10 Hafner pub. co.

530.1 Mathematical physics. Relativity (physics). Calculus of tensors 53-3830

"The keynote of this mathematical treatment of field theory is indicated in the author's term, relation structure, which he defines as 'the intrinsic requirements on any field theory which find their origin in considerations of covariants, group theory, and the elementary properties of space-time.' The first two chapters are devoted to essential concepts and techniques in tensor analysis and spinor analysis. The remaining chapters apply these concepts and techniques in the development of relativistic wave equations applicable to particles of arbitrary spin and rest-mass. The author is an eminent theoretical physicist, and his book is addressed to advanced graduate students and to physicists working in the fields of mathematical and theoretical physics." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 38:91 N '53

"It is unfortunate that although, as the author states, field theory is in a phase of amoeboid growth, the latest bibliographical citations are to works published in 1949. But the book is of great interest for two reasons: (1) its summary of results in a branch of physics which is at the forefront of modern developments; and (2) the beautiful mathematical scheme which it presents."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:266 Je '54 200w

COST, MARCH, pseud. See Morrison, P.

COSTAIN, THOMAS BERTRAM. The white and the gold; the French regime in Canada. 482p il maps $5 Doubleday

971.01 Canada — History — To 1763 (New France) 53-7236

The first of a series of projected volumes on the history of Canada, each assigned to a different Canadian author, but all under the general editorship of Mr. Costain. This volume covers the history of Canada from the early discoveries through the end of the seventeenth century. The author tells the story in terms of the people who lived it—Richelieu, Louis XIV, Frontenac, the Jesuit martyrs, the Indians, the coureurs, the habitants.

Booklist 51:103 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:56 D '54 40w

"Mr. Costain's history is certainly more colorful and entertaining than its more academic predecessors, but its very abundance of color makes one wonder just how far its interpretation of events is to be trusted. It is not that there are glaring inaccuracies: Mr. Costain seems to have gone to considerable trouble to get his basic facts straight; but his tendency to give verbatim accounts of conversations and detailed descriptions of scenes keeps us guessing just how much the novelist has embroidered the history." Edith Fowke

+ — Canadian Forum 34:190 N '54 420w

"Sound historical scholarship and Costain's facile narrative style are happily combined in this account of the French regime in Canada. The book is the first of a series on Canadian history, which may be the most important work in this field since Francis Parkman's great contributions of nearly 100 years ago." Carl Wiegman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 26 '54 500w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:1433 N 24 '54 200w

"Where necessary [the author] does not hesitate to digress in time and distance to clarify the actions of his leading characters. In a few instances this leads him awry, as when he ascribes the Iroquois' craftiness to the size of their skulls or generalizes that great military leaders have receding foreheads. Aside from these minor lapses, 'The White and the Gold' is very literate history and fine biography turned out with the grace of a fleur-de-lis." E. W. Foell

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '54 750w

"Costain's insistence on judging each person on moral grounds is often irritating, and the character of his material makes much of the book seem repetitious. But it is still an important history for anyone interested in learning about French Canada and the opening of the North American continent."

+ — Kirkus 22:471 J1 15 '54 280w

"This is a book for all but the most learned libraries, a book that will be beloved by children and adults alike." William Ready

+ Library J 79:1583 S 15 '54 130w

"This is popular narrative history, written by a man who has already turned the talents of a best-selling novelist to telling the story of English history in his Pageant of England series. . . The period of the foundation of the French empire in North America was so romantic in itself that it needs no romanticizing. Mr. Costain finds it 'brave, bizarre, fanatical, lyrical, lusty, and, in fact, rather completely unbalanced,' and considering the nature of the material and his dramatic inclinations, it is not surprising that he has produced a montage of highly colored pictures of key episodes, rather than the balanced picture at which he aimed. . . The sketch maps by Palacios are clear but do not always include important places mentioned in the text, while the illustrations are highly inadequate." Mason Wade

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 26 '54 1000w

"All this is rich fare for the popular historian. Mr. Costain confesses that he would like to have more facts; where he does not have them, he contrives a generous and amiable picture, and augments existing evidence with research into costumes and manners of the day. Some readers may question, if not his detail, his judgment on fundamental issues of the era." Stuart Keate

+ — N Y Times p10 S 26 '54 800w

"This is an attractive popular history, presented in easy doses of short chapters, enlivened by imagination, uninterrupted by any citation of sources, and unencumbered by a bibliography. . . Though Parkman wrote at greater length and completed his task two generations ago, his volumes need surprisingly little revision and are much more satisfying than this one, for they were based on thorough scholarship and were constructed with a finer literary skill." A. L. Burt

+ — Sat R 37:19 N 27 '54 750w

Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 150w

COTHRAN, MRS JEAN, ed. With a wig, with a wag, and other American folk tales; il. by Clifford N. Geary. 95p $2.50 McKay

398.2 Folklore, American 54-12998

Of the fifteen stories in this book, six are tales told by the American Indian, and the rest represent a wide variety of the cultures that have settled America: Spanish, French, Dutch, English, and Negro. There are stories from New England and New York, Louisiana, the Blue Ridge Mountains; from Maryland and New Mexico, Wisconsin and Washington State, Arizona and California.

Booklist 51:155 D 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 14 '54 100w

"Fifteen stories which make for easy and entertaining reading."

+ Commonweal 61:203 N 19 '54 40w

"Authentic and simply told, these are good story time material."

+ Kirkus 22:529 Ag 15 '54 60w

"Perhaps the most pleasing are the six Indian tales originating with the Pueblos, the Ojibways and various other tribes to the west; many will prefer 'Mr. Honey Mouth' with the tricky rabbit or the short, sudden and scary 'Old Woman and the Bear.' Whatever the choice, all are amusing and useful for storytelling." C. E. Van Norman

+ N Y Times pt2 p30 N 14 '54 110w

Sat R 37:82 N 13 '54 80w

COTTERILL, ROBERT SPENCER. Southern Indians; the story of the civilized tribes before removal. (Civilization of the American Indian) 268p il maps $4 Univ. of Okla. press

970.1 Indians of North America 54-5931

"After 25 years of intensive investigation of source material, a Southern historian attempts to supply a much-needed history of those Indians who, at the close of the American Revolution, occupied those regions of the South then claimed and partially possessed by the U.S. The account follows these Indians in their migrations, voluntary and forced, until their final removal to Oklahoma in the 1830's." Booklist

"Unfortunately [the author's] cleverness is actually misleading in interpreting the obscure motives behind Indian actions, the emotional responses that constitute Indian reasoning. . . He is equally obtuse in brushing aside the influence of white missionaries. . . The real excellence of the book then is confined to the history and interpretation of the white man's official policy, more particularly the American policy, towards the Indians. The effect is not very gratifying to national pride, but this is a phase of American history that needs to be told." Angie Debo

+ — Ann Am Acad 295:154 S '54 300w

Booklist 50:317 Ap 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 J1 11 '54 40w

"Here is the stuff of epic drama. . . Mr. Cotterill is one of the few scholars who could so clearly have guided the lay reader through the maze of events, dates, and names. He has constructed an imposing narrative, admirably assembled, impressively documented. The author's expertness in the field lends weight to his conclusions." H. M. Hyman

+ Sat R 37:43 My 1 '54 330w

"Professor Cotterill presents some novel yet plausible interpretations in this work, particularly in the pages devoted to Tecumseh and to Benjamin Hawkins. He has also brought together many hitherto overlooked data about the outstanding Southern Indian, Alexander McGillivray, among others. Because little attempt is made to place the events and trends dealt with in their wider political, economic, or social settings, the uninformed reader may experience difficulty in following all the details of the story, but the tragedy of the Indians will be plain to all."

COTTERILL, R. S.—Continued

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:173 Je '54 240w

COUDENHOVE-KALERGI, RICHARD NICOLAUS, graf VON. Idea conquers the world; with a pref. by Sir Winston S. Churchill. 310p $5 Roy publs.

B or 92 European federation 54-7134

Autobiography of a European nobleman, son of an Austrian diplomat and his Japanese wife. The author's main interest in life has been the advancement of the plan for a United Europe and many chapters of this book are devoted to that theme.

Booklist 50:418 Jl 1 '54

Canadian Forum 33:261 F '54 240w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 9 '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 33:162 O '54 40w

"Merits consideration for special collections and larger public libraries." James Heslin
Library J 79:1053 Je 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by David Mitraný

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 31 '53 390w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 15 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:138 Je 5 '54 230w

"Count Coudenhove-Kalergi, founder of the Pan-Europe movement, has written a wondrous book. It is wondrous in the sense that it inspires wonder, and wondering admiration for its author, without being in itself wonderful or even wholly admirable. . . . Simple-minded to the point of ingenuousness, single-minded to the verge of monomania, poet, artist and political dreamer in one, Count Coudenhove-Kalergi defies classification. At times he seems to resemble those French writers of whom Renan declared that they attained clearness by faulty vision. At other times his power of synthetic expression recalls the work of those Japanese artists who convey with rare economy of line, an adequate and satisfying conception of a landscape."

Times [London] Lit Sup p485 Jl 31 '53 3350w

COUGHLAN, ROBERT. Coming victory over polio. 83p $1 Simon & Schuster

616.9 Infantile paralysis 54-2477

"[The author], a writer for Life magazine, describes what has been going on behind the curtain of medical research for many years. He skillfully explains complicated biological mechanisms to the layman. The reader is informed about the discovery of three specific kinds of virus responsible for poliomyelitis, about the difficulties of experimentation and about the controversies regarding live- and killed-virus vaccines. The book covers all practical and technical knowledge of the disease, the vaccine, gamma globulin, other treatment, physical aids like the 'iron lung' and the Sister Kenny method, measures of general hygiene and the assistance available to sufferers through the Foundation for Infantile Paralysis." N Y Times

Kirkus 22:302 My 1 '54 100w

"Parent citizens, lay readers, trade bookstores, and general public libraries should (and must) purchase." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1221 Je 15 '54 160w

"Irresponsible and incompetent reporting spread some mistrust of the new method before it could be applied. This short and revealing book by Robert Coughlan is a corrective and should be read by everyone who wants accurate information about poliomyelitis." Martin Gumpert

N Y Times p17 Je 27 '54 360w

COUGHLAN, ROBERT. Private world of William Faulkner. 151p il $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Faulkner, William

54-8943

"The very successful two-part story which appeared in Life just a year ago is here reprinted with many amplifications and additions. Coughlan has made a careful study of Faulkner's writing and made it the background for a penetrating journalistic account of his family tree, his Mississippi and his daily life. Many new or previously misinterpreted facts are brought to light especially concerning Faulkner's war service and his career in Hollywood as a writer." Library J

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 7 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:516 Ag 1 '54 330w

"An important biographical supplement for any general collection representing works by Faulkner and a definite necessity for all college libraries. With many fine photographs." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1821 O 1 '54 100w

Reviewed by J. R. Willingham

Nation 179:512 D 11 '54 300w

"Mr. Coughlan's method is simple. He has dredged up biographical material, has accumulated anecdotes, and tacked on a patch of 'criticism' consisting of plot summaries so simplified as to be usable in comic books. He writes in a smooth effortless creamy prose, of the sort that never betrays the knots and twists of a mind in thought. . . . Perhaps to add a pinch of spice, Mr. Coughlan offers a fairly full description of what he calls Faulkner's heavy drinking. Whether his report is true I neither know nor care, but it seems to me in deplorable taste." Irving Howe
New Repub 131:19 O 11 '54 700w

"By reverting to a device which hostile reviewers used during the Thirties for making Faulkner's work look ludicrous—listing the surface events of his fiction, out of context and divorced from their significance—one section of the book unfortunately bolsters the erroneous popular idea that Faulkner is a literary sadist and horror-monger rather than a literary moralist in the best sense of the term. And the book misinterprets Faulkner's early development by not recognizing the vigor of the literary self-reliance which lay behind his taciturnity even in those earliest years. After making these criticisms one can offer only praise for several good qualities of 'The Private World of William Faulkner,' which include its smooth flow, a skillful integration of information in many sections and several extremely well-written descriptions of scenes and men." Carvel Collins

+ — N Y Times p30 O 24 '54 800w

Reviewed by Lewis Vogler

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 7 '54 150w

"Mr. Coughlan makes no serious critical pretensions. He is not addressing a highbrow audience and he concerns himself only sporadically and lightly with Faulkner's writings as literature. Other people have been or are now doing the critical job. Meantime this sketchbook should have the useful function of helping to introduce certain highlights of Faulkner's life and personality to a wider audience than secondary works on him usually reach." Carlos Baker

+ — Sat R 37:29 O 23 '54 950w

COULSON, JOHN METCALFE, and RICHARDSON, JOHN FRANCIS. Chemical engineering; 2v; v 1: Fluid flow, heat transfer and mass transfer. 370p $7.50 McGraw

660 Chemical engineering (54-3988)

"The first volume published of a new two-volume text written at an advanced level by faculty members of the Imperial College of Science and Technology. It is organized primarily in terms of unit processes. In this volume the fundamental processes named in the section titles are expounded mainly in terms of basic science; however their relations to practical chemical engineering are clearly indicated." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:3546 S 6 '54 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 39:67 S '54

COURTAULD, SAMUEL. Courtauld collection. See London. University. Courtauld Institute of art

COURTIER, SIDNEY HOBSON. One cried murder. 244p $2.50 Rinehart

53-9432

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:168 Mr 1 '54 60w

"The only justification for this tortuous tale of murder on a geological expedition into the bush is a great deal of local color—vivid, if largely familiar already from the novels of Arthur Upfield. Writing, plotting and characterization are hopelessly sub-standard." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 My 23 '54 30w

"Admirers of Arthur Upfield's Australian-desert novels will find a similar background in this curiously stilted but compelling yarn about anthropologists at dreary Lake Kittakittinie. . . C plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 4 '54 50w

"Colorless and thin." Sergeant Cuff

— Sat R 37:29 Je 5 '54 20w

COVARRUBIAS, MIGUEL. The eagle, the jaguar, and the serpent; Indian art of the Americas; v 1, North America: Alaska, Canada, the United States. 314p il col il $15 Knopf

970.1 Indians of North America—Art (52-6415)

An illustrated history of the Indian and Eskimo art of North America. "The first third of the book is a general survey of native American art, including that of the high civilizations of Middle America and the Andean Highlands. The rest is devoted to more detailed study of native art in Alaska, Canada and the United States. Mr. Covarrubias bases his work on the accumulated findings of archaeologists who have been carrying on systematic excavation and study since the middle of the nineteenth century." (N Y Times) Copiously illustrated, many of the illustrations being in color. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:171 D 15 '54

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 2 '54 70w

Kirkus 22:652 S 15 '54 250w

"Recommended. Presumably other volumes will follow." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:2332 D 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by S. L. Faison

Nation 179:492 D 4 '54 20w

"The author's agreeable enthusiasm animates much of his text and he loses few opportunities to laud the Indians. Their art has been neglected, and surely merits his praise, if not all his enthusiastic claims, and surely also deserves the attention this handsome book will bring it." John McAndrew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 5 '54 600w

"Mr. Covarrubias has gathered together a vast amount of fact and theory in his book. . . All this has been gathered together into a narrative which is flowing, clear and in harmony with the spirit of contemporary scholarship." Holger Cahill

+ N Y Times p3 N 7 '54 850w

"It is an immense project, and because the author hasn't really decided between compendiousness and compactness, parts of the book are dense while others are written in a rather tedious cataloguing style. Still, there's a feeling of earnestness about the whole work . . . that carries one along."

+ New Yorker 30:242 D 4 '54 130w

"This volume proves that an American publisher can attain the European standard if he really wants to do so. There are 112 line cuts in the text and 12 superb color plates, all of them, presumably, by Covarrubias himself. They illustrate the artifacts to perfection and, over and above that, possess a boldness and authority which stamp them as the work of a man who is an authentic artistic creator in his own right. There are also 48 pages of photographs, many of them masterpieces." Alfred Frankenstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 28 '54 1000w

"Lucid and authoritative."

+ Time 64:129 D 6 '54 20w

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Future indefinite. 352p il $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-7666

This second volume of Noel Coward's autobiography carries the story of his career from the publication of his first autobiographical volume: Present Indicative (Book Review Digest 1937) thru his experiences in World war II. Index.

"Though I am a keen admirer of Mr. Coward's talents in the theater, this volume of personal history struck me as pretentious, silly, and dreadfully egotistic." C. J. Rolo

— Atlantic 194:82 S '54 500w

Booklist 51:12 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Robert Kass

Cath World 180:79 O '54 250w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 18 '54 370w

"Provocative, amusing, temperamental, lively, sly, acid, and altogether engaging autobiography." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '54 650w

"There are occasional bits of good theatre, inevitably, but in the main the book is rather dull reading unless you find Noel Coward, in all guises, irresistible."

Kirkus 22:323 My 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:1407 Ag '54 20w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 2 '54 270w

Nation 179:178 Ag 28 '54 300w

"Future Indefinite is disappointing. It is not a sequel to his earlier volume, Present Indicative; it is an account of his war service, and this through no fault of his was not particularly interesting. One knows only too well the kind of personal reminiscences which well-known theatrical figures are capable of producing in this line. Accounts of successful concerts given to admiring troops everywhere from China to Peru; applauding crowds, hitches with microphones, sudden attacks of laryngitis, miles and miles of journeying, topped off with a rich sprinkling of the Christian names of other well-known theatrical and social figures. There is far too much of this unimportant chit-chat in his book for a man of Mr. Coward's talent to be content with." T. C. Worsley

New Statesman & Nation 47:479 Ap 10 '54 800w

"Mr. Coward wanted very much not to be precisely what much of the British press grumbled that he was—a 'playboy,' sparkling perversely in the gloom. In his altogether delightful memoir, [he] does not labor this point, although he makes it. He is too witty a man to be laborious; too astute a one to think how, looking back, that his war activities could, for long, have been otherwise directed." Richard Lockridge

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Jl 18 '54 600w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p5 Jl 18 '54 800w

"Another agreeable autobiographical diversion by one of the most agreeably gifted entertainers of the boom-and-bust generation."

+ New Yorker 30:75 Jl 17 '54 90w

COWARD, N. P.—Continued

"Most readers of 'Future Indefinite' will, I think, read it with pleasure, conceive a good deal of real liking for the author, and then put it down with a sense of bafflement. I should not be surprised if Mr. Coward were a bit baffled himself." J. W. Krutch

+ — Sat R 37:17 J1 17 '54 950w

"It may be just perversity but I feel sure most people prefer actors and actresses and dramatists to write about the theatre, leaving diplomatists, statesmen and generals to the memoirs of generals, statesmen and diplomatists." Gerard Fay

Spec p473 Ap 16 '54 400w

Time 64:80 J1 19 '54 1050w

"Future Indefinite is, it must be admitted, a trifle dull. The portrait which emerges from its pages is that of a nice man, well-meaning, intellectually naive, sentimental, a shade artificial in his tastes, and forever imprisoned within himself—as a person, as an actor, and as a celebrity."

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 Ap 2 '54 1150w

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Song book; with an introd. and annotations by [the author] il. in colour and black and white by Gladys Calthrop; frontispiece portrait by Clemence Dane. 309p $7.50 Simon & Schuster

784.8 Songs

M53-554

Words and music for fifty-one of Noel Coward's songs, with an autobiographical introduction and annotations.

"Mainly for those who take light music seriously, and not at all easy to play or sing half-way acceptably." C. K. Miller

Library J 79:147 Ja 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:2337 D 1 '54 40w

Reviewed by Arthur Marshall

New Statesman & Nation 46:644 N 21 '53 400w

"Even those who are not already fans of Mr. Coward's witty lyrics and delightful music will be attracted by the unconscious pageantry of this collection. The book is illustrated in color and in black and white by Gladys Calthrop, and there is a frontispiece portrait by Clemence Dane. The music is printed with extreme clarity and legibility."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 20 '53 260w

"At his best, Mr. Coward was an unalloyed delight—but it is highly improbable that we will see his like again. Surely this is true of his songs—a minor part of his output when measured against the body of his work, yet as representative as the most memorable lines in his plays. The best and the worst of Mr. Coward's music will be found in this jumbo volume." William Du Bois

+ — N Y Times p3 D 20 '53 850w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 15 '53 110w

COWEN, WILLIAM JOYCE. Fifth miracle. 214p $3 Longmans

54-10861

A little French girl, living as a refugee in a factory town, has promised her absent father two things—to take care of her pretty young stepmother, and to make sure that the expected baby is a boy! Paulette, with earnest devotion, keeps both promises and more, tho the doing involves stealing the Infant Christ from the Christmas Crèche in the church.

Booklist 51:108 N 1 '54

"Handled with skill as well as sentiment, this is a winning, warming story of faith, and faith rewarded, which will transcend denominational lines."

+ Kirkus 22:497 Ag 1 '54 150w

"Highly recommended for young and old." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 79:1511 S 1 '54 140w

"Occasionally there appears a novel so straightforward and uncomplicated, humble yet sparkling in joyous innocence, that the critic hesitates between an attitude of worldly cynicism or of trying to hide the misting of the eyes. Indeed, this ability to make the implausible perhaps adds another miracle to those contained in William Joyce Cowen's latest novel, 'The Fifth Miracle.'" J. W. Chase

+ N Y Times p26 D 12 '54 400w

COWLES, EDWARD SPENCER. Conquest of fatigue and fear [foreword by Max Einhorn]. 238p $2.95 Holt

616.08 [616.8] Fear. Fatigue, Mental 54-5445

Dr Cowles believes that most mental illnesses are caused by a depletion of nerve cell energy. His prescription of conquering fear and fatigue is described in this book, which is in part a rewording of his earlier book Don't Be Afraid (Book Review Digest 1941). Index.

"So many people these days seem to have quick, easy methods to overcome fear, not knowing that fear often stems from deep causes and its easing may not be simple or immediate. . . Dr. Cowles makes the mistake of indulging in a vehement attack on psychoanalysis, insisting it does not 'cure mental illness' and actually harms people. This is simply not true." Lucy Freeman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 18 '54 420w

"An interesting side-shoot of psychiatry which is overbalanced for this reader by the author's overbearing attitude toward and exclusion of other techniques and theories, but which has a 'how-to' appeal."

+ — Kirkus 22:23 Ja 1 '54 160w

"Since no evidence is offered to show that the Cowles method works permanently for anyone other than its founder, this skeptical reviewer cannot recommend the book for library purchase." Louis Barron

— Library J 79:378 F 15 '54 260w

COWLEY, MALCOLM. Literary situation. 259p $3.75 Viking

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 54-7984

A volume on the "social history of literature in our times" based in part on essays and articles previously published, but here emended and extended to make a more or less continuous whole. Contents: The new age of the rhetoricians; War novels: after two wars; The "new" fiction: a tidy room in bedlam; Critics over novelists; Naturalism: no teacup tragedies; Cheap books for the millions; Hardbacks or paperbacks; A natural history of the American writer; The next fifty years in American literature; Index.

"All in all, Mr. Cowley has done a valuable job. While closer to competence than to brilliance, his book is sensible, perceptive, and readable." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:90 N '54 650w

Booklist 51:74; 128 O 15 '54; N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:56 D '54 20w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 31 '54 250w

"I wonder why a book like this was not thought of and written before. It is an unusually informative survey of modern writing. . . Mr. Cowley conducts this excursion into the sociology of literature with the same acuteness and sanity that mark his treatment of all other questions raised in this original and illuminating book." P. F. Quinn

+ Commonweal 61:228 N 26 '54 1100w

"Possibly because he is still so close to his subject, Mr. Cowley's small points are more interesting and impressive than his larger opinions; the book does not sustain the high level of originality and shrewdness of its better sections which are very good indeed."

+ — Kirkus 22:615 S 1 '54 280w

"Anyone who enjoys books will find a challenge here as well as some choice bits to quote. Highly recommended." E. T. Smith
+ Library J 79:1885 O 15 '54 370w

"A fascinating account of the American writer as a human being." Milton Rugoff
+ N Y Herald Tribune ■ K R p6 O 24 '54 700w

"About how people become writers, how they live, how they support themselves (or don't), he is knowledgeable, shrewd and amusing. . . He is equally entertaining as an amateur sociologist examining the position of the writer in American society. He is sympathetic and unapologetic, and he sees that writers are often as funny as business men." Arthur Mizener

+ N Y Times p6 O 31 '54 900w

Reviewed by D. M. Stocking

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 28 '54 600w

"The book that Malcolm Cowley calls 'The Literary Situation' is reputedly a product of his career as literary journalist, rather than critic, but he has been concerned with ideas and expression for so long that critical judgments come as an attractive premium with the work. Only Edmund Wilson has similarly combined opinion with professional concern for the writer's occupation, but his accounts have been much more circumscribed." Harry Hansen

+ Sat R 37:21 N 13 '54 950w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54 240w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON, ed. Butcher, baker, murder-maker. See Mystery writers of America, incorporated.

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Death at the Isthmus. 214p $2.75 Knopf

54-8760

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:459 J1 15 '54 70w

"Honor to Mr. Coxe for a steady succession of tales, all with plausible characters, a proper sense of restraint and a speaking acquaintance with the elements of his narrative. Honor, too, to this (his 34th), adequate in these respects and sometimes a little more as well." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 12 '54 90w

"Slips a little below George Harmon Coxe's high standards of pace and ingenuity; but Panama City makes an effective out-of-the-way locale for murder, which a New York lawyer and a Panamanian policeman combine to solve." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p41 S 26 '54 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 10 '54 70w

"Nice setting; cast sound; could move wee mite faster." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p7C O ■ '54 90w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Focus on murder. 209p $2.75 Knopf

54-5262

Detective story.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

"Swiftly paced, sharply plotted, neatly wrapped up." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My ■ '54 150w

Kirkus 22:17 Ja 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 27 '54 130w

"The best case for photographer Kent Murdock in some three years and one of his best ever." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 28 '54 80w

New Yorker 30:135 Ap ■ '54 90w

"It's always good news when Kent Murdock, New York newspaper photographer, gets into a case. This one seems especially satisfying." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '54 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat ■ 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

COZENS, FREDERICK WARREN, and STUMPF, FLORENCE SCOVIL. Sports in American life. 366p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

796 Sports

53-12897

"An important study of the basic sociological significance of the rapid growth, during the past 50 years of sports and recreation in America. The role of the Church, attitude of labor, sports page, government encouragement, race relationships and international aspects are discussed with objectivity. Concluding chapter, Spectator Sports, is admirable." Library J

Reviewed by C. H. Page

Am J Soc 59:582 My '54 550w

Booklist 50:255 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by Hugh Maclean

Canadian Forum 34:119 Ag '54 600w

"Recommended for general reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:67 Ja 1 '54 70w

"We liked it because the authors did not give the subject a brush-off nor, even though they are educators, were they patronizing, as so many of our educators are when they write or discuss the recreational side of education." I. T. Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p42 D 6 '53 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 31 '54 180w

"At the outset, I must confess that I am staggered by the effort, labor, and research that went into the composition of Frederick W. Cozen's and Florence S. Stumpf's 'Sports in American Life.' There can't be any book, magazine, report, article, document, or monograph written on athletics in the past fifty years that the authors have not consulted and digested. . . Trouble is, it isn't sufficient. After reading these three hundred pages plus the sixty-six pages of notes and citations, it is hard to see how this vital and stimulating topic can be reduced to such pedestrian levels." J. R. Tunis

Sat R 37:21 S 4 '54 700w

"Not everyone will go so far as to agree with Dr. Cozens and Miss Stumpf that spectator sports are the cement of democracy, but all who are interested in recreation and sports as social manifestations of life in the United States will find in this book a good introduction to the subject."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:229 Je '54 200w

CRAIG, ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL. Preaching in a scientific age. (Warrack lectures) 119p $2.50 Scribner

251 Preaching

54-3863

A study of the problems of preaching which face the minister of the present day. It studies also the preacher himself; his function; obligations; attitude; etc. No index.

"The book does not answer all the questions it raises, but it points in the right direction. It is fresh, zestful and constructive." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1208 O 6 '54 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p xi Ap 30 '54 400w

CRAIG, SIR JOHN HERBERT MCCUTCH- EON. The Mint. 449p il $13.50 Cambridge

332.4 Coins, British. Great Britain. Royal mint [53-9377]

"A history of the London Mint from A.D. 287 to 1948." (Subtitle) The author was Deputy Master and comptroller of the mint from 1939 to 1949. Bibliography. Index.

CRAIG, J. H. M.—Continued

"The cumulative effect is impressive. Sir John's encyclopedic knowledge is lightened by a lively awareness of the influence of conflicting personalities upon the course of mint events, which he can present with happy turn of phrase." J. P. Nichols

+ Am Hist R 59:359 Ja '54 800w

"Will become not only the standard authority but is an unfamiliar slice of English history. It also has the attraction of being extremely readable."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 5 '53 120w

"Will be read by the general reader and student alike. . . . The book is beautifully produced and illustrated with sixteen plates. Its price may put it beyond the reach of many, but it must be regarded by most important libraries as essential." R. J. Martin

+ Spec p462 Ap 10 '53 650w

"Sir John Craig is the undisputed master of his subject. His retirement from the post of Deputy Master and Comptroller of the Royal Mint has been marked by the regular appearance of authoritative and scholarly works about an institution which, running as a strong and steady thread through the whole course of English history, has found many a commentator but never, within the last century, a historian at once widely and intimately informed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p395 Je 19 '53 1050w

CRAM, GEORGE F. COMPANY, INCORPORATED. Unrivaled atlas, the world—indexed. 64th ed 403p il $25 George F. Cram Company, Inc, 608 S Dearborn St, Chicago 912 Atlases Map53-29

"This is the latest edition of an atlas first published in 1880. . . . The publisher states that 220 four-color maps are included, with individual maps of all states, displaying counties in color, and individual maps of the Canadian provinces. Advertising describes the atlas as 'your source of authentic political and historical information compiled all in one volume for quick and easy use,' 'ideal for commercial use,' and 'an indispensable aid for educators, librarians, editorial writers, television, radio, market researchers, media buyers . . . churches, homes, offices.'" Subscription Bks Bul

"Although there is much in the new edition that has been taken over with little or no change from the sixty-third, this is a genuinely new edition with certain major improvements and numerous minor changes throughout. . . . Cram's Unrivaled Atlas will not meet the needs of those who desire maps showing physical geography such as is provided in atlases with well-done layer tints to show elevations, nor will it satisfy geographers who desire specialized projections for particular cartographic emphases. It is obviously not intended to serve these purposes. But for individuals, institutions, or businesses needing a medium-sized commercial or political atlas, combined with a gazetteer of states and an extensive historical atlas, Cram's Unrivaled Atlas is recommended."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 25:4 Ja '54 1650w

CRAMER, FRIEDRICH. Paper chromatography; tr. by Leighton Richards. 2v rev & enl ed 124p il col il $5 St Martins

544.9 Chromatographic analysis 54-14244

"Practical manual. Deals with theoretical background of partition methods, operating methods, and the separation of particular substances." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng 32:3668 S 13 '54 20w

"A rather extensive bibliography is included which should prove to be a very helpful reference for those already acquainted with paper chromatography. For those using this method for the first time the manual should be an excellent introduction and a valuable assistant."

C. M. Martini

+ Chem Eng 61:344 D '54 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:68 S '54

GRAMOND, MICHAEL. Hunting and fishing in North America. 407p il $5.95 Univ. of Okla. press

799 Hunting—North America. Fishing—North America 53-8816

"A well-known sportsman, familiar with hunting and fishing grounds in Alaska, Canada, the U.S., and Mexico, gives pointers illustrated by anecdotes from his own experience on hunting and fishing equipment and methods, and on the kinds, distribution and sport value of game animals, birds and fish. Drawings, diagrams, and photographs add both informative and aesthetic value to this sport lover's treasury." Booklist

Booklist 50:255 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:232 Jl '54 20w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:67 Ja 1 '54 20w

"He is an unassuming expert, an excellent writer and a man whose breadth of experiences ranges from iguana to catfish noodling." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 25 '53 200w

CRANDALL, EDWARD. White violets. 210p $3 Little 54-5110

Mystery story.

Kirkus 21:771 D 1 '53 80w

"Synthetic Rinehart with Freudian rumblings for your pay collection." F. A. Boyle

Library J 79:204 F 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p15 F 7 '54 30w

"Atmosphere, Eberhart and Rinehart styles boiled down into glue." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 7 '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 70w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Coral princess murders. 235p $2.75 Random house 54-7451

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 10 '54 10w

"Atmosphere plus, detection nil."

Kirkus 22:415 Jl 1 '54 60w

"The cast, a mighty shifty load of incessant talkers, is decimated richly before the mystery is explained. Miss Crane leaves us with the larger mystery: why is all of this fierce agitation so singularly dull?" James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 12 '54 60w

"One of Frances Crane's better novels."

Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p40 S 12 '54 20w

"Jean's chilly narration warms up a bit for this plot, and the scenery's fine, making for one of the best Crane performances in some time. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 10 '54 100w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat ■ 37:64 O 2 '54 30w

CRANE, ROBERT, pseud. See Glemser, B.

CRANE, VERNER WINSLOW. Benjamin Franklin and ■ rising people; ed. by Oscar Handlin. 219p $3 Little

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin 54-5136

A study of Franklin's contributions to his country and to humanity in general, as author, philosopher, scientist, and statesman. Index.

Booklist 51:81 O 15 '54

Bookmark 13:233 Jl '54 20w

Reviewed by W. W. Cunningham
Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 21 '54
270w

Reviewed by John Cournos
Commonweal 60:398 Jl 23 '54 480w
Kirkus 22:280 Ap 15 '54 200w

"The author comments on the fact that Franklin has suffered in reputation as a statesman because he bequeathed no theory of politics; quite possibly also, because much of what he wrote in irony seems frivolous. Yet in his day Franklin was looked upon as one of the supreme heroes of the American Revolution, and some of the reasons for this attitude appear in this volume. Recommended, however, for the specialist rather than the general reader." James Heslin

Library J 79:1221 Je 15 '54 150w

"Many aspects of Franklin's career are judiciously appraised in this balanced, perceptive account. The reader will close the book with a deeper appreciation of America's first world figure, the first American, as the author points out, to practice the difficult art of accommodating our interests to those of an ally, and the first to mark the line between subservience to a foreign power and isolationism." R. B. Morris

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 1 '54 600w

"An appealing portrait of a man who can't be pinned down."

+ New Yorker 30:67 Jl 31 '54 200w

"Three things make this brief volume the finest book on Benjamin Franklin, with the single exception of Carl Van Doren's long biography which appeared in 1938: it is authoritative, with Mr. Crane's immense reservoirs of learning behind every observation; it is precise, sensible, and wise, marred by none of the extravagant admiration so usual in Franklin studies; and it is delightful to read a charming book which should be handed as a model to all those historians who complain their works do not reach a wide audience." J. H. Powell

+ Sat R 37:19 S 4 '54 900w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 220w

CRAVEN, AVERY ODELL. Growth of southern nationalism, 1848-1861. (History of the South) 433p $6.50 La. state univ. press
975 South—History 53-11470

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"In this most recent analysis of the antecedents of the Civil War, Avery O. Craven traverses ground which has already been covered within the last eleven years by Allan Nevins, Roy F. Nichols, J. G. Randall, and, not least, by himself. With the law of diminishing returns working against him, he has nevertheless succeeded in bringing new insights to bear on familiar episodes and in increasing the precision with which the factors of sectional conflict can be evaluated." D. M. Potter

+ Am Hist 59:392 Ja '54 850w

"The great contribution that Mr. Craven makes in this generally readable and useful account of the period is his thorough study of popular Southern reaction to the sectional issues as revealed in the public press. It is the picture of a conservative people, not greatly swayed by the bitter debates in and out of Congress, slowly and regretfully reaching the conclusion that separation from the North was necessary for the survival of the South." F. L. Owsley

+ Ann Am Acad 291:165 Ja '54 480w

"Dr. Craven, now Professor Emeritus of American History at the University of Chicago, has devoted a lifetime of study and research to the period he covers in this volume. The result is a distillation of the life work of a mature scholar and the kind of history we need so much and get so rarely." D. S. Sparks

+ Social Studies 45:266 N '54 310w

"Instead of attempting a broad coverage of all aspects of Southern life, Professor Craven adheres rather closely to the theme indicated by his title, and deals only briefly and incidentally with such subjects as education, culture, and economic and institutional trends.

His orientation, moreover, far from permitting the story to be kept within the boundaries of the slave states, requires much attention to the national setting. Fortunately, the author achieves a degree of objectivity that compares favorably with the best of the volumes so far published in the series."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:405 D '53 240w

CRAWFORD, MARION. Margaret; the story of a modern princess [Eng title: Princess Margaret]. 190p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Margaret, princess of Great Britain
54-6352

The former governess of Princess Margaret writes an informal life of her pupil, describing events in her life since her sister became Queen of England.

"A book which will appeal to those who enjoy reading about royalty."

Booklist 50:339 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 10w

"Miss Crawford's first book, 'The Little Princesses' was excellent and breathed with life. The governess' narrative of the growing up of a future queen and her sister has historical worth. But, since, Crawfie has been away from the daily life of the palace and, in narrating present day events, she relies on 'intimate' throwbacks to the old days when she was governess." Gwen Morgan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 25 '54
200w

"While this adds little to the known picture, it has the personal angle that will appeal to the popular market that likes the sentiment."

Kirkus 22:97 F 1 '54 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p13 Je 27
'54 50w

"The account is something of a rhapsody, for there is nothing but praise of everyone mentioned." S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7C My 23 '54
130w

CRAWFORD, ROBERT PLATT. Techniques of creative thinking; how to use your ideas to achieve success. 287p $3.95 Hawthorn bks.

155 Thought and thinking. Creation (literary, artistic, etc) 54-6456

"Robert Crawford is professor of journalism at the University of Nebraska and, in that capacity, has taught a course in creative thinking for many years. . . It is Crawford's contention that the production of ideas can be a controlled process. Instead of leaving their appearance to spontaneous imagination, he discusses the technique available for the average person who needs new ideas in business, writing, art, administration, and technological development." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Booklist 50:443 Jl 15 '54

"The book is full of concrete, illustrative material concerning the way ideas were found and developed in a profitable way by others. You are bound to be stimulated by this helpful book." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 9 '54
280w

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54
110w

CREASEY, JOHN (ANTHONY MORTON, pseud). Blind spot [Eng title: Inspector West at bay]. 216p $2.50 Harper

54-6011

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:16 Ja 1 '54 60w

"Quite lively enough to discount all but its ultimate absurdities." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune ■ R p11 Mr 14
'54 140w

CREASEY, JOHN—Continued

"As a novel, this does not survive a final 'explanation,' which is weak psychologically and leaves too much unexplained; but the going is fine up till then, and, as usual, West's domestic life is more real than that of any other detective I can recall." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p12 Mr 28 '54 110w

"A straightforward and entertaining story, without too much distracting ornament."

+ New Yorker 30:135 Mr 13 '54 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 18 '54

60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54

60w

CREASEY, JOHN (ANTHONY MORTON, pseud). Give a man a gun [Eng title: A gun for Inspector West]. 210p $2.75 Harper

54-12174

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:600 S 1 '54 70w

"Chew this and it'll give you a terrible time. Gulp it and you'll get on famously with it." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 14 '54 40w

"A good enough thriller combined with intensive pamphleteering in favor of the (to us) incomprehensible British custom of leaving the police unarmed." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p43 N 21 '54 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 5 '54

100w

"Unpredictable gals have big parts in panoramic thriller. Highly fanciful." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 10w

"Mr. Creasey writes swiftly-paced books which also have a definite literary style, creating a fine combination of American 'hard boiled' action and smooth British writing." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 50w

CREEL, HERRLEE GLESSNER. Chinese thought from Confucius to Mao Tse-tung. 292p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

181.1 Philosophy, Chinese

53-10054

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This introductory survey rests on distinguished scholarship and a wealth of learning about the Chinese past, but it is vitiated as history by the author's approach to ideas as things-in-themselves; problems of process and context have been treated inadequately." J. R. Levenson

— + Am Anthropol 56:330 Ap '54 320w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 7 '54 280w

"Originating in a series of public lectures delivered at the University of Chicago, Professor Creel's clear and readable account of the history of Chinese thought is not intended for the specialist in sinology or the technician in philosophy. It constantly takes into account the social and political background of the successive currents of Chinese thought—a factor somewhat neglected in the various works of Fung Yu-lan in which Chinese philosophy has recently been presented to the Western public. While Fung Yu-lan's books are rather hard reading for the uninitiate, Creel's tone is fluent, easy and, in the best sense of the word, at times almost journalistic." P. Demiéville

+ Pacific Affairs 26:366 D '53 300w

"As Chinese philosophy in general is so strongly centred on social relations and social problems, it is surprising that Professor Creel hardly mentions economic thought. . . Indeed, Professor Creel interprets his theme somewhat narrowly. In the main he is concerned only with ideas in books. . . These are comparatively minor grumbles. Professor Creel's book is as much to be praised for what it is as criticised for what it is not." O. B. Van der Sprenkel

+ — Spec p638 N 19 '54 470w

"Professor Creel has done a useful piece of work in presenting in so compendious a form a non-technical account of the development of Chinese thought from the earliest times to the present day. A book such as this makes for a closer understanding between the East and the West."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p702 N 5 '54 850w

"The author has learned the art of writing simply, clearly, and authoritatively about weighty matters. Part of this simplicity is achieved by concentration on genuinely important things, and by avoiding the plethora of strange names that bewilders the ordinary reader. Though the concepts that have guided the Chinese people in the past are quite properly stressed, these are related at every step to the present situation, and also to similar lines of thought that evolved in the West."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:431 D '53 240w

CRESSEY, DONALD RAY. Other people's money; a study in the social psychology of embezzlement. 191p $3 Free press

364.16 [364.38] Embezzlement

53-7398

"In this study of the social psychology of embezzlement, the author cites numerous interviews with trust violators in developing his theory that a 'non-sharable' problem almost invariably precedes the criminal violation of financial trust. Most frequently, he found, the embezzler does not view his asocial behavior as 'stealing' but rationalizes that he is essentially an honest person who acted under the stress of an unusual situation. Some implications of the theory are set forth in a final chapter." Management R

Reviewed by K. F. Schuessler

Am J Soc 59:604 My '54 500w

"This study, despite a number of limitations, represents a substantial addition to the criminological literature dealing with behavior systems and crime. Since it studies a subtype of crime, trust violation, it contributes toward the building up a science of criminology through the study of types rather than 'criminals' as a homogeneous group. With Cressey's excellent analysis of the behavior that takes place in trust violation it is possible to follow it up with other studies which may enable us to predict the particular individuals and the particular situations which are likely to lead to the behavior system." M. B. Clinard

+ — Am Soc R 19:362 Je '54 1400w

"Dr. Cressey's study of the social psychology of violation of financial trust and the general theory which he proposes to explain it should be of considerable interest to criminologists and to social scientists generally. . . Aside from the admirably systematic manner in which the author proceeds to construct and support his theory, the case materials which are inserted when they are relevant to his argument make interesting reading in themselves." A. R. Lindesmith

+ Ann Am Acad 291:180 Ja '54 450w

Management R 43:70 Ja '54 60w

"The amateur reader of sociology is usually disturbed by two defects of the books he encounters. The first is a certain barbarousness of style. . . The second may be expressed as a haunting sense that he has heard all of this before. . . It is impossible to absolve Mr. Cressey of the first sin. . . Actually two features make the study valuable. . . This sociological dilettante, then, is prepared to accord Mr. Cressey rather higher marks in the analysis of a subject which must have fascinated most of us at one time or another." Robert Lekachman

+ — New Repub 130:19 F 1 '54 500w

"The work will be invaluable to all criminologists, especially those engaged in research. Any social scientist, however, will profit by following Dr. Cressey through the design of his study, its execution, and the interpretations he has made in line with existing theory."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:229 Je '54 210w

CRESSEY, GEORGE BABCOCK. How strong is Russia? a geographic appraisal. 146p il $3 Syracuse univ. press

947 [914.7] Russia—Description and travel. Russia—Economic conditions 54-9666

"A geographic appraisal"—in terms of population, land, climate, resources and space—of the Soviet Union's economic and, less satisfactorily, of its political prospects." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 33:164 O '54 20w

"This is an admirable presentation for the general reader who wishes a balanced view of the Soviet Union in brief compass and in sprightly English. Specialists may cavil at points here and there, but, after all, the book is not for them. Here are grand vistas rather than intricate details. Neither exhaustive nor exhausting, the text marches along in lively fashion, reflecting the original preparation of the material for three lectures sponsored by the Hill Foundation at St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minn." C. D. Harris

+ Geog R 44:623 O '54 330w

CRILE, MRS JANE MURPHY (HALLE) and CRILE, GEORGE. Treasure-diving holidays [il. with photographs]. 263p $3.95 Viking

797.2 Diving, Submarine. Marine fauna 54-6426

A Cleveland physician, his wife, and their four children are enthusiasts about diving for treasure, and spend their vacations in this pursuit. Their diving adventures in Lake Erie, the West Indies, and the Mediterranean form the basis of the book. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 50:289; 337 Ap 1 '54; My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

"The authors take you on a delightful, informative, unusual voyage of discovery in a fascinating new marine world. Hop aboard 'Treasure-Diving Holidays' if you want a novel, exciting, underwater jaunt." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 1 '54 280w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 17 '54 340w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 30:261 Ag '54 60w

"For a less scientific audience than the Cousteau and Dirole books, this should have a good family response."

+ Kirkus 22:179 Mr 1 '54 180w

"Told with high good humor. An excellent purchase for YP as well as adult collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:631 Ap 1 '54 120w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 27 '54 110w

"It is good fun and good reading for anyone who likes the sea—above or below the surface."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 S 12 '54 200w

Reviewed by Gilbert Klingel

N Y Times p15 My 30 '54 230w

"Not for a long time has a book of such translucent delight been brought to the glutted market of adventure stories. It is a world of Disney and Alice and Edward Lear, of moon magic and wild, improbable scenes." David Stone

+ Spec p210 Ag 13 '54 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p610 S 24 '54 700w

CRISP, FRANK. Adventure of whaling; il. by Winston Megoran. 143p $2 St Martins 639.28 Whaling 54-12298

History of whale hunting from the days of canoe and spear to the time of the floating whale factories equipped with modern machinery.

"Splendidly illustrated." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 28 '54 40w

Reviewed by Harry Ellis

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 2 '54 240w

"Mr. Frank Crisp's account of whale hunting . . . is constructed from obviously authentic material by an author who is himself a sailor. Mr. Winston Megoran's straightforward illustrations serve their purpose very well, and some of those in wash are most attractive. The writing is lively and clear, but perhaps this is, on the whole, a book for the specialists among children. For some, if not most, there may be rather too heavy a tinge of the lesson book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p iii N 19 '54 50w

CRISP, FRANK. Devil diver; il. by R. M. Powers. 224p $2.75 Coward-McCann

54-7832

Tale of salvage diving in the Macassar Straits, and of Nick Masters, youngest of the crew of the Hukapuka, who made good. For ages twelve and older.

Booklist 50:403 Je 15 '54

Kirkus 22:64 F 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:716 Ap 15 '54 30w

"This trip down in the deeps to explore coral gardens, labyrinthine passageways and wrecked ships makes a suspenseful adventure. Authentic tropic island scenes and descriptions of diving operations and underwater flora and fauna give added appeal to this tale." G. A. Woods

+ N Y Times p26 My 2 '54 180w

CROCKETT, LUCY HERNDON. Magnificent bastards. 296p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

54-5893

"A new approach to men at war, in the story of the women of the canteens and the Red Cross on an island base in the Pacific. Chiefly the story of two women, 'Mom' who was a tower of strength and serenity in a Topsy turvy world (and who was tortured inside by the knowledge of her grown son in a mental hospital, by fear that she too was doomed); and Lee, a war widow, whose seven years of sexless marriage had left her frozen, scarred, and hoping to find something positive in sharing the horrors her husband had experienced before his death in the Pacific." Kirkus

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 28 '54 400w

"It is a grim story of the impact of the war on men and women; it's tough and brutal and unpretty in its realism, but the crudity is softened by a woman's approach, even as the brief violent contacts on relief base softened the crudities of some of the men."

Kirkus 21:802 D 15 '53 220w

"Miss Crockett writes like a veteran. (She spent five years as a major in the American Red Cross in the Pacific)... Miss Crockett's minor characters are excellently conceived... This is a tragedy for which Red Cross coffee and doughnuts are no balm. Miss Crockett has caught its essence with honesty and compassion." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p22 F 28 '54 400w

"Miss Crockett has dealt effectively with this conflict of the sexes, but dispassionately. Her creation will be recognized as having to do with flesh-and-blood people, rather than with a message." P. M. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 7 '54 260w

"A well-constructed, fast-paced, strongly written novel about lust in those old sexy islands of the Pacific, familiar to us all by now, featuring the marines, this time from the point of view of a woman. . . Miss Crockett writes well enough to have produced a superb novel, instead of a sensational story, which, however, will probably float high on the best-seller list. Sex being what it is to some." Evelyn Eaton

CROCKETT, L. H.—Continued

+ — Sat R 37:19 F 27 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 150w

CROMPTON, JOHN, pseud. See Lamburn, J. B. C.

CRONBACH, LEE JOSEPH. Educational psychology. 628p il $7.50; text ed $5.50 Harcourt 370.15 Educational psychology 54-6384

"A well-organized introductory textbook for active and prospective teachers, designed to present the findings of current research on the learning process and how it is affected by individual differences and personality development. Illustrative case studies based on actual classroom observation and experience, together with helpful illustrations and charts, problems for discussion, and additional reading lists clarify and emphasize points raised in the text. A useful guide for parents as well as educators." Booklist

Booklist 50:412 J1 1 '54

"Parents as well as teachers can profit from this thorough and up-to-date survey of the educational psychology field. . . Essentially, 'Educational Psychology' is a textbook, distinguished by readability and usefulness." G. E. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 16 '54 90w

"The research studies reported are pertinent; they are well presented; and their significance is indicated. The exposition is clear, but there is no tendency to write down. Even without all the pictures, this would be an excellent book." W. C. Trow

+ School R 62:497 N '54 1100w

CRONIN, VINCENT. Golden honeycomb. 267p il $3.75 Dutton

945.8 [914.58] Sicily—Description and travel 54-11656

A study of Sicily: its pagan temples and Christian churches; its Greek theaters and Roman amphitheaters; its many architectural masterpieces; and its beautiful scenery. The author's starting point and central theme is the golden honeycomb said to have been made by Daedalus and dedicated to Aphrodite for his escape from the wrath of King Minos. Index.

Booklist 51:80 O 15 '54

"There are a few lapses; a 'King of Savoy' is unknown to history, and the space devoted to the Venus of Syracuse, one of those many ancient statues that recall the Great Exhibition, is surprising. But what distinguishes this book is the author's acute understanding of the people and his sympathetic, though by no means romantic, analysis of their character. Especially penetrating is the discussion of the 'benevolent paedocracy,' a passage that should be carefully pondered by sociologists, economists, and educators." G. Bagnani

+ — Canadian Forum 34:68 Je '54 300w

"A most fascinating account of Sicily. . . This is the first work of a young writer, but it is quite astonishingly mature. It is not really a travel book; it eschews the first person; it has only a slight interest in contemporary Sicilian life, though what it does tell us of this is most interesting; and it has no place for anecdotes, unless indeed they be classical ones. Its object is simply to disinter for us the successive deposits of culture on the island." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 5 '54 500w

"Mr. Cronin's discoveries and suppositions are intriguing though debatable. Nevertheless, a superior book." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1596 S 15 '54 80w

"On buildings, mosaics, and sculpture Mr Cronin is sound and agreeable rather than original or stirring. His placid comments on Sicilian life and history seem more questionable." J. R.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 F 12 '54 150w

"The information he gives is encyclopaedic; we learn much; we love less. Instead of taking your Lemprière or Baedeker, take Cronin to Sicily. You will learn much of the island; but the golden honeycomb will remain the myth, the fantastical nothing he intended it to be. But it is carping to compare a young writer's first book with the finest travel books in the language. And Mr. Cronin is such an admirable stylist, has such an infectious love of his subject, that we are with him for long periods on his Barmecide search." Anthony Rhodes

+ — New Statesman & Nation 47:232 F 20 '54 800w

"This is a well-written book, with occasional happy flights into fine phraseology. If it is at times overstuffing with facts—the Baron Baedeker is as often recalled as Sir Osbert Sitwell—it is a sturdy tribute of voracious historical and artistic curiosity." Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p45 S 12 '54 470w

"Mr. Cronin is a real writer, with style, imagination, and an authentic, if rather muddled, feeling for Greek myth and history, and if he doesn't burn himself out looking for the keel of Noah's ark, we can expect important books from him."

+ — New Yorker 30:79 S 4 '54 110w

"This is much less a travel book than a study and contemplation of the whole spirit of Sicily, and as such it is a brilliant and distinguished success. . . It is true that there is an element of symbolical contrivance in the book, of a determination to impose aesthetic patterns. If it were a work of gradgrind art-history this would certainly be at fault, but in fact it is a heartening return to a responsibly subjective consideration of the arts of the past." Michael Swan

+ Spec p242 F 26 '54 350w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 220w

"The Golden Honeycomb is gracefully written, and the stages of Mr. Cronin's search are both informing and imaginative. But long before the end the reader is likely to be thoroughly tired of the honeycomb, and of the rather far-fetched bee-symbolism which recurs with exasperating frequency. . . Nor are Mr. Cronin's aesthetic judgments always convincing."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p177 Mr 19 '54 700w

CROSLAND, MARGARET. Colette: a provincial in Paris [Eng title: Madame Colette]. 282p $3.50 British bk. centre

B or 92 Colette, Sidonie Gabrielle 54-4607

An appraisal of the famous French writer and actor, who recently died in Paris. The author of the memoir covers nearly the whole of her long life, discusses her background, her writings, her three marriages, and her place in French literature. Bibliography. Index.

"I think that even readers who are not especially interested in her as a great lady of letters would enjoy Margaret Crosland's biography, the first written in English, of this immensely interesting woman." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:97 O '54 550w

Booklist 51:12 S 1 '54

"Here is an engrossing life of a woman, as well as of a writer, for all that Colette wrote concerned itself with women in their profoundest moments, which were, of course, when they were with men. And it does what every good biography should do—it sends you back to her novels." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 5 '54 250w

Kirkus 22:375 Je 15 '54 180w

"Miss Crosland is unobtrusive as she writes of Colette, so that this is Colette's book and will send the appreciative reader not only to the English translations of her work but back to her French originals. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1507 S 1 '54 180w

"Miss Crosland has done her work admirably, with enthusiasm: she knows the novels almost by heart and quotes from them judiciously, it may be, to relate Madame Colette's fictions to their inspiration in fact or for some other good reason." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 8 '53 360w
Nation 179:264 S 25 '54 180w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps

New Repub 131:16 S 6 '54 1300w

"It seems not unlikely that this biography will please a large number of readers, though not, perhaps, the readers of what Miss Crosland describes as 'those weekly papers which are read only by intellectual snobs.'" Enid McLeod

New Statesman & Nation 45:494 Ap 25 '53 700w

"Far from being a full-dress biography and farther still from being a critical appraisal, Miss Crosland's is nevertheless a charming and valuable book. Written with simplicity, it follows Colette from her childhood in the warm family circle of a tiny Burgundy village to her literary eminence as member of the Academie Goncourt, Grand Officier of the Legion of Honor, and world renowned writer."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 19 '54 430w

"In Miss Crosland's biography, or portrait, Colette does emerge whole and marvelously alive. This seems to be due less to Miss Crosland than it does to Colette. It is perhaps impossible to write any save a critical work about Colette, for she, herself, has richly written her life story in each of her books. We are grateful for details collected by Margaret Crosland, but 'Colette: A Provincial in Paris' is the volume to read after you have fallen in love with Colette, through her own books." Leo Lerman

N Y Times p40 O 24 '54 700w

"Miss Crosland understands something which is what makes her book the admirably interpretive work it is—the tireless vitality and self-assurance, plus the puzzling enigmatic nature that gave Colette, even in old age, the provocative quality of a girl. In short, her biographer, like her husband, saw her as a phenomenon and presents her that way. The reader who has discovered Colette through her work will be grateful for this fresh light cast on her as a human being." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 12 '54 600w

"This is a good biography, an account of an extraordinary life and career, of one of the great artists of our time, a biography made more interesting and timely by the unhappy event of Colette's death." R. C. Benet

+ Sat R 37:21 Ag 28 '54 900w

Reviewed by Anthony Hartley

Spec p578 My 8 '53 500w

Time 64:76 Ag 23 '54 1200w

"For Colette herself Miss Crosland has such respect that she intrudes but little upon her, and in consequence much of the fascination of the subject has passed into the story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 12 '53 950w

CROSS, HAROLD L. People's right to know; legal access to public records and proceedings. 405p $5.50 Columbia univ. press

323.44 Archives—U.S. Liberty of the press 53-9036

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Mr. Cross's report is certainly as comprehensive and authoritative as the Society could have hoped for—and more. For a report on so burning a subject, by so avowed an advocate of the journalist's right to official information, it is unusually reflective and in the main restrained. But it is largely a well-ordered, one-dimensional survey of things as they are—the statutes, decisions, and, very important, the customs and practices regulating access to public records. It may be that Mr. Cross felt he would be venturing outside the boundaries of his commission were he to expand on contrary viewpoints or philosophize on the social and political aspects of the issues. In any event, the result is an excellent handbook which is an essential for editors and which will be useful to lawyers." Bernard Botein

+ Harvard Law R 67:920 Mr '54 1000w

Reviewed by Irving Dilliard

Pol Sci Q 69:130 Mr '54 900w

"Acting on a commission from the American Society of Newspaper Editors, given in 1950, to investigate the question of 'legal access to public records and proceedings,' Mr. Cross undertook the work leading to this very thorough, useful, and interesting report. . . This book will, of course, be of primary interest to journalists, but any politically-conscious citizen will find much in it to ponder."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:451 D '53 200w

CROSS, JOHN KEIR. Red journey back. 252p $2.75 Coward-McCann

54-6320

Science fiction for teen-agers.

"Excitement, plus probabilities based on scientific study make real science fiction."

+ Kirkus 22:35 Ja 15 '54 120w

"Buy only for the 11-14's who want fantastic, rapid-action, rather than scientifically accurate, adventure." E. S. Yoneshige

Library 79:788 Ap 15 '54 80w

"The Red Journey Back' is something of a disappointment after Keir Cross' stunning 'The Stolen Sphere' last season. . . The young who have never before been exposed to space (if there are any such) may find the tired ideas new and vivid and certainly well told." L. S. Bechtel

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 23 '54 80w

"Mr. Cross' Martian cliff-hanger has a strictly earthbound melodramatic flavor, but a generation with its feet firmly planted in space will have a fine time with it." C. P.

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 170w

"Here is an adventure of natural, likeable children employing common sense and heroism to overcome danger and horror. It is an exciting tale which brings the incredible within the framework of the probable." A. O. Murphy

+ Sat R 37:53 My 15 '54 160w

CROSS, MILTON JOHN, and EWEN, DAVID. Encyclopedia of the great composers and their music. 2v 504;506-1009p $5.95 Doubleday

927.8 Musicians. Music—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 53-9139

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This is neither a good nor an honest book, and the sincerely curious must look elsewhere to secure even a modicum of information on 'every facet of serious music.'" E. N. Waters

— Music Lib Assn Notes 11:117 D '53 180w

"A lot of musical information, none of it especially profound but all of it thoroughly sound."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ja 17 '54 120w

"Milton Cross' Encyclopedia of the Great Composers and Their Music is a useful popular handbook, though not as exhaustive as the word 'encyclopedia' suggests, and not as selective as the word 'great' might lead one to expect. Reasonably priced, it contains a variety of information, presents it in an engaging manner, and may thus help to interest the beginner in styles and artists unfamiliar to him. For this reason the work is recommended for home use and as a browsing or circulating copy for libraries. On the reference shelf it will not replace the major musical encyclopedias nor supersede older, more inclusive biographical handbooks, such as those by David Ewen. Nevertheless it may well serve as an inexpensive and convenient handbook for the lay reader."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 25:28 Ap '54 1000w

CROSSEN, KENDELL FOSTER (M. E. CHABER, pseud). Man inside; a novel of suspense. 209p $2.75 Holt

54-5444

Detective story.

Booklist 50:343 My 1 '54

Kirkus 22:15 Ja 1 '54 90w

"The consequence is more amusing than its climax, a sort of calmly eclectic sorting of familiar situations and characters in a less familiar setting to make another tale for Milo March." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 28 '54 120w

"M. E. Chaber has attempted a fusion of the psychological novel with the hard-boiled detective story and achieved his best book to date." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 F 21 '54 100w

"The chase, which leads from New York to Lisbon to Madrid, involves a few more killings, a beautiful blond adventuress, and a pleasantly amoral little boy, and it will probably furnish you with a fairly entertaining evening if your standards aren't too exacting."

New Yorker 30:120 F 27 '54 130w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 20w

CROUSE, MRS ANNA (ERSKINE), and CROUSE, RUSSEL. Peter Stuyvesant of old New York; il. by Jo Spier. (Landmark bks) 184p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Stuyvesant, Peter—Juvenile literature 54-5161

A picture of life in seventeenth century New Amsterdam, while Peter Stuyvesant was governor. There is a school edition, published by E. M. Hale and Company, priced at $1.68

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 20w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p32 N 14 '54 90w

Kirkus 22:34 Ja 15 '54 110w

"Excellent picture of life in New Amsterdam with details of home and community. Can be used as supplementary material but will not hold the interest as well as others in the 'Landmark' series." C. W. Field

+ — Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 70w

N Y Times p50 N 7 '54 30w

CROUSE, NELLIS MAYNARD. Lemoyne d'Iberville: soldier of New France. 280p maps $4 Cornell univ. press

B or 92 Iberville, Pierre Le Moyne d' 54-9354

A biography of one of the greatest figures of the French empire in North America: Lemoyne d'Iberville. "Americans claim him almost as much as Canada does, for his career touched many phases of the history of the continent: Hudson Bay, New York, New Orleans and Louisiana, and explorers like Radisson, La Salle, Hennepin, Tonty, Jean Peré, Pénicaut, and others." (Am Hist R) All these aspects of his career are covered by this volume. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a very readable account of Iberville's life, based on most of the available printed material. There is little that is new to the experienced delver in Canadiana, but most of the data has been so scattered that it is highly convenient to have it all assembled within the covers of one volume. . . The work is a fine example of book-making, has an excellent index but only two maps, and is supplied with something extremely rare for an early French explorer—an authentic portrait." G. L. Nute

+ Am Hist R 60:168 O '54 320w

"Mr. Crouse is the author of several books about the early history of America. His latest book is a concise summary of Iberville's career, based on the most authoritative printed sources. It lacks the richness of documentation of the most recent Canadian account, Guy Frégault's 'Iberville le Conquerant' (Montreal, 1944) and that volume's grasp of French imperialism at the close of the seventeenth century. However, it adequately rescues Iberville from the unjustified neglect into which he has fallen in the English-speaking world. It is a useful book for all interested in colonial North American history." Mason Wade

+ N Y Times p18 My 9 '54 950w

CROWE, JOHN H. You can master life. 160p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

248 Conduct of life. Christian life 54-5669

The pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Denver, offers counsel on self-development, and offers suggestions for everyday conflicts. No index.

"[Has] humor and understanding."

+ Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 30w

"Judging by this volume of sermons, Dr. Crowe, the pastor of Trinity Methodist Church in Denver, belongs to that increasingly large group of ministers who conceive of their ministry as being concerned primarily with the personality problems of their parishioners. One hears much of frustration, fear, confusion and tension on the one hand, and of self-appraisal, self-confidence, peace of mind, on the other. . . Apparently, this is the kind of message many people like."

Kirkus 21:793 D 15 '53 90w

"Recommended for public libraries." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 79:140 Ja 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Spring'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 100w

CRUICKSHANK, ALLAN D. Pocket guide to the birds: Eastern and Central North American; 72 natural color photographs by Helen G. Cruickshank; 78 drawings by Don Eckelberry. 216p $2.95 Dodd

598.2 Birds—North America 53-12528

"A beginner's book on bird identification, intended to precede other guides such as Peterson's A Field Guide to the Birds. Describes size, appearance, song, flight, and habitat but does not give details of physical structure, habits, nests, or range. Good small drawings and small colored photographs, most of them adequate in spite of the size." Booklist

Booklist 50:197 Ja 15 '54

"The author is an experienced nature camp and field trip leader, who here deals clearly with the basic, elementary questions and problems in identification of birds east of the Rockies." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 27 '53 80w

"Not aimed at the advanced student who wishes to distinguish one warbler from another, but for the novice who would like to be able to tell a duck from a loon or a nuthatch from a woodpecker. It is written in non-technical, easy-to-understand language and is highly recommended for the beginning bird watcher." A. C. Smith

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 31 '54 190w

Reviewed by I. R. Barnes

Sat R 37:27 Ag 21 '54 90w

CRUM, WILLIAM LEONARD. Age structure of the corporate system. 181p $3.50 Univ. of Calif. press

338.74 Corporations

53-62530

"Two main purposes are intended to be served by publication of this book, which reports [the author's] first analysis of an entirely new body of facts concerning the age of corporations and certain characteristics related to age. One purpose is to present various findings which seem to be fairly dependable and to have large importance for an understanding of the corporate section of the private enterprise system and for the consideration of certain policies, not only private policies of corporations but also public policies toward corporations. . . . A second purpose is to awaken an interest in the vital statistics of corporations by showing how various significant inferences can be drawn from one limited body of such statistics." Pref

Reviewed by M. D. Ketchum
Am Econ R 44:201 Mr '54 450w

"The book has a number of shortcomings. There are too many statistics and too many manipulations of them presented in the body of the book, frequently in tables difficult to decipher. At the same time, analysis is unduly restricted to conventional dissection of frequency distributions, with little attention directed to statistical inference. The text is overloaded with detailed and repetitive description of data and arithmetical operations. . . . It would be unfortunate if the cumbersome character of the book deterred specialists in industrial organization from reading it. While, as Crum himself grants, it cannot be considered a definitive study, as a pioneer work it serves well to introduce the specialist to a body of data that may help to eliminate an important area of ignorance about the organizational structure of our economy." G. W. Nutter
+ — J Pol Econ 62:86 F '54 450w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 78:1692 O 1 '53 90w

"New ground is broken in this monograph in which a seasoned economic statistician applies his skills to a new body of data. . . . Professor Crum notes the provisional nature of his findings, and suggests a number of directions in which fuller information could be expected to reveal 'vital statistics' concerning the corporate 'persons' in our society. His study can be recommended to all investigators of the business scene as a sound, stimulating piece of research."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:445 D '53 120w

CRUMP, IRVING. Our army engineers. 274p il $3 Dodd

356.94 [358.2] U.S. Army. Corps of engineers 54-8500

An anecdotal account of the achievements of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers during the one hundred and seventy-five years of their history. Includes both civil and military installations. No index.

Booklist 51:54 O 1 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 J1 18 '54 50w

"The historical origins of the corps and its early troubles are particularly interesting. Mr. Crump has paid handsome tribute to ■ branch of the service that shoulders much of the Army's burden but gets little of its glory." G. A. Woods
+ N Y Times p46 O 24 '54 310w

CRUMP, LOUISE (ESKRIGGE). Face of fear. 260p $3 Longmans

54-7474

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:215 Mr 15 '54 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p9 My 30 '54 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p16 Je 13 '54 20w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 20 '54 70w

"Placid and pleasant." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat ■ 37:31 J1 10 '54 20w

CRUZAN, ROSE MARIE. Practical parliamentary procedure. 2d rev ed 219p il $2.50 McKnight

328.1 Parliamentary practice 53-12169

"This condensed and readily usable guide to parliamentary practice is the answer to any chairman's prayer. Every situation, it seems, has been anticipated. For rapid review, the end-paper charts simplify all motions before the house. Page numbers elucidate the details." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 50:242 F 15 '54

Wis Lib Bul 50:23 Ja '54

CULLMANN, OSCAR. Peter: disciple-apostle-martyr; a historical and theological study; tr. from the German by Floyd V. Filson. 252p $4.50 Westminster press

B or 92 Peter, Saint. Church history—Primitive and early church 53-13084

"A study of Peter's career and position in the Church. The author's intention is to make a contribution to the science of history, particularly to that part dealing with the beginnings of Christian faith and the Christian Church. . . . But Peter is the chief figure of the study which is in two parts: In Part I, the questions of Peter's preeminence in the circle of disciples and his authority in the early Church are discussed in fairness as well as in considerable detail. With like detail and fairness he discusses next his residence in Rome and his martyrdom. Part II, deals in scholarly manner with exegetical and theological questions raised by certain Scripture." Library J

Reviewed by N. B. Stonehouse
Ann Am Acad 293:194 My '54 330w

"It is an encouraging evidence of the hospitality of the Protestant mind to unprejudiced scholarly studies even in very sensitive areas that Prof. Cullmann's book about the Apostle Peter, superbly translated from the German by Prof. Filson, has already met with such wide and favorable acceptance. . . . It is an outstanding merit of Cullmann's book that it rises above prejudice. He is not an attorney constructing an argument either for or against the validity of the 'papal claim' concerning the primacy of Peter and its implications, but a scientist studying the evidence—textual, exegetical, patristic, archeological and historical." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:405 Mr 31 '54 1350w

"A scholarly book, clearly written, but still of interest primarily to church historians."

+ Kirkus 21:677 O 1 '53 160w

"A well-written volume with clearly-stated conclusions. Recommended for university and theological libraries and large public libraries building the subject." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:144 Ja 15 '54 220w

CULLY, KENDIG BRUBAKER, and CULLY, IRIS V. Two seasons: Advent and Lent. 159p $1.75 Bobbs

242.3 Devotional exercises 54-6056

A collection of devotional material consisting of daily meditations and prayers for the twenty-eight days of Advent and the forty-five days of Lent. The Rev. Mr. Cully is minister of education in the First Methodist Church of Evanston, Illinois. His wife was formerly a director of religious education.

"Moderate in sentiment and penetrating in thought." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 21 '54 40w

"Highly recommended."

+ Christian Century 71:336 Mr 17 '54 70w
Springf'd Republican p6C F 28 '54 160w

CUMMINGS, EDWARD ESTLIN. I; six non-lectures. (Charles Eliot Norton lectures, 1952-1953) 118p $3 Harvard univ. press

818 53-10472

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Canadian Forum 34:192 N '54 100w

CUMMINGS, E. E.—Continued

"T. E. Lawrence told Robert Graves that he preferred e e cummings' prose to his poetry."

In these Charles Eliot Norton lectures of 1952-53, delivered at Harvard, e e cummings reverts to prose, after a lifetime of verse. True, the prose is well larded and spiced with poetry, his own and other people's, but this tremendously personal autobiography in six chapters is the story of one who, like Ulysses, comes home after a lovely trip, and it is also a reversion to other things than prose." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 59:503 F 19 '54 900w

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 9 '54 160w

Reviewed by William Saroyan

Nation 178:177 F 27 '54 1000w

"In flashes of the nonlecturing, and steadily in the readings, the always surprising freshness, the durability, the high spirited and deep-rooted resources of EECummings' work are made apparent to us once more. For this sufficient reason, it is a blessing." Warner Berthoff

+ New Eng Q 27:106 Mr '54 900w

Reviewed by Robert Graves

New Statesman & Nation 47:761 Je 12 '54 1750w

"This is how Cummings goes about giving what he calls 'an esthetic selfportrait of . . . this and no other indivisible ignoramus As Is.' Practically any kind of comment on this kind of talk would be mad pedantry. One non-criticism is all we'll risk: Cummings here distills the joy of being a creative free individual in our not-too-joyous nonsociety of collectivism." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 21 '54 300w

"E. E. Cummings has given so much delight over the years—by his poetry, his painting, and his personality—that a deeply serious side of him, that of the dedicated man, has been overlooked. The Charles Eliot Norton lectures, delivered at Harvard last spring and the previous fall and now gathered into a volume called 'i: Six Nonlectures,' should help to bring him into sharper focus; they are the autobiography of a man who, through all the strange deviations of a strange age, has remained true to himself—one, moreover, so completely creative that even his lectures, which he calls 'non-lectures,' offer new esthetic experiences." Charles Norman

+ Sat R 37:18 Ja 30 '54 390w

CUMMINGS, EDWARD ESTLIN. Poems, 1923-1954. 468p $6.75 Harcourt

811

54-9724

"This volume brings together for the first time all the poems from all the collections of verse Cummings has published to date, presenting in one definitive volume the contents of ten books. . . It includes 114 poems which were omitted from Collected Poems when it was originally issued in 1938, as well as 175 poems written since that date." Publisher's note

"'My specialty is living,' a poem begins, and the one quick line applies to all the poems in this rich book. It is time to forget the minor irritations which some of the odd shapes of various poems have in the past given to readers. Half of the time the tricks of word and line are intended only to amuse, in a poem whose substance is wit. Laughter is an ever-imminent thing in Cummings." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 21 '54 210w

"Ambiguous would be the word which would describe the quality of the poetry in this volume. At his worst, cummings can achieve an almost Gueatian bathos. At his best he creates a pure poetry in which a venerable tradition meets the modern idioms. In these latter poems, e. e. resembles some of Lyonel Feininger's paintings: at first you see only non-representation, cubes and cones, but then, behind the very contemporary style, the shapes of familiar cities come before you." Michael Harrington

+ — Commonweal 61:294 D 10 '54 700w

"These poems, carefully read, make perfectly clear sense, and many of them will arouse the highest measure of appreciation."

+ Kirkus 22:561 Ag 15 '54 210w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 26 '54 2400w

"E. E. Cummings' 'Poems 1923-1954' contains 'all the poems from all the collections of verse he has published to date.' I've read these six hundred poems before, I think, and now I've read all six hundred again; and it seemed to me, as always, that Cummings is one of the most individual and American of poets, a man who has found his own one way and stuck to it with obstinate courage and integrity." Randall Jarrell

+ N Y Times p6 O 31 '54 600w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 28 '54 240w

"The publication of E. E. Cummings's 'Poems 1923-1954' is a golden event. He is sixty years old; here we have his gift of a lifetime to us: 598 poems, forty years of artistic integrity and sheer talent. It is an important anniversary and a body of work of permanent significance; for it should now be apparent that Cummings is one of the finest lyric poets and social satirists America has yet produced." David Burns

+ Sat R 37:10 D 18 '54 1350w

CURRAN, SAMUEL CROWE. Luminescence and the scintillation counter. 219p il $5.80 Academic press

539.77 Luminescence. Counters (electrons, ions, etc.) 53-11107

"Includes luminescence, secondary emission, and photoelectricity in those aspects which bear upon present or possible future forms of scintillation devices." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:870 Mr 1 '54 20w

"A valuable book for young research physicists and other scientists who are interested in the detection or analysis of radiation."

+ Library J 79:917 My 15 '54 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:67 S '53

CURRENT, RICHARD NELSON. Secretary Stimson; a study in statecraft. 272p $4.50 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Stimson, Henry Lewis. U.S.—Politics and government 54-6835

"Professor Richard Current's book on Stimson is not intended as a biography but as 'an account of his role in the making of American policy' and of 'his part in the creation of the world crisis with which we live today.'" (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Nichols

Am Hist R 60:138 O '54 550w

Booklist 50:357 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 30w

Reviewed by John Fisher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 21 '54 400w

"Admirers of Henry L. Stimson's statesmanship will quarrel vigorously but have to weigh thoughtfully this provocative assessment of his public service, which spanned almost half a century. . . [However] this is a thoughtful, well written, and carefully documented study which merits attention. The publishers feature it as 'the first assessment of a controversial career.' Another evaluation of Stimson will undoubtedly be made. When it is and if it is read together with this work, what will be demonstrated is that there are no pat formulas or easy solutions to the problems of statecraft." Sidney Warren

+ Current Hist 26:316 My '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 33:161 O '54 80w

Nation 178:388 My 1 '54 210w

"It is a highly critical account, so much so that it may arouse indignation among Stimson's admirers: but the author's case is well argued and it will have to be weighed carefully by any one seeking a balanced judgment of Stimson's work." G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 14 '54 1250w

"Ironical, provocative and clever book, brilliantly written." S. F. Bemis

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 18 '54 750w

"Much of the book deals, of course, with World War II itself. Those who at close range saw the aging but indomitable Stimson at work in that period will for the most part be distressed at the picture of him which emerges from these new pages. That there were mistakes of judgment in the haste and fury of those days hardly needs saying, but they were of divided responsibility, as were the still more astonishing achievements of the period. It seems a pity to raise the 'question' of whether Stimson was uniquely to blame for this or that, and to slight the reality of the things which this sturdy old aristocrat did to earn from the normally close-mouthed General Marshall the tribute to him as a 'tower of strength,' an opinion shared by a great many." M. S. Watson

+ Sat R 37:27 My 1 '54 800w

Reviewed by R. H. Ferrell

Yale R n s 43:625 summer '54 2150w

CURRENT, RICHARD NELSON. Typewriter and the men who made it. 149p il $3.50 Univ. of Ill. press

652.3 Typewriters 54-6513

A study of the origin of the typewriter in the United States. This book stresses the day by day lives "of the men involved in the design and mechanical development of the typewriter." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) No index.

Booklist 50:393 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by Anthony Wirry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 23 '54 50w

Reviewed by H. C. Kenney

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '54 70w

Reviewed by Spencer Klaw

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p3 Je 20 '54 380w

Reviewed by D. L. Cohn

N Y Times p7 My 16 '54 50w

"This play-by-play account of the three men—their hopes, heartbreaks, and quarrels, and their ultimate achievements—is perhaps too detailed to be of interest to many readers except special students of the history of the typewriter, but it is a valuable chapter of the full story to have available and it is a particularly striking example of the pioneer inventive spirit that played such a part in creating the America of today. Professor Current has added further significance to his researches by including clear illustrations of a number of the early models of writing machines." J. W. Rogers

+ Sat R 37:19 Je 5 '54 180w

CURRIER, THOMAS FRANKLIN. Bibliography of Oliver Wendell Holmes; ed. by Eleanor M. Tilton for the Bibliographical society of America. 707p il $20 N.Y. univ. press

012 Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1809-1894—Bibliography 53-11420

"The first section lists editions of Holmes' books, leaflets, and broadsides, giving for each a full transcription of the title, size, collation by pages and by gatherings, illustrations, and history of writing and printing. Two following sections list all the poems and the prose, respectively, of Holmes. The entries here are less elaborate but they do contain history of writing and printing, and notes of located manuscripts. Ten appendixes list special kinds of publications, such as his sheet music, printed letters, and biography and criticism of Holmes, or treat of special problems such as Holmes' addition to The Star Spangled Banner. The three sections and the appendixes are knit together by cross references and a full Index." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The Holmes Bibliography' is a prime source of a vast amount of hitherto unknown or uncollected information concerning the literary and medical writings of Dr. Holmes as well as of works about him; it is a superb example of bibliographical technique adapted to the requirements of a specific author which remains at the same time a model of universal excellence; it is a handsomely printed and well made volume which will be a credit to the shelves of any library." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 78:1427 S 1 '53 240w

"As is usual with American bibliography, though the value of the work may be questioned, neither the worthiness of their motives nor the care and erudition of the editors can be held in any doubt."

Times [London] Lit Sup p240 Ap 9 '54 700w

"Every collector and every student of Holmes or of nineteenth-century American literature will find this a useful book."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:501 D '53 180w

CURTAYNE, ALICE (MRS STEPHEN RYNNE). St Brigid of Ireland. 122p $2 Sheed B or 92 Brigid, Saint, of Ireland 54-11140

"This brief biography of St. Brigid is written from a critical viewpoint and allows a considerable margin for the vivid Celtic imagination and the glosses of medieval writers. Still the personality of the founder of Kildare stands out clearly, and we can with tolerable accuracy trace the leading events in her life." Cath World

"The book should appeal not only to the native-born Irish, but to all people of Irish descent the world over." W. J. Tucker

+ Cath World 180:158 N '54 250w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p39 S 26 '54 20w

CURTAYNE, ALICE (MRS STEPHEN RYNNE). Trial of Oliver Plunkett [I]. 239p $3 Sheed

B or 92 Plunkett, Oliver, abp. 53-9802

"Archbishop Plunkett was hanged, drawn and quartered at Tyburn as a result of testimony by Titus Oates. His story is here told in detail. Most people now believe that Plunkett's only crime was in being a Roman Catholic prelate at a time when 'No Popery' feeling was running high in England. He was beatified in 1920." N Y Times

"Like every piece of work done by this author, the book is scholarly, well organized, most readable."

+ Cath World 178:480 Mr '54 150w

"It is a specialized book for those interested in the history of Catholicism, particularly in England."

Kirkus 21:627 S 1 '53 150w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p22 D ■ '53 110w

"Written for a Catholic audience and issued by a Catholic publisher, it is nevertheless no piece of proselytizing but a beautiful bit of historical reconstruction and a model for anyone who would write the story of any trial anywhere. A complicated affair such as this depends for its success upon the author's ability to select the telling bits from the trial record, to keep the story flowing just as narrative, and to keep before the reader the background of the period. Here the author is successful on all counts." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 9 '53 650w

Springf'd Republican p3D D 27 '53 200w

CURTI, MERLE EUGENE, ed. American scholarship in the twentieth century; with essays by Merle Curti [and others]. 252p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

001 Learning and scholarships. Humanities. U.S.—Intellectual life 53-5699

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"A book so brief on a topic so large can easily be criticized for its shortcomings. The principal shortcoming is that to a considerable degree each contributor deals with his special field as though it were self-contained. Yet the effect is remarkably coherent, and the reader comes away with a variety of suggestive generalizations about American scholarship since 1900. Professor Curti and his coauthors undertook an extraordinarily difficult task and have carried it through with distinction." John Gardner

+ Ann Am Acad 292:175 Mr '54 400w

Reviewed by Duncan Robertson

Canadian Forum 33:282 Mr '54 280w

"All the contributors offer detailed analyses and responsible conclusions. A person seriously interested in either the past or future of America, as reflected by and strongly influenced by scholarship, could hardly find a more exciting book. The symposium is more exacting reading than Hutchins' popular lectures, but considerably more substantial." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 7 '54 170w

"The Curti preview of change in American scholarship has clarity and range. It carries a fine subordinate value that is common to the other parts, and appendix of critical comment on the works and writers that were discussed in the text. An important segment of the Curti text is on the work of the Association of American University Professors in behalf of intellectual freedom. Though written on the rights of scientists and scholars, the passage can give to the industrialist, the political leader, and the apostle of labor much substance for silent reflection and public praise." D. H. Stevens

+ Sat R 37:18 My 29 '54 700w

"Twentieth century America has produced specialized scholars and teachers in impressive numbers. Too few of these specialists have been able to comprehend the larger system of social relationships in which a scholar operates. Professor Curti's volume will help them immeasurably to grasp the larger view." Sidney Ditzion

+ Social Educ 18:90 F '54 650w

"In the longest and most complacent chapter, Louis Wirth reports for the social sciences a steady advance in sophistication, realism, and influence on practical affairs. W. Stull Holt coolly surveys shifts of interest among historians—toward the recent past, into non-political fields, and away from a worship of facts in themselves. The most brilliant essay is René Wellek's searching dissection and appraisal of the prevailing modes of literary scholarship. . . . An introductory chapter by Merle Curti summarizes the proliferation of fields of inquiry, the organization and subsidization of research and the strains involved in the increasingly intimate relations between scholars and general public. None of these essays is written for such a public, but they should help scholarly readers to understand the preoccupations of their colleagues in other disciplines."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:29 Mr '54 220w

CURTI, MERLE EUGENE, and BIRR, KENDALL. Prelude to Point four: American technical missions overseas, 1838-1938. 284p $5 Univ. of Wis. press

338.91 Technical assistance 54-6741

"In this history of American Technical Missions Overseas from 1838 to 1938, the authors try to test the assumptions underlying the 'altruistic hopes' of Point Four. These assumptions claim that given financial and technical aid, backward areas can lighten their own burdens. The book examines the problems which arose in previous attempts to bring American know-how to alien cultures and concludes that 'there were few missions that were clearly, successful, few that were total failures.'" (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 51:164 D 15 '54

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 31 '54 50w

"The reader will find it hard going and encyclopedic in style and content but valuable in the registration of factual details. The authors have very little to say about the greatest influence of all in carrying the seeds of American culture to foreign countries—the religious missionaries, who were closer to the people than the scientists who took our technology abroad. And the study shows the limitations of operating without a broad understanding of the foreign policy of the United States at various periods surrounding the technical missions." S. F. Bemis

N Y Times p29 O 10 '54 300w

CURTIS, CHARLES PELHAM. It's your law. 178p $3.75 Harvard univ. press

340 Law

54-9773

"Largely compiled from Law Review articles by the author, this readable volume might be called a brief attitude guide on the law." (Library J) The author is a partner in a Boston law firm. For his book Lions Under the Throne, a Study of the Supreme Court of the United States, see Book Review Digest 1947. Index.

Booklist 51:124 N 15 '54

"Anyone who has consulted a lawyer or been in court, including lawyers themselves, will find this volume stimulating." J. W. Stein

+ Library J 79:1885 O 15 '54 100w

"We find here many brilliant passages, as well as much cynicism, coupled with a mistaken conception of the lawyers' ethics. There are sparkling paragraphs which I enjoyed and many statements with which I enthusiastically disagree. Mr. Curtis, an extremely well-educated and highly respected member of the Boston bar, has given us his philosophy of the law, but I disagree even with the title. I think it is his law and not mine. It is a book that should be interesting to any lawyer, but one ill-designed for the lay audience, except that part of it perhaps that likes to hear strictures upon the legal profession." L. P. Stryker

+ — N Y Times p3 O 31 '54 1050w

CURTISS, JOHN SHELTON. Russian church and the Soviet state, 1917-1950. 387p $6 Little 261.7 Church and state in Russia 53-10235

A study of the position of the Russian Orthodox Church from 1917 to 1950. The author, professor of history at Duke University, has based his work on original sources found both in the United States and in Europe. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. G. Mazour

Am Hist R 59:933 Jl '54 370w

Booklist 50:251 Mr 1 '54

Reviewed by C. S. Braden

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 22 '54 120w

Foreign Affairs 33:164 O '54 40w

"A good scholarly review which students will find useful."

+ Kirkus 21:675 O 1 '53 240w

"A well balanced, thorough, and carefully documented account. . . . Recommended for public libraries and those of educational institutions." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:144 Ja 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by Will Starnes

Nation 178:74 Ja 23 '54 480w

"Mr. Curtiss unfolds this complex tale with great clarity and scrupulous objectivity. His performance is particularly impressive for the period up to 1928. After that it tends to thin out, in part because as the author notes, the sources become 'less abundant.' While this is true so far as official Soviet sources concerned, the 'living witnesses' of the new Soviet emigration also have an important story to tell, and there is little indication that Mr. Curtiss has listened to them. His account of the post-1938 period might have gained considerably in richness and depth if this resource had been more effectively exploited." Merle Fainsod

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 14 '54 800w

Reviewed by Harry Schwartz

N Y Times p3 N 22 '53 380w

"Scholarly treatment of documentary evidence is happily combined with the ease of well-written narrative exposition. The abundant factual data contained in this work is, therefore, readily accessible to the general reader, and at the same time constitutes a valuable source of information for the specialist in Russian history."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:19 Mr '54 220w

CURTISS, MRS URSULA (REILLY). Deadly climate. 190p $2.75 Dodd

Mystery story.

54-9231

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 O 3 '54 40w

"One of the season's best pure thrillers—a throat-clutcher in the absolute, tightly and economically written and plotted (it all happens in about twelve hours), rich in well-observed people, dexterous suspense tricks, and some first-rate detection by a small-town newspaper man. Choose your evening for this one; you won't get anything else done till you've finished it." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p30 S 19 '54 180w

"Perils-of-Pauline job has pace, suspense. On the beam." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:46 S 16 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 70w

CURTIUS, ERNST ROBERT. European literature and the Latin middle ages; tr. from the German by Willard R. Trask. 662p $5.50 Pantheon bks.

879.09 Latin literature, Medieval and modern. Literature—History and criticism

52-10619

"Dr. Curtius considers the forms of medieval Latin literature, their derivation from the Latin classics, their transformation in the Middle Ages, and their continued existence in varying forms within the literature of our own day. He is forever tracing things back to the origins, to their earlier types and archetypes. Thus the central theme of this book of such rich diversity is the development of Latin, the achievements of its later period—of that media et infima Latinitas which inspired du Cange, Mabillon, Carpentier and their successors—of its dialects and lost patois, and above all of the powerfully articulated Romance languages." Times [London] Lit Sup

"An excellent name and subject index is included in this edition, so the work will prove very useful for reference purposes. But primarily it is to be hoped that this book will awaken a new enthusiasm here too in America for the beauty of a time which some textbooks still call 'the dark ages.'" Max Filscher

+ Commonweal 59:635 Mr 26 '54 700w

"If we judge the book as a scholarly achievement, the only serious objection which we can urge against it (learned critics have found a few minor errors) is that it is not exhaustive. The reader will learn little more about the Latin writers of the Middle Ages than he knows when he begins it. Indeed without some such knowledge he is likely to lose his way. It is not an easy book. A great deal of raw material, citation of passage after passage in author after author, sometimes seems to add up to proving very little. . . . If these facts do arouse interest, the accumulation of them will soon arouse fascination. A whole way of thinking gradually appears, a way of thinking that is far from dead today. From continuity of expression the book goes on to continuity of attitude, or rather to the slow formation of attitude." Ben Kimpel

+ — Poetry 84:158 Je '54 1550w

Reviewed by D. R. Gillie

Spec p624 My 21 '54 1000w

"The difficult work of rendering the author's exact meaning has been done remarkably well. Wherever it is possible to judge without the drudgery of comparing the original volume and the translation sentence by sentence, Mr. Trask has done his work conscientiously, under the influence of a self-denying ordinance. . . . The book is unique in sweep and scope, while the translation, sometimes of a high order of excellence, is always both good and sound."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p783 D 4 '53 400w

"A workmanlike, in places inspired, translation." C. W. Jones

+ Yale R n s 43:459 spring '54 700w

CUSHING, MRS MARY (WATKINS). Rainbow bridge. 318p $4 Putnam

B or 92 Fremstad, Olive

54-10494

An account of seven years in the life of Olive Fremstad, when the author acted as secretary, companion, and buffer to the famous opera singer. Index.

Booklist 51:106 N 1 '54

"This is a hilarious, thrilling, and touching story. . . . 'Buffing' for Madame Fremstad had never, it seems, a dull moment, and neither has Tinka's account of it." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 D 23 '54 700w

"A supreme operative imperative."

+ Kirkus 22:466 Jl 15 '54 300w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:1893 O 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 14 '54 750w

"The book is practically a model for such forms of biography, and a delight in the reading for opera lovers and those who remember Fremstad even vaguely." Morris Gilbert

+ N Y Times p10 O 3 '54 500w

CUSHMAN, MRS CLARISSA (FAIRCHILD). Fatal step. 261p $3 Little 52-12651

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:460 Jl 15 '53 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p34 O 11 '53 20w

"Pleasant job." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 36:55 O 17 '53 20w

"Exciting mystery." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 1 '54 30w

CUTHRELL, FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

CUTLER, KATHERINE N. Junior flower arranging; photographs by Roche; drawings by Joan Lucas [ed. by Helen Van Pelt Wilson]. 179p $2.95 Barrows

635.96 Floral decoration

54-5374

"Its three sections take up first, flower arranging for juniors; second, interesting things for juniors to do (with flower programs, gardens, attracting birds); and third, 'For Seniors Helping Juniors,' some fine advice on junior shows, schedules, staging, and the work of junior garden clubs. The pictures here are a few line diagrams and twelve insert pages of interesting photographs." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:302 Ap 1 '54

CUTLER, K. N.—Continued

Reviewed by Helen Reber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 4 '54
60w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13
'54 100w

"A fine addition to a summer camp collection." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:179 Je '54 100w

Reviewed by R. H. Urban

Library J 79:635 Ap 1 '54 40w

"It would prove very interesting to some girls of around twelve and over, and is full of ideas for adults helping to introduce children both to gardening and to flower arranging as an art." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 14
'54 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p22 Ap 7 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:142 My '54

CUTTS, NORMA ESTELLE, and MOSELEY, NICHOLAS. Only child; a guide for parents and only children of all ages. 245p $3.50 Putnam136.7 Child study. Children—Management.
Parent and child 54-10500

Two doctors who have studied the problem of only children write this study in non-technical language, to help parents and children understand the various factors which must be considered in the "only child" situation. Index.

Booklist 51:97 N 1 '54

"A concentration of material for an audience that is larger than you think, this is matter of fact and helpful in removing the stigma of 'only child.'"

+ Kirkus 22:421 Jl 1 '54 170w

"The authors acknowledge that there are some advantages to being an 'only' but that in general the parents of 'onlies' need to provide sibling substitutes for their children. Occasionally the text suffers from poor choice of words and references to academic studies which are not too apropos; nevertheless it offers constructive and reassuring information." S. R. A.

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 24 '54
110wD*DAHL, BORGHILD MARGARETHE. Homecoming. 251p $3 Dutton

53-10339

Story of a young girl whose parents had migrated from Norway to Minneapolis. Lyng liked to hear stories of her forefathers' land, but for herself she had another dream to be realized only in the freedom of a new country and the story concerns her struggle to live her own life.

"There is a wonderful spirit in this story and it reads more like fact than fiction."

+ Horn Bk 30:112 Ap '54 90w

Kirkus 21:550 Ag 15 '54 130w

"Homecoming" is an interesting story as well as a piece of social history, a picture of a group in the American melting pot. In the beginning its simplicity, its meticulous, graphic descriptions make it seem like a novel 'for older girls,' but later one realizes that Borghild Dahl is writing realistically of people who thought of, and saw life in a simple manner." Ferdinand Molke-Hansen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 7 '54
500w

"The pattern is a familiar one, as any patient novel-reader knows. But the author has handled it with depth and genuine perception, and given it the color of reality observed from the inside." Amanda Ellis

+ N Y Times p15 D 20 '53 230w

"A good book for teen-age girls."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:31 Ja '54

DAHL, ROBERT ALAN, and LINDBLOM, CHARLES EDWARD. Politics, economics, and welfare; planning and politico-economic systems resolved into basic social processes. 557p $5 Harper

338.91 Economics. Political sciences 53-5571

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by J. J. Honigmann

Am Anthropol 56:933 O '54 300w

"There is so much in this book that a brief review cannot summarize it adequately. Suffice it to say that it is well worth reading. It may have great influence on the thinking of social scientists, and their attitudes on social policy." R. T. Bye

+ Am Econ R 44:140 Mr '54 850w

"This is a significant and fertile volume, likely to be a landmark for some time in the optimistic return of the social scientist to the decisive issues. Furthermore, it sets for him a basic challenge: to be intellectually relevant and socially responsible." J. B. McKee

+ Am J Soc 59:491 Mr '54 440w

"This is an important book, in part because it represents a far-flung, pioneering venture in the joint use of the tools of political science and economics, and in part because it applies the tools of these two disciplines to the concept of economic planning, which is defined as 'an attempt at rational calculation and control in the use of scarce resources.'" B. M. Gross

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:558 Je '54 1000w

Reviewed by C. W. Mills

Am Soc R 19:495 Ag '54 750w

Foreign Affairs 32:505 Ap '54 50w

"The discussion as a whole proceeds with a coherence and intelligence that will prove attractive to both technical and general readers. Though the book necessarily involves a special terminology, the authors have kept it reasonably free of jargon. They are well acquainted with the recent developments in all the social sciences and draw heavily upon the work of contemporary sociologists, anthropologists, and philosophers, as well as upon the writings of political scientists and economists. Although they are somewhat indiscriminate in their selection of authorities, their discussion on the whole proceeds with a sophistication and subtlety that is refreshing. Enough sections of the book are illuminating so that its study will be genuinely rewarding. Some major problems of substance and method are nevertheless left unresolved." Oscar Handlin

+ — Harvard Law R 67:1095 Ap '54 600w

"It is easy to become enthusiastic about this book... The volume which the authors have produced is (at least among the writings with which I am acquainted) unique in its tying-together of political and economic theory and in its demonstration that the price system, bargaining, hierarchy, and majority vote can be analyzed both as potential complements of and potential substitutes for one another." H. M. Oliver

+ J Pol Econ 62:71 F '54 320w

"All social scientists—and particularly economists and political scientists—will find the insights of the book stimulating and provocative."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:445 D '53 310w

DALE, KATHLEEN. Nineteenth-century piano music; a handbook for pianists; with a pref. by Myra Hess. 320p il 3.40 Oxford

786.4 Piano music

"Miss Dale's book is subtitled 'A Handbook for Pianists,' and it consists largely of closely argued analyses of the piano repertory during the long Romantic period. Miss Dale is a scholarly musician, and her admirable accounts of the differences between the sonatas of Beethoven, Schubert and Weber are underpinned by her knowledge of what occasioned and led up to them. The author states that her book is 'designed primarily for pianists who make music for their own delight.'" New Statesman & Nation

"When it comes to composers not of the first rank, she strikes one as somewhat wantonily partial in her inclusions. . . Still, everybody is entitled to his preferences and prejudices. Less acceptable is the obfuscation caused by the author's nomenclature of musical forms. . . The book contains a few actual errors. . . The above criticisms, however, are of relatively minor significance. One could be more concerned with whether the book was fulfilling the function it set out to perform. Just exactly who are 'pianists who make music for their own delight'? Presumably this category will include many amateurs. Yet many works are discussed, such as the 'Hammerclavier' Sonata and Brahms's 'Paganini' Variations, which can only be played by highly skilled concert artists." Arthur Loesser

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:562 S '54
700w

"Miss Dale clearly knows, not only how a piece is constructed, but how it should be played; and those who make music for the delight of others will find the task of interpretation made easier by reading her lucid analyses." E. S. West

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:239 Ag 28
'54 120w

"The only seriously challengeable statement in the book is the author's announcement that the romantic movement began officially in 1830. . . For the rest, the book compels nothing but admiration for the author's thoroughness, her clarity and conciseness of expression, and her perception, within the self-imposed limits of style criticism. A special word of commendation should go to her for not omitting studies, duets and 'arrangements'—and not least for her very just appraisal of the last-mentioned often unfairly abused, contribution to nineteenth-century keyboard literature."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p554 S 3 '54
800w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Courage of Sarah Noble; il. by Leonard Weisgard. 52p $2 Scribner

54-5922

Sarah was eight years old in 1702 when she accompanied her father into the Connecticut wilderness, where John Noble planned to build a home for his family. Sarah was to cook for her father, and the courageous small girl met all the dangers of her new life bravely. For ages 8 to 10.

Booklist 50:405 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 20w

"Based on fact, this unusual story of a remarkable pioneer child carries a heartwarming message of love and faith. Beautifully and simply told for beginner readers, it is charmingly illustrated by Leonard Weisgard." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 6 '54
150w

"This is a book unmarred by preachment, piety, or sentimentality—a book without flaw, it seems to me, which must become an American classic." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13
'54 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"Here is a remarkable book for younger readers—a true pioneer adventure, written for easy reading but without any sacrifice of literary quality or depth of feeling." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:246 Ag '54 140w

Kirkus 22:311 My 15 '54 160w

"Based on a true incident, this is an interesting story. Format is good, with large type and attractive illustrations by Leonard Weisgard. Ages 8-9. Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 70w

"The story has a quality beyond its facts or action. It is a fine introduction to pioneer life for small children, and doubly worth owning to reread because of Mr. Weisgard's excellent two-color pictures, which combine distinction with sure appeal to younger boys and girls." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 16
'54 280w

"Based on a true incident in Connecticut history—the founding of New Milford—this story is one to be long remembered for its beautiful simplicity and dignity. Leonard Weisgard's pictures add just the right sense of background." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p24 My 23 '54 130w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:212 N 27 '54 40w

"This is a story of a little girl who often was afraid, but who was brave to face the experiences required of her. Her father told her 'to be afraid and to be brave is the best courage of all,' and this courage Sarah had. It is based on a real incident that occurred during the settlement of New Milford, Conn., and is told with directness and understanding." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:54 My 15 '54 320w

Wis Lib Bul 50:140 My '54

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Thanksgiving story; with il. by Helen Sewell. [32p] $2.50 Scribner

Thanksgiving day—Juvenile literature

54-8785

The story of the journey of the Mayflower and the founding of Plymouth. The story centers around one family, the Hopkins. For ages five to eight.

Booklist 51:114 N 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54
100w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '54
270w

Commonweal 61:206 N 19 '54 20w

"Everyone who has anything to do with children will want it for Thanksgiving. It is the only really distinguished book we have on that holiday. . . Miss Sewell has made wonderful full-color pictures. A beautiful book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:341 O '54 100w

"Helen Sewell's colored pictures have an early American quality and have been excellently matched with the text. Recommended for reading aloud."

+ Kirkus 22:706 O 15 '54 180w

"The author has a genius for this sort of simplification of history. . . The new book is particularly welcome to read aloud to children of five up. Besides, it makes a beautiful possession for a family to share." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p3
N 14 '54 210w

"The familiar story is told simply enough for beginning readers, but without loss of significance or dignity. Helen Sewell's brightly colored pictures, done in the manner of American primitives, bring the scenes and characters to life and add a note of childlike gaiety. A conjectural plan of the Mayflower and a map of the Plymouth area, by Rafael Palacios, are interesting and informative." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times pt2 p36 N 14 '54 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 14 '54
50w

"It is told briefly and directly in the words that will be easy for the youngest readers to enjoy for themselves and in pictures which are in the character of American primitives and at the same time have strength and drama. From the somber tones of the earlier part of the story the pictures work up to a climax of glowing autumn colors in the illustration for the Thanksgiving feast. The surprising thing about this book is that after all the years of repeated expression of the need for a Thanksgiving picture book only now should this one happen. It is fortunate that it is the work of two such fine collaborators." R. H. Viguers

+ Sat R 37:72 N 13 '54 160w

DALY, MAGGIE (MRS ARTHUR BAZLEN). Guide to charm; il. by Russell Wilkinson. 175p $2.50 Dodd

646.7 Beauty, Personal

53-9951

"The author, a model, TV performer, and fashion writer, gives sparkling but sound advice on how to look your best, with behind-the-

DALY, MAGGIE—Continued
scenes glimpses of modeling and show business life and beauty and wardrobe hints from the women whose business it is to look like a million on a small budget. Items about famous names in show business add glitter to the book." Library J

Booklist 50:223 F 1 '54

Reviewed by Eleanor Nangle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p58 N 15 '53
150w

"Recommended for large and medium-sized public and school libraries for teen-agers and young career women." Anne Singleton
Library J 78:2229 D 15 '53 90w

DALY, ROBERT WELTER. Guns of Yorktown. 181p $2.50 Dodd

53-8951

Historical novel for teen-agers, relating the adventures of a young American patriot with the French fleet during the Revolution.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 178:207 D '53 20w

"I believe that the book would be enjoyed most by readers who already possess some knowledge of the strategy of the war and are willing to accept considerable historical exposition close to the surface of the story." E. B. Hungerford

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N '53
160w

"Eighth- and ninth-grade will enjoy the sea lore and the excitement. Characterization is subordinate to plot, but the descriptions of naval action are well done. Purchase for large young people's collections." L. R. Markey
+ — Library J 78:1860 O 15 '53 60w

DANA, RICHARD HENRY. Autobiographical sketch (1815-1842) ed. by Robert F. Metz-dorf; with an introd. by Norman Holmes Pearson. 119p $2.50 Shoe String Press, 51 Caroline st, Hamden 17, Conn.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

"A brief account of his first 27 years written by the author of Two Years Before the Mast in 1842 and now published in its entirety for the first time. He describes his early schooling, his college years, and legal training, and various teachers along the way—including Emerson. He also tells of his friendships, religious experience, marriage, and of the writing and sale of his most famous book." Booklist

Booklist 50:276 Mr 15 '54

"Dana's sketch of his early years is well worth having in print, even though parts of it have been used in Charles Francis Adams' biography. . . It is to be regretted that the printing of Mr. Robert F. Metz-dorf's book and the writing of Professor Norman Holmes Pearson's introduction are unworthy of Dana's autobiography." W. M. Merrill

+ — New Eng Q 27:123 Mr '54 850w

DANIEL, HAWTHORNE, and MINOT, FRANCIS. Inexhaustible sea. 261p $4 Dodd

574.92 Marine biology. Sea food 54-6489

"Survey of the present state of knowledge in regard to the oceans, and especially the possibilities as a source of food for the world's steadily increasing population. There are chapters on the conditions surrounding different kinds of plant and animal life in the sea, on the study of the sea from the beginnings of oceanography to the use of modern instruments, on fishing craft and factory ships, and some speculation on the situation 25 years from now." Library J

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 J1 4 '54
350w

"This is a book for the general reader, written to show him the extent of the vast resources of the oceans. Although there is no index, the book is recommended for purchase by public libraries, large and small." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1053 Je 1 '54 140w

"The serious and abounding errors in this book will doubtless dampen confidence in its exaggerated purpose. To begin with those of least consequence, we find misspellings such as 'iridescence,' 'carniverous' and 'walrusses,' and the persistent use of 'algae' as a singular noun. Work of the late Alexander Agassiz is credited to 'Dr. Alexander.' . . . Pathological autopsy might continue through the eleven chapters of this book, all of which contain also much factual and enlightening information. But it is sufficient to state flatly that there is absolutely nothing, in the water or out of it, to justify a hope that new resources can hold more than an unsatisfactory status quo with world population unless the latter begins to strike a flattening curve." R. C. Murphy
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 20 '54 750w

"I detect signs of a struggle. Quite possibly, Hawthorne Daniel, the romantic generalist, devoutly believed that the sea is an inexhaustible source that could offset the failing bounty of the land; but Francis Minot, the scientist, cautiously questioned and whittled away at his collaborator's will-to-believe. The outcome of the struggle is a somewhat untenable title, but a balanced, fascinating and useful book." Russell Lord
+ — N Y Times p22 Je 27 '54 450w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 150w
Wis Lib Bul 50:204 O '54

DANIEL-ROPS, HENRY, originally HENRY-JULES CHARLES PETIOT. Jesus and His times; tr. from the French by Ruby Millar. 615p $5 Dutton

232.9 Jesus Christ 53-6095

"An English translation of Daniel-Rops' Life of Christ well received in France ten years ago when it was first published and soon translated into a number of European languages. In common with all modern scholarly lives of Christ it is based upon the Gospels and the 'fifth' gospel, i.e. a thorough knowledge of Palestinian archaeology and customs during Graeco-Roman times." Library J

Booklist 51:121 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 30w

"In Europe this new book about Jesus has gone thru more than 400 printings and been translated into 15 languages; in America it may well be expected to duplicate or surpass the success of Papini's 'Life of Christ' more than 30 years ago. It should do better than that, for where Papini was an amateur, Daniel-Rops is a professional. . . . There have been great scholars among unbelievers, and Daniel-Rops acknowledges it gladly, for he dodges no critical problems, and he has not confined his reading to his own co-religionists. But it is refreshing, for a change, to be on the inside looking out." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 26 '54
430w

"Daniel-Rops says nothing that has not been said already, although perhaps in a less gifted idiom, by Prat, Fillion, Lagrange, and Goodier, to name a few. But it is indeed quite probable that the man who desires an informal and relatively brief life of Christ written in an interesting manner would profit considerably by reading this work of Daniel-Rops—in French." R. P. Mohan

Commonweal 61:193 N 19 '54 1100w

"The author makes his greatest contribution through his interpretation of the events and teachings revealed in the Gospels in terms of contemporary history and customs, for he shows himself to be a close student of the historical, religious and cultural background of the New Testament. He follows the Johannine chronology in general but goes further than any other New Testament scholar in giving specific dates for outstanding events. Thus the feeding of the 500 is dated April 29, 26 AD; the Transfiguration August 9, 28 AD. In these and many other points many will feel the author has clarified the 'mystery' of Jesus' life all too easily."

+ — Kirkus 22:465 J1 15 '54 270w

"Naturally enough the book offers no new facts about Christ, but the author has succeeded in making the material his very own, and in presenting this material in a most refreshing fashion. . . Highly recommended for public, college, and university libraries." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 79:1583 S 15 '54 170w

"'Lives of Jesus' are legion, though not all of them are as imposing and, on the whole, as successful as M. Daniel-Rops' recent contribution to the collection." R. M. Brown

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 3 '54 1250w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
N Y Times p10 S 19 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 10 '54 550w

DANIELS, JONATHAN. End of innocence. 351p $5 Lippincott

973.91 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Daniels, Josephus. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 54-6106

The son of Josephus Daniels writes of the years in Washington when Woodrow Wilson was president, Daniels was Secretary of the navy, and the young Franklin D. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy. Index.

Booklist 50:289; 398 Ap 1 '54; Je 15 '54
Bookmark 13:233 J1 '54 40w

"A fogginess of detail and a cloudiness of syntax, surprising in one born and bred to the narration of events and the employment of the written word, leave one frequently guessing what actually happened and whose innocence was ended." A. S. Henning

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 4 '54 600w

"It is an account which Mr. Daniels frankly acknowledges is often less an historical than an emotional enterprise—but which one astute observer has called his best book. He unravels a warm, human story about the two men he admired most, and who loved each other well—his father, Josephus Daniels, and Franklin D. Roosevelt." M. K. Gilstrap

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 24 '54 750w

Foreign Affairs 33:160 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:221 Mr 15 '54 180w

"Recommended for the large college and public library." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1222 Je 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by C. A. Madison
Nation 179:14 J1 3 '54 500w

"Jonathan Daniels has written a beautiful and sympathetic portrait of the era in American life which, as he says, saw the end of our innocent parochialism. It is full of nostalgic detail about a time which seems like centuries ago rather than a mere four decades; it has much of the quality that Margaret Leech gave to her wonderful study of the national capital in Lincoln's time, Reveille in Washington." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 132:18 J1 26 '54 1400w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 20 '54 1200w

"This book gives many sidelights on history, both grave and gay, and makes most interesting reading." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y Times p1 Je 20 '54 1300w

"The author, who was an adolescent but sharply observant spectator on the scene, writes with emotion and grace, and his book is almost a social history of the Wilson years of embattled idealism."

+ New Yorker 30:63 J1 3 '54 150w

Reviewed by G. A. Barker
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 20 '54 600w

"'The End of Innocence' is a brilliant memoir. Even more important, it is a shrewd analysis of the foundations and functioning of the American democratic system, and it is an affirmation of faith in that system." Frank Freidel

+ Sat R 37:18 Je 19 '54 700w

DANTE ALIGHIERI. The Inferno; tr. in verse by John Ciardi; historical introd. by A. T. McAllister. 288p $4.50 Rutgers univ. press 851.15

54-9668

"Instead of trying for word-for-word equivalents of the Italian, the translator has tried to get at the total feeling of Dante's Inferno in this translation which reproduces the common speech of the original. To achieve his goal, he was forced to give up the triple rhyme scheme, or terza rima, used by Dante; he has, however, preserved the three-line stanza as the logical unit of Dante's thought. The result is a translation which is idiomatic, colloquial, and economical without any sacrifice of poetic purity, partly because the translator resorts to approximate rhymes where true rhymes would distort the meaning of the original." Booklist

Booklist 50:447 J1 15 '54

"This edition is wonderfully readable, and one's understanding is aided by synopses, notes, diagrams, and an historical introduction written by A. T. McAllister." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:1592 S 15 '54 90w

"The pace throughout is good, and the whole poem-in-translation is better than its details. Ciardi is perhaps weakest in classical passages, like the lovely simile-inclosing-metaphor which opens Canto 24; strongest where there is strong action or emotion to communicate." Richard Lattimore

+ — Nation 179:175 Ag 28 '54 1000w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 N 14 '54 100w

"Let me begin by confessing to prejudice. I have been concerned with this translation, chiefly in the unlovable role of devil's advocate, from the start. . . Nevertheless, I feel now what I have felt from the beginning; that here is our Dante, Dante for the first time translated into virile, tense American verse; a work of enormous erudition which (like its original) never forgets to be poetry; a shining event in a bad age." Dudley Fitts

+ N Y Times p4 J1 4 '54 450w

"Having chosen a rhymed form, the translator must also avoid pitfalls of repeating the same rhymes too often and too soon. Here Mr. Ciardi has slipped several times. But on the whole this is a conscientious and successful translation, which, let us hope, will be followed in due course by the 'Purgatorio' and 'Paradiso.'" L. G. White

+ Sat R 37:13 S 18 '54 800w

Reviewed by A. T. MacAllister
Yale R n s 44:158 autumn '54 180w

DANTON, EMILY (MILLER), ed. Pioneering leaders in librarianship. See Pioneering leaders in librarianship.

DANTZIG, TOBIAS. Henri Poincaré: critic of crisis; reflections on his universe of discourse. (Twentieth century lib) 149p $3 Scribner

501 Poincaré, Henri. Science—Philosophy 54-7250

"A study of various key passages from the published writings of the mathematician Henri Poincaré. Professor Dantzig (formerly a student of Poincaré in Paris) takes these passages as texts and explores and comments on the scientific questions they involve." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"There is much in the book for the informed layman and more for the professional mathematician or physicist. The exposition is clear and the book ranks high among popular treatments of the philosophic aspects of modern physics and mathematics." D. C. Murdoch

DANTZIG, TOBIAS—Continued

+ Canadian Forum 34:142 S '54 400w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 20 '54
30w

"A difficult and very rewarding volume, badly misnamed."

+ — New Yorker 30:80 S 4 '54 140w

DARBY, ADA CLAIRE. Pull away, boatman; with drawings by Millard McGee. 247p $3 Lippincott

53-10215

A novel for grades seven to ten, about the orphaned Roseanne who lived with an uncle and aunt at New Madrid on the Missouri prairie in 1811. The story describes the comet and earthquake of that year, and has a dash of mystery.

Booklist 50:244 F 15 '54

Reviewed by C. I. Judson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 29 '53
120w

Kirkus 21:432 J1 15 '53 130w

"Well-written, dramatic story for older girls." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 78:2229 D 15 '53 50w

"Well-rounded historical novel for older girls." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 17 '54 140w

+ Wis Lib Bul 49:265 N '53

DARINGER, HELEN FERN. Bigity Anne; il. by Don Sibley. 177p $2.50 Harcourt

54-5152

Story of four motherless children whose father was in South America, building a bridge in the jungle. When their kindly housekeeper was called to a distant city to care for a sick daughter, the Todds were left to the mercies of ugly Mrs Lloyd. Finally thirteen-year-old Anne fired Mrs Lloyd and undertook to care for her two younger brothers and little sister. For ages 8 to 12.

Booklist 50:282 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 20w

"A story with warmth and humor, a few heartaches, and a heroine appealing in her honesty and courage." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 21 '54 130w

Kirkus 22:61 F 1 '54 120w

"There are humor and pathos, and the children are very realistically drawn. Recommended for junior high girls." I. E. Stafford

+ Library J 79:788 Ap 15 '54 70w

"Miss Daringer's story is well told, and the little family is appealing. Girls under twelve who liked her 'Stepsister Sally' will like it, but neither book comes up to 'Adopted Jane.' Aside from the tension of waiting for news from Father, the new book has not a compelling plot and is too similar to other stories of children left to manage alone. Anne is admirable but not memorable." L. S. Bechtel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 16 '54 90w

"A warm and humorous story for little girls." Rose Friedman

+ N Y Times p24 F 21 '54 160w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat ■ 37:54 Mr 20 '54 240w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54
60w

DARLING, EDWARD. How we fought for our schools. 255p $3 Norton

53-13503

Called "a documentary novel" this is the story of what happened in one American community when a small but influential group attempted to sabotage the American ideal of free, public education.

"Somewhat controversial in its implications that bigotry is characteristic of criticism of public education today, since there is neither proponent nor documentation for constructive criticism."

Booklist 50:239 F 15 '54

"Mr. Darling is an eloquent and convincing spokesman for the progressive system in education but his presentation of the other side is less than objective. Its leaders are, without exception, fanatics, crackpots and name-callers. While he gives documentary evidence that such situations, dominated by such individuals, have actually arisen, one wishes he had expressed some opinion that was less biased on either side."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 14 '54
270w

"This narrative may remind some of us of the Sunday school books that were offered us long ago. But it is interesting and convincing; it should be read by many more people than would pick it up if it were labeled non-fiction and presented in the form of a report with supporting statistics and affidavits." R. L. D.

+ N Y Times p26 F 7 '54 500w

"The result is a readable account of what might happen in an American community. As a novel it will not rank as a landmark in American fiction, but as an account of a real American problem in the middle of the Twentieth Century it deserves to be read with care." G. E. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 14 '54 250w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 80:139 O 30 '54 290w

DARLING, LOUIS. Greenhead [il. by the author]. 95p $3 Morrow

598.2 Ducks

53-9228

The story of a mallard duck, from the time of his offspring's birth in Canada, through the summer and the autumn migration, to his next flight north.

Booklist 50:282 Mr 15 '54

"Written for high school age, it is nevertheless absorbing reading for every one who wishes to know about the beauties and hazards in a duck's life. The illustrations, including a fine color frontispiece, by the author, are authentic and detailed." R. F. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 90w

"The whole subject is treated in an explicit, direct manner to please an ornithologist of any age." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:182 Je '54 80w

"An excellent study book, not to be missed."

+ Kirkus 22:34 Ja 15 '54 60w

"An exceptionally fine book about the mallard duck. . . Particularly valuable in school libraries. Recommended for ages 11 and up." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 79:788 Ap 15 '54 80w

"All over twelve who love birds and waterfowl will be delighted with this addition to Morrow's many excellent nature books. . . The pictures are dramatically real and beautiful. . . It is a lovely, interesting book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 18 '54 100w

"The author's illustrations are highly valuable to the text, both for the information they supply and their beauty." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p33 Je ■ '54 60w

Sat R 37:28 Ap 17 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54
40w

DARLING, MARJORIE. Journey to Ankara; il. by Raymond Creekmore. [34p] $2.25 Macmillan (N Y)

54-12608

Pictures and text describe the life of a twelve-year-old Turkish boy, who is rewarded for faithful work by a trip to Ankara. Ages six to eight.

Booklist 51:155 D 1 '54

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
 Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11
 '54 180w
 Kirkus 22:383 J1 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p32 N
 14 '54 40w

"The easy text and large detailed drawings tell the simple but revealing story that introduces another distant land in a first picture book." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times pt2 p40 N 14 '54 70w

"Attractive and readable, this book serves as an introductory or first book for the younger reader to people of other lands." N. J. D.

+ Sat R 37:85 N 13 '54 140w

DARNTON, ELEANOR (CHOATE) (MRS BYRON DARNTON). Children grew. 199p $3 Crown

649.1 Children—Management. Parent and child. 54-11177

The story of one woman's struggle to bring up her two sons after her husband was killed in World war II. The author, a newspaper reporter before her marriage, went back to her job, but was determined to give her boys as normal a life as possible with the fourth member of the family lacking. Mrs. Darnton is now Press chief of the Children's Bureau, of the Department of health, education and welfare, in Washington.

Booklist 51:165 D 15 '54

"A human document which should be read by every adult in the English speaking world. For in these uncertain times, who can say that her situation is not one which all human beings have to consider? And her courage and intelligent handling of that situation are both heartwarming and challenging." Olive Caruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 7 '54 320w

"Intelligent and pleasant."

+ Kirkus 22:555 Ag 15 '54 160w

"It is a sincere recording of one household's adjustment. Unfortunately, it remains an impersonal record written in the third person and failing to establish an affinity with the reader. Not that it should be a sentimental tear-jerker. Yet the presentation is in such a matter-of-fact fashion that what should emerge as a warm, human story remains an unvaried recital of events concerning people who never seem quite real. Public librarians should purchase with this in mind." E. P. Nichols

Library J 79:1828 O 1 '54 160w

Reviewed by Shirley Jackson

N Y Times p38 N 28 '54 200w

DARR, JACK. How to install and service auto radios. 116p il pa $1.80 Rider, J.F.

621.3849 Radio apparatus—Installation in automobiles 54-7851

"A handy booklet for radio and TV servicemen who are occasionally called upon to install a radio in a passenger auto or truck or to service such radios, and a necessary introduction for the radio serviceman who is planning to enter this field. Auto antennas, techniques of suppressing noise from the distributor, generators, front wheels, power supplies, speakers, automatic tuners are all adequately covered. The chapter on the service shop deals in a practical way with not only the necessary tools and instruments but also with customer relations." N Y New Tech Bks

"Men already in the trade of servicing home radio and television receivers are the intended audience for this book, hence no space is used up in explaining the general principles of radio." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1405 Ag '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:59 J1 '54

DARRELL, ROBERT DONALDSON. Good listening. 206p $2.75 Knopf

780.15 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation. Phonograph records 52-12187

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"Mr. Darrell's book, which the publishers have issued in a handsome format, is full of information; but its real worth to the beginning collector lies in the methods for study and growth it outlines, the value of which, will be largely determined by the effort the reader is willing to make in order to reach musical literacy." M. C. Bartlett

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:117 D '53 400w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Ap 25 '54 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 70w

Wis Lib Bul 50:25 Ja '54

DART, THURSTON. Interpretation of music. 192p $2.40; text ed $1.80 Longmans

781 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation [54-10834]

A short guide to the interpretation of old music, period by period. It should be of value to future editors, as it points out to musicians the typical dangers to be encountered in older, unscholarly editions. To the listener it should give some working knowledge of this music. Index.

"Until recently England lagged hopelessly behind Germany, America and France in musicology. In academic circles here it was regarded as faintly ungentlemanly to apply to musical history the exact techniques of scholarship, and such good work as was done was almost always marred to some extent by amateurishness and insularity. . . Now at last we seem able to combine real scholarship with enthusiasm, and in Mr. Dart's book both are present in the highest degree." Jeremy Noble

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:445 Ap 3 '54 480w

"This is the most interesting book on a musical subject that has appeared in English for a long time. No performance whatsoever and no would-be intelligent listener should fail to read it from cover to cover—but Mr. Dart writes with such verve as well as authority and brings within the ordinary reader's understanding such riches of scholarship that no one who once starts the book is likely to put it down unfinished." Martin Cooper

+ Spec p366 Mr 26 '54 800w

"Mr. Dart's book comes at the right time. It should be welcomed both by musicians and listeners who value artistic integrity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p170 Mr 12 '54 850w

DAUER, MANNING JULIAN. Adams Federalists. 381p maps $6 Johns Hopkins press

973.44 U.S.—Politics and government—1797-1801. Adams, John. Federal party 53-11171

"The Adams Federalists were those members of the Federalist party who gave allegiance, however grudgingly, to President John Adams rather than to ex-Secretary of the Treasury Alexander Hamilton. Professor Dauer undertakes here to find out who and what they were, and why they followed the course they did. He has analyzed votes on selected issues in the House of Representatives in the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Congresses, and in the first session of the Seventh Congress, or from March, 1796, through May, 1802. He has also examined Adams' political and economic ideas, and those of some of his contemporaries, by way of background for a discussion of interparty relationships." Am Hist R

DAUER, M. J.—Continued

"The book is an ingenious combination of statistical analysis, political theory, biography, and political history. Altogether, the resulting study is both interesting and significant."
C. M. Wiltse

+ Am Hist R 60:125 O '54 420w

"This book is a competent and well written analysis of the political cross-currents within the Federalist party during the Adams administration. . . . Not the least interesting part of the present work are the tables, which show in complete detail the voting records of all members of the several Congresses up through 1800, and the congressional maps which show the distribution of High Federalist, moderate, and Republican districts throughout the United States in the same period. . . . However, one may express some cautious doubts about the proposition set forth in the preface that the quantitative inductive method applied to historical analysis will lead to general areas of historical agreement and lessen the controversies over rival interpretations of the social forces at work in an era." A. H. Kelly

+ Ann Am Acad 295:156 S '54 360w

"By his courageous and swift decision to make peace with France in 1800, Adams committed political suicide, but his bold move stopped the power-seeking Hamilton in his tracks. . . . The Adams Federalists is a skillful and objective analysis of the growing breach between the Adams and the Hamilton factions of the Federalist party. But the unique feature of the book is its use of quantitative material to show the relationship between the measures advocated by the two wings of the party and the support accorded these measures by rank-and-file congressmen and voters as a result of economic, social, and geographical factors. The author has painstakingly compiled significant and useful data." Peter Bachrach

+ New Eng Q 27:418 S '54 1200w

"The geographical vote analysis, while not integrated with the text as well as could be desired, is nevertheless valuable in itself and it supports the author's main thesis: the Federalist majorities which put through the Constitution and established the Federal Government depended on an alliance between commercial districts and agricultural ones—especially those which produced cash crops for the international market."

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:173 Je '54 260w

DAUGHERTY, KERMIT. Out of the Red Brush. 251p $3.50 World pub.

54-5348

A first novel, the scene of which is the hill district of southern Ohio, known as the Red Brush country. It is the story of a boy's first love which did not end happily, and of the fine girl who took the place of the lost love.

Kirkus 22:245 Ap 1 '54 160w

"Skillful first person narration describes the high jinks of youth—'trashing' courting couples or rival gangs, 'cutting a rusty' to show off. A few matter-of-fact sexual episodes related; deviations hinted at. Small libraries read before buying. Recommended for large adult collections." H. L. Leet

+ Library J 79:982 My 15 '54 100w

Reviewed by G. B. Affleck

Springf'd Republican p9C S 19 '54 150w

DAVENPORT, MARCIA (GLUCK) (MRS R. W. DAVENPORT). My brother's keeper. 457p $3.95 Scribner

54-6300

A novel based on the story of the Collier brothers. In this case the brothers are named Holt, and their house is located in the Chelsea district of New York city. Their tyrannical old grandmother starts off the train of events; a broken romance helps the situation along; and presently the two brothers are living alone in their rat-infested warren. Their tragic deaths reveal the secret of their long-lost romance with an Italian opera singer.

"A tour de force which is sure to appeal to those who like the macabre." Edward Weeks
Atlantic 194:88 N '54 250w
Booklist 51:74, 84 O 15 '54
Bookmark 14:34 N '54 60w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 31 '54 450w

"There's morbid fascination in the unrolling of the evidence. Superb story-telling, so that, while you know the end, there is no moment when the tortuous chain of incidents building to a psychological horror fails to hold interest."

+ Kirkus 22:591 S 1 '54 360w

"Skillful and rather horrifying period piece. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 79:1324 O 1 '54 90w

"The novel has verve and interest, and Miss Davenport's ability to create a believable world never fails her." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 24 '54 700w

"The author has history on her side when she says that such stories do happen. But for all the dependence of the Holt brothers on each other, they are even more dependent upon the plot for their survival. Subtlety is not a strong point with Mrs. Davenport, but she is a master at plotting the improbable. 'My Brother's Keeper' should appeal to readers who want to 'escape' into a world even more abnormal than the one we live in." David Dempsey
N Y Times p5 O 24 '54 470w

"Mrs. Davenport's work is fascinating for about two-thirds of its length, but once the brothers have closed themselves into their disintegrating home and yielded to their madness, the account becomes—perhaps understandably—monotonous."

+ New Yorker 30:135 O 30 '54 180w

"Except for long, dull passages dealing with Randall, Miss Davenport holds the reader. But many will wonder, not about the story itself, but about her manner of writing it. Has she transformed her raw material, which is the sensational death of the Holt brothers, into tragedy, as no doubt it was her intention to do? And is the cleverly devised plot revitalized and reinvigorated by her imagination, or does it remain like a picture puzzle, taken apart and skillfully fitted together again?" J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 14 '54 700w

"'My Brother's Keeper,' morbid and melodramatic, is a triumphant tour de force of macabre inventiveness. . . . [The book] may not be literature but it lives in spite of its contrivances; it remains dramatic rather than clinical. It achieves both pathos and horror. Realities of feeling in the midst of fantasies of behavior. There are profounder, richer novels, to be sure, but few are as hypnotic in their content and their narrative flow. Here is an unforgettable experience." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 37:16 O 23 '54 650w

Time 64:120 N 8 '54 230w

"Mrs. Davenport is a capable storyteller with a love of colourful scenes and a good command of the means whereby characters are brought to life and plots made probable. The book's faults in execution are few but the very ingenuity with which useless objects are made to accumulate about the brothers reminds the reader that the author's initial problem was an exotic one, and something a little too calculated imparts a mechanical quality to the whole effect."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p669 O 22 '54 270w

DAVENPORT, PHILIP. Voyage of Waltzing Matilda. 232p il $3.75 Dodd

910.45 Waltzing Matilda (cutter). Voyages and travels [54-228]

"Waltzing Matilda is a sturdy forty-six-foot sailing cutter with one tall mast fifty-three feet above the deck. She is twelve feet wide and has about twenty feet of her length below decks—about the size of a small room—devoted to living space." (p 17) In this book, the author, his young wife, his brother, and two friends set sail from Sydney, Australia late in October 1950. The book recounts their adventures across the South Pacific, north thru the Atlantic to a final landfall in England in August, 1951.

Booklist 51:37 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:3 O '54 20w

"Mr. Davenport has chosen a good pattern for his book. Too many records of small-boat voyages are cluttered with storm and stress and repetitious detail. Here, however, these things are treated lightly; incidents and emergencies that put the wind up among the crew are laughed off." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p33 S 12 '54 450w

Reviewed by Richard Murphy

Spec p372 O 2 '53 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p764 N 27 '53 500w

DAVID, PAUL THEODORE, and others. Presidential nominating politics in 1952. 5v ea $3.50; set $17.50 Johns Hopkins press

324.23 Presidents (U.S.)—Election 54-8008

"Three years ago the directors of the American Political Science Association decided to peer beneath the surface of the Presidential nominating process. . . . With the financial assistance of the Stern Family Fund, and with technical and administrative help from the Brookings Institution, they put the process under professional and scientific scrutiny from beginning to end. . . . The results of this research project have now been brought together in a five-volume set under the title, 'Presidential Nominating Politics in 1952.' The first volume, 'The National Story,' is devoted to a discussion of the nominating process as a whole, broad analyses of the two conventions and a summary review of pre-convention activity in the states. The other four volumes contain in regional groupings—the Northeast, the South, the Middle West and the West—detailed accounts of what went on in each state and territory from the political climate at the beginning of 1952, through the selection of convention delegates, to the performance of these delegations on the floor and in secret caucuses at the conventions." N Y Times

Reviewed by W. E. Binkley

Ann Am Acad 296:170 N '54 600w

Reviewed by David Denker

Current Hist 27:260 O '54 950w

"Enormous and valuable cooperative undertaking. . . . A unique source book."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:673 Jl '54 70w

"Recommended as a reference work for special collections, university and larger public libraries." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:1513 S 1 '54 130w

Reviewed by V. O. Key

New Repub 130:24 Je 14 '54 950w

"Three years ago the American Political Science Association decided to make a definitive study of how our presidential candidates are nominated. . . . The result, set forth in this five-volume report, is a double triumph. First, this is unquestionably the most detailed and revealing picture yet given us of the whole presidential nominating process. Then, the success with which the 'case studies' of several hundred different observers have been merged into one comprehensive whole marks this report as a landmark in co-operative research, opening up exciting new possibilities for other studies of similar scope." Samuel Lubell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 29 '54 550w

"Close students of political affairs may not find much in 'The National Story'—the key volume of the set—that is strikingly new. Anyone who by opportunity or necessity read or watched closely as the multi-million-word drama of 1952 unfolded, is familiar in at least a general way with most of its highlights. The enormous value of the book, however, lies in the fact that what was, at the time, about as distracting as a twenty-ring circus, is here organized and synthesized into comprehensible proportions." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p1 My 30 '54 1100w

Reviewed by Sidney Hyman

Sat R 37:16 My 8 '54 900w

DAVIDSOHN, ISSER, and others. Soap manufacture. (Fats and oils ser) 2v v 1 525p il $12.50 Interscience

668.1 Soap

(53-7160)

"Covers the theoretical principles of soap manufacture, raw materials of soap manufacture, practical soap-boiling processes, and special soap products." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 31:4241 O 12 '53 20w

"In spite of its many shortcomings, Volume I should be on the bookshelf of everyone seriously concerned with soap manufacture, and if Volume II proves to be at least as well done, it too should fill a niche on that same shelf." L. B. Smith

+ — Chem & Eng N 32:3378 Ag 23 '54 550w

"This book is an attractive addition to the Fats and Oils Series. The type is a little smaller than comfortable for easy reading and the theoretical considerations with which the book opens are not conducive to light reading. Liberal use of tabular information, however, will make the book a frequently used reference volume. Subject matter is presented in a logical manner." G. W. McBride

+ — Chem Eng 61:395 Ap '54 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:95 N '53

DAVIDSON, GLADYS. Ballet biographies. 334p il $3.25 British bk. centre

927.933 Ballet. Dancers

Short biographical sketches of artists of the ballet who have reached prominence during the last half century. Includes 73 sketches. Indexes.

Booklist 50:143 D 1 '53

"A workable dictionary of highly personal biographies." George Freedley

+ Library J 78:2222 D 15 '53 30w

DAVIDSON, GLADYS. Standard stories from the operas [il. from pictures by L. R. Brightwell, and photos. of composers]. rev ed in 1v 968p $3.25 British bk. centre

782.1 Opera—Stories, plots, etc.

A fourth reprinting of an English book which first appeared in 1944 in two volumes. Contains stories of 154 operas, each told so that the libretto can be followed; short biographies of composers; and an index which gives librettists, dates, and places of first performances of operas.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 15 '53 40w

Reviewed by Harold Rogers

Christian Science Monitor D 11 '53 30w

"The fourth reprinting of what is, apparently, an old British favorite. With so many American collections of opera plots on the market, I doubt that our readers would either take to the device of telling the stories in the past tense . . . or put up with the style. However, there are 154 operas including some hard-to-find titles." C. K. Miller

Library J 78:2219 D 15 '53 100w

DAVIDSON, JOSEPH LEROY. Lotus Sutra in Chinese art; a study in Buddhist art to the year 1000. 105p 41pl $5 Yale univ. press 709.51 Art, Buddhist. Art—China. Saddharma-pundarika 54-5604

"The Assistant Professor of the history of art at Yale authors this volume of the Yale Historical Publications, VIII in the History of Art Series. Problem is twofold, 'to interpret the art itself in terms of the religious background . . . and to interpret this background in terms of the art objects.' Caves and bronzes, paintings and carvings, panels and symbols are studied in detail and well presented to the reader so as to incite to detailed study. Short title list of books, articles and periodicals: bibliographical notes on Buddhist literature, philosophy, and religion, on history and historical materials, and on art." Library J

DAVIDSON, J. L.—Continued

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 79:1516 S 1 '54 90w

"Mr. Davidson has rendered a great service in bringing together all of the important published materials that bear upon his subject, both in words and pictures. His scholarly use of texts written in Sanskrit, Chinese, and Japanese, as well as European languages, is truly impressive." J. G. Mahler
+ Sat R 37:24 Je 19 '54 700w

DAVIDSON, KENNETH R., and GUSTAVSON, LEALAND R. Winning badminton. 150p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.34 Badminton (game) 52-8290

Material in this textbook is divided between two sections—one for the beginner and one for the advanced player. A third section deals with organizing badminton: instruction in schools and formation of clubs.

Booklist 50:139 D 1 '53

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 79:67 Ja 1 '54 20w

DAVIDSON, LOUIS BENNETT, and DOHERTY, EDWARD JOSEPH. Strange crimes at sea; il. by Gordon Grant, and with an introd. by William McFee. 273p $3.95 Crowell

910.4 Crime and criminals. Pirates 53-8430

Stories of crimes committed at sea. "Here we have murder, mutiny, piracy, slavery, man's cruelty to man. The mutiny on the 'Bounty,' and on the 'Potemkin' are major chapters as is the account of Jean Lafitte, pirate and patriot, hero and villain of New Orleans." (Library J)

Booklist 50:416 Jl 1 '54

"The authors have done a skilful job of re-creating strange crimes at sea." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ja 31 '54 150w

"The simplification and dramatization lend a certain theatricality to incidents in which the facts are melodramatic enough and may not please the serious maritime student but there's a sufficiency of high seas and fore-castle adventuring here."

Kirkus 21:752 N 15 '53 140w

"A tabloid of sea crime for casual reader, not recommended as ■ contribution to knowledge." H. A. Wooster

Library J 79:140 Ja 15 '54 90w

"Despite the over-simplifications that result from compression and some minor errors (such as confusing the dates of Trafalgar and Waterloo), 'Strange Crimes at Sea' has drama and movement, as well as ■ variety of misdeed and mishap to suit every taste." H. W. Baehr
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Ek R p4 Ja 17 '54 550w

"It is not possible to quarrel with the basic material, but this reader takes exception to the authors' method of overdramatizing stark facts which call for no literary hyperbole." W. B. Hayward

N Y Times p21 F 28 '54 300w

"The authors have written their book popularly rather than in the more scholarly fashion that appeals to the dyed-in-the wool specialist on either the sea or crime. Without sensationalizing, they have nevertheless written this in a semifiction style, complete with bits of dialogue and the like, to make it 'easier' reading." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 21 '54 650w

"Because the authors have tried conscientiously to squeeze every last drop of blood out of their material, their tales are all action and very little strangeness. What mystery they convey is mostly due to the fact that they seem totally unconcerned with the motivations of their seagoing felons. The result is a colorful but sometimes confused chronicle." T. E. Cooney

+ — Sat H 37:68 Ja 23 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 260w

DAVIE, DONALD. Purity of diction in English verse. 211p $3 Oxford

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism. English language—Diction 53-13167

"Donald Davie [is] an Irishman from Trinity College, Dublin. . . Davie begins with ■ re-examination of the currently unfashionable late-eighteenth-century poets. Acknowledging ours as an age of romantic (extravagant) diction and granting that sort of diction its own merits, he asks if there are not certain pleasures in poetry for which we have forgotten to look. . . After a careful and rewarding examination of many examples, Davie evolves a definition and a theory of pure, or 'chaste,' diction." Nation

"Davie is not an original critic in the sense that he generates new concepts of literature. What distinguishes him is the forceful and pleasant presence of mind in all he does. If he is the child of the new—not necessarily New—criticism, he is also one of those who bring it to maturity."

+ Nation 177:296 O 10 '53 300w

"As I want to attack this book I had best say at the start that it is worth attacking, and contains important truths, and is in line with other influential writers. Mr. Davie is right in emphasizing that poems of earlier periods which we still admire were praised in their time for chastity and decorum of diction. . . Mr. Davie is right, too, when he breaks an obscure snobbery by praising some hymns, by Wesley; not only chaste and decorous in their diction, they are also urbane. He only throws this term in, but it shows, I think, the difficulty of reviving the old terms. . . As giving a social programme, Mr. Davie runs into a contradiction which he hardly recognises. If the urbanity of style possible till the late eighteenth century depended on a class culture and diction which then collapsed, so that the Romantics can't be blamed for losing it, then I can't see how he can ask modern poets to bring it back now." W. Empson

+ — New Statesman & Nation 44:724 D 13 '52 1000w

"It is a pity that Mr. Donald Davie, who is clearly a critic of promise and considerable achievement, did not postpone the publication of this book for a year or two. What he has given us is not so much a book as a series of separate chapters loosely tied to a theme. The reader who looks for a developing argument will eventually find it if he does some of the work that the author should have done for him, but he will also find himself tantalized by a sort of stimulating table-talk, never wholly off the point nor wholly on it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p90 F 6 '53 650w

DAVIE, EMILY, ed. Profile of America; an autobiography of the U. S. A; foreword by Charles A. Lindbergh; introd. by Louis Bromfield; picture ed. Bryan Holme. 415p $8.50 Crowell

973 U.S.—History—Sources. U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American 54-9161

"An anthology in ten sections made up of documents and selections covering the history of America from its beginnings to 1953. Section headings give an idea of the broad scope: Settling the new land; Government; Struggles:

religious, moral, economic; Spanning the continent; Agriculture and conservation; Achievements: inventions, discoveries, enterprise; War; Education; The American expression; As others see us." Library J

Booklist 51:148 D 1 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 30w

Reviewed by P. M. Angle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 14 '54 370w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 24 '54 250w

Kirkus 22:572 Ag 15 '54 300w

"Recommended for reference collections in small libraries; and circulation in larger collections." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 79:1885 O 15 '54 140w

"Despite the uneven character of the selections, there is plenty of fire and eloquence in this book. . . A word should be said about the rich illustrative material so brilliantly selected by Bryan Holme. The pictures and the photographs do as much as the text to recapture the best of the American spirit." R. B. Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 28 '54 650w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p7 O 31 '54 850w

"'Profile of America' does not pose any philosophical question, nor does it discuss them. Its function is more direct—to enlighten, to entertain, to stimulate the imagination. In all these respects it is a superb book." S. K. Padover

+ Sat R 37:36 N 6 '54 850w

Time 64:130 D 6 '54 40w

DAVIES, ARTHUR POWELL. Urge to persecute. 219p $2.75 Beacon press

973.92 Communism—U.S. Persecution 53-12285

The author is the minister of a Unitarian church in Washington, D.C. This book, based on his personal knowledge of current conditions in the capital, is an attempt "to try to understand the persecutions in the wider context—historical, psychological and moral—of the total crisis of the modern age."

Booklist 50:295 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:103 F '54 30w

Reviewed by E. M. Oboler

+ Library J 79:384 F 15 '54 130w

"Dr. Davies is a clergyman, committed to the religious point of view, but he obtrudes no dogma upon the reader. His diagnosis of this affliction is impeccable, and his therapy is certainly reasonable, even if one entertains some doubt as to its adequacy. The great value of this study is its demonstration that the persecution mania is, in fact, an affliction. . . In small compass Dr. Davies has supplied a treatise that every liberal should keep by him, partly as armament against reaction but partly as an immunizing agent against his own reactionary tendencies." G. W. Johnson

+ New Repub 130:18 F '54 800w

"As one puts down this call to 'a resurgent democracy'—a true Americanism—he is grateful that the current problem of persecution has been treated so ably from the perspective of high religion, prophetic ethics and pastoral responsibility—in other words, in the best tradition of the ministry." J. A. Pike

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 7 '53 450w

"The author combines his specific experience in Washington with his passion for preserving our traditional liberties in this tract for the times. It ought to have a salutary effect upon our public temper. To one reader at least the most interesting chapter of the book is the first, entitled 'The Climate of Fear.' . . The case histories are very illuminating. . . When Mr. Davies proceeds to analyze the nature and the causes of the malady from which the nation suffers he offers no novel or clarifying insights. . . Mr. Davies is least convincing when he undertakes to analyze the roots and the nature of modern political religions, whether Nazi or Communist." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p12 F 28 '54 600w

Social Educ 18:334 N '54 30w

DAVIES, GODFREY. Wellington and his army. 154p il $3 Huntington lib.

B or 92 Wellington, Arthur Wellesley, 1st duke of Great Britain. Army [54-4438]

"Using Wellington's dispatches, and such narratives of his officers and men as are available, Mr Davies describes the relations between the Duke, his officers, and men, and the conditions of life in the Army in the Peninsular War. He successfully contests the view that Wellington was aloof, cold, and unsympathetic." Manchester Guardian

"The seven chapters on Wellington scarcely fulfill all the expectations suggested by the title of the book; they do, however, contribute interesting human sidelights on the great captain who fought Napoleon and on the army he led. . . But his essays will interest a reader curious about the habits of life in the British army on the march before the nineteenth-century reforms and before war became the major enterprise of mass slaughter by mechanical devices it was destined to be in the twentieth century." W. T. Laprade

+ Am Hist R 60:160 O '54 240w

"Two main points emerge from this timely and important study. First, the defects of the British military system. . . Second, how essential to the history of the British Army is evidence of the kind here utilised. Only such evidence will enable military historians to ascertain the relations between officers and men which are vital in producing an army from a multitude of different individuals." Eric Robson

Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 19 '54 250w

"Future biographers of Wellington will always have to take respectful account of Mr. Davies's findings." R. B. McCallum

+ Spec p594 My 14 '54 280w

"[Davies'] aim throughout has been to reconcile and to understand rather than to apportion praise or blame. Never less than fair, he has succeeded admirably in his purpose. In some half-dozen chapters, each of absorbing interest, a great wealth of material, much of it contemporary, is marshalled and reviewed, and the character of the Duke as man and soldier is discussed again."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p227 Ap 9 '54 1000w

DAVIES, HUGH SYKES. Grammar without tears. 176p $2.75 Day

425 English language—Grammar 53-12768

"Attempts to supplant faulty traditional grammatical education with 'a more lively and living English.' Bibliographical note, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:59 D '53 10w

"A charming little book." Jim Walls

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 24 '54 200w

DAVIES, RHYS. Painted king. 250p $3.50 Doubleday

54-7318

This new novel by a Welsh author, is laid in London depicting the life of the musical-comedy set. The hero is actor, composer and producer of a series of popular plays; the heroine is a girl who lives in the same boarding house and becomes his helper and closest friend but not his wife.

"A phenomenon that has vanished from the American scene, this will probably be much too heavy grease paint for the domestic popularity, and will not noticeably advance the author's name here."

Kirkus 22:246 Ap 1 '54 180w

DAVIES, RHYS—Continued

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 79:1321 J1 '54 40w

"An entertaining unromantic story." H. I.A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 23 '54 70w

"Very sharp in its perceptions, 'The Painted King' is faintly derisive and a little fatalistic in its approach. After all, people are as they are. Obviously Mr. Davies has had the keenest amusement—which his readers will share with him—in observing and evaluating some of them in 'The Painted King.'" F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 6 '54 500w

"An entertaining and somewhat raffish story of two men and a girl." John Nerber
N Y Times p25 Je 6 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 130w

"It is a familiar spectacle: the gifted interpreter of a popular fashion, the devoted spinster companion. What makes it a little unreal is that Mr. Rhys Davies seems to take these people as seriously as they take themselves."

Times [London] Lit Sup p229 Ap 9 '54 150w

DAVIS, ADELLE. Let's eat right to keep fit [foreword by W. D. Currier]. 322p $3 Harcourt

641.1 Nutrition. Diet 54-6390

"Authoritative, common-sense guide to basic principles of nutrition, with concluding chapters on national health. Table of food analysis." (Bookmark) Index.

Booklist 51:6 S 1 '54

Bookmark 13:233 J1 '54 20w

"Mrs. Davis is experienced, firm but non-faddist and this is sound advice for sound bodies."

+ Kirkus 22:263 Ap 1 '54 120w

"Recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 79:1312 J1 '54 210w

Wis Lib Bul 50:204 O '54

DAVIS, BEN ARTHUR. Daylilies and how to grow them; regional chapters by Stanley E. Saxton [and others]. 149p il $3.50 Tupper
635.93 Hemerocallis 54-6408

Discusses all phases of growing daylilies in the United States. Four regional chapters are devoted to successful growing in the Northwest, the Middle West, the Northeast, and Florida. Glossary. List of commercial growers. Index.

"Delightful book." A. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 4 '54 80w

"Down-to-earth, authoritative and thoroughly practical volume."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 13 '54 80w

"A down-to-business book for gardeners who really want to work at daylily growing and enjoy the fruits of their trouble."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 30 '54 40w

DAVIS, BURKE. They called him Stonewall; a life of Lt. General T. J. Jackson, C.S.A. 470p il maps $5 Rinehart

B or 92 Jackson, Thomas Jonathan

54-7921

Biography of Stonewall Jackson which begins with his presiding over the execution of John Brown. "It skips ahead to the Valley campaign where Jackson first showed his abilities, then retreats to his early life, and finally transcribes the events between his transfer to Richmond until his death at Chancellorsville, a death which literally left the South with bowed heads and tear-filled eyes." (Kirkus) Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 20w

Reviewed by R. P. Basler

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 17 '54 470w

"Here is a good, solid book, and a necessary one too. Jackson still appears as a rather shadowy figure—but there is not enough biographical data or, for that matter, enough life outside the brief Stonewall military career to make anything else. Those who want to know the final reasons for Jackson's fame will find them in Mr. Davis's pages. They consist mostly of campaigns, tactics and strategy. Such materials can make professionally dull reading. Mr. Davis, who is a novelist, has—without overstepping the bounds of fact—made them extraordinarily alive." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '54 900w

"A completely fascinating and stirring record."

+ Kirkus 22:466 J1 15 '54 220w

"For special collections, university and larger public libraries." James Heslin

+ Library J 79:1496 S 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 179:266 S 25 '54 50w

"Taking his stance a comfortable distance this side of idolatry, a young North Carolina newspaper man and novelist named Burke Davis has given us the first full-dress biography of Stonewall Jackson since Colonel Henderson's classic study written upward of half a century ago. If he has not found it necessary to revise any of Colonel Henderson's major findings, Mr. Davis has at least produced a vivid picture of one of the most completely fascinating men in the whole Civil War story." Bruce Catton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 19 '54 750w

"Books about Southern generals seldom err on the objective side, and this one is no exception. Most of the references listed by the author are published works written from a Southern viewpoint, and his battle descriptions would sometimes have profited from consultation of the official records which make this conflict the best documented war in history. . . . On the whole, Mr. Davis has done an excellent job of bringing Stonewall Jackson to life. Comments from contemporary letters and diaries are his best material." Lynn Montross

+ N Y Times p6 S 19 '54 950w

"The attitude that the Confederacy really won the Civil War spiritually, and it's too damn bad the victory was not completed in the physical domain, has never been better expressed than in Burke Davis's new biography, 'They Called Him Stonewall.' It is intensely, almost excruciatingly partisan—and just as intensely interesting. For the first time Jackson emerges as a person, something more than a heroic plaster figure on which a series of eccentricities was rather inexplicably glued." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 37:15 S 25 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 24 '54 600w

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. The newcomer. 216p $2.75 Lippincott

54-6100

When Chick Trotter's family moved to a new town, Chick only dimly foresaw what was in store for him. This is an account, told in the first person, of how Chick tried and failed to win a place for himself, and how, when he followed his father's advice "to relax," he finally succeeded.

Booklist 50:277 Mr 15 '54

+ Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 30w

"Davis is an old hand, who also has edited a selection of stories about boys. It grieves me to offer what may well be a minority report about 'The Newcomer.' Promising as the material is, the handling of it impresses me as synthetic, both in plotting and in psychology. He has chosen the artificial when the authentic lies at hand." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 14 '54 300w

"High motivations have lifted 'The Newcomer' above the ruck of similarly based stories. I believe it will have a place on that not over-populated shelf of our best-loved books." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 13 '54 290w

Kirkus 21:801 D 15 '53 240w

"With tender understanding, Clyde Brion Davis writes of the confusion and suffering of a wholly likable boy who finds himself rejected by the herd. For the reader, there is humor and laughter in Chick's efforts to extricate himself from the successive maze of mistakes, but beneath the humor and laughter, there is the poignancy of the boy's desperation and loneliness. Mr. Davis gets under the skin."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 28 '54 170w

"Children, that unknown race who share our homes, are extremely tricky to write about. To write as a child, in the first person singular, is even more difficult. Clyde Brion Davis, attempting this feat, has achieved a very fair measure of success." Elizabeth Janeway

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 14 '54 550w

"Some years ago, Mr. Davis in his 'The Great American Novel' wrote what in the opinion of many is the best novel yet written about a newspaperman. In it he displayed a marvelous ear and a remarkable sense of character. These talents are, I think, less evident in the present work, for Henry does and says a number of things which seem out of character and the style slips every now and then into a labored cuteness. But as a study in the strategy of conformity and as a portrait of the middle-class mid-American's psyche, 'The Newcomer' is convincing and valuable." K. S. Davis

+ — Sat R 37:16 Mr 6 '54 650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:209 O '54

DAVIS, ELISABETH LOGAN. Mothers of America; the lasting influence of the Christian home [introd. by Allen Nevins]. 191p $2.50 Revell

920 Women in the U.S. Woman—Biography 54-7999

Nineteen short biographies of the mothers of famous Americans. Partial contents: Roxana Foote Beecher and Harriet Porter Beecher; Susan Wright; Otelia Compton; Louise Abigail Mayo; Elizabeth Craig McBride; Olive Agnes Bunche and Grandmother Johnson; Anna Stoker Reuther; Ida Stover Eisenhower; "Whistler's Mother".

Bookmark 13:233 J1 '54 30w

"Although it was doubtless issued to catch the Mother's Day trade, this book is inspiring any time." Mary Hornaday

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '54 130w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 90w

DAVIS, ELMER HOLMES. But we were born free. 229p $2.75 Bobbs

973.92 Communism—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Civilization 54-6057

"It will not surprise the millions of listeners to Elmer Davis's news broadcasts that the eminent commentator is an outstanding champion of freedom and liberty. His is a fighting book—a forthright attack on McCarthy, McCarran, and others who under the guise of opposing Communism are whittling away at the free way of life which is America's greatest contribution to the world." Library J

"This is a hard-hitting and exhilarating book: crisply written, humorous, full of quietly murderous thrusts at the heresy-sniffers, the doublethinkers, the would-be thought-controllers, the cowardly conformists, and at absolutists of various stripes." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:84 Ap '54 350w

Booklist 50:256 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:127 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by Norman Found

Canadian Forum 34:70 Je '54 150w

Reviewed by Willard Edwards

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 1 '54 400w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis

Christian Science Monitor p9 F 23 '54 380w

"Davis says annoyance prompted most of his observations. They seem more inspired by righteous wrath, and spiced with his own engaging dry humor. It all makes for some of the best reading on a melancholy subject that's been seen for a long while—if at all." P. V. Farrell

+ Commonweal 59:561 Mr 5 '54 460w

"Mr. Davis takes the offensive in the fight for freedom of the mind. His six essays are often amusing, occasionally sarcastic, and always interesting."

+ Current Hist 26:317 My '54 130w

Foreign Affairs 33:160 O '54 60w

"The writing is characterized by sanity, clarity, wit, and courage—sanity at a time when phrenetic politicians set the standards, clarity in an age of confusion, razor-sharp wit opposing the heavy humorlessness of those Mr. Davis rightly regards as enemies of the free spirit. . . . The book will be painful to both Communists and their professed opponents who are so eager to adopt totalitarian tactics; but Americans who treasure truth and love freedom will appreciate its wisdom and be given fresh courage to stand up for the traditional American values." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:378 F 15 '54 170w

"Aside from its enormous importance as a reaffirmation of the value which Elmer Davis represents for all of us, his book will be chiefly useful for its first long chapter, Through the Perilous Night, in which the record of the attack on the freedom of the mind, and thus on our society, based on freedom of the mind, is set forth in masterly fashion." Archibald MacLeish

+ Nation 178:202 Mr 6 '54 1150w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 130:18 F 15 '54 600w

"The book has a special value in being perhaps the best record we shall have of the way Mr. Davis habitually talks. Here we can see, frozen in type, the style that has made him one of the most popular and respected of all radio commentators." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 14 '54 1400w

"The essays or chapters in this book were evidently written at different times and for different occasions, but they hang together. In essence, they are an appeal to stand our ground against arrogance, against ignorance, against envy—against, perhaps, the pressure of 15 to 20 per cent of the population who do not so much hate communism as they fear that the 'principles on which this Republic was founded and has been operated will not bear examination.'" R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 F 14 '54 750w

"The experience of reading 'But We Were Born Free' is memorable; it is the high fidelity of the publishing world. And the same voice that in 1940 used to steady us at five minutes to nine, quieting our goose pimples, now has the opposite effect—it is the voice that stirs us with warnings of internal defeats perhaps more ruinous than war itself. As clear as the sound of his voice is the sound, in this book, of his singleness of purpose." E. B. White

+ New Yorker 30:109 F 20 '54 2100w

Reviewed by J. C. Bruce

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 14 '54 800w

"I live in the same cold and comfortless world as Elmer Davis, but I console myself with the knowledge that it cannot be as bad as I fear, because Davis can still do battle—he is outnumbered, but he isn't silenced. . . . The rest of the book hasn't quite the urgency of the first part, but it tells us what kind of man this is who is so handsomely leading us in the fight for freedom." Gilbert Seldes

+ Sat R 37:13 F 13 '54 1400w

DAVIS, E. H.—Continued

Reviewed by H. L. Dante

Social Educ 18:287 O '54 100w

"American readers will find in these 'sermons on the need of defending the freedom of the mind,' as Mr. Davis calls them, an urbane and witty defense of freedom, not lacking in righteous indignation. Foreign readers will find here a point of view and an analysis of the commotion in the United States not always available in the more ephemeral commentary in the press."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:185 Je '54 260w
Wis Lib Bul 50:72 Mr '54

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE. Another morgue heard from. 188p $2.75 Doubleday

54-9844

Detective story.

"Smoothly diverting." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 14 '54 70w

Kirkus 22:504 Ag 1 '54 60w

"The libretto is scored for long ominous drum rolls, nervous oboes and Cole's fife obligato. Mr. Davis, the producer and author, is a rather earnestly artful dodger and he sustains a pretty tricky course for all that he finishes on his face. Fitfully amusing." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 17 '54 80w

"Easy and agreeable readability." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p49 O 17 '54 60w

"Easy as ever, in Davis style, but a bit flat and somber. B minus." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 31 '54 100w

"Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:39 N 27 '54 20w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA RIKER. Hearts in trim. 216p $2.75 Doubleday

54-6782

A junior novel in which the central characters are Serena, still called Squeak by her family, altho she is sixteen; and Cliff, whom she thought she hated. A legacy of books brings the two into a more understanding friendship.

Booklist 50:422 J1 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 1 '54 120w

"A warm family story, with vivid characterizations and delightful scenes and incidents woven through the threads of plot." E. C. I.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13 '54 120w

"A book that brings a satisfying maturing into clear relief."

+ Kirkus 22:200 Mr 15 '54 150w

"The book business is good and the family relations healthy, but the characters lack individuality. Fair, in comparison with other stories of this kind." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 70w

"The main theme, Squeak's slowly changing appreciation of Cliff, and his of her, is well handled. And Mrs. Davis is at her best when describing a book-loving girl whose joy in the library is that of a reader, not a bookseller, with her various quotations, the title being taken from one of the most memorable. A gay story on the surface, with many realistic details of family life, it has sound character values." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 16 '54 180w

"Lavinia Davis, always a popular story-teller, here provides a blend of mystery, romance, and teen-age problems that is sure to delight the older girls among her audience." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times p12 S 5 '54 200w

DAVIS, LOYAL EDWARD. Go in peace. 247p $3.50 Putnam

54-10487

Story of an elderly physician who comes face to face with the question of the moral basis of euthanasia when the woman he has loved all his life pleads for an easy death. The scene of the story is in a small midwestern town at the turn of the century.

Reviewed by Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 17 '54 400w

Kirkus 22:544 Ag 15 '54 180w

"Recommended as good propaganda for frequent medical examinations, as well as for its subject matter popular with many public library readers, especially the women who want romance, clinical descriptions, and tears." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:2329 D 1 '54 150w

"Dr. Davis has written a wholesome and believable story, whose dénouement is sensible, logical, and, in a sense, as inevitable as it is moving." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p43 O 17 '54 250w

DAVIS, THOMAS, and DAVIS, MRS LYDIA (HENDERSON). Doctor to the Islands; with ill. by Tom Davis. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 331p $5 Little

B or 92 Cook islands. Medicine—Rarotonga 54-5145

In this account of their first six years of married life, Dr Tom and his wife Lydia write alternate chapters. The story begins with the marriage in a New Zealand Registry office of the descendant of Polynesian royalty and Welsh sailors, and a New Zealand girl. It continues with the story of Tom's work in Rarotonga and his wife's struggles with home keeping and her work as his helper. It ends with their trip to Boston, in a small boat, the forty-five foot ketch, Miru.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:80 S '54 360w

Booklist 51:38 S 15 '54

"You will find two books in one, in 'Doctor to the Islands,' a perennially appealing doctor story with a south sea setting and the report of an extraordinary sea voyage. Either one would be outstanding. Together they make quite a package." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 5 '54 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"A vibrant and inspiring example of modern pioneering."

+ Kirkus 22:376 Je 15 '54 290w

"A tremendous story of courage, conviction, and charity." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1596 S 15 '54 100w

"This book is an unusual and successful form of husband-wife collaboration. . . . The resultant book is a charming job, particularly Lydia's chapters. Tom's chapters are an astute sociological picture of life in the South Sea Islands." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 22 '54 900w

Reviewed by Walter Karig

N Y Times p6 Ag 22 '54 650w

"In the end, you find that in spite of some rather pedestrian writing you've read a personal record of a unique sort. And you will have met two young people you like, admire for their steadfastness of purpose, and wish well." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 16 '54 500w

"The writing is no great shakes, but a strong, clean healthy wind blows through it." Robert Payne

+ Sat R 37:25 Ag 21 '54 800w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Spring'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 360w

Wis Lib Bul 50:207 O '54

DAVISON, VERNE ELBERT. Homemade fishing; bass and trout waters you can build yourself; il. [by] Wallace Hughes. 205p $4.50 Stackpole co.

639.3 Fish ponds. Fish culture 53-11204

A discussion of the best means for making and caring for farm and ranch cold or warm water ponds. Covers selection of site, construction of pond, the kinds, stocking, feeding, catching, and water-weed control, and laws. No index.

Booklist 50:393 Je 15 '54

"Any fisherman who owns land with a water supply should purchase this small book. He may well find out that he has been missing out on considerable enjoyment." G. S. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 11 '54 120w

DAWSON, CARLEY. Sign of the seven seas; il. by Lynd Ward. 287p $2.50 Houghton

53-10983

A sequel to Mr Wicker's Window (Book Review Digest 1952). In this volume Chris Mason goes on a long voyage to Acapulco, and learns much magic, with which he helps his friends.

"Rich story-weaving here has been embroidered with glowing drawings by Lynd Ward."

+ Kirkus 22:637 S 15 '54 160w

"The same audience which enjoyed 'Mr. Wicker's Window' will read this sequel with equal gusto, though it is doubtful that they will consider the love interest an advance. Lynd Ward's lavish illustrations fit the story perfectly." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p26 S 19 '54 140w

"While descriptions are adequate, Lynd Ward's wonderful illustrations of characters and events are a delightful addition. The imaginative theme of the story will attract many—but the great number of characters, the complicated plot and the author's choice of some difficult and unfamiliar words . . . may discourage all but the best readers aged 11 and up." Barbara Dillon

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 14 '54 110w

DAWSON, CHRISTOPHER HENRY. Medieval essays. 271p $3.50 Sheed

940.1 Middle ages. Civilization, Medieval 54-6353

"Dawson, now 64, has spent the last 40 years examining how Christianity got itself into Europe's bloodstream, and how and why it made the body grow. He has focused his studies on Europe's Middle Ages, a period that many European historians skip over lightly. Although a Roman Catholic himself, Dawson does not take the task of the conventional Catholic medieval apologist, who regards the period as a happy but vanished Golden Age when there were no Protestants around. For Historian Dawson, the Middle Ages can be studied only as a fusion of religion and culture, a 'long 1,000-year process' that formed Western culture and continues to influence it. Medieval Essays is a handy sampler of Dawson's view of history." Time

"Competent critics have repeatedly given high praise to Mr. Dawson. They are justified once again. We note in these pages his encyclopedic knowledge; his gift for revealing the hidden significance of an epoch or a movement; his quaint, but startling, manifestation of rare mental breadth." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 179:75 Ap '54 450w

"To explore these Medieval Essays by Christopher Dawson is to be struck again, both by the learning of the man, and by the full vision of the patrimony of Christian culture. The present volume confirms Dawson in his place as the foremost medievalist in the English speaking world. Throughout his life, Dawson has been blessed with a rare gift of synthesis and has had the good sense to avoid the aridity of academic specialization. This union of genius and catholic scholarship has put us all in his debt, a debt increased in no small measure by this collection of studies." F. D. Wilhelmssen

+ Commonweal 60:274 Je 18 '54 1250w

"The essays, some old, some new, cover a wide field both in time—from Constantine to Langland—in space—from Syria to Ireland—and in subject—from mystical theology to feudalism, and from monasticism to the troubadours. Everywhere the same impression is given of learning and sane judgment." David Knowles

+ Spec p23 Ja 1 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 370w

"[Dawson] writes with the smooth mixture of clarity, scholarship and happy metaphor that characterizes good British historians, and the imperturbability of a man content with a limited audience."

+ Time 63:104 F 15 '54 1150w

"Most of these remarkable essays were first published many years ago, but their reissue is to be welcomed if only for the fact that Mr. Christopher Dawson is one of the most stimulating and erudite exponents of the subject to which they are all devoted."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p39 Ja 15 '54 550w

DAY, ALAN CHARLES LYNN. Future of sterling. 227p $2 Oxford

332.4 Money [54-3842]

"A rather pessimistic estimate of the prospects of the sterling area and of sterling as an international currency." Foreign Affairs

"Well-written and provocative book." K. M. Wright

+ Am Econ R 44:977 D '54 1000w

Foreign Affairs 33:158 O '54 20w

"Mr. Day's gloomy little volume may be regarded as a healthy corrective to complacency and wishful thinking. . . He holds an unacceptable dogma which recurs in a number of places and warps much of his argument. . . There is nothing in economic theory which justifies this dogma. In dealing with current and recent problems Mr. Day shows much more acuity, and his reasonings are often interesting and worthy of attention. The last part of his book is the best."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p141 F 26 '54 500w

DAY, DONALD. Evolution of love. 522p $5.95 Dial press

301.424 Love, Sex 54-10536

Sketches the history of the relations between the sexes from Biblical times to the present.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 19 '54 600w

"A woman has said this all better in The Second Sex. Not recommended." R. B. Robertson

— Library J 79:1583 S 15 '54 150w

"Most of Mr. Day's sources are ribald writers like Petronius and Boccaccio, and his paraphrases of them rarely come within hailing distance of the originals, but in his last chapters he becomes more thoughtful, and has some unexpectedly sensible things to say about modern homosexuality and the sexual nature of kleptomania and shell shock."

+ New Yorker 30:194 N 6 '54 100w

DAY, MRS HELEN CALDWELL. Not without tears. 270p $3.50 Sheed

B or 92 Catholic action 54-11149

"This is the story of the founding of Blessed Martin House in Memphis, Tennessee, an interracial Catholic home which grew out of an interracial Catholic discussion group in Memphis. The author, a Negro and a convert to Catholicism, tells in simple and sincere language of the events in her own life and those of others, which led to the founding of this home." Library J

DAY, H. C.—Continued

"Not Without Tears is written in love and compassion, a serene use of suffering." M. C. Hughes

+ Commonweal 61:231 N 26 '54 550w

"Will appeal mainly to Catholics and to those vitally interested in interracial problems." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 79:2321 D 1 '54 140w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud). Italian visit. 77p $2.50 Harper

821

54-6286

"[The author] has caught in this narrative poem the magic that Italy has for men from colder climes, has captured in words the brilliance of Italy's art and the warmth and variety of her countryside." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:447 J1 15 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 1 '54 150w

"We owe Day-Lewis much for this happy fusion of the outward and the inward eye. His Italian visit is in a sense a rehabilitation of poetry." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 22 '54 450w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:1593 S 15 '54 100w

"It lacks the flash of the unforgettable line. To quote bits of it would be to do it an injustice, for its virtue is in its continuity and in the sense it gives of a mind at a thoroughly human exercise. It is, in modern terms, what Johnson called 'regular': its felicities are diffused, its breathing even." John Rosselli

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 3 '53 380w

Reviewed by John Ciardi

Nation 179:236 S 18 '54 20w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 45:153 F 7 '53 1000w

Reviewed by W. T. Scott

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 12 '54 270w

"This new book by C. Day Lewis, 'An Italian Visit,' is an attempt at a nouvelle in verse. The attraction of the poem, though, is that of a travel diary, not a nouvelle. Mr. Day Lewis is an admirable diarist. He is as well an easy conversationalist, a fine observer, and he can spell out the moods of ecstasy and regret. . . The present indicative, the past subjunctive contain Mr. Lewis' moods; he conjugates them brilliantly, a good grammarian of movement and of love." V. S. Pritchett

+ N Y Times p1 Je 27 '54 1100w

"Mr. Day Lewis shows his usual technical brilliance, together with some capable reporting, in this narrative poem in seven parts."

+ New Yorker 30:84 Ag 14 '54 100w

"A Neo-Romantic, Mr. Lewis writes readable contemporary poetry. Despite ■ wilful carelessness in execution, he has produced a poetic journal of what it means for ■ poet to be alive in this cold-war era." I. L. Salomon

+ Sat R 37:17 J1 24 '54 400w

Reviewed by H. W. Garrod

Spec p158 F 6 '53 1000w

"Popularity is an uncertain sign of achievement in poetry, but when we say that Professor Day Lewis's poem An Italian Visit is popular we mean first that it is as readable as prose—sometimes the rhythm makes it more readable—and it is full of extraneous interest. We do not mean that the poet has jettisoned his integrity in order to appeal to a wider audience. He appears, on the contrary, to have developed into full maturity the form of verse which he first used with success in A Time to Dance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 6 '53 2650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:207 O '54

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud). Whisper in the gloom. 244p $2.75 Harper

54-8944

Detective story.

Bookmark 14:9 O '54 10w

"Shrewdly concocted blend of exciting suspense and amusingly melodramatic capers." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:371 Je 15 '54 70w

"Mr. Blake cuts briskly from this set of characters to that one and then to yet another set, taking (or making) coincidences in his stride and sifting in all sorts of added attractions including a new romance for Nigel Strangeways, and sustains all of this at prodigious length." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 29 '54 170w

"One of the most entertaining suspense-pursuit novels in many seasons." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 29 '54 190w

"Entertaining." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:37 S 25 '54 20w

Spring'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 110w

"The Whisper in the Gloom is rather a Christmas cake of a tale, richly mixed with a double portion of murders, kidnapping, adventurous, intelligent little boys, and assassins, one of the last being a drug-addict; there are also a tycoon, his ex-principal-boy wife, an ex-Commando, a charming sculptress and a shady club proprietor. To these must be added an old house with a secret chamber. Even the late Edgar Wallace would hardly have ventured to bring so many old friends together in one book, but it must be admitted that Mr. Blake makes it continuously interesting and maintains the highest spirits throughout."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 3 '54 330w

DEAN, AMBER. Devil threw dice. 187p $2.75 Doubleday

54-9345

Detective story.

Kirkus 22:414 J1 1 '54 70w

"Cosily set, pleasing, observant, unpretentious diversion." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 19 '54 130w

"The book is so hopelessly ill-constructed, with a welter of plots and characters whose relations you begin faintly to grasp only after some hundred pages, that even the author's always agreeable treatment of upstate New York hardly saves it." Anthony Boucher

— + N Y Times p30 S 19 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 100w

"Too many streams of consciousness; too much writing. Rather confusing." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:64 O 2 '54 20w

DEAN, GORDON EVANS. Report on the atom; what you should know about the atomic energy program of the United States. 321p il $5 Knopf

539.76 Atomic energy

53-6849

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"A straightforward, popular but sober description of the major aspects of the atomic energy program. The chapters on Secrecy, Security and Spies, the International Atom, and atomic development behind the Iron Curtain are of particular importance to students of foreign affairs."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:331 Ja '54 50w

"Report on the Atom is a distinguished book by a man uniquely qualified to recount the story of atomic energy. To call it a book for everyone is merely to say that it can be read by the layman for its simple, scientific descriptions, by the scientist for its treatment of the atom's political consequences, and by everyone for its brave and brilliant exposition of mankind's fateful discovery."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p99 F 12 '54 550w

"Readable and authoritative, the book goes far toward filling the middle-ground void which the author points out has existed between the vast amount of highly technical literature and the equally abundant popular works."

+ U S Quartely BK R 10:129 Mr '54 240w
Wis Lib Bul 50:23 Ja '54

"An enlightened and informing book. Inescapably, one wonders how much of the book Mr. Dean wrote himself. One suppresses the doubt by concluding that it doesn't make any difference. The important things, when a high official is reviewing his stewardship, are the results he claims, the criticisms he makes, and the counsel he gives. One has to overlook certain arid patches of exposition that seem to come from old speeches. . . But all the matters of import in this book are clearly the considered judgments of Mr. Dean, effectively presented." R. S. Brown

+ Yale R n s 43:452 spring '54 750w

DEAN, JOSEPH. Hatred, ridicule or contempt; a book of libel cases. 271p $3.75 Macmillan (N Y)

347.5 Libel and slander 54-9386

Stories of a number of libel actions, collected from the records of English cases during the last century. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:312 Ap 15 '54

"Little fanfare here; this is for the serious armchair jurist."

+ Kirkus 22:96 F 1 '54 200w

"Once begun, this is a difficult book to set down; it is immensely entertaining." Percy Cradock

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:74 Ja 16 '54 600w

"My advice is to read the book. In addition to the intrinsic entertainment of the stories, the author gives a revealing insight into the operation of the English law of defamation that should be of great interest to American lawyers who are concerned with libel. I had a thoroughly good time as well as an instructive one reading this book. I can heartily recommend it." Newman Levy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 My 16 '54 600w

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p22 Ap 11 '54 500w

"Remarkably witty and informative. . . The author's intelligent selection of detail and his air of urbane detachment make them all absorbing reading."

+ New Yorker 30:152 Ap 10 '54 250w

DEAN, LEON W. White ox. (Ariel bk) 177p il $2.75 Farrar, Straus

Historical novel for teen-agers about Vermont in the Revolution. The hero is Ezra But-ton, one of the Green Mountain Boys.

"I recommend the book to boys of discernment and to librarians wishing to encourage well-conceived work." Edward Hungerford

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 4 '53 170w

"An unsatisfying attempt at a 'strong' novel."

— Kirkus 21:389 Jl 1 '53 200w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 21 '54 60w

"The phenomenal success of the Colonists at times gives an unreal quality to the action, but a note of authenticity is given by the language, rich in the pungent, homely speech of the men of the New Hampshire Grants. There are some novel elements of suspense and intrigue in this not otherwise surprising story." G. A. Woods

+ — N Y Times pt2, p14 N 15 '53 150w

DEAN, ROBERT GEORGE (GEORGE GRISWOLD, pseud). Red pawns. 194p $2.75 Dutton

54-8863

International intrigue in the Near East.

Kirkus 22:414 Jl 1 '54 60w

Library J 79:2259 N 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 5 '54 60w

"I'm afraid I still find Griswold's cryptic super-agent, Mr. Groode, painfully unreal—and here an unnecessary intruder into a book doing nicely without him." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p10 S 5 '54 50w

"Orthodox spy job." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:37 S 18 '54 10w

"The book is fast-paced, credible and exciting until the final lap when a deus ex machina appears to help Pepper extricate himself from dire straits, but the unlikely ending doesn't extinguish reader interest." J. J. N.

+ — Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 120w

DEAN, SIDNEY WALTER. All the way by water. 305p il $4.50 Funk, W.

797.14 Yachts and yachting. Canada—Description and travel 54-7789

Collection of magazine articles, written in the form of a log, covering the voyages made by the author and his wife in their 30-foot cruiser, Margot, in United States and Canada waters during the 1940s.

Booklist 50:413 Jl 1 '54

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 40w

Kirkus 22:260 Ap 1 '54 130w

"Made to order for all members of the happy fellowship of small-boat wanderers, wherever they may be." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 17 '54 500w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 13 '54 360w

DEAN, WILLIAM FRISHE. General Dean's story; as told to William L. Worden. 305p il $5 Viking

B or 92 Korean war, 1950—Prisoners and prisons 54-7569

"Shortly after his return from captivity in Korea, General William Dean sat down with William Worden and, so Mr. Worden tells us, proceeded to demonstrate 'an astonishing and almost frightening ability to recall, without props, every single thing that had happened in three years.' Mr. Worden recorded this narrative on tape and later, in preparing it for publication, found it necessary only to remove repetitious matter, leaving the bulk of the story unchanged and in the General's own words." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Chronology. Index.

"Captivity seems to bring out in men of great spirit an ability to observe human experience with a heightened curiosity and precision—with the result that, out of the boredom and horror of the prisoner's life, there have come books whose every detail is fraught with interest. General Dean's Story is another such document." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:80 Je '54 200w

Booklist 50:333; 357 My 1 '54; My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 50w

Reviewed by C. P. Stacey

Canadian Forum 34:117 Ag '54 130w

DEAN, W. F.—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 6 '54
350w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker
Christian Science Monitor p13 My 7
'54 550w

Foreign Affairs 33:169 O '54 20w

Kirkus 22:216 Mr 15 '54 240w

"General Dean is a true hero in the best sense of the word, and his is a story of courage which every American should read. Highly recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:984 My 15 '54 100w

"Out of these pages the General emerges as a very brave and very fair man, with a tremendous will to survive and little understanding of what went on in Rhee's Korea while he was its military governor. Mr. Worden admits that all he had to do in ghost-writing this book was to keep out the General's way, and but for a few lapses he has done this well."

+ Nation 178:447 My 22 '54 360w

"[The] literary method is not one, perhaps, which should be recommended for general use; but it has worked very well here, and the end product is a personal report of high interest, told in simple but vigorous language and characterized by candor and sincerity." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 9 '54
900w

"The product rings true in every tone. One feels that if General Dean were describing to his family what had happened to him and how he really felt about it, the tale would have been much the same, though it has profited by Mr. Worden's organizing skill. The result is that this is one of the warmest of books, though it treats of a bitterly cold ordeal. Its delightful humor, recurrent amid the recounting of excruciating personal experience, is worthy of an exalted spirit capable of seeing all things in proportion in any circumstance." S. L. A. Marshall

+ N Y Times p1 My 9 '54 1250w

"An interesting, competent, and straightforward piece of journalism, in which the mechanics of collaboration never become obtrusive."

+ New Yorker 30:144 My 11 '54 200w

"Showing through this personal story is the most intelligent and balanced account to date of the strange, fanatic mentality of the North Korean Communists." Jim Walls
San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 30
'54 700w

"The full quality of 'General Dean's Story' is savored slowly. It is first of all a fascinating narrative of what happened to America's most famous prisoner of war told fluently by a man who has evidently no interest but to remember truly. . . . The modesty of General Dean is matched by that of his literary collaborator. William Worden insists that his contribution has been little more than to remove the pauses and repetitions from the general's dictation. Whatever in fact Mr. Worden was called on to do, the collaboration is completely successful. There are no false notes of style or substance to interrupt the conversational flow of reminiscence." Gordon Harrison

+ Sat R 37:20 My 15 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54
150w

DEANE, ANTHONY CHARLES. World Christ knew; the social, personal and political conditions of His time. 119p $2 Mich. state college press

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography. Bible. N.T.—History of contemporary events 53-3410

"The first American edition of an English clergyman's explanation for laymen of the political, economic, social and religious conditions extant in Jesus' time and how these background factors influenced His manner of teaching. Simple, direct, and brief, with a bibliography of added material, this should be useful for both general reading and church and religious leaders." Booklist

Booklist 50:231 F 15 '54

"For those who would make further exploration into the period of early Christianity, especially its Jewish background [this] will be an especially valuable volume." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p46 O 25 '53 60w

DEANE, PHYLLIS. Colonial social accounting. (National institute of economic and social research. Economic and social studies) 360p il $9.50 Cambridge

330.9689 Rhodesia, Northern—Economic conditions. Nyasaland—Economic conditions. Income [54-7244]

"An effort to apply the methods of national income accounting to a colonial economy. Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland are used as case studies." Foreign Affairs

"Miss Deane has done excellent pioneering work in the very difficult field of national income and product in the African colonial territories. . . . It is a cogent, lucid, and searching exposition of the economic structure and growth factors and problems in primitive economies on which has been superimposed an advanced Western technology. In spite of Miss Deane's modest contention 'that this particular experiment has [not] done more than collect, sift and discuss the readily accessible evidence for two Central African economies,' it is evident that she has applied with perspicacity and clarity the conceptual apparatus of the national income approach to underdeveloped territories and has helped lay the foundation for further study in other areas leading to the eventual measurement and international comparison of real income and welfare." F. R. LaMacchia

+ Ann Am Acad 295:191 S '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 33:170 O '54 20w

DEANE-DRUMMOND, ANTHONY. Return ticket. 254p $3.50 Lippincott

940.548 Escapes. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons 54-6116

A British officer describes his imprisonments and escapes during World war II, one after a parachute drop into Italy, the other after the Arnheim drop.

Booklist 51:10 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:4 O '54 30w

"Straight adventure; exciting, well written." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 22 '54
190w

"An account which does not lack for robust activity, or high spirits."

+ Kirkus 22:461 Jl 15 '54 180w

Reviewed by Nigel Nicolson

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:538 O 31
'53 110w

"A professional officer, Colonel Deane-Drummond tells his true adventure story modestly and well. The high point is his account of the Arnheim affair—a tragedy that might have been a triumph."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p14 S 19
'54 120w

"This expert escaper tells the story of both his return-tickets and tells it modestly, without the faintest suggestion of glorying in his cleverness. You'll admire his resourcefulness, his courage, and his calm confidence that if an attempt doesn't work the first time another try may do it. One gathers, from reading the many books that have appeared about daring escapes during the war, that this is exactly the frame of mind an escaper ought to have but cannot always command." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 24 '54
550w

Reviewed by Ludovic Kennedy
Spec p601 N 20 '53 360w

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE (LOFFT). Book of nursery and Mother Goose rhymes. 192p il $5 Doubleday

Nursery rimes. Mother Goose 54-9838

"A good, comprehensive collection containing 376 rhymes, including some of the longer ones and many delightful unfamiliar ones." Library J

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 194:94 D '54 80w

Booklist 51:22 S 1 '54

"Illustrated with delicacy, humor and affection."

+ Bookmark 14:11 O '54 10w

"The book is generous in size and content, is beautifully made, with a cover jacket in gay colors. Dedicated to 'All children everywhere,' it will be welcomed by all children everywhere—and their mothers." R. E. Donlon
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 11 '54 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

Kirkus 22:431 J1 15 '54 290w

"This is an especially noteworthy edition of Mother Goose, satisfying in many ways. . . A book which will enhance any children's collection." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 79:2252 N 15 '54 50w

"For us, an excuse to reread so many traditional nursery rhymes is a delight. Here are all the rare words that a small listening child may not understand but which will recur with new meaning all through his life. Here are so many varied images hinting at a wider world. Here is casual, lyric fun that lets new light play on creatures, objects, people near at hand. Here are the seeds of true poetry." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p16 N 14 '54 300w

"All the familiar rhymes and many that are less well known are included; the abundance of illustrations in softly glowing color and black-and-white are representative of this artist's finest work." Eugenia Gerson

+ N Y Times pt2 p40 N 14 '54 40w

"In every sense, this is the biggest child's book of the season."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 14 '54 180w

Time 64:129 D 6 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:216 O '54

DEARING, CHARLES LEE. Industrial pensions. 310p $3.75; pa $2 Brookings inst.

331.25 Old age pensions 54-2214

"Analyzes the main forces that have recently accelerated the growth of industrial pensions. Describes the structure and operation of those programs, and presents an estimate of the number of industrial workers who may eventually be covered by the pension system." Chem & Eng N

"The study is a worthy representative of the high quality of research which we have come to expect from the Brookings Institution. Moreover, it is the best addition to the literature of industrial pensions that has appeared in a very long time." G. S. Watkins

+ Ann Am Acad 296:183 N '54 450w

Chem & Eng N 32:2423 Je 14 '54 40w

Christian Century 71:852 J1 14 '54 150w

"For the advanced student or specialist in the field. Large public libraries, college and special libraries will want." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 79:1519 S 1 '54 110w

"The result of exhaustive research, well documented and provided with numerous charts and reference tables, it should be of value to many people connected with the establishment of pension policies." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Je 11 '54 80w

DEASY, MARY. Corioli affair. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 304p $3.75 Little

54-5131

The romantic story of an American river boat captain and an Irish-American school teacher which ended in tragedy in 1884.

Booklist 50:380 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 179:395 Ag '54 200w

"This is Mary Deasy at her best; it surpasses even 'Devil's Bridge' in its awareness of stunning life forces." M. B. Snyder

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 23 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:211 Mr 15 '54 190w

"The novel is well conceived, the suspense is sustained to the end and the characterization a joy to read. Recommended for all libraries." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 79:859 My 1 '54 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 20 '54 170w

Reviewed by Charlotte Capers

+ N Y Times p22 My 23 '54 800w

"It might all have seemed worth while if Miss Deasy had managed to make the captain and his girl matter more than they do, but they are a cardboard pair, good for only a glance."

New Yorker 30:101 My 29 '54 70w

Springf'd Republican p8C J1 25 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:136 My '54

DE BEAUVOIR, SIMONE. See Beauvoir, S. de

DEBYE, PETER JOSEF WILLIAM. Collected papers. 700p $9.50 Interscience

530 Physics

54-7233

"Not a comprehensive collection of Professor Debye's writings—as the title implies—but a selection made by the author himself. Those papers, originally published in Dutch or in German, have been translated into English; hence the text of the whole volume is in English. Since the book contains the best works of one of the world's great theoretical physicists whose contributions have also greatly advanced physical chemistry, it is worthy of attention by both physicists and chemists. Unfortunately it is not an attractive volume. Most of the pages have been reproduced from typewritten copy, the lines of which were not justified. Mixed in with these ragged pages, are others photographed from journals in which papers written in English first appeared. The volume has no index." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:1267 Mr 29 '54 10w

"Those who have had the good fortune to sit in Dr. Debye's classes or heard his lectures will be delighted with this collective volume. Those who have not can perhaps experience the thrill by studying the book." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 61:355 J1 '54 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:45 My '54

DE CAMP, LYON SPRAGUE. Lost continents; the Atlantis theme in history, science, and literature. 362p $5 Gnome press

398.23 Atlantis. Geographical myths 54-7253

Begins with the story of Atlantis, in its first known form, as found in Plato's Timaos and Kritias. The author then goes on to explore the various theories of the lost continent in the light of modern advances in archeology, anthropology, and geology. Index.

Booklist 50:350 My 15 '54

"A specialized cult this interest in the lost continents, but this is at least an objective survey."

Kirkus 22:174 Mr 1 '54 200w

DE CAMP, L. S.—Continued

"Much of the material in this book—as much, perhaps, as the general reader may care to know—has already appeared in de Camp and Ley's International-Fantasy-Award-winning 'Lands Beyond' [Book Review Digest 1952] and often in much the same words. But the curious reader interested in following in more detail the endlessly erratic processes of human crackpottery will find rich stuff here."

H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My 2 '54 140w

"The windy arguments of this legion of aberrants would be rather depressing—if they weren't so funny. Unfortunately for his readers, Mr. de Camp seems to fail to see the humor inherent in the situation. His writing is as deadly earnest, his attitude as fully belligerent as any of the self-styled 'scientists' he so properly derides. These flaws aside, his book is an engrossing lexicon of one kind of human folly. And not the least of its charms is its collection of maps, charts so carefully projected by dreamers who did not, literally, know which side is up." J. F. McComas

+ — N Y Times p42 S 26 '54 380w

DECKER, CLARENCE RAYMOND, and DECKER, MARY (BELL) SLOAN. Place of light; the story of a university presidency. 288p $3.75 Hermitage

378 Kansas City, Missouri. University 54-7057

Dr Decker was president of the University of Kansas City from 1938 to 1953. This book is an account of those fifteen years. "The writing is a collaboration, but for simplicity the point of view is that of Mary Bell Decker." (Foreword)

Kirkus 22:91 F 1 '54 220w

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson
New Repub 131:21 S 20 '54 1150w

"One important truth concerning a university presidency is eloquently affirmed: it is a job for two. The Deckers, writing their story as seen by the wife of a university president, clearly represent a single purpose and a centralized understanding of the city and its cultural development. Their spirited book exhibits an honest and human pleasure not only in science and the arts but in any person or group honestly trying to serve either one." G. K. Chalmers

+ N Y Times p12 J1 25 '54 700w

DECKER, DUANE WALTER. Mister Shortstop. 185p $2.50 Morrow

54-6401

Baseball story for boys of twelve to sixteen. Andy Pearson broke into the big time, but was traded off to a second division club. Andy manages to prove that he is big time after all, and earns the title of Mister Shortstop.

Booklist 50:363 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 9 '54 30w

Kirkus 22:118 F 15 '54 70w

"Boys will like it. Recommended for ages 12-16." Robert Van Benthuyssen
+ Library J 79:865 My 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 4 '54 10w

DE FOREST, IZETTE. Leaven of love; a development of the psychoanalytic theory and technique of Sándor Ferenczi. 206p $3.50 Harper

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Ferenczi, Sándor 54-6445

"Mrs. De Forest, a psychoanalyst living in New England, describes the humane and compassionate spirit which she feels underlies successful analysis. Credit for originating this point of view is given to her teacher and friend, Sándor Ferenczi, famed Hungarian analyst and early collaborator of Freud." Library J

"Well written material, especially interesting to those in the psychological field."

+ Kirkus 22:148 F 15 '54 140w

"Most of the material previously published in scattered professional journals. Short glossary of technical terms. Style and substance suitable for general reader." Harold Lancour
+ Library J 79:855 My 1 '54 130w

"This book is of interest to those concerned with the problems of guidance and counseling, as well as to all who are seeking a solution to their own emotional difficulties." A. G. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 170w

DE GRANGE, MCQUILKIN. Nature and elements of sociology. 668p $8.50 Yale univ. press

301 Sociology 52-12068

"In large measure, the positive philosophy of Auguste Comte provides the basic framework for Professor De Grange's treatise on the origins, development, and current status of the science of sociology. . . . Dr. De Grange's central thesis is that while the science of sociology has been effectively instituted in the sense that its basic elements and characteristic method have been established, there still remains the task of developing it in all of its implications." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This book is a rich distillate of the pellucid observations on the course of development of sociological theory by one of America's great teachers of sociology. . . . If there is a gross defect in this stimulating work, it is that it has hewn too closely to a particularized tradition, without recognizing the need for keeping distinct the functioning of broad scientific principles as a form of logic and the innumerable independent forms in which such principles may express themselves. On the other hand, DeGrange does make it extremely clear that a developing science must produce methods germane to its own data and restricted fields of interest. Some of his own insights are particularly timely and incisive." H. A. Bloch
+ Am J Soc 59:593 My '54 800w

"There is a good deal of matter in the latter parts of this volume which sociologists with leisure to peruse its somewhat involved arguments will find interesting, and which they will probably on the whole approve. . . . There is an index which seems adequate for proper names, but not for topics. There is a very brief 'Bibliographical Note' which seems almost superfluous." F. N. House
Am Soc 19:100 F '54 750w

"It is extremely difficult to review Professor DeGrange's book. I am charmed with it in one sense. He is obviously one of the few social scientists alive who is truly well versed in the works of Comte, Sumner, Spencer, and Ward. It is a pleasure to read what he has to say of them. . . . As an excursion into thought provocation from masters out of the past this volume is superb, but positively speaking it has little to offer modern developments in the science." M. J. Levy
+ — Ann Am Acad 292:175 Mr '54 550w

"Students of intellectual history and philosophy of science as well as those more specially concerned with systematic sociology will be interested in this wise and scholarly effort at sociological synthesis. The volume is, indeed, Auguste Comte brought up to date."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:463 D '53 240w

DE HARTOG, JAN. See Hartog, J. de

DEHKES, EVELYN S. Pink ballet slippers; II. by Ruth Ruhman. 202p $2.50 Bobbs

54-6060

The author uses her own experiences as a ballet dancer as background for this story for girls. It is the story of Grete who is determined to do ballet work and, overcoming all odds, finally has her wish. The book is illustrated with black and white drawings giving the positions from beginnings to finished ballet.

"An appealing story of Grete, a very human, very likeable little girl." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 23 '54 150w

"An instructive little book. Although the lessons are interwoven within a charming and pathetic tale, yet the hopeful student of ballet can learn much from it." R. E. Donlon
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 70w

"The author, a former ballerina, draws from her own experiences as a beginning dancer to tell the story of little girls getting ready for their first recital. Excellent diagrams of basic steps. Recommended for girls who are interested in dancing." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 79:1237 Je 15 '54 70w

"The story background is a bit dull, but the classes, teaching and productions are given in the detail that younger students will like." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 11 '54 30w

"In 'The Pink Ballet Slippers' the dance information is excellent, as presented in text and in fine diagrams of variously costumed figures; the story is poor. . . The final development is not remotely believable." Nora Kramer
+ — N Y Times p16 Je 20 '54 180w

DEITRICK, JOHN ENGLISH, and BERSON, ROBERT CHAMBLISS. Medical schools in the United States at mid-century [report of the Survey of medical education]. 380p $4.50 McGraw

610.71 Medical education 53-6041

"This volume comprises the formal report of the Survey of Medical Education, organized in 1947. It is a factual analysis and evaluation of medical education in the United States at the mid-point of the twentieth century made by chosen representatives of American medical education. Based upon the collection of facts and opinions from the medical schools, and upon visits by Survey groups to a large and representative proportion of those schools, the study has had the full cooperation of their deans, faculties, and students. It is, in effect, the first thorough self-evaluation of medical education in many years." (Foreword) Index.

"This book is must reading for all who are interested in the education of physicians and of professional and technical workers in the health professions. Its impact will not be equivalent to the Flexner report, but the problem is not the same. It is a useful contribution to the literature of medical education." W. R. Willard

+ Am J Pub Health 44:538 Ap '54 900w

"The volume is a sound contribution not only to understanding problems inherent in medical education, but also to problems of education in general."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:83 Mr '54 280w

DE JONG, MEINDERT. Wheel on the school; pictures by Maurice Sendak. 298p $2.75 Harper

54-8945

"Lina, one of the six school children in Shora, a Dutch fishing village, wrote an essay about storks. None of the children knew about storks because they did not settle in this little village. The children began to wonder why and they wondered so hard that things began to happen." (Sat R) For age ten and older.

Booklist 51:137 N 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

Commonweal 61:207 N 19 '54 20w

"The author is particularly successful in his vivid characterization of each of the six children, and in showing how their enthusiasm spreads to all the adults so that the whole village feels the tremendous importance of getting the storks to nest in Shorat, and everyone plays a part in making the dream come true. Good bookmaking with illustrations that belong to the story. For a boy, a girl, or for a family or schoolroom to share." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:431 D '54 240w

"A long book with its gentle, minute details and character studies, this may demand a special interest for enjoyment."

Kirkus 22:582 S 1 '54 170w

"This unusual tale is told with much lively, colloquial children's talk, and plenty of humor. . . Few writers of today offer this sort of realism to the young, with its insight that stimulates imagination and its clear beauty, like that of a Vermeer painting. We hope many an adult, or teen-age brother or sister will read it aloud to a family group, savoring slowly the talk so characteristic of each child, wondering whether the storks will truly come." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p3 N 14 '54 400w

"Grandmother Sibble, the 'oldest old lady' of the village, said that to find what a stork would want one must think like a stork. Meindert DeJong thinks as a child thinks. His writing has style, humor, tenderness and freshness. It is difficult to imagine drawings more in tune with the text than these unforgettable ones by Maurice Sendak." E. M. Graves

+ N Y Times pt2 p32 N 14 '54 150w

"A highly original story by a writer with a gift for making his juvenile characters child-like." K. T. Kinhead

+ New Yorker 30:211 N 27 '54 70w

"The language is simple and direct, at times almost childlike, and yet the story is full of dramatic action and suspense. There is less sentimentality in this book than there was in 'Shadrach' and 'Hurry Home, Candy' but there are still poignant scenes in the story." A. B.

+ Sat ■ 37:80 N 13 '54 140w

DELANO, MARGARET. How to be a top secretary; with the editorial cooperation of Paul W. Allison. 337p $3.95 Tupper

651.02 Secretaries, Private 54-6407

"[This book] serves a dual purpose. Basically, it is a complete reference handbook for secretaries. It is also a complete textbook for instruction in secretarial duties and practice, unusually well adapted for classroom use." (Foreword) Index.

"Excellent reference handbook."

+ Bookmark 13:233 Jl '54 20w

"This will have a special appeal for the neophyte in the profession rather than for someone already on her way."

Kirkus 22:219 Mr 15 '54 120w

"A useful book for the novice, the instructor and most library collections." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 79:1312 Jl '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:175 Jl '54

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO. Variable winds at Jalna. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 359p $3.95 Little

54-11127

The central character of this section of the Jalna saga is young Adeline, Renny's beloved daughter. Adeline's Irish lover comes to Jalna to be married, but the affair misfires, and there is no wedding. However, Finch and Meg each find a new love.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 195:80 Ja '55 90w

Booklist 51:132 N 15 '54

"For friends of the Whiteoak family this book will provide continued entertainment." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 31 '54 260w

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO—Continued

Reviewed by N. E. Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p4 N 4 '54
300w

"All very heart warming, but the pattern wears a bit thin."

Kirkus 22:549 Ag 15 '54 190w

"Very, very pleasant reading, with simple characters patterned on simpler motives, in Canada's secure and horsey world which is Jalna. Highly recommended for escape." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:2102 N 1 '54 70w

"Even to be with the Whiteoaks in the midst of distress is somehow comforting; one knows that their sweet-scented world is going to come out all right. Granted, a certain suspension of belief is necessary, in these parlous times, if one is to enjoy life as it is so richly lived there. It is a small effort, when one measures the sense of fulfillment that lingers when the book is closed." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p49 N 7 '54 430w

New Yorker 30:234 D 4 '54 40w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54
300wDE LA TORRE, LILLIAN (MRS G. S. MC-CUE). White rose of Stuart. 214p il $2.50
NelsonB or 92 Macdonald, Flora (Macdonald)—
Juvenile literature 54-9873

A biography of Flora Macdonald, the "heroine of the '45," for age twelve and older.

Booklist 51:136 N 15 '54

Horn Bk 30:439 D '54 120w

"Rich reading."

+ Kirkus 22:398 J1 1 '54 180w

"Recommended for girls in 8th-10th grades."

F. K. Jones

+ Library J 79:2258 N 15 '54 100w

"This makes stirring reading, and will make clear to many for the first time the rescue of Bonnie Prince Charlie." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p10 N
14 '54 180w

"By beginning with her heroine a prisoner in the Tower, Miss de la Torre establishes a compelling atmosphere of suspense. . . All in all, for its masterful evocation of the wild Hebridean setting and the vivid re-creation of clan life no less than for its stanch little heroine, this is a thoroughly delightful book."

N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times pt2 p12 N 14 '54 160w

"The style, while flowery, suits the story well and its very real sense of time and place will please older girls who enjoy historical novels. The illustrations are a charming embellishment." L. G.

+ Sat R 37:90 N 13 '54 200w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Barred road. 247p $2.75 Macmillan (N Y)

54-9574

"Sue Trowbridge is deeply troubled by the racial bigotry she sees with reference to her Negro classmates by teachers and students alike and also in her own home when a Negro family moves next door. How Sue meets this challenge and decides to stick by her principles is the essence of the story." Library J

Booklist 50:403 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:165 Ap '54 10w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 13
'54 300w

+ Kirkus 22:156 Mr 1 '54 120w

"The book presents a social problem which should provide thoughtful reading for girls 13-16." A. L. Nelson

+ Library J 79:1240 Je 15 '54 70w

"The author by no means explores all angles of this knotty problem, but she succeeds in making her young reformer real and likable."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 11
'54 230w

"The book's weakness is its set picture, tailored to fit; its strength is the sincerity of presentation of its theme: that a personal conviction honestly acted upon can carry weight with one's peers. It makes a worthwhile point, in a good story, with likable, believable young people." Nora Kramer

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 22 '54 170w

"Adele de Leeuw has written a first-rate story for girls—dramatic and exciting but not sensational nor didactic. It has such integrity, sincerity, and authenticity that this reviewer is inclined to believe that it was created from true events. Teen-agers should find the story provocative and thoughtful and if it does cause them to ponder over America's racial irregularities and strive to eradicate them, then it will have served a good purpose." Augusta Baker

+ Sat R 37:38 Je 19 '54 270w

DE LEEUW, HENDRIK. Crossroads of the Mediterranean. (Hanover House bk) 244p il $3.75 Garden City bks.961 [916.1] Africa, North—Description and travel 54-6653

"Although the epilogue deals briefly with transportation, hotel costs, what to wear, and similar items of tourist information, this is mainly a book for the arm chair traveler. Ranging along the southern Mediterranean coast, the author visits such tourist attractions as Algeria, the headquarters of the French Foreign Legion, Biskra, Tunis, the site of Carthage, Morocco, Tangier, Marrakesh, and Casablanca, observing the people and customs, and interpolating bits of history." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 51:60 O 1 '54

Springf'd Republican p9C N 14 '54
150wDE LIMA, SIGRID. Carnival by the Sea. 327p $3.50 Scribner

54-5915

In flashbacks, monologues and some direct action this novel tells the story of a dying crippled woman living in a fantastic house in a resort town in California. Slowly it reveals the character of old Mrs Albany, and sets forth what she has done to her children and husband in the past, ending with a final attempt to redeem herself.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 21 '54
230w

"Miss DeLima's . . . talent is strong enough to use what it must and impress the whole with an originality and force of its own. She has taken what Freud has called the Familienroman of the neurotic, organized it on her own special terms, placed it in the singular, nightmarish atmosphere of a cold California sun, and made a really good story of it all." Doris Grumbach

+ Commonweal 59:633 Mr 26 '54 420w

"A grotesque of lives which are dissonant and distraught, crowded and shadowed by the past to a point of no return, this is indeed a wasteland through which you will travel with disbelief and discomfort."

— Kirkus 21:770 D 1 '53 170w

"Remarkable characterization, but only one person out of the book's dozen is reasonably decent and free from mental retardedness or emotional instability. Absorbing to read, but recommended only for libraries buying all the new fiction." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:382 F 15 '54 150w

"How consciously Miss de Lima has made an attempt to draw a parallel with the tragedies of the House of Atreus it is hard to tell. Certainly she does not need to since her story can stand unhesitatingly on its own merits for the glimpses it gives of the curiously tangled motives of good and evil in every life. Yet the similarities seem more than coincidental. . . . More important than such resemblances, however, is the quality of Miss de Lima's own writing, which, in her earlier novels, 'Captain's Beach' and 'The Swift Cloud,' won her a Prix de Rome. Like a prickly pear, her books are difficult to penetrate, but they reveal a surprising tart sweetness." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 28 '54 750w

"The narrative does not progress in any rational manner; it darts about in time, mood, style, like a dragonfly. Every now and then it lights on one of Miss de Lima's minor characters. . . . The overblown fantasia approach, however, adumbrates its own weaknesses." Gertrude Buckman

— + N Y Times p24 Mr 7 '54 340w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 20 '54 250w

"Miss de Lima's fine technical artistry continues its development in this, her third, novel. Her intricate weaving of many threads of time is skilful. Her portraits are vivid. The notable achievement of the book, not to be minimized by such reservations as I have, is the poignant, lacy beauty and tenderness of the gentle Dissy. Her work is that of a gifted writer." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:20 Mr 13 '54 500w

Time 63:96 Mr 1 '54 300w

DEL MONTE, JACQUES. Fell's International coin book. 192p il $2.50 Fell

737.4 Coins 53-11213

"A handy guide listing foreign coins alphabetically by country with complete information on identification and collecting and the current value in American money. Illustrations. Glossary, bibliography, index." Bookmark

"A compact first purchase for the hobby shelf where budgets are small."

Booklist 50:207 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:85 Ja '54 20w

"The hows and whys of collecting foreign coins are presented here in broad outline only. . . . The coin prices quoted are general averages regardless of date, type, condition or scarcity, and not the prices at which coins are bought and sold. The book will serve non-collectors and novices as an introduction to the subject, but standard works on coins of the world are necessary for serious collectors." E. G. Bradfield

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 27 '53 90w

"All in all, this is a satisfying and interesting book, one which can open a new and fascinating world to those unacquainted with the 'living history of numismatics.'" J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '54 500w

Reviewed by Dorothy Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 24 '54 20w

DEL REY, LESTER. Step to the stars; jacket and endpaper designs by Alex Schomburg. 211p $2 Winston

Science fiction. 54-8792

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 N 14 '54 50w

"Politics get shallow analysis here, but the scientific aspects will absorb the addicts."

Kirkus 22:586 S 1 '54 180w

"Step to the Stars is one of the best of the fall S-F titles and will interest grades 7-10. Will make a fine companion to Clarke's Islands in the Sky." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 79:2499 D 15 '54 70w

"A convincing study of a boy's growth to manhood and leadership; and if the story is somewhat episodic and the other characters rather superficially drawn, it still stands well above most juvenile s. f. in its careful integration of adventure with plausible prophecy."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 28 '54 50w

"Lester Del Rey has never written a better juvenile. His characters are warm, human, bedeviled by very natural fears, hopes and perplexities. Neatly plotted, carefully written, scientifically correct, 'Step to the Stars' is excellent juvenile science fiction." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times pt2 p10 N 14 '54 140w

DEL REY, LESTER, and others, eds. Year after tomorrow; an anthology of science fiction stories; foreword by Lester del Rey; il. by Mel Hunter. 339p $3 Winston

52-8976

An anthology composed of nine science fiction stories.

Kirkus 22:120 F 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:716 Ap 15 '54 10w

"These nine stories ranging from twenty to one hundred pages in length, first appeared in such magazines as The American Boy and Astounding Science Fiction ten to twenty years ago and are, therefore fresh and new to the present generation of teen-agers. The ingenious inventions of Carl H. Claudy, R. M. Miller, Lester Del Rey and Peter Van Dresser still retain their original appeal, making adventurous and frequently humorous reading." L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '54 120w

DE MARE, MARIE. G. P. A. Healy, American artist; an intimate chronicle of the nineteenth century; introd. by Eleanor Roosevelt. 304p il $6 McKay

B or 92 Healy, George Peter Alexander

53-11377

Biography of a nineteenth century American artist (1813-1894) written by his granddaughter. "In 1831, when only eighteen, he was taken up in his native Boston by none other than Mrs. Harrison Gray Otis, and from that day forward his only problem was how to find time to paint all the celebrities who insisted on appointments. King Louis-Philippe was hugely pleased by his 'realistic and living' technique; so were the King and Queen of Rumania and dozens of statesmen in the Old World and the New." (Sat R) Index.

"This biography of an important American figure who lived in the social, intellectual, and artistic centers of two continents is rich in historical and artistic anecdote, told with charm and vitality." C. P. Westermeier

+ Am Hist R 59:1027 Jl '54 230w

Reviewed by J. W. Lane

Cath World 179:78 Ap '54 220w

"The book is well illustrated and adequately written. It comes at a time when Healy's prestige is rising—along with that of other long neglected 19th century masters of portraiture." Edward Barry

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 14 '54 290w

"Healy himself had left reminiscences, and his daughter Mary had written a brief biography some 40 years ago, but this new book on Healy is indeed an enlivening discussion of painter and period. It seems to this reviewer that it is through the lives of such outstanding persons that we often come to a real historical understanding of bygone days. Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:1591 S 15 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 18 '54 90w

"Since the author never intended to write a monograph, but only an intimate portrait of her grandfather, there is no sense in scolding her for omitting things like footnotes. Yet she might have told us where she came upon this or that anecdote, whether in family letters or in her grandfather's memoirs. And it would not have done any harm to include a checklist of the artist's work." Wayne Andrews

DE MARE, MARIE—Continued

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 330w

DEMAREST, DONALD. Fabulous ancestor.
288p $3.50 Lippincott
818 New Orleans—Social life and customs
53-12290

A book of memories of New Orleans, not wholly fact, not wholly fiction, the author says, but the impressions that remained with a small boy who spent one year when he was ten years old, under the care of his great-grandmother, "the fabulous ancestor."

Booklist 50:259 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 20w

"All the inevitable props of ■ story of New Orleans is subordinated to lively anecdote, and the expression of religious thought and practice, intrinsic throughout and unobtrusive, reveals a deeply Catholic way of life. Fabulous Ancestor is interesting beyond mere entertainment."

+ Cath World 178:479 Mr '54 170w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 17 '54
240w

Reviewed by Joe Dever

Commonweal 59:587 Mr 12 '54 320w

Kirkus 21:727 N 1 '53 180w

"Recommended for light reading." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 79:145 Ja 15 '54 70w

"Mr. Demarest has been engagingly honest about his mingling of memory and imagination. In the half-world between fact and fiction his picture comes out unevenly, sometimes clear and convincing, sometimes like a streaky negative. . . But he has achieved some fine portraits. Granny herself is disappointing and seems overdone. But various relatives come out vividly and there is a real feeling for the French background. . . On the whole, the reader who brings the proper background or the right kind of imagination to Mr. Demarest's book will derive amusement and pleasure from it." Robert Molloy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 17 '54 440w

"Among the many books about New Orleans . . . this one occupies a special place, with its own unique mood, its warm flavoring, its tender evocation. If Donald Demarest never writes another volume—and after this happy debut he assuredly will—he has achieved the nearly impossible, a 'different' one about Creole town, brilliantly personal, yet also a resourceful recreation of its recent past." H. T. Kane

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 21 '54 420w

"This book, states Mr. Demarest, is ■ legend, and he says he has striven to cleave only to his dreams. . . Yet the book can also be accepted as a novel, and not too unhappily. Some of the characters are thinly drawn, although others (such as Tante Bébé) are marvelous; Granny does not quite deserve her adjective; and Sonny, although he develops somewhat through contacts with life and love and death, does not grow enough perhaps. However these become minor faults in the whole. Many novels have far worse, far more flaws." Robert Talant

+ Sat R 37:20 Ja ■ '54 550w

DEMAREST, PHYLLIS GORDON. Naked risk.
377p $3.95 Doubleday

Richardson, Abby (Sage)—Fiction. McFarland, Daniel—Fiction. Richardson, Albert Deane—Fiction
54-5169

Fictionalized account of ■ tragedy which occurred in post-Civil war New York. Abby Sage, a writer and actress, married to a worthless husband, decided on divorce when her husband's drunken rages became dangerous. Albert Richardson, Civil war correspondent on Horace Greeley's Tribune fell in love with Abby and tried to protect her, but he was shot by the jealous husband and died shortly afterward. Horace Greeley and Edwin Booth are among the characters in the novel.

Booklist 50:221 F 1 '54

"To certain readers 'The Naked Risk' will be too much of ■ woman's book." Nevertheless Miss Demarest writes with vigor, and she possesses the true story-tellers' gift. She has a way with her people, her scenes of quick action, her crowded receptions, and domestic conflicts. And surely Abby Sage should feel she has found a true champion." H. T. Kane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 17 '54
400w

Kirkus 21:744 N 15 '53 170w

"Mrs. Demarest's materials in 'The Naked Risk' are excellent and she has deployed them well. . . The writing in 'The Naked Risk' is undistinguished, however, the tone unsophisticated, even oddly prissy." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 10 '54 750w

"Tossing fact and fancy together in the fictional world is a job for only the most gifted of jugglers. 'The Naked Risk' has, happily, come from the hands of an expert in this sleight of hand." Judith Quehl

+ N Y Times p29 Ja 10 '54 380w

Reviewed by Martin Levin

Sat R 37:55 Mr 20 '54 210w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54
260w

DEMARET, JAMES. My partner Ben Hogan; drawings by Murray Olderman. 214p $2.95 McGraw

B or 92 Hogan, Ben. Golf

54-7467

"Breezy golf talk by an enthusiast and long-time friend of 'a hard-bitten little caddy from Dublin, Texas, who has become the finest golf player of the mid-twentieth century.' Photographs and drawings." Booklist

Booklist 50:378 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 30w

"Once in a blue moon a golf book comes along that is as solid a performance as an eight under par round. This is one." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 16 '54
200w

Kirkus 22:177 Mr 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:1520 S 1 '54 30w

Reviewed by Lincoln Werden

N Y Times p14 My 9 '54 350w

DEMING, DOROTHY. Curious calamity in ward 8. 184p $2.50 Dodd

54-7078

A mystery story for older girls.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 193:85 Je '54 20w

"Well written, swift moving, more plausible than most teen-age mysteries. Recommended for girls 10-14." R. H. Urban

+ Library J 79:1065 Je 1 '54 70w

"Light reading, mystery and romance, with a student nurse heroine." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 11 '54
40w

DEMING, RICHARD. Whistle past the graveyard. 245p $2.75 Rinehart

54-9127

Detective story.

"A routine which is not enough to keep your spirits up—let alone your interest."

— Kirkus 22:551 Ag 15 '54 50w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 10 '54 110w

"B Minus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 31 '54
60w

"Intelligent toughie." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:63 N 6 '54 20w

DENMAN, EARL. Alone to Everest. 255p il $3.75 Coward-McCann

954.2 [915.42] Everest, Mount. Mountaineering 54-11487

"The author, a young Canadian electrical engineer, in 1947 set out to achieve his boyhood ambition to climb Everest, backed only by his own slender financial resources, but with a highly idealistic spirit. Why such a foolhardy venture? It was 'a challenge to man's resourcefulness and inquisitiveness' and 'a natural desire for immortality.' After a rehearsal climbing eight peaks of the remote Virunga Mountains in the Belgian Congo, aided by friendly natives, he entered Tibet secretly when he failed to get permission—a situation which increased his difficulties. . . Denman is critical of large expeditions, the use of oxygen, and the injection of nationalism into mountaineering." Library J

Booklist 51:127 N 15 '54

Kirkus 22:618 S 1 '54 220w

"Illustrations and maps help to make this a worthy addition to the literature of Everest. Recommended for the general reader." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1886 O 15 '54 170w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:2337 D 1 '54 70w

"A naïve, touching little book."

+ Manchester Guardian p6 Je 29 '54 180w

"There is a certain fresh, almost naïve idealism in 'Alone to Everest.' And also much frustration and bitterness over a failure that a less impassioned adventurer would have foreseen as inevitable. But in our standardized and machine-tooled age the world can well use its share of Denmans." J. R. Ullman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 14 '54 650w

"An interesting and strange book." Raymond Holden

N Y Times p44 D 5 '54 200w

New Yorker 30:221 N 20 '54 120w

Reviewed by Keith Kent

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '54 300w

Sat ■ 37:19 N 13 '54 40w

"Mr. Denman is a man of great courage, capable of enduring much fatigue and hardship and with an unusual ability to get on with the native African. . . The censures which he sees fit to make on the design and conduct of Sir John Hunt's expedition rest on no experience, and are not in the best of taste. In particular he affirms, with emphasis, his opinion that Everest can be climbed without oxygen. Anyone is entitled to hold this opinion, but Mr. Denman's opinion is no more valuable than that of an armchair critic, for he never came to grips with the mountain, and it leaves an unpleasant impression, coming, as it does, from a disappointed rival."

Times [London] Lit Sup p610 S 24 '54 460w

DENNIS, MORGAN. Pure breds; pref. by Mrs Sherman Hoyt; with detailed studies illustrating each breed. 84p $3 Winston

636.7 Dogs 53-7343

"The history and identifying characteristics of all pedigreed dogs recognized by The American Kennel Club." Subtitle

Booklist 50:373 Je 1 '54

"Combining concise, easy-to-read text with the most appealing drawings of canines that this reviewer has seen for a long time, this informative book is a must for every dog lover of any age." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 My 9 '54 120w

DENNISTON, ELINORE (RAE FOLEY, pseud). Dark intent. 215p $2.75 Dodd

54-8497

Mystery story.

"Tepid divertissement." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54 30w

"More conscientious than effective." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 29 '54 120w

"Like too many of Rae Foley's books, has an interesting novelistic idea lifelessly executed. . . Has rich possibilities which Miss Foley never quite gets her teeth into." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 Jl 25 '54 30w

"Sound mystery and good character work make for reading value." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 22 '54 70w

"Superior." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat ■ 37:41 Jl 24 '54 20w

DENNISTON, ELINORE (RAE FOLEY, pseud). Madness in the spring. 237p $3 Dodd 54-10577

"Greg Seaver, 26, finds himself launching the restoration of a Nevada ghost town and acquiring some diverse companions in a lighthearted, amusing tale." Bookmark

Booklist 51:84 O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 20w

"'Madness in the Spring' is unpretentious, lively escape." Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 29 '54 300w

"An excellent example of a good idea gone haywire." R. M. F.

Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 110w

DENTAN, ROBERT CLAUDE. Apocrypha, bridge of the Testaments; a reader's guide to the Apocryphal books of the Old Testament. 122p $2.25 Seabury

229 Bible. O. T.—Apocrypha

"This little book is intended as a companion to the Apocrypha for laymen who want to be guided from the Old Testament to the New. Written by a competent scholar, it is concerned primarily with literary and historical questions, but the religion of the Apocrypha is constantly stressed, especially in the last chapter, 'What We Learn from the Apocrypha.' Here Dentan summarizes political history, sects and parties, the doctrine of God, angels and demons, Wisdom and Logos, the law, life after death, the Messiah, apocalyptic elements, original sin, the good life, and the life of prayer. The book includes a bibliography of English works." J Religion

Reviewed by Robert Grant

J Religion 34:228 Jl '54 80w

"The exposition of each book and the interpretation of the importance of each shows the author to be an excellent teacher."

+ Kirkus 22:194 Mr 15 '54 130w

"This is a guide for the ordinary reader, by a teacher at the General Theological Seminary, that shows the importance of these often neglected books linking in time and content the Jewish and Christian Scriptures." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p22 D 5 '54 30w

DENZER, PETER W. Episode; ■ record of five hundred lost days. 313p $3.50 Dutton

53-10848

"Peter Denzer's first novel tackles an unusual theme: The record of 500 days lost in a series of mental hospitals. With insight and perception, he tells the story of Arnold Bronson, from his entrance into a hospital to his discharge after a protracted schizophrenic stage." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 50:259 Mr 1 '54

Kirkus 21:719 N 1 '53 220w

DENZER, P. W.—Continued

"This remarkable novel by a young American belongs to The Snake Pit category of books about mental hospitals. Although it is also permeated with sadism, sensationalism, and literary nudism, Episode deserves high praise for its realism, compassion, tolerance, and constructiveness. . . . The novel is to be recommended because it stresses mental problems, reassures us concerning State care of wards, and appreciates the sacrifices of doctors, nurses, and attendants." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 78:2212 D 15 '53 140w

"The magic of this most recent fictional excursion into the snakepit of insanity lies, I think, in the deft manner in which the author imparts the idea of rationality as seen from the viewpoint of those termed irrational. . . . Along the wayside, the author gives the reader a great many things to think about, though he fails to answer clearly many of the searching questions propounded." Henry Cavendish

+ — N Y Times p23 Ja 17 '54 400w

"There can be little doubt that Peter Denzer has written an impressive first novel. His central character is real in his very unreality, and his plight is brought home to the reader, but without sermonizing. The result is a novel well worth the reading, leading to the pleasant anticipation of other books from Denzer's type-writer." G. E. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 7 '54 500w

DE ONIS, HARRIET, ed. See Onis, H. de, ed.

DE PEREDA, PRUDENCIO. Fiesta; a novel of modern Spain. 359p $3.75 Wyn

53-9428

A story, laid in a modern Spanish town, in which five young men contend for the coveted role of Christ in the presentation of the Passion play.

Kirkus 21:505 Ag 1 '53 190w

"A quiet indictment of Franco's Spain, its people and its Catholicism, this is the best novel available in English on modern Spain. The prose is simple yet beautiful with a strong Spanish flavor, and the beautifully drawn characters are really flavored with the soil. Recommended highly for all adult fiction collections." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 78:1686 O 1 '53 140w

"A rather sentimental and popularized novel of modern Spain that nevertheless has warmth and insight."

+ — Nation 178:17 Ja 1 '54 160w

"If any book is deserving of inclusion among the outstanding novels of the remarkable literary year 1953, it is 'Fiesta.' A young American of Spanish parentage, its author, Prudencio de Pereda, knows Spain and its people intimately and when he sets down his thoughts and emotions about them the result is genuine, satisfactory." Angel Flores

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 31 '54 360w

"This is a moving, greatly conceived and finely executed book." Frances Keene

+ N Y Times p5 O 4 '53 500w

"Many passages are written with fervor and understanding, yet there is little empathy established between reader and narrator in this slow-footed novel. Though daringly conceived [the] story is imperfectly realized. At the final page, when Tomás dies on the cross, there is only disappointment, where there should be a transfiguration." Nicolas Monjo

+ — Sat R 36:67 O 24 '53 280w

"A catharsis has presumably been achieved, but at the cost of all probability. It is unbelievable that a village in Spain, even after the atrocities of the Civil War, would enact a real Calvary. The story is to be taken literally and we are reminded of Ros's thought, 'Maybe you're fooling yourself.'"

Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Mr 26 '54 160w

DERBY, MARK, pseud. Bad step [Eng title: Out of Asia alive]. 244p $3 Viking

54-7982

Novel of suspense and revenge, the scenes of which are Gibraltar, Singapore, and England.

Booklist 51:14 S 1 '54

"Exotic in setting, overlapping at points some of the background and characters in The Big Water, this is Mark Derby's most mature work."

+ Kirkus 22:348 Je 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 15 '54 100w

"If you like the chase novel, and the psychological thriller, and the foreign intrigue yarn, then (unless you are too much of a purist) you will like 'The Bad Step,' for it is all three at once. Mark Derby does this kind of thing well, though he doesn't shrink from standard gambits." Edmund Fuller

+ — N Y Times p18 Ag 15 '54 360w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 12 '54 100w

"Most of the activity in Mr. Derby's rapid-fire novel takes place in the volcanic atmosphere of the Malay Archipelago, with side trips to Gibraltar, Spain, and Great Britain. The geography in 'The Bad Step' has the proper ring of authenticity, as does the predicament of its hero. The forbearance of long suffering Largo verges on apathy, though, and the reader almost gives up on him before the final skirmish." Martin Levin

+ — Sat R 37:17 Ag 21 '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 1 '54 60w

"The characters are out of the Boy's Own Paper, and the general tone healthy so far as love and sex are concerned but less pleasantly adolescent in its addiction to pointless bloodshed. Mr. Derby's descriptive passages are well done, but, for all its variety of incident in Spain, England, Bali and the remoter islands of Indonesia, his book is not really for grown-ups."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 1 '54 200w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, ed. Portals of tomorrow; the best tales of science fiction and other fantasy. 371p $3.75 Rinehart

Short stories—Collections 54-6523

A collection of the editor's choice of 1953's crop of short stories of science fiction and fantasy. Includes works by Ray Bradbury, Murray Leinster, Mildred Clingerman, Arthur C. Clarke, Fredric Brown, Clifford Simak, etc.

Kirkus 22:251 Ap 1 '54 90w

"I cannot describe this excellent book more effectively than by the editor's own statement of his intent: 'to do for the fantastic story what has been done so admirably by Martha Foley and her predecessor, the late Edward J. O'Brien, for the short story in general.' . . . For the literate reader, there have been few comparable anthologies within recent memory and for the first time the annual Bleiler-Dikty 'Best' collection will be hard put to it to produce as satisfactory a list." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 27 '54 220w

Reviewed by J. F. McComas

+ N Y Times p38 S 12 '54 290w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 18 '54 170w

DERWENT, CLARENCE. Derwent story; my first fifty years in the theatre in England and America. 304p il $5 Schuman

B or 92 Actors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 53-10367

Reminiscences of the author's fifty years' connection with the English and American theaters as actor, director, and producer. He is a past president of Actors' Equity; and president of the American National Theatre and Academy. No index.

Booklist 50:203 Ja 15 '54

Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 30w

"A fascinating story of the development of an actor in Great Britain and the USA. Highly recommended for large Theatre Collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 79:148 Ja 15 '54 30w

Nation 178:97 Ja 30 '54 160w

"The autobiography is pleasant reading if the prose does not get in one's eyes. The anecdotes are frequently lively. Mr. Derwent's views about the theater seem sound enough." Richard Lockridge

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p10 Ja 17 '54 650w

"The Derwent Story" is the straightforward account of a solid theatre man." Lewis Funke

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 31 '54 330w

DES CARS, GUY. Chantal; tr. by Reine De Roussy de Sales [Eng title: The unclear]. 284p $3.50 Houghton

54-9120

"A Parisian woman of great beauty and little morality is stricken with leprosy and is sent to a leper colony for a presumably short cure. It takes longer to effect the cure than at first supposed. The people sent to Makogai leper colony are worlds apart from Parisian luxury and gaiety. Chantal, the lovely leper, experiences not only a physical cure but also a psychical and moral conversion. After her cure and after returning to Paris to take up where she left off almost five years before, she renounces her futile and sinful life and returns to Makogai to nurse the lepers and to help the staff she learned to love." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 51:132 N 15 '54

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

— Cath World 180:153 N '54 170w

Kirkus 22:450 Jl 15 '54 180w

"The literary fascination of the sick for the well, particularly when the invalid is one with whom some identification is possible, is proverbial. But the pasteboard victim portrayed in the book 'Chantal'—ex-model, kept woman, arriviste and finally sister of mercy—is so unmotivated, so implausible that the only real thing about her is her illness." Frances Keene

— N Y Times p43 O 24 '54 190w

"Many readers will find the tale absorbing and inspiring." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 7 '54 120w

"The book is by no means negligible, but its main interest is documentary." L. A. G. Strong

Spec p190 F 12 '54 130w

"Dignified, well written, and utterly convincing."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:209 O '54

DESMOND, MRS ALICE (CURTIS). Barnum presents General Tom Thumb. 236p il $3 Macmillan (N Y)

B or 92 Stratton, Charles Sherwood 54-8544

A biography of the famous Lilliputian, General Tom Thumb. Among other material the author used a manuscript written by Tom Thumb's wife.

"Almost everyone has heard of the little fellow, but it takes Mrs. Desmond's sure hand to do a thorough, readable, and altogether satisfying biography, rich with anecdotes." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 193:85 Je '54 60w

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Millicent Taylor

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 80w

"When Mrs. Desmond does a job of research she does it thoroughly, sparing neither time nor pains to study everything available on her subject. She has had a particularly good opportunity to get material this time, for she, like Barnum and his midget, lived in Bridgeport. . . She has gathered so much information that here and there her book would have been better for a little cutting. But, all in all, it is a real contribution to the field of biography for young people." J. D. L.

+ — Horn Bk 30:187 Je '54 160w

Kirkus 22:122 F 15 '54 120w

"Well written, accurate and readable. Recommended for general circulation and for theatre collections." E. L. Davis

+ Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 20w

"A detailed and sympathetic biography, which will interest both teen-agers and adults to whom this unusual character appeals. . . The circus background, the period setting, the relations with Barnum, all are well handled. There are sixteen insert pages of fascinating old prints and photographs."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 16 '54 120w

Reviewed by Robert Downing

N Y Times p20 Ag 15 '54 210w

"This is the simply told tale of a wonderful little man and his wife. The book contains a number of photographs. It will be of particular interest to San Franciscans who have seen some of Tom Thumb's tiny pipes, clothes and other mementoes displayed at the Sutro Museum." G. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 16 '54 240w

DESTOUCHES, LOUIS FERDINAND (LOUIS FERDINAND CELINE, pseud). Guignol's band; tr. from the French by Bernard Frechtman and Jack T. Nile. 287p $5 New Directions

54-10186

Novel about life in London's underworld in 1914. The central character is a young French war veteran turned spiv.

Reviewed by W. S. Rogers

Canadian Forum 34:214 D '54 210w

"The difficulties of translation of such work are tremendous. . . It has been a labor far more demanding than the translation of the usual novel, and it has turned out eminently successful. In the English translation, as well as in the original French, what Celine relates is not so important as the way in which he relates it. He is a lyric stylist who often fails to convince us but who rarely fails to move us. Each book is a kind of triumph in the pure forcefulness of language, in the pure excess of verbiage. Celine decomposes the usual literary sentence in order to rebuild it in accord with his own rhythm and his own vision." Wallace Fowlie

+ Commonweal 60:346 Jl 9 '54 950w

Kirkus 22:316 My 15 '54 120w

"For its power of projection alone it can be placed alongside his best work, with perhaps a suggestion in its heightened style of something even still better to come. . . The translation is colloquial and excellent."

+ Nation 179:238 S 18 '54 320w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman ■ Nation 48:412 O 2 '54 1000w

"Alongside the sheer inspiration of 'Journey to the End of the Night,' some of the scenes of the latest novel may seem a little contrived, forced, wooden. Yet the whole springs genuinely from the same view of the scabrous backside of society which we have in the ancient Roman satirist Petronius. Céline's technique of composition once more validates the observation of André Gide about him: 'Céline's is a singular sensibility; he depicts not reality but the hallucinations which reality provokes.'"

Milton Hindus

N Y Times p7 Je 6 '54 1600w

DESTOUCHES, L. F.—Continued

"Céline's criminal London is even more of a no-place than Gide's North Africa or Greene's Gold Coast. Nothing real takes place there or can take place there; it is simply a backdrop for a masquerade, and its phoniness is nicely calculated to match the author's pretense to be a man from the lower depths. . . . The criminal is, to tell the truth, the dullest of the mediocrities on the social scene—not the ruthless enemy of society of fiction but generally a damaged human being on the borderline of mental deficiency." Anthony West

— New Yorker 30:114 Je 12 '54 1950w

"Exaggerated effects, bile, and frenzy do not constitute social criticism. 'Guignol's Band' has none of the humor, albeit cynical or bitter, that can make a picaresque novel a purifying tonic. There is a limit beyond which excessiveness just becomes tiresome. Céline, by picturing humanity as no more than monstrous puppets, has eventually taken on the grimace and the absurd gestures of a guignol himself." Laurent LeSage

— Sat R 37:21 Je 19 '54 400w

Reviewed by Charles Tomlinson

Spec p479 O 15 '54 450w

"The pace and din of Guignol's Band are too fast and deafening to hold up to the very end, and the string of fantastic adventures grows increasingly limp and raveled. . . . No visitor since Thomas Wolfe has described London with such off-beat perception and passion—not the London the tourist or the Briton has ever seen, but the insane metropolis 'painted like fog with some yellow and raspberry added' that Céline alone is capable of seeing."

Time 63:114 Je 14 '54 1200w

DEUTSCH, BABETTE (MRS AVRAHM YARMOLINSKY). Animal, vegetable, mineral. 59p $2.75 Dutton

811 54-5029

A sixth book of poems by a present-day American poetess.

Booklist 50:316 Ap 15 '54

"'Homage to John Skelton' comes off as spirited pastiche. Pathos, however, sometimes shades into sentimentality, as in 'Death of a Dog.' And of the major emotions Miss Deutsch displays, carefully, none. Her total picture is thin and agreeable." Nicholas Joost

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 28 '54 200w

"This is a charming book of verse in which the poet and critic comes into her own, to a complete mastery of technique suitable for her half sad, half gay and lightly whimsical moods."

+ Kirkus 21:780 D 1 '53 90w

"Although she has written important criticism, several novels and juveniles, and published many translations, we believe her poems come first, and we celebrate their latest appearance." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:1231 Je 15 '54 70w

"A strangely uneven book, but one that will reward the reader's patience with at least two memorable poems, Homage to John Skelton and Afternoon with an Infant." John Ciardi

+ — Nation 178:184 F 27 '54 40w

Reviewed by Kenneth Rexroth

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 4 '54 270w

"Babette Deutsch's new book shows again that she can be both a compelling poet and a dull one. She can offer unblushingly such stereotyped phrases as 'pathless wood,' 'patient as the hills,' 'the moon like a nail paring.' And she is sometimes willing to let the rhyme scheme decide the diction for her, as in 'Deconstruction of Letters.'" John Ciardi

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 28 '54 190w

"A mature and balanced performance."

+ New Yorker 30:120 Je 12 '54 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 25 '54 120w

Sat R 37:23 My 22 '54 250w

DEUTSCH, KARL WOLFGANG. Nationalism and social communication; an inquiry into the foundations of nationality. 292p $5 Mass. inst. of technology; Wiley

321.8 Nationalism and nationality 53-7949

"Karl W. Deutsch is a professor of history and political science (at M. I. T.), and his topic is the development of nationalism. . . . While the author has sought his concepts and techniques of research in all the social sciences, he has relied most heavily on sociology. A somewhat simplified statement of his theory is that nationalism arises when a group of people having communication among themselves but barriers to communication with other people are thrown into economic or military contact with other people because of industrialization, urbanization, or conquest and become aware of their distinctive cultural characteristics. The theory takes into account caste and class differentials, demographic changes, division of labor, assimilation, and a number of other sociological variables, but its key concept is communication." (Am Soc R) Bibliography. Index.

"Although the study is frankly programmatic in character, the concern with rigorous concept development and the testing of hypotheses mark a contribution of merit." H. W. Basehart

+ Am Anthropol 56:1158 D '54 800w

Reviewed by Donald Horton

Am J Soc 59:484 Mr '54 1200w

Reviewed by H. D. Lasswell

Am Pol Sci R 48:554 Je '54 900w

"This [is a] splendid study." A. M. Rose

+ Am Soc R 19:105 F '54 600w

Reviewed by E. C. Wilson

Ann Am Acad 293:166 My '54 550w

Foreign Affairs 32:505 Ap '54 20w

"This is a subtle and brilliant book, full of exciting new perspectives and fascinating maps and charts. It deserves to be thought the most important contribution to the analysis of nationalism since the works of Carleton Hayes and Hans Kohn. For laymen it is too technical to reach a wide market. But as a stimulus and guide to further research it should prove invaluable."

+ Nation 177:217 S 12 '53 240w

"Comprehensive appendices, statistical data, and graphic representations, all painstakingly collected and carefully presented, support the author's exposition of the communications theory." H. M. Helfman

+ Social Studies 45:269 N '54 600w

U S Quarterly 112 9:454 D '53 350w

DEUTSCHER, ISAAC. Prophet armed: Trotsky, 1879-1921. 540p $6 Oxford

B or 92 Trotsky, Leon, originally Lev Davidovich Bronshteyn 54-5291

The first of two volumes on the life of Trotsky. It follows his career from his birth in the Ukraine, thru his sensational trial in St Petersburg, his exile in Siberia, and his travels in Europe, to the Bolshevik revolution. Bibliography. Index.

"The first volume on Trotsky, carrying him to the pinnacle of his fortunes and foreshadowing, in the final chapter, his descent to a bloody grave, is a well-informed, well-organized, and exceptionally well-written book. . . . Few errors and only one big distortion appear in this careful study. . . . A scholar with Marxist leanings invariably stumbles when he comes to the agrarian problem. Deutscher is no exception." O. H. Radkey

+ — Am Hist R 60:105 O '54 800w

"Despite its unpromising moral and intellectual framework, The Prophet Armed is a moving and compassionate book. The cold reluctance of Deutscher's apologetics for Stalin are forced upon him by the dogmatics of his political position. But his life of Trotsky is done con amore. The writing takes on deeper dimensions. The research is more thorough, his protagonist more self-revealing. The tragedy of the conflict between the protagonist's dreams and the consequences of his deeds is deeply felt and ably presented. Only at the very end does the cold apologist return to hint that "when next the Prophet Unarmed is contemplated, the question will arise whether a strong element of victory was not concealed in his very defeat." B. D. Wolfe

+ Ann Am Acad 294:222 J1 '54 700w

"This first volume of a projected two-volume study of Trotsky is a brilliant, readable, and controversial work."

+ Atlantic 193:84 My '54 220w

Booklist 50:295 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:156 Ap '54 30w

"Deutscher, already known for his life of Stalin, has done excellent research work on the present biography and has found interesting new material in the Trotsky archives at Harvard. He is especially successful in making Trotsky come alive as a person in the strange underground revolutionary atmosphere in which he lived and in showing the development of his relations with Lenin, Plekhanov, Martov, and other outstanding revolutionaries." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 28 '54 400w

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 3 '54 700w

"This book is a first-rate example of twentieth century historiography. . . In one sense, Trotsky can be seen as the victim of an almost Greek fate. . . But in a more profound sense, Trotsky's fate is that of the event-making hero; his tragedy more Elizabethan than Greek. . . I think Deutscher's characterization of Trotsky is magnificent in grasping this." Michael Harrington

+ Commonweal 59:557 Mr 5 '54 1400w

"This book will surely rank as one of the outstanding works on one of history's most colorful characters. . . Much of this work is based on hitherto untapped sources—memoirs of other Russian and European Socialist leaders and the Trotsky archives at the Houghton Library, Harvard University."

+ Current Hist 26:254 Ap '54 270w

Foreign Affairs 32:678 J1 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:89 F 1 '54 250w

"Deutscher combines detachment of scholar with the empathy necessary for real understanding to give fascinating picture of a brilliant leader who lacked the necessary depths to be a true statesman. Fully documented work written with considerable verve will keep the reader enthralled. Recommended for all public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:453 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Trotsky's career was so extraordinary, and it is so well told, that this book ought to give pleasure to a wide public. But it will be of value also to the serious student of Russia or of communism. It gives the best account available in a Western language of Trotsky's earlier writings, which were published at the time but are extremely hard to find nowadays." Hugh Seton-Watson

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 19 '54 850w

"Mr. Deutscher supports this dramatic chronicle with massive research, most of it in Russian sources some of which are little known in the West. And if in dealing with his subject's early life he appears, perhaps unavoidably, to rely too heavily on Trotsky's autobiography, he severs this dependence early to turn to the evidence supplied by Trotsky's friends and foes. . . The book, it seems to me, is not without shortcomings. I would have been happier to see the volume culminate on a note of triumph, around 1920-22 or perhaps with Lenin's death, rather than on a vague premonitory note of disaster." Mark Gayn

+ Nation 178:178 F 27 '54 750w

"Mr. Deutscher has done a striking work of rehabilitation. This is the story of Trotsky's triumph. It carries him through the victory of the revolution and the civil war to his highest moment, when he seemed the predestined successor of Lenin." A. J. P. Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:226 F 20 '54 2400w

"It is written with sympathy, understanding, and rare detachment." Merle Fainsod

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 21 '54 750w

"This reviewer approached Isaac Deutscher's latest book with reservations, but many of these soon yielded to admiration for a first-rate performance. As the first in a projected two-volume study of Trotsky, it is a brilliant biography and a valuable contribution to political history." F. C. Barghoorn

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 7 '54 1050w

"Deutscher has made fine use of the Trotsky Archives at Harvard and the rich collection of the Hoover Library at Stanford, and the account of the early differences and clashes among the revolutionaries is illuminating. It was at the moments when great events were in the making, however, that Trotsky's temperament came into its own, and it is in the description of his hero as a man of eloquence and energy in times of crisis that Deutscher's biography is most vivid." Leo Grulio

+ Pol Sci Q 69:627 D '54 1350w

"Following the materials so richly provided by Trotsky's writings, speeches, recorded actions, and autobiographical writings, Mr. Deutscher has transcended the framework of his own conception of his hero and his deeds, and has produced a biographical history which is well organized, illuminating, compassionate, and fascinating to read. Those who have been repelled by the cold ruthlessness of his two works on Stalin would do well to try Deutscher again." B. D. Wolfe

+ Sat R 37:19 Ap 17 '54 700w

"When all is said, perhaps the greatest criticism which can be made of this book is that it somehow fails to bring its subject to life. Trotsky was the successful exponent of ideas which have affected the lives of many millions of human beings. He was also, in my opinion, a great Russian leader of the calibre of Minin and Dmitri Donskoi. In 1921, when this volume ends, he had completed his life's work. In 1954 it is perhaps too soon for Trotsky to fall into correct historical perspective, and it must be left to a future biographer to fill in the gaps of Mr. Deutscher's valuable work." Richard Chancellor

Spec p560 My 7 '54 600w

"Trotsky is an unrivalled subject for biography. Mr. Deutscher's The Prophet Armed is a more penetrating and more mature work than his earlier biography of Stalin, dramatic though that was and unsurpassed though it still remains. The present book has the advantage that the author, though far from uncritical, has a basic sympathy with Trotsky as marked as his antipathy for his previous subject. It is also, far more than its predecessor, a work of original research."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p113 F 19 '54 3450w

"Admirable life of Trotsky to the year 1921." Crane Brinton

+ Yale R n s 43:613-summer '54 800w

DE VILMORIN, LOUISE. See Vilmorin, L. de

DE VRIES, PETER. Tunnel of love. 246p $3.50 Little

54-6879

"This is the incredible story of Augie Poole, an unsuccessful cartoonist who cultivates sedulously all the vices of the great artist in the hope that somewhere along the way talent may rub off on him. And the only talent that does is a gift for gag-line writing which he scorns. This is the story of his wife Isolde Poole, who longed to complete her home life with a child, and of her and Augie's canvassing of the various adoption agencies. It is also the story of the Poole's neighbors, the narrator and his wife Audrey, who find themselves hopelessly enmeshed in Augie's and Isolde's affairs." Sat R

"The Tunnel of Love is an unqualified delight; and a shrewd sense of life's realities glints through the overtones of farce." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:85 J1 '54 90w

Booklist 50:380 Je 1 '54

DE VRIES, PETER—Continued

"Altogether it is a diverting bit of fluff.
Carlyle King

+ Canadian Forum 34:141 S '54 300w

"De Vries seems to be trying to say something about the violent and unpredictable effects of love and desire, but he has chosen a singularly diffuse and inconclusive way of saying it. The individual episodes are variously entertaining. . . De Vries' success with comic material of this order can only heighten one's regret that he saw fit to make a novel of these attractive stories." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 23 '54 280w

Kirkus 22:166 Mr 1 '54 200w

"We are made to laugh and we are made to think. Although it has its shortcomings, 'The Tunnel of Love' is a rarity among comic novels, and worthy of widespread celebration." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 23 '54 460w

"'The Tunnel of Love' is a humorous novel of the choicest order. Nothing ■ entrancing has come my way since 'The Catcher in the Rye.'" C. J. Rolo

+ N Y Times p5 My 23 '54 600w

Reviewed by Lewis Vogler

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 4 '54 500w

"In 'The Tunnel of Love,' one of the funniest novels to come along in any season, [the author] uses his puns and fantasies to mask a sometimes frighteningly keen observation of suburban and creative mores in one of those southern Connecticut communities populated by the Babbitts of Bohemia. . . About the only beef I have with the book is its totally unnecessary use of a flashback technique when it could have been told just as amusingly and more simply for the reader in chronological sequence." Al Hine

+ Sat R 37:14 My 15 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 160w

"Author De Vries, ■ writer for The New Yorker, has an acute sense of the absurd and an absurd way of being acute. He has written an amusing, screwball farce."

+ Time 63:113 My 24 '54 500w

DEWEY, THOMAS BLANCHARD. Prey for me. 210p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

54-5008

Detective story.

Kirkus 21:772 D 1 '53 60w

"Not equal to its predecessor, but with that worthy work, some measures above any of Mr. Dewey's earlier books." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 7 '54 150w

"Thomas B. Dewey's Prey For Me is a solidly satisfactory story in the best pre-Spillane tradition of the hard-boiled detective story: fast, believable, well-characterized, with a nice balance of restraint and overt violence. Even familiar plot devices are so twisted ■ to take on new life." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p28 F 28 '54 50w

"This isn't strikingly different from other good hardboiled items, but you keep reading it." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 14 '54 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap ■ '54 20w

DEWHURST, CLAUDE HECTOR. Close contact. 173p $4 Houghton

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations. National characteristics, Russian. Communism—Russia 54-12834

The author was from 1951 to 1953 Chief of the British mission to the Soviet forces in Eastern Germany, and before that had served as military attaché in Yugoslavia. This book is an informal, good-humored account of his contacts with the Communists.

"Gen. Dewhurst likes the Russians, but not the Communists, and—though not the first to do this—makes quite a case explaining their behavior as arising out of a deep inferiority complex. While neither scholarly nor very revealing, this lively book is informative and pleasant reading. Recommended for public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 79:1891 O 15 '54 130w

"With more than a grain of salt for the conjectural portions, the reader will find 'Close Contact' a light, tasty and nourishing dish."

B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 D 26 '54 550w

"Dewhurst's personal conduct gives rise to the false impression of a playboy, but lurking behind mannerisms of speech and behavior there is a sharp and subtle mind at work—a mind that rarely sleeps. . . It is unfortunate that he devoted only one brief chapter in his interesting book to his experiences as military attaché in Yugoslavia before and after Tito's break with the Cominform. I am sure that if he were at liberty to do so, he could produce a most valuable account of the Yugoslav problem." M. S. Handler

+ N Y Times p6 D 12 '54 900w

New Yorker 30:166 O 16 '54 160w

"His record is not only lively and readable but is an important one. At a time of mounting hysteria and withdrawal it is good to listen to a man who is neither afraid of the Communists nor baffled by them, who has been able to deal with them week in and week out."

W. K. C.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 31 '54 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 29 '54 200w

DE WOHL, LOUIS. Second conquest. 239p $3 Lippincott

54-5595

Science fiction.

Booklist 50:360 My 15 '54

"This is science-fiction with a religious content and should surprise those readers of The Restless Flame, The Golden Thread and Set All Afire who have found this author's fictionalized biographies of early church fathers worthwhile in scholarship and research."

Kirkus 22:42 Ja 15 '54 180w

"Devout Catholics and devoted s. f. addicts may form strange ideas of each other's reading matter from this misbegotten hybrid." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 4 '54 90w

"This wild yarn of a trip to Mars is a foggy attempt at fusing together science, fiction and theology. I'm afraid the book is a failure on all three accounts." J. F. McC.

+ N Y Times p38 S 12 '54 180w

DEWOLF, LOTAN HAROLD. Theology of the living church. 383p $5 Harper

230 Theology

53-5989

"For those who can still ride the 'prancing steeds' of theology, here is a summa, in six parts and forty-three chapters, of Personalist exposition and defense, supplemented by an extensive bibliography of representative literature on supernatural. Acknowledgements, citations, and a memorial note for Edgar S. Brightman, make it clear that in inspiration and development this is strictly in the Boston University, Knudson-Brightman succession. A special concern is to bridge the gap between the remote theistic discourse of the seminaries and the robust naturalism of modern man." U S Quarterly Bk R

"To have written a one-volume treatise on systematic theology is in itself an unusual achievement in our modern world, but to have done it so well in this case is truly remarkable. One is hard put to it to discover any serious omission of subject matter common to such works, although readers will often wish that the author could have expanded the treatment. The literary qualities are arresting. In almost no instance must one read a sentence twice to understand what is meant—even when the profoundest and most difficult problems are dealt with." R. E. Gilmore

+ Christian Century 71:143 F 3 '54 1300w

"Should be a valuable text book for seminarians and for Protestant ministers who are interested in theology. DeWolf is one who has not thrown in his lot with the neo-orthodox theology. In fact, he has been and is extremely critical of some of its emphases. Nevertheless, his theological liberalism has been modified by recent developments in Christian thought. Particularly refreshing is the author's attempt to relate theology to life and to show the bearing of Christian convictions upon the affairs of the work-a-day world. . . . A book which will attract considerable attention in Protestant theological circles."

+ Kirkus 21:443 J1 15 '53 240w

U S Quarterly Bk R 9:432 D '53 240w

DIAMOND, FRED A. Story of glass. 246p il $3.75 Harcourt

666.1 Glass 53-7864

"Informal, fact-crammed volume, tracing the history of glass and showing its use in the decorative arts, in windows, mirrors, lenses, lighting, in science and modern industry. Photographs. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:186 Ja 1 '54

Bookmark 13:82 Ja '54 30w

"I found it enthralling reading." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 30:40 F '54 90w

Reviewed by Dorothy Schumacher
Library J 79:150 Ja 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 21 '54 40w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54 120w
Wis Lib Bul 50:25 Ja '54

DICK, TRELLA LAMSON. Tornado Jones; il. by Mary Stevens. 286p $2.95 Wilcox & Follett

53-12984

The friendship of two boys, Tornado Jones who lived in the sandhill country of Nebraska, and Paul, whose father was in charge of the new dam, is described in this story for grades 4 to 7. There is a hundred-year-old mystery to add to the excitement of dam-building and treasure-hunting.

Booklist 50:188 Ja 1 '54

"A long, rich-flavored simply told story of life in a small Nebraska community, it has just about everything readers of 10 and over seek in a book." P. G.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 N 15 '53 140w

"This newest winner of the Charles W. Follett Award does not measure up to some of the earlier ones. The author tries to get in too much in the way of plot. . . . Boys and girls will enjoy the book, however, and it does have definite values." J. D. L.

+ — Horn Bk 30:35 F '54 90w

"In the main, too shallow for real literary merit, but an apt narrative and fine local color add to the satisfaction of a happy ending."

+ — Kirkus 21:738 N 15 '53 150w

"A lively story sure of appeal to fifth- and sixth-grade boys." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 78:2107 D 1 '53 50w

"No one need worry about television luring the younger generation from books permanently when there are new stories as good as this one. There isn't a page that doesn't zip along with short brisk sentences and fast doings that keep eyes moving eagerly from chapter to chapter." M. F. Kieran

+ N Y Times p28 N 15 '53 170w

Wis Lib Bul 50:80 Mr '54

DICKERSON, ROY ERNEST. Into manhood. 116p il $2 Assn. press

612.6 Sex instruction 54-8023

"Introduction to the meaning of sex and morality in the life of a boy and man, written for pre-teen and early-teen boys." Publisher's note

"Supplanting the author's earlier volume, Growing Into Manhood [Book Review Digest 1933] this current work is more comprehensive and up to date. . . . The new volume can be read profitably by many boys themselves, although some may need parental help in its understanding and interpretation. In fact it will do plenty of parents good to review the author's facts and philosophy if only for a refresher." R. H. Everett

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1085 Ag '54 230w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 30w

DICKIE, EDGAR PRIMROSE. God is light; studies in revelation and personal conviction. 261p $3 Scribner

234 Revelation. Salvation 54-8545

"Dr. Dickie, now professor of divinity in the University of St. Andrews, states the case for the necessity and reality of revelation, and for the validity of the testimony offered to it by religious experience. The argument is that of a thinker who does not underrate the power of human reason and who is well aware of the philosophical approaches to the problem of knowledge. His analysis of the nature of man and the world leads him to the reasoned conclusion that 'the spiritual is most rational.'" (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 71:877 J1 21 '54 70w

"The middle-of-the-road theologian will welcome this book; others should read it." H. G. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 18 '54 150w

DICKSON, CARTER, pseud. See Carr, J. D.

DILLE, JOHN. Substitute for victory. 219p $3 Doubleday

951.9 Korean war, 1950- 54-5359

A Life correspondent reviews the history and results of the war in Korea, ending on an optimistic note that we really did accomplish something for the betterment of the situation in the Far East.

Booklist 50:317 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:181 My '54 40w

Reviewed by Walter Simmons
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 21 '54 470w

Current Hist 26:318 My '54 100w

Foreign Affairs 33:169 O '54 30w

"This title is an important contribution clearly presenting an intelligent point of view and as a book does not require more background than most potential readers have. It is somewhat of an introduction for the general reader, including opinions of the state of affairs in Formosa and Japan. For those libraries needing material on Korea and Japan." R. P. Bartolini

+ Library J 79:200 F 1 '54 110w

"A brisk, naive, honest, irreverent, and often useful book by a young Life correspondent who spent two years in Korea and adjacent countries. . . . Those who want a sober second look at Korea, Japan, and Formosa might find here a field full of factual nuggets."

+ Nation 178:340 Ap 17 '54 260w

DILLE, JOHN—Continued

"One of the graces of this book is that Mr. Dille's old friends can thrash out their differences with him on a thoughtful level that he has himself set. He has come away from a two-year writing hitch for Life magazine in Korea, Japan and Formosa with respect for what democracy has accomplished there. And it is straightforward reports like his that make us less confused and more proud about the free world's defense of the first-born state of the United Nations." George Barrett

+ — N Y Times p3 F 7 '54 700w

"Rather loosely written, but honest and very much in earnest."

+ — New Yorker 30:134 Mr 13 '54 130w

"This penetrating analysis of conditions in Korea, Japan and Formosa could be read profitably by almost anyone who is interested in Far Eastern affairs. That should mean all of us, because whether we like it or not, our future is inextricably interwoven with that of the Far East." G. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 25 '54 280w

DILLENBERGER, JOHN, and WELCH, CLAUDE. Protestant Christianity; interpreted through its development. 340p $4.50 Scribner

284 Protestantism

54-10367

A work on the development of Protestant Christianity from the Reformation to the present. Dr Dillenger is now associate professor of theology at Harvard Divinity School; Dr Welch is on the faculty of the Divinity School of Yale university.

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 20w

"Here we have a well organized and well written account of the development of Protestant thought and life. . . The writers are objective and state fairly the various theological positions described. A good book to recommend to Protestants of the pew."

+ Kirkus 22:577 Ag 15 '54 190w

"Hitherto there has been no single volume explaining the nature of Protestant Christianity that could be recommended without qualification. . . In this volume, however, the thoughtful reader will have the satisfaction of seeing the whole of the Protestant movement without which, it is safe to say, he cannot possibly understand either himself or the heritage of modern times, and he will see deeply into it. Its remarkable achievement of balance, lucidity, inclusiveness and contemporary relevance cannot be overemphasized." Paul Ramsey

+ N Y Times p40 N 21 '54 310w

DILLON, EILIS. Lost island. [il. by Robin King]. 248p $2.75 Funk

54-7760

Mystery story for young readers.

Booklist 50:456 Jl 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"The story is not one of fantasy, but wholly real as the boys under great odds succeed in getting to sea and find both Mr. Farrell and a rare living treasure. Beginning quietly with an ordinary market day, the book gathers speed and holds the reader enthralled to its conclusion." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:251 Ag '54 100w

Kirkus 22:202 Mr 15 '54 100w

"Good plot, characterization, and convincing atmosphere in a well-written story of Irish fisher folk. Interest and suspense well sustained. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 79:1240 Je 15 '54 70w

"Eilis Dillon, an Irish writer, has concocted an A-1 adventure story. The ingredients are familiar but the final product has the fresh charm of a fine, spring morn in Galway." Howard Boston

+ N Y Times p31 Je 6 '54 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 14 '54 40w

DILLON, EILIS. San Sebastian [il. by Victor Mays]. 241p $2.75 Funk

54-11301

A mystery story for boys of twelve to fourteen. The setting is contemporary Ireland and the sea near Connemara.

"A first-rate sea story." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 194:96 D '54 20w

Kirkus 22:440 Jl 15 '54 140w

"Recommended for good readers 12-16 in school and public libraries." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 79:2500 D 15 '54 90w

"I thought it well done; the fights are good, the mystery of the ship is sustained, and it is very nicely written." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:730 D 5 '53 110w

"The style is pleasant, the village life and the village people are well portrayed, and Pat's adventures with a couple of exotic villains provide the kind of action and suspense younger teen-agers enjoy." L. M.

+ Sat 37:94 N 13 '54 70w

"The fight, the accidental discovery within the San Sebastian of treasure ultimately spent on a fleet of trawlers for the village; all these are sound, solid, actual, as well as strange and wild."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p16 N 27 '53 180w

DIMOCK, ARTHUR WATSON. Gardener's A B C of pest and disease [ed. by Helen Van Pelt Wilson]. 191p il $2.95 Barrows

632 Plants—Diseases and pests 53-9661

A handbook on the diseases and pests of ordinary garden plants, for the layman. Includes an alphabetical list of plants, with brief notations on the pests which attack each, and the methods of combating them. Index.

Booklist 50:292 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:136 Mr '54 30w

"Amateur gardeners too busy to delve deeply into the problems of ailing plants will find this book most helpful in their war on insect pests and diseases." Art Kozelka

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 4 '54 30w

"This is a practical handbook rather than a study of pest and disease and procedure, and for the small area gardener, with limited time, it should prove a godsend (and not as disheartening as some of its competitors). . . The author writes out of double experience, as a home gardener, and a plantpathologist and entomologist."

+ Kirkus 22:185 Mr 1 '54 150w

DIMOND, STANLEY E. Schools and the development of good citizens. See Citizenship education study, Detroit

DIMSDALE, THOMAS JOSIAH. Vigilantes of Montana; with an introd. by E. De Golyer. (Western frontier lib) [new ed] 268p $2 Univ. of Okla. press

978.6 Crime and criminals—Montana. Frontier and pioneer life—Montana. Vigilance committees 53-9887

The story of a Western bad man, Henry Plummer, who terrorized his section of Montana in the 1860's. The author was an English professor who settled in Montana in 1863, observed the activities of Plummer and his gang, and also of the Vigilantes, as the forces of law and order were called, and wrote a book about it. The book is now issued as the initial volume in The Western Frontier Library.

"Probably more blood is spilled to the page than in the wildest of western fiction. It's thrilling reading." Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 10 '54 90w

"The Vigilantes of Montana contributed an absorbing chapter to frontier history. Their activities, in terms of summary executions of lawbreakers completely eclipse the more publicized achievements of the San Francisco 'committee.' Dimsdale's account is that of an eyewitness who wrote guardedly but quite accurately of the coming of law to Grasshopper Creek and Alder Gulch. The original edition is virtually unobtainable and this moderately priced reprint is a valuable addition to the Western shelf." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 3 '54 460w

"This is the story of Henry Plummer; the factual story of the man who has spawned more frantic fiction than any other figure of the Old West, William Bonney possibly excluded. As such, it is a must (horrid word) for any who profess to be aficionados of the years of mythology west of the hundredth meridian." W. H. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 13 '53 600w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 3 '53 230w

"Dimsdale's book is a good beginning for the series and amply bears out the publisher's claims for 'the freshness and veracity of such near-classic volumes,' not the least part of the freshness of which is the two-dollar price." Seth Agnew

+ Sat R 36:10 D 26 '53 500w

DINGLE, HERBERT. Scientific adventure; essays in the history and philosophy of science. 372p $6 Philosophical lib.

501 Science—History. Science—Philosophy 53-8041

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"These essays are bright and well written and unusually informative, but they are somewhat marred by the belief common to scientists that a little more than 300 years ago, Galileo originated the process in philosophy which, in its maturer form, we now call science." Such a statement ignores a major body of research in the history of science which, especially in recent decades, has seen notable additions which completely destroy whatever validity it might have had to a previous generation. Professor Dingle's insistence that science began with Galileo indicates more than a disregard of historical research; for it implies a somewhat restricted definition of science which weakens his general thesis that science must be conceived in terms of persistent growing elements." I. B. Cohen

+ — Am Hist R 59:347 Ja '54 500w

Christian Century 71:337 Mr 17 '54 110w

"Most of the essays were originally written as addresses to various learned societies and most of them have already been published, between 1937 and 1950, in scientific or philosophical journals. Nevertheless, it is extremely useful to have these essays now conveniently assembled in a single volume." Robert Palter

+ Ethics 64:141 Ja '54 1700w

DINNEEN, JOSEPH FRANCIS. Anatomy of a crime; a startling parallel to the fantastic $2,500,000 Brink's robbery. 212p $2.95 Scribner

54-6519

"At 7:10 on the night of Jan. 17, 1950, seven masked men walked into the Boston office of Brink's Inc., the armored-truck service. At 7:30 they walked out with $2,500,000. It was the biggest known burglary of modern times. . . A crime reporter for the Boston Globe, Author Dinneen calls his fictionalized story 'a startling parallel' to the Brink's case. Actually, the parallel is almost exact. His hero is a cop, his villain a stool pigeon, and the climax of the book is a description of exactly how the big job was pulled." Time

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 10 '54 550w

Kirkus 22:410 J1 1 '54 250w

"Mr Dinneen's intention is sober and his treatment never sensational. The consequence is quite as absorbing for its account of the relationship of police and criminal as for the striking incidents with which it deals." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 19 '54 100w

"To avoid future contempt of court or libel suits, this reporter of The Boston Globe has disguised all names, dates and places and produced (so far as I can see) a meaningless and worthless book, too fictionized to be of any value as fact-crime, too amateurishly inept to serve as fiction." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p40 S 12 '54 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p9 S 6 '54 600w

"The only criticism I have of Dinneen's book is that he paints an extraordinarily rosy picture of police procedures in Boston. . . [Otherwise] Joe Dinneen presents things the way they are, not the way we'd like to think they are." Croswell Bowen

+ Sat R 37:32 O 2 '54 1050w

Time 64:122 S 20 '54 160w

DIOLE, PHILIPPE. 4,000 years under the sea; tr. by Gerard Hopkins. 237p il $4.50 Messner

913 Archeology. Diving, Submarine 54-6762

A chronicle of undersea archeological exploration. The author, an experimenter in skin diving, describes work, mainly in the Mediterranean and along the coast of Africa, and tells about some of the interesting objects recovered in this new science. Among them are amphorae, nails, marble, coins, and other evidences of ancient civilizations. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:249; 352 Mr 1 '54; My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

Reviewed by Fritz Leiber

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 J1 4 '54 300w

Christian Century 71:978 Ag 18 '54 100w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '54 500w

+ Kirkus 22:93 F 1 '54 300w

"A work of scholarship and erudition which manages to combine literary grace and urbanity with the freshness and thrills of a new type of exploration." Joseph Bram

+ Library J 79:542 Mr 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by Olwen Brogan

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 10 '54 380w

Reviewed by Richard Garnett

New Statesman & Nation 48:215 Ag 21 '54 300w

"M. Diolé has an inimitable way of combining his varied learning with poetic description of the sea and its past. Sometimes it is quite impossible to disentangle science from adventure and adventure from poetry. Fortunately Mr. Hopkins has provided an excellent translation—one of the very best renderings of a current book ever seen by this reviewer. To the discriminating reader the aesthetic touch which only a Frenchman can give to his material is wholly delightful." W. F. Albright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 6 '54 450w

"'4,000 Years Under the Sea' is a work of considerable erudition, for M. Diolé is a pioneer, and an enthusiastic one, in the almost virgin field of marine archaeology. Those who are not experts on Graeco-Roman history will find much of his book somewhat heavy going. But it may inspire many underwater enthusiasts who are getting a little tired of impaling defenseless fish and want to do something more constructive. Archaeology is one of the few sciences in which the amateur

DIOLE, PHILIPPE—Continued
can still make important discoveries." A. C. Clarke

+ N Y Times p6 My 16 '54 700w
New Yorker 30:75 J1 10 '54 180w

"In this second book, continuing the story of his underseas exploration, the author brings his beliefs to a sharper focus. He also breaks ground in a new direction. This is the first book to be written on what will doubtless come to be called marine archaeology." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 6 '54 1150w

"Diolé has woven together odds and ends of personal and vicarious observation with what is known of the maritime trade of the early Roman Empire and of earlier times, in such a way that the reader is entranced. The older Mediterranean civilization begins to come to life through these first steps in the exploration of man's own work along the now submerged margin in an exciting way. His book is fascinating and authentic." N. J. Berrill

+ Sat R 37:20 My 22 '54 800w

"M. Diolé's book, despite the superficial similarities, turns out to be as different as his element. He dives as an archæologist, which is to say in his case as a humanist, chiefly around the Mediterranean seaboard but also with a tantalisingly brief excursion to the fabled coast of Brittany. And he dives, at the outset of the account, so quickly into the poetry and the mysticism of his subject as to alarm the reader who wants to know what it is all about and what new knowledge is really being fished up. Read on, for you will be informed as well as captivated." Francis Watson

+ Spec p264 Ag 27 '54 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p658 O 15 '54 750w

Wis Lib Bul 50:178 J1 '54

DIOR, CHRISTIAN. Talking about fashion; as told to Elie Rabourdin and Alice Chavane; tr. by Eugenia Sheppard. 112p il $2.50 Putnam

646.01 Fashion 54-5486

Reminiscences of a famous French fashion designer, dealing chiefly with his career, during the middle '30s as an unknown fashion illustrator, and in the post-war years when he became famous with the introduction of the New Look.

"Christian Dior, the world's most famous couturier, is possibly today's best-known Frenchman. He is also an extremely intelligent Frenchman, connoisseur of arts and letters. Thus talking about fashion with Christian Dior is an instructive as well as fascinating experience." Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29 '54 420w

Kirkus 22:175 Mr 1 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 My 16 '54 60w

DIRINGER, DAVID. Hand-produced book. 603p il $15 Philosophical lib.

655.4 Books—History. Manuscripts 53-7899

"The second volume in Diringer's series covering the history of manuscripts. . . The present volume concerns the materials and techniques of bookmaking and some probing of the social forces which resulted in publication. Beginning with the earliest recorded books, the author follows the pattern he established in The Alphabet [Book Review Digest 1948] of attempting world-wide coverage, discussing various African, Asian, and pre-Columbian American manuscripts which seldom find mention in Western histories of the book." (Library Q) Bibliographies. Index.

"The strength of this volume lies in the attention the author pays to extant manuscripts from all times and many places. He describes their discovery, their contents, and their present location in libraries. With the profuse illustrations in photographic facsimile of the manuscripts discussed, this serves as a valuable guide to the oldest known examples of book production." Howard Winger

+ Library Q 24:406 O '54 500w

"His book is packed with information and summaries of the findings of recent research. There are inevitably lacunae; for example, in his account of the book in the Middle Ages. Nor does he always avoid the temptation of straying from his central theme into the general field of history and literature, where some of his comments might profitably have been omitted. But within a relatively narrow compass he has succeeded in covering a wide and complex subject." F. Taylor

+ Manchester Guardian p8 N 27 '53 230w

"Dr. Diringer's new book is a remarkable work of synthetic scholarship, a history of 'the book' from scratchings in prehistoric caves to the invention of printing. For sheer weight of information there is no equal to it as a study of the physical appearance of the hand-produced book, and the wealth of illustrations adds greatly to its value." M. S.

+ Spec p616 N 20 '53 360w

"From such a broad survey as this, there are few readers who will not learn new facts, who will not be enlightened by some surprising points of contact in the development of the book-form in widely scattered regions, and who will not be instructed by the many well-chosen illustrations. The writer is learned, and where points are uncertain he offers a variety of authoritative opinions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p48 Ja 15 '54 950w

DIRKS, WALTER. Monk and the world; tr. by Daniel Coogan. 234p $3.50 McKay
271 Monasticism. Saints

A study of the part played by orders of monks in the work of the Catholic church. The author is a German newspaper man and author. No index.

"A work that requires close reading. One that reveals the author as no simple reporter, no collector of humorous truth or dubious legend, no rewrite man for flat and factual history. This is the work of an analyst, who sees history as movement. Not any movement, but a certain divine dynamism in which all things are tied together with a common reference, a reference to salvation." J. J. Keating

+ Cath World 179:480 S '54 340w

"This is a brilliant essay. It is enlightening and maddening by turns, and dull only in the infrequent pages where the stream of exposition widens out into the ponds and marshes of the historiographer's jargon. The book deserves a wide reading." Francis Sweeney

+ Commonweal 60:466 Ag 13 '54 800w

Kirkus 22:191 Mr 15 '54 120w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Last straw. 192p $2.75 Doubleday

54-11153

Detective story.

"Slow but steady."

+ Kirkus 22:600 S 1 '54 40w

"It's all plainly done from plain stuffs, but it has a steady interest." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 14 '54 90w

"Agreeable reading." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p42 N 28 '54 40w

"There is no one more adroit than Miss Disney in using small circumstances to bring murderers to book, and she does it very effectively this time, too. On the whole, quite a tidy piece of work."

+ New Yorker 30:244 D 4 '54 110w

"Ordinary." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:53 D 11 '54 30w

DITTERT, RENE, and others. Forerunners to Everest; the story of the two Swiss expeditions of 1952; pref. by Sir John Hunt; English version by Malcolm Barnes. 256p il maps $4 Harper

954.2 [915.42] Everest, Mount. Mountaineering 54-10078

The accounts of two attempts to climb Mt Everest, made by Swiss climbers in the spring and fall of 1952. No index. Library of Congress enters under Chevalley, Gabriel, the first author as listed on the French edition, published in Paris in 1953.

"This is the modest and stirring account, illustrated with fine photographs. . . Readers of this story will fully agree with the response which Sir John Hunt made when he was congratulated by the Swiss climbers: 'To you—a good half of the glory.'" C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:102 O '54 150w

Booklist 51:60 O 1 '54

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 5 '54 50w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 300w

"Should be available in all libraries to supplement Hunt's Conquest of Everest." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:2105 N 1 '54 40w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith

New Statesman & Nation 48:553 O 30 '54 240w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 S 26 '54 50w

"There is one thing which, even in defeat, the Swiss team cannot be denied. They may not have reached the summit of Everest, but the account which they have presented of their two attacks upon it is very close to the top of mountaineering literature. In 'Forerunners to Everest,' which has a graceful preface by Sir John Hunt, leader of the successful British team, Rene Dittert, Gabriel Chevalley and Raymond Lambert have composed a narrative which is vivid and dramatic without bombast or false heroics and which for almost the first time in the history of mountaineering narrative makes every step of the ascent so clear to the reader that he can understand at every moment where the climbers are, what is behind them and what ahead of them." Raymond Holden

+ N Y Times p12 S 5 '54 750w

Reviewed by Keith Kent

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '54 150w

"The book is made up of diaries by the two leaders and the man who was so nearly 'the Swiss Hillary,' and is therefore rather scrappy and disjointed, missing both the stately coherence of Hunt's success-story and the vivid narrative pace of Herzog's Annapurna. But as a chapter in the history of human endurance it cannot be read without emotion." E. C.

Spec p71 J1 9 '54 280w

"There are 24 excellent photographs, with a frontispiece in color, and a number of maps and sketches." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ag 29 '54 420w

DITZEN, LOWELL RUSSELL. Personal security through faith; with an introd. by Ralph W. Sockman. 243p $3.50 Holt

252 Sermons, Faith 54-5446

A volume of sermons by the pastor of the Reformed Church of Bronxville, N.Y. Contents: Security through a mature evaluation of one's own place and worth; Our moods and security; Economic security; Security in service; Security through achievement; Security in our relationship with other people; Security in spite of tragedy; The inner citadel; Security through a growing religious faith and life.

Booklist 51:54 O 1 '54

Bookmark 13:233 J1 '54 30w

"Dr. Ditzen's advice is plain common sense, enriched and pointed up by his individualizing pastoral sense which enables him to illustrate his points from everyday life as well as from literature of the Bible. His practical hints for the development of a prayer life, his brief outline of the essentials of the Christian faith and his suggestions as to how that faith may be developed places this book upon the level on which most people live. It is a book that might 'catch on.' It richly deserves a wide reading."

+ Kirkus 22:190 Mr 15 '54 270w

"The book is replete with examples and quotations. The fact that it is free from piousness, sentimentality, or a psychoanalytical vocabulary greatly enhances its value for intelligent, even sophisticated laymen, whether they are on the first rung of maturity's ladder or well toward the top. Highly recommended for all public, college, medical, and religious libraries." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:767 Ap 15 '54 210w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 My 16 '54 20w

"Because he is essentially a preacher, the author underscores his points with almost countless quotations. His storeroom of anecdotes and illustrations is rich and varied." Ben Bradford

+ N Y Times p25 My 23 '54 450w

Wis Lib Bul 50:126 My '54

DIVINE, ARTHUR DURHAM. Golden fool, by David Divine [pseud]. 247p $3.50 Macmillan (N Y)

54-7520

A story of the discovery of gold on a South African farm in the 1860s.

Booklist 50:277 Mr 15 '54

"Tense, romantic, well-told novel of the African Transvaal."

+ Bookmark 13:185 My '54 30w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 14 '54 210w

Kirkus 21:798 D 15 '53 160w

"The 'golden fool' is not here one over-endowed with this world's goods but he who has interpreted the Golden Rule too slavishly. Divine admirably conveys the locale and spirit of this vast African region and does almost as well by his characters, but he has so underplayed (probably intentionally) in his writing that he does not convey the epic tragedy the reader may expect. Recommended." Karl Brown

+ — Library J 79:382 F 15 '54 150w

"Mr. Divine has given a most interesting picture of the life of the Boers in that day and of the background impulses which resulted in the Boer War."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 21 '54 410w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner

N Y Times p28 Ap 25 '54 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 6 '54 160w

"The pursuit with which the story is brought to an end is not without excitement, but when weighed against the accurate originality of the description it seems a rather conventional narrative device."

Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 12 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:72 Mr '54

DIVINE, DAVID, pseud. See Divine, A. D.

DIX, GREGORY. Jew and Greek. 119p $2.50 Harper

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church 54-1348

"A study in the primitive church." (Subtitle) At the time of his death in May 1952 Dom Gregory Dix left behind the manuscript of this book, which it had been his intention to rewrite and expand. The material contained in it he had originally prepared for lectures delivered at the University of Uppsala in February 1950, and subsequently revised for delivery in America. The work was prepared for publication by Canon H. J. Carpenter, Warden of Keble College, Oxford. (cf Foreword)

DIX, GREGORY—Continued

"The book is unfinished more or less throughout, but it is to be hoped that it will not fail on that account to find many readers." W. H. Cadman

+ Hibbert J 52:411 J1 '54 550w

"An interesting and extremely well written book which will be of especial concern to students of primitive Christianity."

+ Kirkus 22:309 My 1 '54 160w

"The late Dom Gregory Dix, the Anglican Benedictine, was one of the most respected of modern writers on Christian history and worship. . . In clear yet scholarly fashion Dom Gregory traces the development of the Jewish-Christian church, the church of the Gentiles and the form which the Christian gospel took among the Greeks." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 18 '54 60w

"When Dom Gregory Dix died, leaving the manuscript of the present work behind him, he had formed the intention to rewrite and expand it. From the compact, carefully articulated, forcefully imaginative study which survives it is easy to conceive how great a work might have resulted if the author had been able to develop what is now a long and brilliantly suggestive essay into an elaborated and fully illustrated composition on the grand scale. Even so, there remain the general outline of his thesis, manifold indications of the way in which he would have worked it out in detail, an astonishing display of learning both in depth and breadth, both theological and historical, and a series of illuminating judgments upon matters great and small."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p821 D 18 '53 1250w

DIXON, CECIL AUBREY, and HEILBRUNN, OTTO. Communist guerilla warfare; with a foreword by Sir Reginald F. S. Denning. 229p il maps $4.50 Praeger

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Guerrillas. Guerrillas [54-2258]

"A scientific study of guerilla warfare as advanced by Mao Tse-Tung and perfected by the Soviets during the campaign with Germany. The book is divided into three main sections, the first describes the Soviet guerillas in action, their organization and tactical tasks; the second concerns the German anti-guerillas; and the third is the conclusion which holds that guerilla units have become integral parts of regular armies and have revolutionized the concept of war." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Foreign Affairs 33:160 O '54 40w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 S ■ '54 70w

Reviewed by Mikhail Koriakov

N Y Times p30 D 5 '54 950w

"Valuable—and readable. . . This book ought to be widely read, discussed and criticized by regular soldiers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p339 My 28 '54 550w

DOANE, PELAGIE. Bible children; stories from the Old Testament. 64p col il $2.75 Lip-pincott

221.92 Bible stories 54-8487

Stories of the childhoods of ten Old Testament people: Isaac, Benjamin, David, Miriam, Samuel, the little Hebrew maid, Joash, Daniel, and Esther.

"Excellent to introduce children to Bible stories." Edmund Fuller

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 30w

"People who like Pelagie Doane's romanticized art work and informal prose will like this collection of curtailed stories of famous Biblical characters as children."

+ Kirkus 22:480 Ag 1 '54 80w

"This is such a complete retelling that none of the flavor of the Bible stories is left. The pictures are very sweet and of very young children when often the episodes told are about a much older age. Not as good as the author's earlier A Small Child's Bible, although this is aimed at younger readers." Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 79:1659 S 15 '54 70w

"This is a book that ought to be better than it is. Some of the pictures—all of them full-page, four-color ones—are charming, and the stories are the familiar ones which have a place in any child's inheritance. But the stories, for all their reverent attitude, seem weakly written."

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 14 '54 90w

DOBRINER, KONRAD, and others. Infrared absorption spectra of steroids (an atlas). 645p il $11.50 Interscience

535.3 Absorption spectra. Spectrum, Infra-red. Steroids 53-10755

"The greater part of this volume consists of reproductions of charts of the infrared absorption spectra of specific steroid compounds. The charts are arranged so that compounds containing similar functional groups are adjacent to one another. Each chart shows the spectrum of a particular compound and usually contains information on the experimental technique; that is, the type of prism, cell length and solvent used in obtaining the spectra. Altogether there are 308 charts. The book is an important one for biochemists whose work involves the identification of steroid compounds." N Y New Tech Bks

"While the arrangement of the spectral curves tends to stress the usefulness of the volume in the identification of steroids, there is much general information on infrared spectra of organic compounds to be obtained by a selective study of the curves presented and by referral to the clear and concise introductory section. Finally, the atlas represents a unique testament to the method which has revolutionized structural organic chemistry and a worthy memorial to Dr. Konrad Dobriner, who was a pioneer in the application of this method." N. J. Leonard

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:2031 Ap 5 '54 390w

Chem & Eng N 31:4717 N 9 '53 30w

Reviewed by C. M. Martini

Chem Eng 61:384 My '54 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:83 N '53

U S Quarterly Bk ■ 10:258 Je '54 240w

DODD, CHARLES HAROLD. New Testament studies. 182p $3 Scribner

225.04 Bible. N.T.—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 54-6301

Eight essays published in periodicals during the last twenty years and here reprinted. Their subject is the teaching of the New Testament. Partial contents: The framework of the Gospel narrative; Matthew and Paul; The Mind of Paul; Natural law in the New Testament; The communion of saints: The Ingersoll lecture on the Immortality of man, 1935; Eternal life: The Ingersoll lecture on the Immortality of man, 1950.

Christian Century 71:900 J1 28 '54 40w

"These essays are marked by the wide knowledge, deep insight, and lucid statement that we have grown accustomed to accept from Dr Dodd as a matter of course." T. M. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 9 '54 280w

DODD, ROBERT EDWARD, and ROBINSON, PERCY LUCOCK. Experimental inorganic chemistry; a guide to laboratory practice. 424p il $6.50 Elsevier

546 Chemistry, Inorganic

"A manual of experimental techniques and of related reference data useful to the research worker in inorganic chemistry. It does not cover analytical work, but it does contain useful descriptions of laboratory procedures in such techniques as crystallization, centrifugation, temperature measurement, glass working, dialysis, measurements of e.m.f. and literature searching. Although designed as an introduction, a considerable degree of previous education in chemistry is assumed. . . Each of the chapters includes an extensive bibliography. The authors are faculty members of Kings College, University of Durham." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Eng N 32:532 F ■ '54 20w

"This book should serve to bring up to date the other books, and to be a valuable guide to men engaging in research in inorganic chemistry, which is what it is intended for. . . The sections on techniques and methods of testing bring together in one volume information and cross references which will be of help to anyone interested in this field." J. A. Bishop

+ Chem Eng 61:374 O '54 500w

Library J 79:915 My 15 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:20 Mr '54

DODGE, BERTHA SANFORD. Story of nursing; il. by Barbara Corrigan. 243p $3 Little 610.73 Nurses and nursing—History 54-5111

An account of the experiences of some of the pioneers in nursing, with a historical sketch of the rise of the profession. Bibliography. Index.

"One more chapter telling of the fast developing opportunities for well prepared nurses to serve on the world-wide scene would have enriched and rounded out this sympathetic and moving portrayal of our profession. Thank you, Mrs. Dodge." Dorothy Deming

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1209 S '54 200w

Booklist 50:299 Ap 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 1 '54 140w

"A valuable book, that points to the real rewards."

+ Kirkus 22:121 F 15 '54 130w

"Clearly written to recruit girls for the nursing profession." R. H. Urban

+ Library J 79:565 Mr 15 '54 70w

"A moving foreword, an interesting bibliography, an index, complete what is surely one of the best books in this field yet published. The type page is attractive to young eyes, the decorations amusing. The author has been a teacher of nurses in St. Louis." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 11 '54 120w

"The breezy and informal style should appeal to young people. Emphasis is on the importance of the profession, the personal qualifications necessary to success, and the rewards and satisfactions to be gained. Quotations from letters and diaries and talks with present-day nurses and student nurses add realism to the story." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 15 '54 140w

Wis Lib Bul 50:144 My '54

DODGE, DAVID. Lights of Skaro. 248p $3 Random house

54-5733

A novel of suspense in which two American journalists, a man and a woman, are in flight from the police of an Iron Curtain country, the location of which is supposedly in Central Europe.

Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

"Mr. Dodge has managed a remarkably smooth succession of flashbacks to brief us as we run. The Superman finale is fairly silly, but as it leaves everybody but the conveniently opaque villain happy, I suppose we ought not to complain." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 14 '54 140w

"Even Dodge's excellent earlier books have hardly prepared one for the pure virtuosity of narrative excitement which he reveals here." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p28 F 28 '54 130w

"Even if you're tired of iron curtains, try this. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 14 '54 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:62 Ap 10 '54 20w

"Mr. Dodge writes with a conviction and a professional integrity which compel belief from the first page to the last. The events which lead from the churchyard to capture and deliverance are vividly imagined and most ably told." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec p378 S 24 '54 110w

DODGSON, CHARLES LUTWIDGE. See Carroll, L., pseud.

DODSON, KENNETH. Away all boats. 508p $3.95 Little

54-5123

"An attack-transport's job is to land troops on the beach, then stand by to supply them, care for the wounded and take off survivors in case of repulse. This book is a novelized history of World War II island-hopping in the Pacific, as experienced aboard the attack-transport Belinda. Kenneth Dodson's authoritative narrative takes the Belinda from Makin to Kwajalein, Saipan, Angaur, Lingayen Gulf and finally to Okinawa, where she is knocked out by a kamikaze." N Y Times

Booklist 50:259 Mr 1 '54

Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 30w

Reviewed by Carl Sandburg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 7 '54 1650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p37 D '54

"A superb closeup of the amphibious warfare which successively grew more nearly the perfect machine for island hopping naval campaigning in the Pacific. I got more the sense of seeing it happen, this is how it must have been, than in any other novel I have read, if novel you can call it. But the sixty four dollar question is, can the public take another fine but over-detailed, over-long war novel?"

+ Kirkus 22:9 Ja 1 '54 300w

"Highly recommended for all public libraries."

W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:450 Mr 1 '54 130w

"This book can best be described by saying what it is not. It is a war book and a long book, but it is not one of those deadly chronicles in which the war was fought under the leadership of fools and knaves for misunderstood objectives never attained. . . On the other hand it is not a reaffirmation of human values as Cozzens' 'Guard of Honor' nor so incisive a piece of character-drawing as Wouk's 'The Caine Mutiny.' That is, it falls in between, like Captain Hawkes in the book itself. It is honestly conceived and honestly written." Fletcher Pratt

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 28 '54 700w

"A merchant mariner who served in the wartime navy, Mr. Dodson knows the technical side of his subject almost alarmingly well—as his jargon shows. . . So much vocabulary may take a little getting used to in landlocked circles. But once the reader has got into the spirit of the thing, his reward will be a highly realistic introduction to the interesting sights and sounds of amphibious assault." E. B. Gar-side

+ N Y Times p23 F 28 '54 550w

"I am afraid that Kenneth Dodson's 'Away All Boats' is too honest, too accurate a novel to be the popular success it should be. I have not read a better book on the war—not at sea, but on the shallow fringes of the ocean." Walter Karig

+ Sat ■ 37:19 F 27 '54 470w

"Recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:137 My '54

DODWORTH, DOROTHY. Dangerous day for Mrs. Doodlepunk; il. by [the author]. [38p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

54-9912

Picture-story book about the teasing war between a little girl and a little boy, and how first one and then the other got the better of the battle. For ages five to eight.

Booklist 51:137 N 15 '54

"A fresh and rather pointed version of an old story. . . A very short text accompanies the pictures, bare of unimportant details, and both are coordinated sharply and effectively."

+ Kirkus 22:479 Ag 1 '54 90w

"Skillfully adapting the comic strip technique, without benefit of speech balloons, Dorothy Dodworth has produced a very funny picture book. . . The distinctive feature of the book is the manner in which the saucy pictures carry the story, supplying not only the action but also the important details never mentioned in the minimal, mock-serious text." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p32 S 12 '54 200w

Springf'd Republican p9C D 12 '54 60w

DOLAND, JAMES JOSEPH. Hydro power engineering; a textbook for civil engineers. 209p il $7.50 Ronald

621.312 Hydroelectric plants 54-7642

"A brief but sound introduction to the practical design of plants for the generation of electricity by water power. Neither the design of dams nor electric machinery is covered since the reader is assumed to have had courses in these topics. Instead the space is devoted to such matters as the collection and analysis of data on stream flow, power demand, etc.; the types of hydraulic turbines; dimensioning of water passages; and technical details of valves, trash-racks, cranes, etc. Also included is an informative chapter on the economic and load factors of associated operation of hydro and steam plants. Primarily for junior and senior engineering students." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1895 O 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:72 S '54

DONIGER, SIMON, ed. Sex and religion today. (Pastoral psychology ser) 238p $3 Assn. press
261.8 Sex and religion. Psychology, Pastoral 53-11816

"A compilation of articles written by experts in their specialized fields concerning religious attitude toward sex today. All of the contributors to this work consider sex not in the physical only, but also in an understanding of love." (Ann Am Acad) Contents: Sex—sin or salvation? by Seward Hiltner; Christianity and sex, by R. H. Bainton; A pastoral theology of sex and marriage, by R. L. Howe; The meaning of sex, by Gotthard Booth; A psychoanalyst's viewpoint on sexual problems, by J. A. P. Millet; Pastoral problems of sex, by C. A. Wise; Toward a Christian view of sex education, by P. A. Bertocci; A moral philosophy of sex, by Joseph Fletcher; The bearing of sexual behavior on mental health and family stability, by L. E. Woodward; The religious element in marriage counseling, by T. J. Bigham.

"Sex is given an entirely too important role in life, yet due to the importance assigned it today, we need a careful, wholesome study of it. This book is a contribution toward the healthy understanding of sex." M. M. Forney
+ Ann Am Acad 291:189 Ja '54 400w

"A sane, straight-forward treatment."
+ Kirkus 21:623 S 1 '53 180w

"While all readers will not wholly agree with each of the authors (nor they with each other, one expects), many readers will welcome this attempt to bring religious viewpoints to bear on matters so often left—as in the Kinsey reports, for example—to the statistician and the secularist." N. K. Burger

N Y Times p33 S 20 '53 100w

DONNELLY, MABEL COLLINS. George Gissing, grave comedian. 245p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Gissing, George Robert 53-10869

A combination of biography of George Gissing and a critical appreciation of his work. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by D. R. Cherry

Canadian Forum 34:94 J1 '54 220w

"This is a revealing and very readable biography of an eminent Victorian novelist. . . It is a necessary acquisition for college and the larger public libraries." W. B. Ready

+ Library J 79:543 Mr 15 '54 90w

"Her book does not end as well as it begins for her smooth narration and sensitive criticism are not sustained beyond the seventh chapter. Nevertheless, it makes a valuable contribution to the understanding of a complex and mysterious author."

+ Nation 178:285 Ap 3 '54 200w

"Short but thorough critical biography by a student and teacher of English literature." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 28 '54 800w

"An earnest, naive, and pretty uncritical book that is not without its share of insight."

New Yorker 30:155 S 11 '54 120w

"It must be stated that Mrs. Donnelly's volume does not pretend to be the exhaustive, full-scale life of Gissing that will one day be written. She has made no use of important manuscript sources that are (or were, until recently) in private hands. When these are sifted, certain changes in emphasis will no doubt suggest themselves. . . Her quotations even from the Yale and Berg collections are sometimes tantalizing in their brevity." G. N. Ray

Sat R 37:17 Je 12 '54 600w

"Dr. Donnelly's book comes from America; in writing it she has had the cooperation of Gissing's son, and she has had access to much unpublished material now in the great libraries of the United States. She cannot be said to have made effective use of them. . . Nor does she succeed in unearthing the detail which is needed to turn Gissing the conventional figure of literary misery into Gissing the man."

Times [London] Lit Sup p699 N 5 '54 900w

DOOLITTLE, ARTHUR KING. Technology of solvents and plasticizers. 1056p il $18.50 Wiley
660 Solvents. Plasticizers 54-9035

"Comprehensive survey of the practical and theoretical aspects of all commercially available solvents and plasticizers." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:4325 O 25 '54 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:77 S '54

DORIS, LILLIAN, ed. Business finance handbook; contributors: William W. Amos [and others]. 919p $10; to schools $7.50 Prentice-Hall

658.14 Business. Corporations—Finance

53-7879

"Presents suggestions for solving financial problems, from those of declining business to explanations of ways of protecting a business against mortality hazards and against errors that may involve the corporation in costly litigation. Contributors were chosen because of their knowledge of particular phases they treat." Library J

"A book by 22 writers must surmount considerable problems. Although the writing is generally lucid, the content is of uneven quality. . . Finally, the reviewer would urge that any future handbook contain an annotated bibliography of additional source material—in spite of claims on the jacket that the handbook provides 'the full, explicit answer to any question. . .'" R. W. Johnson

+ Am Econ R 44:187 Mr '54 750w

Library J 79:904 My 15 '54 30w

Management R 42:563 M '53 70w

DORNBERGER, WALTER. V-2; tr. by James Cleugh and Geoffrey Halliday; introd. by Willy Ley. 281p $5 Viking

623.451 Guided missiles. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 54-7830

"The story of German rocket research 1930-1945 by the German scientist who was also a General in Hitler's Army, and director of the experimental station at Peenemünde. The rocket has become 'one of the major inventions of recorded history' and Dornberger's group of German scientists and engineers may rightfully claim much of the credit. The work is described in full detail, just short of mathematical analysis, much as one engineer would describe a project to another. Interwoven into the technical account of the rocket, is a fascinating, matter-of-fact story of conference with Hitler, Himmler and Göring, which will be of great interest to any reader concerned with the history of World War II and the Nazi regime." Library J

Booklist 50:369; 394 Je 1 '54; Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:233 Jl '54 30w

"The littleness that men still mix with the splendor of their material achievements is dramatically evidenced in this book, itself a record of a splendid achievement and also a tale of envy, spite, foolishness and the mania for power." J. A. May

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 7 '54 410w

Foreign Affairs 33:159 O '54 40w

Kirkus 22:279 Ap 15 '54 150w

"Recommended for purchase by all libraries with any demand for rocket information." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 79:856 My 1 '54 210w

Reviewed by John Grant

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 22 '54 650w

"A lucid well-written book. Of particular interest today is the author's account of the Gestapo's distrust of the scientists and its arrest of key men on suspicion and false information."

+ Nation 179:37 Jl 10 '54 150w

"His book is important primarily as an addition to the literature on rockets and space travel, but, in view of what it tells us about the political and administrative difficulties which the German scientists encountered as they pursued their work, it has both historical interest and contemporary relevance." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 4 '54 850w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p7 Je 13 '54 750w

New Yorker 30:83 Ag 28 '54 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 18 '54 180w

Reviewed by H. B. Kranz

Sat R 37:9 Jl 24 '54 900w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p12D Jl 18 '54 230w

Time 63:94 Je 28 '54 800w

"The translators have done their work excellently, and have done full justice to a factual and well-told story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p451 Jl 16 '54 1450w

DORP, JAN VAN, pseud. See Godtsenhoven, O. van

DORRIS, JONATHAN TRUMAN. Pardon and amnesty under Lincoln and Johnson; the restoration of the Confederates to their rights and privileges, 1861-1898; introd. by J. G. Randall. 459p $7.50 Univ. of N.C. press

973.81 Pardon. U.S.—Politics and government—Civil war. U.S.—Politics and government—1865-1900. Reconstruction 53-13363

A study of the various aspects of the problems involved in restoring the Confederacy to the Union after the Civil war. The author was

■ member of the department of history of Eastern Kentucky State college from 1926 to his retirement in 1953. Bibliography. Index.

"The subject of pardon and amnesty following the Civil War has long needed serious investigation. . . Dr. Dorris began his study more than twenty-five years ago under the direction of the late James G. Randall, who wrote a stimulating introduction to this volume shortly before his death. Several articles by Dr. Dorris have been the most valuable of previous publications and they marked him as the man best qualified to handle the subject on a full scale. This excellent volume comes up to expectations." Brainerd Dyer

+ Am Hist R 60:196 O '54 300w

"All of the subject matter in this book, it should be noted, is difficult and tricky stuff. This is constitutional and judicial history, hard to research and digest and harder to present in comprehensible terms. Dr. Dorris' volume is not one to curl up with for a long evening, but it is as readable and as interesting as a book of this kind can be. Much of its human interest results from the fact that the author had access to the revealing and intimate letters in the Amnesty Papers in the National Archives. He seems to be the only historian who has used them." T. H. Williams

+ Ann Am Acad 294:187 Jl '54 600w

Booklist 50:275 Mr 15 '54

"The essential facts are somewhat obscured by a mass of detail covering individual cases, many of which seemed to this reviewer superfluous. Mr. Dorris has done a good job of research, but there is something to be desired in his organization and handling of his material. One wonders, for instance, why the author's personal evaluation of the character and genius of Robert E. Lee belongs in a work of this kind." A. D. Kirwan

Sat R 37:34 Ap 24 '54 400w

"The author allows himself an unfortunate digression in his treatment of Lee. Nonetheless, the book makes a substantial contribution to historical knowledge, and is evidently the product of intensive research. In all probability, it will remain the chief authority on the subject for years to come."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 10:174 Je '54 280w

DORWART, REINHOLD AUGUST. Administrative reforms of Frederick William I of Prussia. 250p $4 Harvard univ. press

354.431 Frederick William I, king of Prussia. Prussia—Politics and government

52-12259

"This is a full-length account of the emergence of a public administration in Brandenburg-Prussia. It particularly stresses the climactic achievements of Frederick William I (1713-1740) in reforming administrative institutions and in creating an administrative organization and a bureaucracy in Prussia which were to be basically unchanged until the nineteenth century." Publisher's note

Reviewed by W. L. Dorn

Am Hist R 59:702 Ap '54 260w

Reviewed by Dwight Waldo

Am Pol Sci R 48:577 Je '54 280w

"Although the rise of the Prussian bureaucracy has been treated by various writers such as Walter L. Dorn, Herman Finer, and Fritz Morstein Marx, there has hitherto been no full-length administrative history in English on this century. The Administrative Reforms of Frederick William I of Prussia by Dr. Dorwart, Professor of History at the University of Connecticut, fills the gap and is a scholarly contribution, based upon a careful examination of the primary and secondary German sources." R. H. Wells

+ Ann Am Acad 293:206 My '54 300w

"Excellent scholarly study. . . The work is valuable not only for students of Prussian history, but also for those interested in comparative government and in the evolution of institutions."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:20 Mr '54 200w

DOS PASSOS, JOHN RODERIGO. Head and heart of Thomas Jefferson. 442p $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 53-9128

"The novelty [of this book] is the angle of approach. Dos Passos does not concern himself at all with what Jefferson was; he is content to accept that as established and he assumes that his reader knows; his interest is in why the man was what he was, and he assumes, correctly, that the answer must be sought in the period before the man became a monument." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:237 F 15 '54

Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 30w

"Jefferson's work as minister to France is also treated at length. One might quarrel with some of the statements made concerning the French Revolution. One might also question the necessity of bringing in so many side issues, but Dos Passos evidently believed all of them influenced to some degree the conduct of Jefferson. These deviations from the main story will irritate many readers and cause them to put aside the book long before the final pages appear. It is definitely not the first book about Jefferson that one should read. Only those seriously interested in Jefferson will thank Dos Passos for this book." Paul Kinierly

Cath World 178:476 Mr '54 350w

"The purpose of this brilliant book is to answer this question: Why, when the lucky moment came to America and it could shape a government of its own, was there a man like Thomas Jefferson ready, with the facts of history and the powers of theory, to make that government the just and flexible instrument it became? Dos Passos reveals the men and ideas behind Jefferson's own attitudes, the men who taught him and those in Scotland and England who had in turn instructed the teachers. In doing so, he shows how Jefferson was the result not only of his own fine intelligence and warm personality but of a strong intellectual impulse which found in him the perfect medium." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 24 '54 290w

"No admirer of Jefferson will want to miss this superb portrait of his mind. Sufficient biographical data are included to make the work an intelligible and integrated whole, but it is not in the usual sense, a 'life' of Jefferson." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:706 Je 9 '54 260w

Reviewed by W. H. Stringer

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 4 '54 800w

"Though one may quarrel here and there with Mr. Dos Passos's point of view it is obvious that he knows a thing or two about the main currents of the age in which his subject moved. He has done much more than the usual boning up. . . But the best thing about this new Jefferson is that Mr. Dos Passos has not forgotten the tricks he learned long ago as a novelist." Wayne Andrews

+ Commonweal 59:432 Ja 29 '54 700w

"While this may fit into a niche for those who demand every minute facet of the Jefferson data, the average reader will find it neither good Jefferson nor good Dos Passos. It is difficult to cut through the verbiage to the thesis."

Kirkus 21:654 S 15 '53 130w

"The name of the author will attract new readers to the Jefferson story. If not an outstanding contribution. It is a careful study, with Dos Passos working always as historian, eschewing the fictions which a novelist might be expected to employ." G. D. McDonald

Library J 78:2210 D 15 '53 140w

"The Head and Heart gains much of its freshness from what has been added to the traditional account, and some from what has been left out. This is not, like Dumas Malone's biography, a detailed consecutive record of Jefferson's political activity. Achievement is subordinated to character, much as in Albert Jay Nock's little masterpiece of a generation ago, although the method of presentation is wholly different." George Genzmer

+ Nation 178:222 Mr 13 '54 470w

"As a biographer Dos Passos suffers not merely from a weakness for irrelevant specification but also from the need felt by many ex-radicals . . . to immerse themselves in a fatiguing maze of local detail, there to find, amid the glory and the trivia and the bunting, a substitute for a point of view. . . Not, I hasten to add, that this biography is without chapters of merit. Dos Passos writes eloquently and, I imagine, expertly about Jefferson's passion for architecture, though his refusal to probe very far into Jefferson's thought prevents him from discussing the relations, similar to that in revolutionary France, between republicanism and the effort to adapt the classical temple to modern uses." Irving Howe

+ New Repub 130:16 Ja 25 '54 1600w

"Here is a book not to be recommended to beginners but that will contribute importantly to an advanced student's comprehension of a colossal and enigmatic figure." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 24 '54 1000w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

N Y Times p6 Ja 24 '54 1250w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:107 F 27 '54 2000w

"Mr. Dos Passos moves along with Jefferson, concentrating on the making of the man, briefing and highlighting more as Jefferson grows older. It is to show what molded Jefferson, what made him the extraordinary combination of statesman, philosopher, architect, farmer, lawyer, and President he was, that the author has written his book, and this is what he has done, bringing together in a beautifully controlled, firm and constantly lively narrative the materials of his research." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 28 '54 440w

"Happily, the faults that appear patent to me may not be faults to all readers or critics. Many who have no first-hand knowledge of Jefferson's writings will doubtless find the book stimulating; and many who do, will inevitably bow to what they will judge to be a colorful and 'literary' book about a man for whom the author and a good part of the world entertain a joint and mounting respect."

Adrienne Koch

Sat R 37:23 Mr 13 '54 1000w

Springf'd Republican p5C F 7 '54 550w

DOS PASSOS, JOHN RODERIGO. Most likely to succeed. 310p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

54-8476

Story of a young American intellectual and his connections with Communism during the '20s and '30s.

"We know that what Dos Passos is describing has had its counterpart in reality, but he has skimmed on the creative task; he has not made his people and events really solid and convincing. And to a large extent he has projected his disgust simply by making the physical texture of life in his story almost consistently disagreeable." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:98 O '54 650w

Booklist 51:84 O 15 '54

"As always, Mr. Dos Passos makes his events believable; and again, as always, his people are the palest abstractions. A formidable amount of fornication does not make Jed any more real or human than his whining repetitions of formula. He is no more successful at playing a human being than he is at playing a revolutionary. He is utterly without motive, and when Mr. Dos Passos brings an end to him with an unexpected (and unmotivated, so to speak) heart attack on the final page, the reader couldn't care less." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 180:231 D '54 220w

"It is a shame that a novel with so important a theme should not be more forcefully written. Yet for all its flaws, it does take the reader along and it does convince him that such miserable, scheming, betrayed and betraying people really do exist in the patient United States of America." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 O 3 '54 450w

"Dos Passos has made a strenuous attempt to endow this book with such an easy, almost meretricious coating of surface glamor, and has generally employed such gross motivation, flippantly eccentric dialogue and monotonously usual dialogue, that it really seems to represent the tragic exhaustion of a once formidable talent." G. D. Murphy

— Commonweal 61:19 O 8 '54 1150w

— Kirkus 22:345 Je 1 '54 170w

"The quality of Dos Passos' novels has gone down fairly steadily since the completion of U.S.A., but with this incredibly bad book that once-eminent author has plunged to a new, and one hopes, temporary, low. Definitely not recommended." Louis Barron

— Library J 79:1399 Ag '54 210w

"The book might be said to resemble a scratchily written Lillian Ross type of 'profile' which would be rejected by the New Yorker. Though its central figure is a phony, a mental incompetent, and a moral castrate, 'Most Likely to Succeed' cannot even be called venomous. It is merely libelous." Harold Clurman

— Nation 179:310 O 9 '54 500w

"Most Likely to Succeed is not the sort of bad novel that good novelists occasionally write; on the contrary, if it had no name attached to it, one would assume that it was the work of a not very promising beginner. These are harsh words and words I am sorry to say, but we are confronted with nothing less than a literary debacle." Granville Hicks

— New Repub 131:17 S 27 '54 2400w

"Dos Passos presents, within the framework of a revealing novel, a circumstantially authentic historical account of the Communist techniques of infiltration, the methods of secrecy used to keep both Comrades and fellow travelers from any certain knowledge of each other's activities. . . Most Likely to Succeed is an illuminating novel." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 26 '54 1050w

"John Dos Passos' novels are social histories with a lively sense of time's passing, and of the changes time brings, especially in social attitudes. . . In 'Most Likely to Succeed' the experiences are as vivid and physically concrete as in his earlier novels, for Dos Passos retains his poet's ability to record and transmit concrete sensuous images. At the same time the events seem a little remote and unreal, like old snapshots looked at too often." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p4 S 26 '54 680w

"Perhaps it might be kindest to say simply that, barring the plot and the theme, the novel suffers from too many long-winded speeches and from the lack of a single male character who is honestly misguided." Harrison Smith

— Sat R 37:31 O 2 '54 810w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 320w

"Most Likely to Succeed is perhaps the most savage satire against the gullible so far produced by an American. Dos Passos is angry, but he shifts his anger into a high gear of farce, at least for the first 200 pages. . . But as the story goes on and on and Jed doesn't change but only gets more so, readers may begin to wish that the angry author were less so. As a man who once journeyed a long way with the Communists, but decisively broke with the comrades' ideals earlier than most reformed fellow-travelers, Author Dos Passos, now 58, at length starts to sound less like a social critic than a disappointed lover."

Time 64:102 S 27 '54 410w

DOSS, MRS HELEN (GRIGSBY). Family nobody wanted. 267p $3.75 Little

818 Adoption

54-8324

In the space of something less than twelve years a young minister and his wife adopted twelve children. They were children nobody wanted, labeled unadoptable because of mixed parentage, and the author here describes her trouble to acquire the children, and to care for them once acquired.

Booklist 51:30; 81 S 15 '54; O 15 '54

Bookmark 14:56 D '54 30w

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 26 '54 300w

"Definitely crowds the market of Anna Perrot Rose's Room For One More, but it should find a warm welcome nevertheless."

+ Kirkus 22:470 Jl 15 '54 290w

"This book will find many readers; well-written it merits a place in every general library collection." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:1583 S 15 '54 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 10 '54 350w

Reviewed by Ben Bradford

+ N Y Times p34 N 21 '54 550w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 3 '54 1100w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:203 O '54

DOUGHTIE, VENTON LEVY, and JAMES, WALTER HERMAN. Elements of mechanism. 494p $6 Wiley

621.8 Mechanics

54-7373

"A widely used textbook in machine design. The first edition, written by Peter Schwamb, was published in 1885 and succeeding editions bore the names of various other professors at Massachusetts Institute of Technology as co-authors. Professor Doughtie, now on the faculty of the University of Texas, prepared both the sixth edition (1947) and the one at hand, which represents a very extensive revision with many changes in the expository matter, illustrations and problems. However, the level of treatment is the same, and the book remains an introduction in which common elements of machines are discussed as to principles, applications and design." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1321 Jl '54 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:43 My '54

DOUGLAS, ALAN LOCKHART MONTEITH. Electronic musical instrument manual; a guide to theory and design; foreword by Osborne H. Peasgood. 2d ed 221p il $6 Pitman

786.9 Musical instruments, Electronic

[54-1908]

"The electrical theory and the electronic devices and circuits which are the basis of such musical instruments as the Hammond electric organ are clearly explained in this book. The main emphasis is on theory, and the book is addressed to persons who are interested in the design of instruments as well as to those who wish only to understand the scientific principles. However, the longest chapter (66 pages) is a description of the principles and mechanisms of electronic musical instruments now on the market. The first edition was published in 1949. For this edition a thorough revision was made, and much new material added in the text, illustrations and list of references. Both the chapter on electrical oscillations and that on experimental methods have been substantially enlarged." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 79:985 My 15 '54 130w

"The first chapters, which should lay a strong foundation for those who are not too familiar with sound, are weak and entirely too brief. . . The author seems to be on safer ground in the remainder of the text, although even here this reviewer would wish that more explanatory detail could be included. However, those who are versed in electronics will be able to glean much of value from the construction and circuit details given, and will be stimulated in their thinking toward new and improved methods." W. T. Bartholomew

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:563 S '54 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:17 Mr '54

DOUGLAS, DONALD. The Huguenot; with an introd. by C. C. Little. 384p $5 Dutton
284.5 Huguenots. Revere, Paul 54-5035
Tells the story of Huguenot emigrants to America, using Apollos Rivoire, the father of Paul Revere, as the central figure.

"A modern study of the Huguenots in America could be a most welcome contribution to Americana. The work of Mr. Douglas, who formerly wrote novels with historical settings, is unfortunately marred by uncontrolled enthusiasms supported by insufficient research."
L. G. Lavengood

— Am Hist R 60:209 O '54 320w

Booklist 50:334 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:233 J1 '54 130w

"This is an unusual book—documented history, loosely strung together by a thread of fiction." P. O. Marsh

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 22 '54 500w

Kirkus 22:142 F 15 '54 130w

"Mr. Douglas dramatizes history, but his is not the usual historical romance. His actors are frankly 'type characters'; the development comes to a halt in every chapter while these lay figures chant passages from the sources—from Winthrop or Calvin or Josselyn—in what amounts to an oratorio. Apollos is not a realized individual—there is no 'love story'—but a symbolic incarnation of those qualities of French Calvinism which Mr. Douglas finds sane, logical, decent, in striking contrast to the turbulence and arrogance of the Puritans among whom Mr. Douglas casts him." Perry Miller

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ap 18 '54 700w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54 550w

DOUGLAS, JOHN SCOTT. Summits of adventure; the story of famous mountain climbs and mountain climbers. 273p il $3 Dodd

796.52 Mountaineering 54-10609

Recounts the experiences of mountain climbers from the early attempts to climb Mont Blanc to the successful Everest climb of 1953. For teen-age and older. Bibliography. List of mountaineering terms. Heights of the mountains. No index.

Reviewed by E. A. Richter

Chicago Sunday Tribune p40 N 14 '54 60w

"The summary of climbs in the Himalayas is excellent, and the final Everest story wisely is made brief. . . Mr. Douglas can make his details most vivid, and the scope of his story is thrilling. There are sixteen insert pages of beautiful photographs. We could have wished there were more and that they were bigger."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p12 N 14 '54

Reviewed by H. B. Lent

N Y Times pt2 p16 N 14 '54 100w

DOUGLAS, WILLIAM ORVILLE. Almanac of liberty. 409p $5.50 Doubleday

323.4 Civil rights. U.S.—Constitutional law 54-11158

A day-by-day record, covering a year, in which Justice Douglas records various aspects of America's democratic struggle and progress. Index.

"It is not imperative that you accept Justice Douglas's interpretations, though in general they strike me as fair. Some are highly controversial—as, for instance, his reference to irrigation and public power; and in the contraction of the discussion to a single page there is bound to be oversimplification. What is imperative is that Americans should be more aware of the struggles which led to these hard-won liberties, and should recognize what individuals and what public opinion did to fix these liberties permanently within 'the body of our understanding.'" Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 194:82 D '54 390w

Booklist 51:124 N 15 '54

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 19 '54 250w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 17 '54 600w

"A book that is more significant than it appears on first consideration, this should be a must for public speakers, and those to whom the cause of liberty is dear."

+ Kirkus 22:622 S 1 '54 170w

"There are caustic observations on the role of the informer and the antics of the witch-hunters in this year of grace. And for all the shuttling about in time, and the anecdotal approach required by the almanac form, the book has a convincing unity of theme. Douglas humanizes the legal battles. This is in fact a new kind of statesmen's yearbook; one that the general reader will devour for years to come. All libraries will want it." S. S. Smith

+ Library J 79:2210 N 15 '54 280w

Reviewed by Walter Millis

Nation 179:446 N 20 '54 1100w

"Dogmatic the book certainly is; partisan it frankly professes to be; inaccurate it is occasionally, although not often and rarely on important matters; misleading it might be; but dull it most certainly is not. And a good many of us are so unregenerate that we will blithely take a chance on error, provided we escape boredom." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 14 '54 850w

"On first opening the Almanac I must confess I felt some misgivings. We are accustomed to find historical events arranged as they originally took place, in direct chronological sequence. But in Justice Douglas' book an event in the seventeenth century is followed on the next page by one in the twentieth and then by another in the nineteenth. On first impression the method seems questionable. The misgivings are quickly dissipated. What might be a serious defect in a history text turns out to enrich this particular book immensely." Edmond Cahn

+ N Y Times p7 N 14 '54 1500w

"Most of his essays are fascinating, and the Justice is clearly on the side of the angels, but his black robes sometimes seem to weigh heavily on him, as in a surprisingly wishy-washy account of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, a summary of the Scopes prosecution that pretends it was not a put-up test case, a history of trial by ordeal that ignores its survival in our own judicial procedures, and his demonstration of an odd legalistic blindness to the dangers of sterilization laws. On the whole, a good book that could have been a considerably better one."

+ New Yorker 30:191 N 6 '54 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p31 N 22 '54 550w

"It is a book to be read slowly, from day to day. Down-to-earth realism and quiet sanity make this 'Almanac of Liberty' a document of the first importance for this age of suspicion and fear and of demagoguery that grows out of those two evils." R. H. Gabriel

+ Sat R 37:37 N 6 '54 850w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 450w

"Author Douglas almost immediately slogs down in pompous, naive paragraphs about public libraries, workmen's compensation, irrigation. Notwithstanding a few well-phrased obiter dicta on civil rights, he simply does not have the Alma-knack."

+ Time 64:124 N 8 '54 110w

DOUGLASS, PAUL FRANKLIN. Six upon the world; toward an American culture for an industrial age. 443p il $4.95 Little

973.91 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Social conditions 54-5122

"A study of six contemporary Americans who have acted ably upon their convictions to shape the kind of world they wanted to live in, illustrating the thesis that American man has within his grasp the elements which can be forged into a significant culture." (Library J) Included are: Paul G. Hoffman; William Z. Foster; Alfred P. Sloan, Jr; Walter P. Reuther; Francis Cardinal Spellman; James B. Conant.

Booklist 50:447 J1 15 '54

Reviewed by V. P. Haas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 5 '54 270w

"This is a distinguished book about distinguished men."

+ Kirkus 22:226 Mr 15 '54 110w

"For the thoughtful reader." R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:978 My 15 '54 160w

"This book offers stimulation and insight if viewed as an unwitting document of executive sociology and ideology. But as the book about American culture promised by the jacket blurb, it is considerably less exciting. The biographies often take on the pompous sterility of public relations prose, and the discussion of American society rarely advances beyond the level of institutional advertising copy. But unfortunately these styles of thought are integral aspects of the executive world." H. J. Gans

— + New Repub 130:21 Je 28 '54 1300w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 1 '54 360w

Wis Lib Bul 50:176 J1 '54

DOUKAN, GILBERT. Underwater hunting; tr. by Bernard Miall. 162p il $3.50 De Graff

797.2 Diving, Submarine. Fishing

"A description of the techniques, hazards, and satisfactions of underwater hunting in various parts of the world, with suggestions on where, when, and how to hunt, what kind of clothes, weapons, and appliances are desirable, and what to hunt." Booklist

Booklist 51:78 O 15 '54

"An excellent handbook, not too technical." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:1521 S 1 '54 20w

"It does not seem to fill the gap left by the Hass, Cousteau, Diolé trilogy for those who feel that other men's adventures, applications, and enchantments are not enough. For Dr Doukan speaks only to the hunters among us and, while many do consider that 'to pursue a large quarry, and to kill it, is exciting,' there are quite a few others who would rather descend into the sea more wistfully." Anthony Smith

Manchester Guardian p2 Ag 14 '53 130w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 46:240 Ag 29

'53 60w

Spec p207 Ag 21 '53 270w

DOWLING, VICTOR J. Old woman's chickens. [45p] il col il $2; lib ed $2.75 Aladdin 54-6155

In a first person narrative a little brown bantam hen tells of the various kinds of eggs she set on and what kind of chicks came forth—guinea hens, a duck, turkeys, and finally, after long weeks of setting on a hard, shiny egg, three soft, furry "chicks" which the cat helped her to raise!

Kirkus 22:152 Mr 1 '54 40w

"An amusing picture-story. . . Unimportant, but useful for the beginning reader and for the teacher looking for supplementary material for a farm unit." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 79:780 Ap 15 '54 50w

"The style lacks the special personal spunk which a Bantam hen has. The pictures, many with nice color, are capable and real, and would please children who know a chicken yard." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p6 Je 27 '54 60w

DOWNES, DONALD C. Scarlet thread; adventures in wartime espionage. 207p $3.50 British bk. centre

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Secret service [53-38119]

"These are the espionage memoirs of an American who worked first for British and then for American Intelligence from 1940 until 1945. Mr Downes's work took him to every continent except Australasia. He trained agents and sent them through the enemy lines; stole secret military and diplomatic codes from neutral embassies in Washington; made clandestine contacts with Balkan terrorists; and was party to innumerable schemes and plots to discomfort the Axis Powers, ranging from counterfeiting to infiltrating German sabotage and espionage schools." Publisher's note

"Recommended only for large libraries which aim at completeness in war history." Donald Wasson

Library J 79:60 Ja 1 '54 130w

"Read either as pure adventure story or for political education, this is a fascinating book."

H. H. Wilson

+ Nation 178:243 Mr 20 '54 700w

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Mascots; il. by Augusto Marin. 149p $2.75 Coward-McCann

54-8711

"Thirty-one short-shorts of memorable animals who were military mascots, in ancient Egypt, in Charlemagne's army, in the British forces, and in the American fighting corps in action from 1812 to Korea, these should have their fascination for the animal minded." Kirkus

Booklist 51:137 N 15 '54

"This wide assortment of true mascot stories, brightly illustrated, makes entertaining reading for all ages." A. R. S.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p40 N 14 '54 110w

"Fantastic are the stories and brave the feats, as Rameses II's battle lion swings into action; as Kentucky the pig travels faithfully with the Army in 1812; as the parapoos jump in Korea. Rather stilted but careful line drawings by Augusto Marin show how it happened."

+ — Kirkus 22:533 Ag 15 '54 90w

"We enjoyed all the tales, and remembered our thrill, as a small girl, to see a goat proudly lined up with the crew of a ship returning from the Spanish War, as it passed us in review in New York Harbor. . . The many pictures are ever so well drawn with the cross-hatching technique, by an artist equally capable at doing men and animals in action." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ pt2 p7 N 14 '54 290w

DOYLE, ADRIAN CONAN, and CARR, JOHN DICKSON. Exploits of Sherlock Holmes. 338p $3.95 Random house

54-5387

Twelve reconstructions of Sherlock Holmes tales, each of which takes its beginning from a reference to the case in an old Sherlock Holmes. The stories have appeared in Collier's or Life. The senior author is a son of Conan Doyle.

"Pastiches have their own interest. They keep the game afoot and, best of all, they lead the reader back to the great works themselves. All the great hero stories have their apocrypha. Not all the king's horses could persuade me to say that these uncanonical tales compete successfully with the authentic adventures of

DOYLE, A. C.—Continued

Sherlock Holmes; but no Sherlockian should dismiss them without a reading." Vincent Starrett

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 4 '54 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

"Texture, atmosphere, details, ingenuity, all contribute to this second coming."

+ Kirkus 22:85 F 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 47:840 Je 26 '54 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p27 Ap 11 '54 300w

"Adrian Conan Doyle 'uses the very same desk on which his father wrote.' . . . Well—he tries hard; perhaps he has done as well as could be expected. But even with Mr. Carr's expert help, it just isn't the same. Evidently it takes more than a writing desk, or even a top expert." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 17 '54 650w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:32 My 15 '54 20w

"By sticking strictly to the original ingredients and prose style, Authors Carr and Doyle handle the job very well. . . . There will be much whimsical nattering over such points as whether Holmes, a sensitive connoisseur of Italian music, should be allowed to fiddle Auld Lang Syne on his Stradivarius, or stoop to such an expression as 'upped and died.' But only Sir Arthur's ghost is likely to be really critical of this loving attempt to relight the master's dottles."

+ Time 63:110 Ap 5 '54 700w

DOYLE, RAYMOND. Easy payments. 192p $3
Hermitage

54-10971

Novel about the difficulties of Dan Cantrell, an investigator or collector for a personal loan company.

Kirkus 22:451 Jl 15 '54 160w

"Well written, nicely constructed novel; characterization good. Recommended for large fiction collection." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:1511 S 1 '54 100w

"'Easy Payments' is a novel that promises to be better than it is. The material is there, but the story isn't much and the central characters have little reality about them." R. M. F.

— + Springf'd Republican p6C S 12 '54 120w

"Author Doyle, a credit manager in his non-writing hours, writes like a man who knows his subject even when he does not know quite what to do with it."

Time 64:93 S 6 '54 170w

DRAGE, CHARLES. Life and times of General
Two-Gun Cohen [Eng title: Two-Gun Cohen].

312p il $4 Funk

B or 92 Cohen, Morris Abraham 54-7761

"The account of the life of General Morris Cohen, who, born of Jewish parents in the East End of London, was shipped to Canada in consequence of some trouble with the authorities and, after befriending some Chinese, was appointed bodyguard to Dr. Sun Yat-sen, China's revolutionary leader, then on a tour of the United States. Subsequently, Morris Cohen fell completely under Dr. Sun Yat-sen's spell and devoted the rest of his life to Chinese affairs." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 51:60 O 1 '54

Bookmark 13:234 Jl '54 30w

"In this fascinating, firsthand account, Cohen tells of his experiences in China. . . . His account of Russian Marshal Blucher's activities in behalf of early Chinese Reds is particularly revealing. It is a story of derring-do and an unquenchable zest for life." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 13 '54 300w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '54 410w

Kirkus 22:285 Ap 15 '54 120w

"Recommended." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 79:1312 Jl '54 120w

"His biography has been written by Commander Drage in a peculiar way. Sometimes Commander Drage tells the story; sometimes he allows Mr Cohen to tell it in his own words. The result is confusing, and this is a pity because the subject is odd and exciting."

Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 My 25 '54 420w

"This is an exceedingly colorful story about one of the most picturesque figures in latter-day China, a person whom every one assumed to be a loud, semiliterate, swashbuckling buffoon at first encounter, but for whom every one who came to know him, including most of the important men who have been on and off the Far Eastern stage during the last thirty years, developed genuine respect and affection. The presentation of the story is unusual. It is partly biographical and partly autobiographical, in what we are told is Morris Cohen's own language." Rodney Gilbert

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 15 '54 500w

"With lengthy assists from Morris himself, Charles Drage, a former British naval officer who has known Cohen during most of his career, tells the General's story in plain, straight-forward prose. It is the wildly improbable but stimulating record of a ne'er-do-well who was saved from the role of the Devil's Disciple and set to act the part of a minor Man of Destiny." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p10 Je 27 '54 320w

Springf'd Republican p9C Jl 11 '54 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Mr 26 '54 220w

DRAGNICH, ALEX N. Tito's promised land:
Yugoslavia. 337p $5.75 Rutgers univ. press

949.7 Communism—Yugoslavia. Tito, Josip Broz, known as 54-6836

"Author, now a professor at Vanderbilt University, has attempted to present a guide through the morass of post-World War II Balkan Communist politics with the accent on Yugoslavia. He had the advantage of facility with the Serbo-Croatian language which, during his stay in Yugoslavia 1947-1950, and again in 1952, made possible an interpretation of local publications and for conversations with individual citizens. With a brief outline of pre-Communist era, he records the methods and attitudes not only in the politics in Yugoslavia, but also the economic and social effects. Tentative American dependence on Yugoslavia as a military defense for the West is discussed." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 51:10 S 1 '54

"While many of the accusations the author raises against President Tito and the Yugoslav Communists are based on solid evidence, part of his charges rest on an interpretation that is debatable, to say the least." E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 18 '54 500w

Current Hist 26:376 Je '54 130w

Foreign Affairs 33:165 O '54 60w

"Of current interest and apparent conscientious factual validity. For libraries attempting to maintain collections dealing with the contemporary historical scene." Paul von Khrum

+ Library J 79:1226 Je 15 '54 140w

"Some of Professor Dragnich's conclusions—and especially those dealing with the ideological problems of a Communist regime that depends on the capitalist world for its survival—are cogent. Others are debatable. He overdoes the picture of economic disorganization. Many of his monetary figures are meaningless."

Nation 179:98 Jl 31 '54 270w

"'Tito's Promised Land' is a clear and trenchant survey of the process by which Tito's Communists took and consolidated power, and the means they now employ to exert a controlling influence over others." J. B. Hoptner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 15 '54 850w

"The book is largely based on reading of the Yugoslav press and periodicals, speeches of the Yugoslav leaders, and information personally acquired during the author's residence in Yugoslavia. The author's fluent command of the Serbo-Croat language has given him an advantage over other investigators. As a result we find here a mass of interesting information that has not appeared in earlier books on post-war Yugoslav affairs. Unfortunately the presentation lacks objectivity, and the style too frequently descends to the level of polemics." M. S. Handler

+ — N Y Times p16 My 9 '54 1300w

"Not only timely, but presents one of the most significant discussions of the subject that has yet appeared. Lucid and forthright, it is a highly controversial book." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R 37:21 J1 17 '54 750w

DRAKE, BURGESS. See Drake, H. B.

DRAKE, HENRY BURGESS. Children of the wind [Eng title: Hush-a-by baby]. 352p $3.50 Lippincott

54-5591

A psychological novel concerning a woman who is haunted by the spirits of her own unborn twin children. The scene is an English estate; the heroine Lady Mary Hilary.

Booklist 50:277 Mr 15 '54

Kirkus 22:37 Ja 15 '54 180w

"Style is dull, sometimes childlike, sometimes sophisticated... Not recommended." M. L. Barrett

— Library J 79:382 F 15 '54 100w

"Here is an author who writes in a quiet, but elaborately figured style, develops his plots lightly and swiftly and without muss, and knows what dialogue is. There is a sense of acute dramatic suggestion in every line. One always catches the play of passion and situation behind the speeches, though they never lose the ease which, in this well-bred English setting, serves in place of a slower and thicker naturalism." D. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 21 '54 450w

"The surprising psychical spree Burgess Drake takes in his novel, 'Children of the Wind,' will delight those who respond to the other-worldly allurements of a Robert Nathan or Ray Bradbury. An off-beat novel of violence, humor, and magic, it has a whispery spell that is expertly maintained throughout the long narrative. Its characters, even the ghostly ones, have charm and vitality." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 37:20 Mr 20 '54 550w

"There is no need for a ghost-story to be strictly credible, but the melodramatic scenes between husband and wife make it all too clear that the woman's mother and the family doctor, whose illegal conspiracy started the whole thing, bungled the job in a most improbable way."

Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 12 '52 110w

DRAWBELL, MARJORIE. Making pottery figures. 96p il pl $4.50 Studio

738.3 Pottery 54-7962

A how-to-do-it book from England. Gives photographic stage-by-stage illustrations on all phases of casting: pouring, drying, firing, decorating, and glazing. Photographs of museum pieces from the Orient, Copenhagen, and Chelsea.

Booklist 50:454 J1 15 '54

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 79:1316 J1 '54 20w

"Artists who model figures in softer materials and want to cast them in permanent form will find this book extremely clear and thorough." D. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 20 '54 200w

DREPPERD, CARL WILLIAM, and SMITH, MARJORIE AILEEN (MATTHEWS). Handbook of tomorrow's antiques. 212p il $3.95 Crowell

749 Antiques. Collectors and collecting 53-10706

"Brimming over with ideas and enthusiasm, these collected essays hold out innumerable possibilities for collecting antiques that express the American way of life. Copiously illustrated." (Bookmark) No index.

Bookmark 13:83 Ja '54 20w

Reviewed by Kathleen Cannell

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '54 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p30 S '54

Kirkus 21:559 Ag 15 '53 180w

"Pleasantly informative text. One misses an index." A. S. Plaut

+ — Library J 79:456 Mr 1 '54 90w

"Unusual and helpful volume. . . Illustrations of most of the 'wanted' articles are provided, as well as advice on what is best to save out of the attic hoard and what the probable value of the articles will be." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p10C D 20 '53 360w

DRESSER, DAVIS. She woke to darkness, by Brett Halliday [pseud]. 217p $2.50 Torquil & Co, Inc, 135 W. 4th st, N.Y. 12

54-8250

Detective story.

"An odd and entertaining tour de force." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 21 '54 140w

"What with Halliday's first person account, the script itself and the third-person narration about Shayne, the story jerks about uncomfortably, though the basic idea has interest." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 28 '54 80w

"Novelty number." Sergeant Cuff

Sat 37:35 Ap 17 '54 20w

Springfield Republican p7C My 23 '54 70w

DRIMMER, FREDERICK, ed. Animal kingdom. See Animal kingdom

DRUMMOND, VIOLET H. Mr Finch's pet shop; il. by [the author]. 31p $2 Oxford

54-7769

Mr Finch loved all animals so it was hard for him to sell any of the animals in his pet shop. When Sir Archie Argyle bought one of a pair of Siamese kittens as a birthday present for the king it was a lucky day for Mr Finch. After that Mr Finch had just the life he had always wanted. For ages 5 to 9.

Booklist 50:345 My 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 27 '54 180w

Horn Bk 30:94 Ap '54 100w

Kirkus 22:110 F 15 '54 80w

"Recommended for ages 6-10." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 79:784 Ap 15 '54 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 16 '54 180w

"The sentiment is satisfying without being sticky, the humor is unpredictable and the pictures are full of comic action." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 18 '54 190w

DUBIN, HARRY ENNIS. Hail, alma pater. 287p il $3 Hermitage

54-6664

On the night of his son's graduation from the Fairfield School for Boys, Joseph Beech looks back over the four years of the boy's school life. In retrospect he reconstructs Addison's sufferings, joys, calf love, and other experiences during those years, which add up to a picture of American adolescence.

Booklist 50:320 Ap 15 '54

"Recognizable and likable."

+ Kirkus 22:80 F 1 '54 160w

"For anyone to take a teen-age boy and follow him and his family, particularly his father, through the years of prep school, and do it all with abounding good humor is probably an impossible assignment. Particularly if the author is a father who has suffered through such an experience. That, however is what Harry Dubin has attempted in this novel about Addison Beech and his father. He hasn't wholly succeeded, but he has come up with a book that has its amusing moments." Hal Borland

+ — N Y Times p35 Ap 4 '54 350w

"If 'Hail Alma Pater' has flaws they are usually literary. Mr. Dubin has a tendency to overwrite, to make two adjectives do the work of one. On the other hand, he has a fine ear for the jargon, the idiomatic English that passes for conversation among the youth of the day, and he writes with a dry sense of the comedic. Rare will be the father who does not find himself chuckling over the various misadventures that befall Mr. Beech." Max Wilk

+ — Sat ■ 37:18 Ap 3 '54 650w

Wis Lib Bul 50:180 Jl '54

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). The listener. 192p $2.75 Doubleday

53-10655

Mystery story.

Kirkus 21:644 S 15 '53 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 20 '53 120w

"The most utterly foolish detective story I have ever read—certainly the worst from any author whom I normally respect." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p48 N 22 '53 180w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 27 '53 50w

"Artificial situation leaves little room to sympathize with nice heroine. Machinery creaks." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 36:33 D 19 '53 20w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Seeing red. 187p $2.75 Doubleday

54-7672

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 1 '54 20w

"Summer entertainment, to which a nice family background adds a mellow touch." Kirkus 22:321 My 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 18 '54 170w

"The story is smoothly and readably told, if inevitably with too much recapping of the 1946 novel, and the McNeill children, though not directly involved in the plot, are almost as good as Mr. Parker's creations." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p21 Jl 25 '54 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 15 '54 40w

"Contrived plot climaxes in Senate committee hearing (but no TV). Formula job." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:37 Ag 7 '54 20w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM PENE. The giant; story and pictures. 124p $2.75 Viking

54-12910

"It is the story of El Muchacho, the boy giant, so huge that he uses real elephants and trains as toys and yet is otherwise a perfectly normal boy. The complications that occur when he arrives in Paris will amuse boys and their parents ■ well, most likely." Sat R

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:96 D '54 60w

Booklist 51:114 N 1 '54

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p28 N 14 '54 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"It was quite an adventure; and story and pictures bring out with humor and careful attention to details every exciting phase of it. Fine bookmaking." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:434 D '54 140w

"Another make believe story, the kind children and many adults will enjoy, displays the du Bois imagination to advantage again."

+ Kirkus 22:529 Ag 15 '54 150w

"Boys and girls of around twelve, who have relegated giants to the fairy-tale era, will be fascinated by 'El Muchacho,' the way he is fed and clothed, his playthings which include real circus animals. The serious, completely adult style is refreshing." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2 p5 N 14 '54 230w

"The Giant' has all the necessities of good fantasy—warmth, humor, a spice of mystery and a wealth of factual detail to relate the story to real life. The author's illustrations are delightful." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times pt 2 p30 N 14 '54 160w

"In this whacking good yarn, the author's trenchant imagination and notable art work will give ten- to thirteen-year-olds many an eerie moment." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 30:210 N 27 '54 40w

"William Pene du Bois has written and illustrated a keenly imagined tale so casual in its good humor and so plausible in its improbabilities that one is carried away to a satisfying end without a moment of doubt in passing." M. C.

+ Sat R 37:80 N 13 '54 160w

DUCHACEK, IVO (IVO DUKA, pseud), and KOLDA, HELENA. Secret of the two feathers. 88p il $2.50 Harper

54-6337

Fanciful story in a realistic setting with ■ plot involving a modern boy's conception of guns and robbers. In photographs and text the book tells the story of Martin who lives in New York City. One day Martin found two feathers and with them was able to work magic.

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 13 '54 120w

"Because the story is very well carried out and the photography exceptionally good, this is a fascinating and distinguished book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:248 Ag '54 110w

Kirkus 22:233 Ap 1 '54 90w

"The illustrations are excellent photographs by Helena Kolda. Style lacks liveliness, but the story is original and format of the book attractive. Libraries in and near New York City will want to buy it because of its Manhattan locale, and most good-sized libraries elsewhere will find it has sufficient appeal to warrant purchase. For 8-10-year-olds." M. C. Skinner

+ — Library J 79:1063 Je 1 '54 80w

"This will delight boys of about eight to ten." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 16 '54 200w

"Few young readers will be able to resist it." Pat Clark

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 11 '54 200w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkad

New Yorker 30:210 N 27 '54 30w

DUDLEY, DARLE W. Practical gear design. 335p il $7 McGraw

621.83 Gearing

53-11476

"A manual for such readers as engineers engaged in the design of machinery and draftsmen responsible for some mechanical designing. It provides a view of the field with special emphasis on those factors which are most important in selecting gear types and materials and in designing gears for average uses. All kinds of gears are described, from simple stamped gears used in toys and cheap clocks to complex marine gearing. Techniques of gear manufacturing are covered in the same inclusive way... The author is Supervisor of Gear Advance and Development Information for the General Electric Company." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"More down-to-earth and more in line with current practices than some books on gear design... The mathematics used is not difficult. Unfortunately the index is adequate; for instance, 'hypoid' is not to be found under 'h' nor under 'gears' although hypoid gears are discussed in at least two places. Nevertheless, the book will be a useful addition to practically all collections on machine design and machine shop work." R. R. Hawkins

+ — Library J 79:1895 O 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:55 Jl '54

DUFAULT, PETER KANE. Angel of accident. 76p $3.25 Macmillan (N Y)

811

54-7963

"A first book of poems, through which one can trace something of the author's own biography as combat airman, tree surgeon, actor and conservationist." Library J

Reviewed by Howard Nemerov

Atlantic 194:67 S '54 200w

Booklist 50:396 Je 15 '54

"A first offering of uneven achievement, with its quota of awkwardness, mixed tones, and overly familiar attitudes. His technique is competent, but so unvarying that the result is monotonous. One is, nevertheless, grateful for the successful 'Owl' and several slighter nature and love lyrics." Nicholas Joost

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 28 '54 30w

"The one theme that seems to run through the many titles is an interest in birds, and bird hunting, and a general predilection for nature. Other than that, the poems are only minor in their interest and accomplishment."

Kirkus 21:809 D 15 '53 60w

"After closing the book, one best remembers the wonderful observations of beasts and birds, the 'possum, the owl, the woodcock and the hawk." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 79:558 Mr 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by John Ciardi

Nation 178:184 F 27 '54 80w

"This book stands up because the poet has done, seen and felt—and found the words for it. Dufault's poems give life again to trees, teachers, animals, and fellow-fliers, and to young girls and pride, to the big trucks. Not that they hadn't life, but that we might not have remembered, unless he said so, and Marianne Moore is right, saying that he said so." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 25 '54 250w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap '54 30w

DUFFY, JOHN. Epidemics in colonial America. 274p il $4.50 La. state univ. press

614.49 Epidemics. U.S.—History—Colonial period 53-9904

"The author undertook to study epidemic disease in colonial America, to identify the individual diseases, and to determine what effects, if any, their occurrence had upon the development of the colonies. The diseases considered are smallpox, diphtheria and scarlet fever, yellow fever, measles, whooping cough and mumps, respiratory diseases, as well as a mixed group of agues, fluxes, and poxes which included such diseases as malaria, dysentery, typhoid fever, typhus, and venereal diseases. For the most part this monograph is based on contemporary sources and each major contagion is traced more or less chronologically." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliography. Index.

"This volume should serve as a useful addition to our understanding of the health factor in the colonies and so of an important aspect of early American society in general." L. W. Labaree

+ Am Hist R 59:217 O '53 290w

"This volume is highly recommended to anyone interested in the history of disease and public health in America. More studies of this kind are needed to provide a firm basis for a genuine history of American public health." George Rosen

+ Am J Pub Health 44:269 F '54 600w

"The book is a valuable compilation of data concerning epidemics. Much of the evidence is inferential since there was great confusion concerning the identity of many of the diseases. However, it is a book to be well regarded and ought to hold a permanent place in medical history." A. W. Stearns

+ Ann Am Acad 291:167 Ja '54 450w

"On the whole, this well-written, well-presented book is a welcome addition to the literature dealing with the fringes of colonial history. Disagreements noted are those which could appear with any work of a similar nature." H. F. Rankin

+ Social Forces 32:398 My '54 220w

DUGAN, JAMES. Great Iron ship. 272p il $3.50 Harper

623.8 Great Eastern (steamship) 53-7732

"'Nothing is proposed but to build a vessel of the size required to carry her own coals on the voyage.' So ran Brunel's prospectus... and here, in an expanded version of a series of articles recently published in the New Yorker, Mr. Dugan tells the almost incredible story of this vastest of the 'Little Giant's' vast conceptions. Launched in 1858, the Great Iron Ship was larger than any vessel built until the turn of the century. From the first, she was dogged by bad luck... As a paying proposition her lack of success was so marked that she was auctioned six times and ended as an advertising stunt moored in the Mersey." New Statesman & Nation

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:80 Ap '54 370w

Booklist 50:67; 216 O 15 '53; F 1 '54

Bookmark 13:103 F '54 30w

"The author has made of the ship's life a tale of heroism, a story of a venture into the unknown and unpredictable. There are vivid pictures of the constant struggle that took place to keep the vessel in operation and excellent descriptions of the achievements it won and the indignities it suffered. Tho the ship was scrapped more than 60 years ago, Dugan has created such a splendid picture of it that readers of his book will comprehend the vessel better than thousands who saw it afloat." Richard Philbrick

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 17 '54 300w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 21 '54 900w

"A sure masculine market, with strong popular possibilities."

+ Kirkus 21:525 Ag 1 '53 200w

Reviewed by David Bone

Manchester Guardian p10 N 27 '53 280w

"Mr. Dugan [is] at his best when dealing with the great ship's misfortunes. It is not that he is anti-Great Eastern: the warmth of his account of her sterling services in laying the Atlantic and Indian cables proves his affection.

DUGAN, JAMES—Continued

But disaster makes news. . . Mr. Dugan has limited himself to telling the fabulous foreground story; and accepting these disciplines of craft and market, it would be mean to ask more—for he has told it superbly." Stuart Legg
+ New Statesman & Nation 46:828 D 26 '53 550w

Reviewed by Edward Ellsberg
N Y Herald Tribune BK R p3 Ja 24 '54 1050w

"Readers of The New Yorker will welcome the publication in book form of James Dugan's highly diverting account of one of the largest and most imaginative white elephants of the nineteenth century. . . The Great Eastern's sad history furnishes much material for reflection. . . James Dugan, however, simply sets forth the facts in lively narrative and lets the reader draw his own morals. The result is a completely delightful and readable book that is as good a biography of a single ship as any one has yet achieved." W. M. Whitehill
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 24 '54 1450w

Reviewed by Jack Foisie
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ja 17 '54 700w

"Irrelevant digressions on events of the times and passing celebrities become a bit tedious. But so long as the author sticks to his great iron ship he is fascinating. Those who combine a love of ships with an interest in the Gilded Age, and who enjoy watching human nature disporting itself with abandon in the raw, should not overlook this story." C. V. Woodward
+ Sat R 37:19 F '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p10C Mr 7 '54 550w

DUGGAN, ALFRED LEO. Lady for ransom.
274p $3.50 Coward-McCann

53-8884

Historical novel in which the hero is a real person, a Norman knight, Roussel de Balliol, leader of a band of Frankish mercenaries in the employ of the Byzantine emperors in the eleventh century. The decisive battle of Manzikert is the high point of the novel. The story is supposedly told by Roussel's page and friend, who entered a monastery on the death of his master, and is now instructing young knights about to go on a crusade.

"The book is as packed with intrigues and unexpected disasters as most historical novels, but it differs from the general run in having wit, plausible characters, and a real feeling for the period. Mr. Dugan's refusal to let his people think like moderns gives the story vitality and interest, and permits a great deal of sly, funny irony in the contrast between forthright Norman thieves and elegant, wily Greeks."

+ Atlantic 193:86 Ja '54 210w
Booklist 50:157; 167 D 15 '53
Bookmark 13:132 Mr '54 40w

"The Lady for Ransom can be generally and enthusiastically recommended." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 179:230 Je '54 300w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 10 '54 350w

Kirkus 21:715 N 1 '53 240w

"Besides the virtues of wonderful description and characterization, this novel is highly informative of degenerate politics and medieval methods of fighting wars. This reviewer simply wallowed in it." Karl Brown
+ Library J 79:59 Ja 1 '54 90w

"A book which is both enjoyable and informative. . . A great deal of knowledge has gone, unobtrusively, into this study of decaying splendour and resurgent barbarity. Now and again there is a whiff of the classroom, as with so many good historical novels. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Dugan's tact is such as to enable him to clear most of the hurdles. He has a subdued, caustic sense of humour that is very agreeable: he gives his characters full consideration as human beings; and he writes an excellent, sober English." Honor Tracy

+ New Statesman & Nation 45:621 My 23 '53 300w

"Mr. Dugan has all the cardinal virtues of the successful historical novelist. He is sensitive to the mood of a period and makes his own deft interweavings an authentic part of its pattern and fabric. He has an uncanny gift for riveting fact and fancy together with concrete details that are right and convincing. His characters are never mere models or prototypes; they are individual, fallible, and human enough to compel interest even when they forfeit approval." Geoffrey Bruun
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 10 '54 350w

"As one novel follows another in pleasant succession, it dawns upon this constant reader of historical fiction that in Alfred Dugan he has found an extremely gifted writer who can move into an unknown period and give it life and immediacy. Mr. Dugan is unquestionably a specialist in the byways of the past." T. C. Chubb
+ N Y Times p28 Ja 10 '54 450w

"Mr. Dugan's heroes never faint; they enjoy everything they see as entertainment, torture included. Still, this device of the author's is only a device, and does not conceal the fact that he is writing familiarly about people whose age is gone and who are unknown to us except through the strict facts of history."

New Yorker 29:88 Ja 9 '54 160w

"As in his other three distinguished historical novels, Mr. Dugan gives his readers a dramatic tale of high adventure. The background shows scholarship; the story reflects a period seldom treated in historical fiction."

Isabel Stradley
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 1 '54 80w

"Mr. Dugan has worked skilfully to bring an ordered form to this disordered chronicle. . . There is a dry humor in his portrayal of the veneer of Christianity and morality which sometimes covers thinly an underlying paganism. . . Though its title means next to nothing, 'The Lady for Ransom' is the superior historical fiction Mr. Dugan's growing audience has come to expect from him." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 37:19 F 13 '54 550w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p6C F 28 '54 160w

"Dugan is writing some of the best historicals to be had nowadays—historicals which are also good novels."

+ Time 63:102 F 8 '54 800w

"It is a good story which here loses nothing in the telling. . . What, however, gives a real distinction to this historical novel is its remarkable sense of period. Mr. Dugan is gifted with historical imagination, and his wide reading has enabled him to construct with accuracy a detailed background that is instructive as well as interesting."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p297 My 8 '53 440w

DUGGAN, ALFRED LEO. Leopards and lilies.
278p $3.50 Coward-McCann

54-10142

Historical novel of England during the reign of King John and the early years of Henry III. The heroine is Margaret, daughter of the King's chamberlain, married very young to the equally youthful son of an Earl of Devon. When her husband died leaving her a very young widow with an infant son, Margaret married a man of King John's choice. Thru the years of his success Margaret stayed with him, but when he was defeated she had her marriage annulled, and passed the rest of her life in lonely disrepute.

Booklist 51:108 N 1 '54

Bookmark 14:60 D '54 30w

"Again Alfred Dugan has written a superlatively good story of a regime in dissolution.

Thanks to Sir Walter Scott's 'Ivanhoe' and some vestiges of English history study, we have at the outset some idea of feudal Britain. But the pleasures of novelty surpass those of recognition for the readers of any of Duggan's novels." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 10 '54 550w

"Duggan's alert scholarship reconstructs the conflicts of the period both physically and psychologically in remarkably fresh narration. Skilled."

+ Kirkus 22:502 Ag 1 '54 190w

"Mr Duggan is an expert narrator. But he seldom succeeds in creating the illusion and atmosphere of the past, though the drama of Margaret's divided loyalties has a certain psychological interest as well as a human appeal." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 27 '54 70w

"Leopards and Lillies strikes me as a very good history book. Mr. Duggan conveys most vividly what it was like to be alive in England during the civil wars of the reign of King John. . . As a work of elucidation Leopards and Lillies is admirable; but his characters seem to me not to have the slightest interest as human beings." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 47:542 Ap 24 '54 190w

"In plot, action, mood and denouement 'Leopards and Lillies' recalls the author's preceding novel, 'The Lady for Ransom,' but the comparison is not altogether favorable to it. Falkes is another Roussel de Balliol but Margaret is much less admirable than the Lady Matilda; there are fewer interesting and likable minor figures, and Angevin England is less glamorous and exotic than the Byzantine realm in the era of Alexius Comnenus. But if the milieu and the actors are not quite up to the high mark Alfred Duggan set in his previous novels, his terse realistic style, which has been compared to that of Defoe, retains all its wizardry." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 10 '54 900w

"Mr. Duggan has already demonstrated his ability to make the people and events of an obscure century as vivid as tomorrow's news. This novel exhibits his talent at its best." Willa Gibbs

+ N Y Times p5 O 10 '54 500w

"Mr. Duggan's first few chapters, in which he introduces us to the thirteen-year-old Margaret and her fourteen-year-old bridegroom, are fascinating, but after that events move too swiftly, swallowing Margaret and so diminishing her personality that we lose interest in her, and the end is a letdown."

+ New Yorker 30:162 O 16 '54 100w

"This technique is, to be sure, what has gained him his popularity and has its merits, but after five books it palls a little, being too much like a meal of olives only. If this were his first novel I would hail it as the earlier ones were hailed. But having read the others, my cheers are more subdued." T. C. Chubb

Sat R 37:17 O 23 '54 650w

"For those who want to learn about England in the thirteenth century, Leopards and Lillies represents a most palatable way of doing so." Kingsley Amis

+ Spec p528 Ap 30 '54 110w

Time 64:120 N 8 '54 220w

"Remarkable historical novel, and in Mr. Duggan's skilled hands it loses nothing in the telling. His purpose is to depict a conflict of loyalties, and in this he is singularly successful."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Ap 23 '54 400w

DUGO, ANDRE, pseud. See Szenes, A.

DUHAMEL, GEORGES. Cry out of the depths; tr. from the French by E. F. Bozman. 213p $3.50 Little

54-5117

A psychological novel told in large part in diary form, and dealing with the life and career of a French businessman who acts as a collaborationist during the war.

Booklist 50:358 My 15 '54

Christian Century 71:676 Je 2 '54 150w

"A subtle, ironic and most moving book." Doris Grumbach

+ Commonweal 60:153 My 14 '54 440w

Kirkus 22:30 F 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 17 '53 120w

Reviewed by Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 18 '54 600w

Reviewed by Donald Barr

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 11 '54 550w

"This is a sketchy book, written as though M. Duhamel had made some notes about villainy and had published them without troubling to create the character, personality, and heart that might have turned his work into a novel."

— New Yorker 30:119 My 1 '54 80w

"It puts a strain on the novelist's art—and the reader's credulity—to reconcile the evil Felix with the De Profundis of the title. . . The trouble is that, in this masterpiece of greed for power, Mr. Duhamel has succeeded all too well with his ironic Frankenstein. He has seemingly carried the man's iniquity past the point of no return. Yet Felix suddenly takes refuge in the psalmist's prayer, begging forgiveness of all whom he has injured. With his daughter's forgiveness, it is true, grace may have had its inexplicable way with him. He makes amends of a sort, but repentance appears to have passed him by. Could that, after all, be the price he pays?" A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R 37:13 Ap 24 '54 550w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p11C My 9 '54 200w

"Many scenes in the book are sharply and brilliantly written, in particular those describing the various business conferences through which Tallemant gains control of the firm; yet the novel as a whole is not convincing, nor is Tallemant ever a completely credible character. . . The book wavers frequently between a mechanistic conception of Tallemant as the archetypal collaborator prepared to cooperate with any régime, and the view of him as a tortured human being who at last feels compelled to seek forgiveness of all those whom he has wronged. In spite of these limitations ■ a study of character, however, Cry out of the Depths is a crisply told and continuously interesting story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p473 J1 24 '53 330w

Wis Lib Bul 50:180 J1 '54

DU JARDIN, MRS ROSAMOND (NEAL). Double feature. 182p $2.50 Lippincott

53-8910

A sequel to Double Date, this carries the twins, Pam and Penny, into their first year at college and a growing maturity.

"As always, Mrs. du Jardin shows understanding of the young viewpoint. Her books have a gay, light quality that makes for pleasant reading, and yet there is always something solid beneath the light touch." P. A. W.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p57 N 15 '53 150w

Kirkus 21:489 Ag 1 '53 120w

"Not important, but if you have Double Date, you will have to have this." R. M. McEvoy

Library J 79:76 Ja 1 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 10 '54 50w

"A sensitive and skillful story of college and family life." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times pt2, p8 N 15 '53 110w

DUKA, IVO, pseud. See Duchacek, I.

DU MAURIER, DAPHNE (LADY BROWNING). Mary Anne. 351p $3.50 Doubleday

Clarke, Mary Anne (Thompson)—Fiction 54-6254

"Memoir in form of a novel. . . Mary Anne Clarke was a famous courtesan, mistress of Frederick, Duke of York, son of George III. She also sold military commissions and wrote scurrilous pamphlets and memoirs. Miss du Maurier makes this lively ancestress (who uses as modern a word as 'moronic') as vivid a figure as her fictional contemporary, Becky Sharp." Library J

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 194:82 Ag '54 400w
Booklist 50:419 J1 1 '54
Bookmark 13:237 J1 '54 30w

"A slipshod and thoroughly unpleasant book."
Riley Hughes

— Cath World 179:475 S '54 200w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 20 '54
250w

Kirkus 22:269 Ap 15 '54 180w

"The story pulls one along, though tension relaxes in long transcripts of court proceedings. Fiction collections and browsing rooms. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 79:1051 Je 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by Betty Askwith
New Statesman & Nation 47:610 My 1
'54 200w

"Mary Anne Clarke was a clever, fascinating, and indomitable woman and her life story makes a capital narrative. Feminine readers in particular will delight in her wit, her audacity, and her ability to play upon masculine weakness for her own advantage. She is not the most admirable of Miss du Maurier's heroines but she held her own in a man's world, she loved a fight, and she never admitted defeat or asked for quarter." Geoffrey Bruun
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 20 '54
900w

"Miss du Maurier has made Mary Anne Clarke the heroine of a fictionalized biography, rather confusingly labeled a novel. The material for a fascinating study of character is certainly here. Unfortunately, Miss du Maurier has done her best to lick it into the shape of the conventional historical novel. The result is unsatisfactorily ambiguous." Elizabeth Jane-way

— + N Y Times p4 Je 20 '54 480w

"A flowery and not very fascinating piece of work."

— New Yorker 30:99 Je 19 '54 50w

"The novel is no sentimental little watercolor, as the portrait on the jacket might lead you to believe. It's a sharply etched re-creation of a woman who is warm and gay and loves life, of the people around her, and of the period background. Mary Anne will not disturb your emotions as she did those of the Duke of York and the men who loved her. But you'll enjoy her quick wit and her never failing readiness to drink a toast to the future." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 27 '54
800w

"Skillfully hidden under the engrossing surface of the story are the long hours of tireless research Miss du Maurier spent examining the books, diaries, and documents of the period and, as a result, she brings the sounds and the smell of the late eighteenth-century London to life." Harrison Smith

Sat R 37:19 Je 26 '54 600w

"Readers who are not repelled by gusts of sentimental and slapdash writing can be assured of a nice long cosy read and an occasional flare of genuine excitement." L. A. G. Strong

Spec p565 My 7 '54 180w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 27 '54
120w

Time 63:112 Je 21 '54 250w

"No one can blame Mrs. Clarke's descendant for wishing to show her in as advantageous a light as possible. . . But there is something very unhistorical in the flavour of Miss du Maurier's writing; one does not expect her to repeat Thackeray's feat in Esmond of admitting no word or phrase that is not of its period; but, on the other hand, one is jarred by a constant flow of modern slang, which the actors in the story could not conceivably have used."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 14
'54 200w

DUNCAN, DAVID. Dark dominion. 206p $2.50; pa 35c Ballantine

53-13038

Science fiction.

Kirkus 22:250 Ap 1 '54 90w

"As a sound professional, he tells his story well and creates believable and sympathetic characters, but unfortunately, not content with the simple tension of his theme, he elaborates it with a fantastic amount of pseudo-science about the discovery of a new element, whose nature, manufacture and properties lie far beyond my ability to suspend disbelief. I'm afraid a potentially good book has been pretty much ruined by ill-advised zeal in concocting implausible scientific novelty." H. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 25 '54
110w

"Anyone familiar with David Duncan's novels on such diverse matters as American labor or life in an artists' colony knows that he is a skilled story-teller. Science fiction aficionados, encountering Mr. Duncan for the first time, may be somewhat disappointed to find that he has devoted his very considerable talents to a shopworn theme. . . Even so, I venture to predict that the pace of Duncan's narrative, the plausibility of his characters, the intimacy of his plot will convert the most conscientious of these objectors." J. F. McC.

+ — N Y Times p19 J1 11 '54 200w

DUNCAN, HARRY. Poets of today. See Poets of today

DUNHILL, ALFRED HENRY. Gentle art of smoking; with drawings by James Arnold. 177p il $3.75 Putnam

394 Smoking. Tobacco

54-10495

"Appalled by 20th century smoking habits, due in part to heavy reliance upon cigarettes, the author pleads for a switch to pipes and/or cigars. He goes to considerable lengths to suggest how to get the most out of smoking a pipe; how to pick the right cigar, and along the way he gives a short history of pipes and how they are made. There's also an anecdotal history of smoking from earliest times; a description of growing tobacco, and its processing." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:164 D 15 '54

"Authoritative and readable."

+ Kirkus 22:563 Ag 15 '54 150w

"Amiable but not definitive." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:2322 D 1 '54 70w

"The author does not claim to have written an exhaustive treatise on his subject; his book, in fact, is only a matter of 175 pages, though it contains a short bibliography for those who would like to pursue the theme at greater length. All he wants is to tell his readers the high-lighted story of tobacco and its uses down the ages, and this is what he does very pleasantly indeed." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 20 '54
500w

DUNLOP, AGNES MARY ROBERTSON (ELISABETH KYLE, pseud). On Lennox moor; decorations by L. Vosburgh. 188p $2.50 Nelson

54-5906

A mystery story for older girls, the locale of which is Scotland.

Booklist 50:325 Ap 15 '54

"Readers, like reluctant Laurie herself, will become deeply concerned with the suspicion cast on the two valuable dogs for possible sheep-killing and will admire their skill and faithfulness in identifying and rounding up their sheep." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:174 Je '54 110w

Kirkus 22:118 F 15 '54 150w

"Excellent description of the Scottish moor. Well written, sustained interest. Characters are very real and well-drawn. Recommended for older girls." Elizabeth Stafford

+ Library J 79:565 Mr 15 '54 80w

"A dozen well-written mystery stories by this Scottish author have been popular in America with both boys and girls of about ten to thirteen. An adult who admired their vivid Scottish backgrounds often regretted the type of mysteries and the way the children themselves solved them. Here is a new one for older girls, in which there is little to regret." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 1 '54 250w

Wis Lib Bul 50:216 O '54

DUPEYRAT, ANDRE. Savage Papua; a missionary among cannibals; tr. from the French by Eric and Denyse Demauny; pref. by Paul Claudel; with ill. and endpaper map [Eng title: Mitsinari]. 256p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Papua, Territory of. Missions—Papua 54-5056

For twenty-one years the author, a French priest, was a missionary among the Papuans. This is an account of his experiences during those years, and of the life and customs of this little-known race. Map on endpapers. No index.

Booklist 51:11 S 1 '54

Cath World 180:239 D '54 220w

"Father Dupeyrat writes brilliantly, and the translation is excellent. There are many fascinating photos, and anyone who can put this book down, having once begun it, before the end, can only have decided he does not belong to the human race—or wish he did not." Anne Frementale

+ Commonweal 60:587 S 17 '54 1400w

Kirkus 22:376 Je 15 '54 210w

"The reader's interest will be held from start to finish of this tale, although at times he has to witness with the missionary much horror, wretchedness and ignorance. Recommended for all types of libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 79:1507 S 1 '54 70w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 22 '54 220w

"Most remarkable in this fascinating but often terrifying book is the author's account of his journey, entirely alone in its final stage—bearers having deserted into the bush—into a region hitherto unpenetrated by a white man." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2 Ag 22 '54 500w

"This present book represents something of a shock to the complacent or 'ordinary' reader. At the end he may be still confused as to the various tribes, but he will certainly know he has read one of the exciting stories of our day." John Chase

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 22 '54 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 3 '54 190w

Reviewed by Caroline Mytinger
Sat R 37:14 S 4 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 200w

"Though Father Dupeyrat's relationship with his people may not have been superficial, his book is so. There are references to learning 'a little—a very little—about the mentality of our flock,' as if this mentality were some mysterious entity. Yet in other passages he seems to realize fully that only participation and a humble desire to learn not only social survival but also a certain amount of wisdom from a savage people can dispel this false mystery. When one tries to penetrate deeper into the author or into his subject, one is kept back by the verbiage."

—Times [London] Lit Sup p677 O 22 '54 750w

DUPONT, JACQUES, and GNUDI, CESARE. Gothic painting; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. (Great centuries of painting) 215p col pl $20 Skira

759.02 [750.902] Painting, Gothic [54-7294]

"Paintings, tapestries, stained glass windows, illuminations, and miniatures all are given place in this book. The art is both sacred and secular, and it includes examples from Italy, France, Germany, Spain, England, and Bohemia. Such widely renowned artists as Giotto are well represented; so are a host of lesser known people who in obscurity or even in anonymity worked passionately to increase the world's store of loveliness. . . . The 110 meticulous color reproductions in this new volume from the Skira presses reflect infinite richness." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 28 '54 220w

"Gothic Painting is particularly welcome with its sumptuously colored reproductions of frescoes, miniatures, panel paintings, stained glass and tapestries. This pre-Renaissance interval of art history is not commonly known, and the text should be helpful to many a student of art. . . . The color in its approximation to the original generally imparts the characteristic elegance. The closer the page is in size to the original masterpiece, the more authentic a color translation is likely to seem." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 2 '54 370w

"Here are miniatures and illuminations rendered so accurately that only persons having ready access to originals will feel any sense of loss. . . . But perhaps the most memorable experience one will get from the volume will be that of one's contact with Siene painting in the hands of men like Duccio and Ambrogio Lorenzetti. Matisse once remarked that Florence merely confirmed for him the impressions he had in Paris, whereas Siena offered a vision of the world that was new to him—and exciting in its naive yet noble sincerity." Walter Pach

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 11 '54 370w

"The feast for the eyes is the primary attraction of this book. The illustrations are rich and luxurious: the manuscripts—cramped with story-telling pictures, counterparts on a somewhat other level of our comic-book techniques—glow with gold and vivid hues; the stained glass looks refulgent; the tapestries are dry and expressive; the frescoes are powdery; the panel paintings are brilliant and sharp. . . . Of necessity, it abruptly telescopes; it presupposes an abundant background; and the constant references to works which are not reproduced or are reproduced only in small details is frustrating." A. B. Saarinen

+ — N Y Times p4 D 5 '54 380w

New Yorker 30:207 D 11 '54 100w

"Exquisite in design, typography and format." R. H. Hagan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 28 '54 120w

DURHAM, FRANK. Du Bose Heyward, the man who wrote Porgy. 152p ill $4.50 Univ. of S.C. press

B or 92 Heyward, Du Bose 54-10111

A critical biographical study of DuBose Heyward by a fellow South Carolinian. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 50:398 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by George Freedley

+ Library J 79:1321 J1 '54 30w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 27 '54 100w

DURHAM, FRANK—Continued

"The author of this study, Frank Durham, is, like its subject, a born and bred South Carolinian with a fresh viewpoint. . . A few proper Charlestonians may be ruffled because a certain young aristocrat in 'Mamba's Daughters,' though certainly autobiographical, is here rated as a pallid stereotype. But this commentator in retrospect is concerned only to state the truth as he sees it. He is no more a chauvinist than the man who wrote 'Porgy' ever was at his most fervid hour of creation." Frances Gaither
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 25 '54 650w

"Mr. Durham has written a brief but interesting biography illuminated with perceptive critical judgments." E. A. B.
+ Sat R 37:43 S 16 '54 330w

DURRELL, GERALD MALCOLM. Bafut Beagles; il. by Ralph Thompson. 238p il $3.75 Viking

579 Zoological specimens—Collection and preservation 54-9600

The author of The Overloaded Ark (Book Review Digest 1953) describes another expedition to collect animals from the grasslands of Bafut in the northwest Cameroons. The hunters and their hunting dogs used on the expedition were named by Mr Durrell the Bafut Beagles.

Booklist 51:125 N 15 '54

"The appeal of 'The Bafut Beagles' is by no means limited to specialized readers. Durrell tells his story with a straightforward simplicity which recommends it to readers in all walks of life." August Derleth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 N 14 '54 260w

Kirkus 22:526 Ag 1 '54 200w

"The descriptions of the flora and fauna of the country are well-written, and the pidgin English of the natives does not seem too overwhelming. Probably not as suitable for young people's collections as the earlier book, but will appeal to the same public library readers." E. M. Cole

+ Library J 79:1584 S 15 '54 120w

"There are not many travel books with a more natural sense of humour." E. G.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 15 '54 200w

"It is, first of all, a gay little book—no charging rhinoceroses, no man-eaters lurking in the tall grass, no sinister drums subduing the sophisticated European with the hypnotism of Africa's dark beating heart. Even the animals to whom the reader is introduced are, for the most part, engaging if odd creatures like the squirrel that goes 'boom,' the hairy frog, the golden 'bush cat' and the flying mouse. Moreover the author is surrounded most of the time with enthusiastic native helpers with whom he is on the best of terms." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 7 '54 500w

"This is a somewhat more sophisticated account than 'The Overloaded Ark' and it is appropriately illustrated by Ralph Thomson. The author does write entertainingly about the smaller, less-known and thoroughly engaging subjects of the animal realm (the largest creature mentioned is the chimpanzee). One somehow wishes he had stuck resolutely to his captures—or else confined himself to an anthropological discourse on the bibulous Fon and his cheerful people." D. T. Carlisle

+ N Y Times p24 D 5 '54 650w

New Yorker 30:192 N 6 '54 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 16 '54 500w

Reviewed by Thomas Hodgkin
Spec p637 N 19 '54 360w

"The stories of the many hunts are well and graphically told, and there is a good deal of interesting detail about some of the quainter animals which were successfully pursued and captured."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p783 D 3 '54 480w

DURYEY, ELIZABETH (MRS SHARON OSBORNE BROWN). Long Christmas eve; with pictures by Lisl Weil. 43p $2 Houghton

54-9048

The Bayer family came from Bavaria to America and lived on Beacon Hill in Boston, but the father and mother remembered all the European customs at Christmas. This is the story of the Christmas when the twins surprised their father with a carved figure from Oberammergau for the family crèche, but father surprised them even more.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:95 D '54 20w

Booklist 51:114 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 12 '54 40w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 9 '54 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"The story is slight, but it has a feeling of Christmas and the joy of children planning a surprise for a grownup. With Lisl Weil's pictures, some in color, this is a happy seasonal book for children from seven to nine or ten."

J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:441 D '54 100w

+ Kirkus 22:532 Ag 15 '54 90w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 79:2495 D 15 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 19 '54 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p54 D 5 '54 90w

"This is an excellent small book for the season and one which will be gratefully received under many a tree."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 28 '54 120w

DU SOE, ROBERT C. Detached command; decorations by Arthur Harper. 206p $2.75 Longmans

54-7680

Continues the story of Jonithan Amery, hero of Your Orders, Sir. This is a picture of life in the United States navy during its early years, beginning in 1815. For ages twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 51:67 O 1 '54

"Standard cops and robbers but good Navy atmosphere."

Kirkus 22:393 Jl 1 '54 100w

"Recommended for ages 11-15." Robert Van Benthuyzen

+ Library J 79:1671 S 15 '54 70w

"In spite of action, conflict, and competition among the crew, and some contrast in characters, plot and characterization are subordinate to depiction of a particular kind of life at sea in a particular era. It is possible that the average boy of twelve to fourteen will find the story interest insufficient to carry the weight of the primary emphasis." Elizabeth Nesbitt

Sat R 37:35 S 18 '54 130w

DU SOE, ROBERT C. Your orders, sir; decorations by Arthur Harper. 184p $2.50 Longmans

53-8758

Continues the adventures of Jonithan Amery, begun in Boatswain's Boy (Book Review Digest 1950). This is a story of the War of 1812, in which Jonithan serves as a young naval officer. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 50:83 O 15 '53

Kirkus 21:433 Jl 15 '53 120w

"This well-written story is exciting in a dignified, subdued manner. Nautical terms are used in profusion. Arthur Harper's frontispiece and title page decorated in black and white lend an atmosphere of the sea." E. H. Speer

+ Library J 78:1860 O 15 '53 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 24 '54 30w

"Those who liked 'Boatswain Boy' will find many of the same seamen in this book. However, the story does not quite hang together and some children will have difficulty following the action." Barbara Dillon

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 15 '53 40w

DUTTON, WILLIAM SHERMAN. Stay on, stranger! an extraordinary story of the Kentucky mountains. 79p $1.75 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Lloyd, Mrs Alice Spencer Geddes. Caney junior college, Pippapass, Kentucky 54-6205

The story of Alice Lloyd, who in 1916 went to the Kentucky hills to seek health and a way of life. She was forty then, and today at nearly eighty she works on at her self-appointed task of bringing education to the people around her. Caney Junior College is one of the results of her work.

Booklist 50:252 Mr 1 '54

"Not a dull page . . . and completely true." Marge Lyon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 14 '54 170w

+ Kirkus 21:805 D 15 '53 210w

"Recommended especially for libraries in Kentucky, Tennessee and other states with isolated, mountain communities and similar problems. Also for libraries with inclusive collections on education and community projects." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 79:144 Ja 15 '54 160w

"A striking story of indomitable courage and persisting faith." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 24 '54 400w

"It is, in substance, a fine and unusual story, but the author has told it with such an overlay of adjective and adulation that it has all the impact of a radio commercial. Alice Lloyd and Caney College deserve better, much better." Hal Borland

N Y Times p12 F 14 '54 380w

"Although it suffers from lack of organization, there is a great deal of satisfaction to be gained from William Dutton's account of a startling transformation which has taken place in the Kentucky mountains." G. E. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 7 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:64 Mr '54

DUVALL, MRS EVELYN RUTH (MILLIS).

In-laws: pro and con; an original study of inter-personal relations. 400p $3.95 Assn. press 301.42 [392.5] Marriage 54-13088

"In-laws represent a crucial and important area of family relationships, but they are a neglected area in family research. In this book Dr. Duvall reports on her pilot study of in-law relationships with particular emphasis on mothers-in-law. On the basis of individual and group interviews with 5,020 men and women and content analysis of responses to a nationwide radio contest on mothers-in-law, she tells what makes in-laws difficult, what people like most and dislike most about their in-laws, and how to understand and get along with in-laws." Library J

Booklist 51:164 D 15 '54

Kirkus 22:696 O 1 '54 150w

"Although there are charts, references sources, a 26-page bibliography, and other scholarly paraphernalia, the book is written in a fairly popular style, and should be of interest to all adult readers." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:2322 D 1 '54 150w

Sat R 37:23 D 11 '54 440w

DUVOISIN, ROGER ANTOINE. Easter treat; il. by [the author]. [28p] $2 Knopf

54-5308

Picture story book about the time Santa Claus decided to take a trip to the city at Easter, and what happened when the police did not believe he was Santa—at first.

Booklist 50:326 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 10w

"A story the youngest are going to love. It is sure to make them look closely, and hopefully, at the next jolly, bearded old gentleman they meet on the street!" Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 4 '54 140w

"Santa Claus in an Easter book! I expected to dislike this, for a story which brings Santa into spring can hardly be anything but contrived, but I was pleasantly surprised." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:91 Ap '54 90w

"A definite picture appeal makes this a satisfactory gift item." M. H. Edmonds

+ Library J 79:780 Ap 15 '54 70w

"It all seemed to us too slight, not able to create an addition to the Santa myth which would greatly impress children of an age to believe in him." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 4 '54 110w

"Admittedly the story is slight, but it has a daffy kind of logic that should please children who remember Santa Claus all through the year. They will be further convinced when they see the pictures of him admiring the tulips, listening to the robins and arguing with bewildered cops." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 11 '54 130w

E

EADE, CHARLES, ed. Churchill, by his contemporaries. 461p il $6 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Churchill, Sir Winston Leonard Spencer 54-5894

"In this fat volume, forty men and women (including the editor) discuss various aspects of the most many-sided figure of the century. The subjects range from 'Churchill's Humor' to 'Churchill in High Office,' 'Churchill and Racing' stands cheek by jowl with 'Churchill the Philosopher.' He is discussed as a journalist, an artist and as an historian; separate chapters embrace his relations with the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. Among those quoted on his astonishing career are President Eisenhower, former Premier Reynaud and Adolf Hitler; his secretary, his bodyguard, an old schoolmate at Harrow, Sir Compton Mackenzie, George Bernard Shaw contribute to the miscellany." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:319 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 21 '54 180w

Foreign Affairs 33:166 O '54 20w

"Possibly the viewpoints are too British for some American readers, but in the main they are sparked by the enormous vitality that marks Winston Churchill in all his many roles."

Kirkus 21:729 N 1 '53 180w

"Recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:554 Mr 15 '54 90w

Reviewed by Harry Boardman

Manchester Guardian p4 D 1 '53 370w

"This is a brilliant book idea, and it is executed with liveliness and dash." Arthur Schlesinger, jr.

+ New Repub 130:17 Mr 1 '54 1400w

"Needless to say, there is a certain amount of overlapping and a great deal of pious platitude, in the course of which Sir Norman Birkett loses a golden opportunity to discuss

EADE, CHARLES—Continued

Churchill the orator. Some of the contributors grow scatterbrained in their enthusiasm." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 47:48 Ja 9 '54 550w

"Nearly all are laudatory of course—although many are sufficiently this side idolatry to provide keen criticism of various activities of Sir Winston. Emanuel Shinwell offers a gracefully balanced picture of his long standing political opponent; Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, discussing Churchill as a guest, is equally revealing about herself as a hostess. Most thought-provoking of all the series, however, is the one piece that was written with no benefit from hindsight—an appreciation of 'The Youngest Man in Europe,' by G. W. Stevens, a brilliant newspaper man, in 1898." Harry Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 28 '54 360w

"Much of the 'I knew him when' writing is familiar. This is inevitable when a writer is dealing with so well publicized a personality. There is also a good deal of self consciously 'fine' writing about him, but somehow, probably because Sir Winston remains so alive and vibrant, it misses. . . Of the portraits of Sir Winston those which picture him as an active politician, a director of war strategy and a parliamentarian are the most interesting. One reason of course is that Churchill is action." Drew Middleton

N Y Times p18 F 28 '54 450w

New Yorker 30:131 Mr 27 '54 150w

"Sir Winston Churchill has kept pace with his own myth, but his talents are so various that the conception of this volume was excellent. . . The distinguished names, the 527 pages, will ensure a big popular acclaim and yet, unfortunately, this is not the book to attract a serious international public. There are too many authors, crowding each other out: much of it is repetitive and ill-written. The views of Toynbee, Russell, Laski, perhaps Attlee and Beveridge, would have improved both balance and authority. Also the foreign representation is inadequate." Peter Vansittart

Spec p766 D 25 '53 1350w

EADIE, WILLIAM ROBERT. Animal control in field, farm, and forest. 257p $3.75 Macmillan (N Y)

632.6 Animals, Predatory. Zoology, Economic 54-10660

Articles on forty wild mammals, in an attempt to give economic values or otherwise of these animals to gardeners, farmers, and conservationists. Includes identification, habits, control methods, natural enemies, etc., for each species. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 51:99 N 1 '54

"Recommended for all libraries, it should prove useful as a reference tool." R. M. Salmons

+ Library J 79:2446 D 15 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p9C O 17 '54 120w

EAGER, EDWARD MCMAKEN. Half magic; drawings by N. M. Bodecker. 217p $2.75 Harcourt

54-5153

"Three sisters, a brother and a widowed mother made up the family. Jane, the eldest, found a magic charm which granted half of any wish; after finding that out, and barring accidents, the children wished for twice as much as they wanted. The charm made for a week of adventures, including Katharine's defeat of Sir Launcelot in a thoroughly unfair tourney and ending with mother's acquisition of a new husband amid a burst of what Mark called 'love blah.'" N Y Times

Booklist 50:363 My 15 '54

Bookmark 13:163 Ap '54 10w

"The author has brought inventiveness, enthusiasm, and wit to his tale about four very real children in nonsensical situations, and the illustrator gives him the finest sort of co-operation." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 9 '54 150w

"It is an unusually good book: the humor never falls flat; the author never rides any situation to death; the story holds up to the very end. It is shorter than the E. Nesbit books and may well lead many children to hers. Nothing, we feel sure, could please Mr. Eager more." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:174 Je '54 120w

Kirkus 22:232 Ap 1 '54 110w

"The [children's] wonderful adventures pursuing carefully worded double-wishes through past and present have satisfying variety, surprise and laughter and make a book children will want to read at one sitting. Some may be led on to the Treasure Seekers, and the others." Virginia Haviland

+ Library J 79:784 Ap 15 '54 80w

"The value and charm of this unusual modern fantasy have been debated by critics and will be by children too. They will either appreciate heartily or dislike the honest child talk of these three girls and one brother, put down with wit and realism seldom achieved since Richard Hughes or perhaps in both books about 'Homer Price.' Like many of the most honestly portrayed book children, these four are not always too lovable, and the thirty-year ago setting, so wonderfully well caught by the able illustrator, will seem funnier to adults. The bit of satire on the child psychologist is off key; Jane deserved a better adventure." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p10 My 16 '54 300w

"The children are credible and fun to read about, though too often the comments are coy and the jokes and situations more fit for animated cartoons and comic strips than for a story which quite frankly takes off from the books of E. Nesbit. The illustrations are more consistently witty than the story." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 18 '54 140w

"The chief effect of such a book is humor, arising from the ridiculous yet logical situations due to the unyielding laws of magic in conflict with the modern world. To be acceptable, such humor must be unforced and inherent in incident and situation. With one possible exception, 'Half Magic' meets this requirement. Some may prefer that the children had not wished themselves back to the days of King Arthur. Here the story loses its sureness of touch, and the humor seems strained. But this is a minor fault in a book whose total contribution is one of fun and relaxation." Elizabeth Nesbitt

+ Sat R 37:62 My 15 '54 270w

Reviewed by Pamela Whitlock

Spec p656 N 19 '54 140w

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 40w

"The idea of a charm which gives you only half your wish is a very good one though it naturally leads to a lot of complications, particularly for those who have not learnt fractions. . . The holidays, at any rate, are very far from dull, either for the children or for Mr. Eager's readers. For his character drawing no praise can be too high."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup pvii N 19 '54 550w

Wis Lib Bul 50:142 My '54

EARL, LAWRENCE. Crocodile fever; a true story of adventure. 293p il $3.95 Knopf

B or 92 Dempster, Bryan Herbert. Crocodiles 53-9460

A Canadian-born reporter and author tells the story of Bryan Herbert Dempster, son of a well-to-do Natal farmer, who chose to give up a more settled life to become a hunter of crocodiles.

Booklist 50:313 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 28 '54 250w

Kirkus 21:808 D 15 '53 190w

"Recommended," R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 79:459 Mr 1 '54 40w
"Good reading for general public. Illustrated," R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 79:554 Mr 15 '54 120w
"Crocodile Fever" is a fine example of collaboration and a corking story." Ralph Chapman

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p11 Je 27 '54 320w

"Dempster's story is an utterly fascinating one. Completely lacking in literary artifice, it still grips the reader by the sheer audacity of its courage and the bizarreness of its exploits. . . . Where the facts themselves are so hair-raising it would be a crime to use hyperbole. This reviewer, who has some knowledge of the Zambezi himself, found it impossible to put the book down." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p6 F 21 '54 600w

New Yorker 30:128 Mr 20 '54 180w

"In spite of being written in one of the less admirable magazine-quickie styles, has undeniable fascination." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 8 '54 650w

"Mr. Earl, in a breezy reportorial style, which makes the reader skeptical of what he says even when it is probably true, tries to make Bryan Dempster a tragic figure instead of a discouraged and weak character. He unfortunately fails to make the hunter seem much more human than the hunted. For those in quest of the undiscerning lurid, here, it is true, is adventure—violent, sometimes erotic, and always fast-moving." Raymond Holden

Sat 37:27 F 20 '54 400w

"As so often with a biography by a journalist, the tale, in spite of its inherent interest, is overtold and too highly coloured." F. S. Chapman

Spec p474 O 15 '54 40w

Time 63:94 Mr 1 '54 900w

EARLE, OLIVE LYDIA. Paws, hoofs, and flippers; il. by the author. 192p $3.50 Morrow

599 Mammals—Juvenile literature. Animals, Habits and behavior of 54-8410

Using their claws, hoofs, flippers and nails to classify them the author gives the significant facts, as well as many unusual details, about representatives of every order of mammal, from the duck-billed platypus all the way to man himself. For grades five to eight. Index.

Booklist 51:46 S 15 '54

Bookmark 14:13 O '54 10w

"This book has the sort of appeal that zoos have, except that these animals don't move. There are dozens of fine drawings." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 14 '54 150w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 160w

Commonweal 61:202 N 19 '54 20w

"A book young people will love to read and browse through for its variety of fascinating facts and pictures, both of familiar and little-known species." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:339 O '54 120w

"Illustrated with the author's many fine drawings, this is recommended for 8-11's too."

+ Kirkus 22:398 J1 1 '54 160w

"The text, for ages 12 and up and adults, reads smoothly, and the abundance of information makes it suitable, also, for reference with younger children. Recommended for all natural history collections." Lois Anderson

+ Library J 79:1671 S 15 '54 80w

"The style is an excellent simplification of this sort of information for readers under twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p19 N 14 '54 100w

Reviewed by R. K. Plumb

N Y Times pt2 p22 N 14 '54 20w

"This fine addition to our natural-history collections will attract young naturalists who will discover some little-known and fascinating animals as well as unusual information about more familiar creatures. The book is well indexed and should serve a useful reference purpose as well." L. G.

+ Sat R 37:83 N 13 '54 130w

EARLY, ELEANOR. New England cookbook. 236p il $2.95 Random house

641.5 Cookery

54-5958

Nearly 300 recipes of traditional New England dishes. Includes also anecdotes and comments on the origins of the dishes. Index.

Booklist 51:33 S 15 '54

Bookmark 13:234 J1 '54 20w

"There are some shortcuts I want to try, buckwheat cakes that don't have to be set overnight, a simplification of sponge cake guaranteed to turn out like the tricky ones of a generation ago, and an old fashioned gingerbread that I'm hoping is the answer to a long hunt. Anyhow—here it is—a specialty cookbook that I want to own."

+ Kirkus 22:257 Ap 1 '54 150w

"This is not a low calorie cook book! It is filled with nostalgic recipes that warm the heart and increase the girth and they are adapted to the present even though they come from the past. EE has arranged the material very well and there is a good index." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1230 Je 15 '54 60w

"Quaint history and anecdotes, presented in a too-chatty manner, all but smother the recipes. Fortunately, these are authentic." Mary Poore

+ N Y Times p32 My 16 '54 50w

Reviewed by Jane Friendly

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 20 '54 70w

EARNEST, ERNEST PENNEY. Academic procession; an informal history of the American college, 1636 to 1953. 368p il $4 Bobbs

378 Colleges and universities—United States. Students 53-9859

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"It is the story of certain American college types—chiefly in the Eastern part of the United States—Yale, Princeton, Harvard, the University of Virginia. Much of what he describes is true also of the hundreds of colleges and universities of the Middle West and West, their students and faculty, but much of it also definitely is not. With this important reservation, therefore, the book is well worth reading, and at all times delightfully interesting and actually good fun."

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 20 '54 160w

"Wit, good humor, and gentle satire are among the many fine features of Earnest's style. The lightness of touch has in it more of the intelligent journalist than the learned professor of English, which is Earnest's vocation. Yet this study has the thoroughness, the mastery of subject, that one associates with the good scholar. Not often enough do academic men and women attempt popularization of serious subjects; and still less frequently do they succeed as admirably as Earnest has." F. H. Jackson

+ Library Q 24:405 O '54 1200w

"In this informal history of the American college from the foundation of Harvard to the present day, Professor Earnest has integrated the fruits of thorough research into a vigorous and entertaining narrative. . . . The one criticism that might be offered of his book is that it draws too much on the experience of the Eastern colleges."

+ Nation 178:153 F 20 '54 140w

"Though there is a tendency on the author's part to preach a utilitarian educational philosophy, he has written an important and readable work, one that is stimulating in thought and observations. Without doubt 'Academic

EARNEST, E. P.—Continued

'Procession' will be a valuable addition to the library of students, teachers, and laymen who are vitally concerned with education in America." G. A. Panichas
 + Springf'd Republican p5C F 14 '54
 700w

EASTMAN, MAX. Poems of five decades. 249p
 $3.75 Harper

811

54-8947

"This volume contains two decades of unpublished lyrics, the idyll 'Swamp Maple,' the dramatic poem 'Lot's Wife,' three Prefaces, and those lyrics previously published in which the author, 'looking back from the top of a lifetime . . . finds no flaw from the standpoint of their own nature, no obvious failure to be what they set out to be.'" Publisher's note

"Whatever else Max Eastman may be, editor, critic, philosopher, politician, he is not a good poet. . . The little prose apologies inserted between the poems are better written than the poems themselves, and the volume is at best a triste testament to the confused thinking of our times."

— + Kirkus 22:468 J1 15 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 D 5 '54
 50w

"Although there is nothing cantative here, there is nothing merely vocative or rhetorical but much of that which goes to form the great corpus of English poetry with its inevitable philosophy (for let it not be forgotten that Max Eastman is a philosopher); nevertheless he is pre-eminently a poet of very great stature in spite of his disdain or, perhaps, because of it, for the present day conventional ways of life. After all, there must be something of the future in this 'divine discontent.'" O. S. Gogarty

+ N Y Times p40 O 17 '54 600w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R 37:39 O 23 '54 150w

EATON, CLEMENT. History of the southern confederacy. 351p $5.50 Macmillan (N Y)

973.713 Confederate states of America—History. U.S.—History—Civil war 54-8772

Study of the life of the Southern people during the four years of the Civil war. The author is a member of the history faculty at the University of Kentucky. Index.

"The author of this book has succeeded well in what he set out to do. He has written a well-balanced book and has compressed in a compact style a great deal of information. . . In attractiveness and effectiveness, this book suffers somewhat by the absence of maps and other illustrative material. Although it is well documented by footnotes, the many sources used have not been gathered together into a bibliography, the lack of which will be felt by serious scholars." E. M. Coulter

+ — Am Hist R 60:131 O '54 500w

Reviewed by D. M. Potter

Ann Am Acad 296:176 N '54 400w

Booklist 50:377 Je 1 '54

"Clement Eaton's A History of the Southern Confederacy is an able and balanced book that is a worthy successor to his earlier volumes." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 15 '54
 90w

Current Hist 27:62 J1 '54 160w

"Thoroughgoing, and with wide use of letters and private papers as source material, this should fill a gap created by the many more recently published specialized studies."

+ Kirkus 22:99 F 1 '54 220w

"Carefully documented and readable volume. Recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:544 Mr 15 '54 140w

"His history of the Confederacy like his prior books is balanced and scholarly." B. I. Wiley

+ N Y Times p6 J1 4 '54 500w

"Mr. Eaton tells us everything about life in the beleaguered South—from how gunpowder was made to how a soldier boy felt while looking for the body of a friend. His achievement is notable. He has, in a compact narrative, produced the most well-rounded account of the Confederacy in print." F. B. Simkins

+ Pol Sci Q 69:463 S '54 650w

"The principal fault of the book lies of course, in the fact that it is really the barest outline of the History of the Confederacy, the result of trying to cram too much in too little. Nevertheless the reader seeking an introduction to the South's role in the Civil War will find the book wholly absorbing." A. N. Chamberlin

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 27 '54
 550w

"In treatment, the book is topical rather than narrative. This makes for a more ready comprehension of the several phases of history which are successively dealt with, though at the risk of some confusion in the mind of one unfamiliar with the subject who might seek to follow the sequence of events from the birth to the destined fall of the Confederacy. But whether looked at from the point of view of the needs of the student or of the general reader, this new history of the Southern Confederacy is an outstandingly useful contribution to the ever-growing literature on the subject of a war which is peculiarly American." R. S. Henry

+ Sat R 37:17 My 22 '54 850w

"This history of the Confederacy is a worthy addition to all Americans' bookshelves." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6C Ap 25 '54
 200w

EATON, EVELYN SYBIL MARY. Flight. 246p
 $3 Bobbs

54-6054

Martia Deane, a world famous photographer, found herself on a plane, destination unknown. She had injured her head as the plane started so was prepared for the confusion of events which followed. Bits of her past life came back to her: her marriage; her husband's suicide; her daughter's birth; and the later pattern of her life. Then she realized that her husband was the passenger in the seat next to her. And the bits and pieces fell into place.

Booklist 50:320 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:185 My '54 40w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 4 '54
 370w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 79:626 Ap 1 '54 100w

"A novel of quite unusual beauty. To read it is to experience the full moral and aesthetic equivalent of listening to a fine philosophical poem or to music spaciouly conceived and sensitively performed. Yet the ideas underlying 'Flight' are presented in warm, colorful, narrative prose." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 4
 '54 470w

"Known as the author of 'Quietly My Captain Waits' and 'Give Me Your Golden Hand,' Evelyn Eaton has undoubtedly produced another best seller. The story is rendered with all the care and polish of the mature writer, and yet there is a directness and freshness of tone which should charm any reader." D. R. McD.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 15 '54
 370w

"Miss Eaton has been unable fully to control the extremely complex task she has set herself. She has made nevertheless a remarkably sensitive and civilised attempt to communicate a mystical experience in modern metaphor and simple language. Her courage in even attempting to handle so many different levels of feeling in so small a compass certainly makes the careful half-tones and flat washes of the Eliot-Greene approach look anaemically craven." John Metcalf

+ — Spec p238 Ag 20 '54 450w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 11 '54
 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p513 Ag 13
 '54 200w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). Man
missing. 297p $2.50 Random house

Detective story. 54-5393

Booklist 50:343 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:186 My '54

"Altho this does not match 'While the Patient Slept,' it is a wholly enjoyable re-appearance of Nurse Keate after a long recess." Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Mr 14 '54
160w

Kirkus 22:16 Ja 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 16
'54 80w

"Sarah Keate is her fine dry self as she investigates murder in a Naval Ammunition Depot; and if the story sags in the middle, the details of Navy life are interesting, and the whirlwind finale is as breathless (and well-constructed) as any ending in some time." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 21 '54 40w

"Under the circumstances, the solution is perhaps not entirely fair, but Mrs. Eberhart is still one of the most agreeable writers in the trade, and she makes it all at least reasonably acceptable."

+ New Yorker 30:119 F 27 '54 80w

"Background of naval personnel seems exceptionally good, the problem of the phantom hitchhiker (aerial) is sound, and it's a joy to re-encounter the early Eberhart style. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 4 '54
60w

"Some thin-spinning, but our lady still knows her way around." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 30w

EBERHART, RICHARD. Undercliff; poems.
1946-1953. 127p $4 Oxford

811

53-13069

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

Reviewed by Howard Nemerov

Atlantic 194:67 S '54 250w

"Richard Eberhart's poems make a solid loaf of good dark bread for the teeth to sink in. They are nourishing accounts of one man's travel thru the world of man and of nature. Sometimes, in the poet's effort to get all of his findings honestly into words, the verse is wrenched and stumbles half into the rangy arms of prose. But always they have the conviction of a true account, taken by the hands and the eyes and the suffering heart and the alert mind." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 17 '54
60w

"It is ironic that so much of Eberhart's poetry, which celebrates the passions over the mind, should be so tightly intellectual. Sometimes his ideas are closely packed, logically worked out like those in the more intensely intellectual poems of Wallace Stevens. At his best, like Stevens, Eberhart gives poetic flesh to the processes of thought; occasionally, as in some of the longer poems in the second section of this volume, the workings of the mind banish the poet's vision." Gerald Weales

+ Commonweal 59:408 Ja 22 '54 1000w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 79:558 Mr 15 '54 60w

"Eberhart is not only one of the best of the poets now writing but certainly one of the most outrageous at times, an innocence that really makes new where it succeeds, and a mannerism that shatters completely where it fails. But always a poet."

+ Nation 178:246 Mr 20 '54 210w

Reviewed by Reuel Denney

Poetry 85:102 N '54 500w

Reviewed by Byron Vazakas

Poetry 85:106 N '54 700w

"Poetry, Richard Eberhart has said, should be exciting. In his own poems, as his latest volume, 'Undercliff,' makes clear, Richard Eberhart is as good as his word. He remains an 'uneven' poet, certainly; but how unexciting an even poet can be! And if the wild horses of the unconscious sometimes run away with the bit between their teeth—well, too tight a rein would never suit Eberhart's purposes, any more than it would have served his 'most master,' William Blake." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R 37:22 My 22 '54 850w

Reviewed by Anthony Hartley

Spec p47 Ja 8 '54 350w

"After the genteel amateurism of contemporary English poetry, it is salutary to come upon a real, professional poet. Mr. Eberhart is seriously concerned with the writing of poetry, not as a drawing-room accomplishment, but as a means of saying what he has to say and doing what he has to do. One sees it in the enormous variety of subjects he deals with, in his ceaseless experimentation with prosody and diction, and in his fearless tackling of difficult problems. . . . He has even reasserted the professional poet's right to be tedious and prolix."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p834 D 25 '53
500w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:196 Je '54 220w

EBY, KERMIT, and MONTGOMERY, RAY.
God in you [with a foreword by Reinhold Niebuhr]. 161p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

261.8 Sociology, Christian 54-8454

"Kermit Eby's life combines, in an almost ideal manner, Christian piety and vigorous social concern. His book tells the many things he has done as union organizer, ordained preacher, and university professor. More significantly, he shows how his action in pursuance of the good life for himself and his fellowmen has been based upon the simple faith of a Brethren pietist: that there is dignity and impetus to social action in the belief that we are all sons of God." Foreword

Booklist 50:334 My 1 '54

"This book reveals a heart of compassion, a firm hold upon the ethics of Christianity, and much realistic wisdom regarding many of the areas in which people experience social tensions. Since Eby mentions communism in a paragraph of nostalgic memory regarding the bogeyman of childhood, one wishes that he might be more realistic regarding its threat to the world." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ap 4 '54
200w

"For one who has been on the fighting front of social betterment, Eby is remarkably tolerant. He is neither an absolutist nor a perfectionist, but recognizes the relativism in all our human strivings for the good and the true. His ideas are a corrective for those who can see only black and white, and a wholesome tonic for those who think there is no important difference between different shades of gray." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:434 Ap 7 '54 230w

"The story of his life is interesting in itself, but its call to a simple and deeper faith and its summons to work for the improvement of community and society make it a most appealing book. The combination of preacher, teacher and union organizer is not often found, but Kermit Eby is a rare soul."

+ Kirkus 22:196 Mr 15 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 14
'54 40w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p16 Ap 18 '54 50w

ECA DE QUEIROZ, JOSE MARIA DE. The relic; tr. from the Portuguese by Aubrey
F. G. Bell. 289p $3.50 Noonday

54-1659

"'The Relic' was written nine years after 'Cousin Bazilio.' . . . Here the young rake Raposo, deciding to become the sole heir of his wealthy religious aunt, wins for himself, by feigning devoutness and saintliness, a trip to the Holy Land, whence he returns with a relic which he is sure will gain him his end, Jesus' crown of thorns. Upon unwrapping the pack-

ECA DE QUEIROZ, J. M. DE—Continued
age, however, in the presence of a number of austere personages, the aunt finds instead a perfumed nightgown given to Raposo as a souvenir by an Alexandria prostitute." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:400 Je 15 '54

"The novel is, if nothing else, funny. . . But the book is also, pretty clearly, intended seriously, as something more than light social comedy. The dust jacket speaks of 'satire.' But the trouble is, I feel, that Queiroz succeeds in communicating a seriousness of intent only when he ceases to be very funny. And what characterizes successful satire is precisely a duality of attitude constantly sustained."

J. E. Hardy

+ Commonweal 60:179 My 21 '54 1000w

Reviewed by Anne Duchene

Manchester Guardian p4 N 23 '54 150w

Reviewed by Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 48:589 N 6 '54 550w

"Most remarkable in this picaresque tale of roguery, which exposes some of the hypocritical and parasitic aspects of Portuguese religious life in Eça's day, is Raposo's dream in Jerusalem: one hundred pages vividly recounting, in a style so superbly controlled as to compare favorably with 'Thais,' the trial, crucifixion and resurrection of Christ. This dream, in its tenderness, shows the deep religiousness of Eça, the author of several memorable lives of saints." Angel Flores

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 9 '54 200w

"The novel is brilliantly written; the translation by Aubrey F. G. Bell (which was first offered to American readers in 1925) is so lively and graceful that it almost suggests that the work had been originally composed in this racy English prose." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p4 My 11 '54 500w

"As Federico de Onís has said, Eça de Queiroz might have been considered a great novelist long ago if he had written in one of the languages frequently translated into English. In Aubrey Bell's apparently excellent rendering, Queiroz appears as an excellent stylist, a master of the ironical approach that makes one get the serious point while smiling. He has a great deal more that is serious to say about religion, philosophy, and Portugal than I have space to tell—and almost always does it divertingly." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 37:16 Ag 7 '54 600w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p13C Je 20 '54 220w

ECKEY, EDDY WILLIAM. Vegetable fats and oils; with a chapter by Lawrence P. Miller. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 836p il $16.50 Reinhold

665.3 Oils and fats

54-7944

"This book bears the same title as No. 58 in the A.C.S. Monograph Series, now out of print, written by George S. Jamieson. The aim in its preparation has been to meet some of the same needs that have created a continuing demand for its predecessor. The book is newly written, entirely, and the present author bears the responsibility for its arrangement and content. The principal feature of the predecessor volume has been retained in this one, namely, the provision of a descriptive catalog of nearly all of the vegetable fats and oils concerning which much scientific information has been published. This part begins with Chapter 8 and continues to the end of the book. . . The first seven chapters are general ones, containing information broadly applicable to the fats and oils." Pref

Chem & Eng N 32:1816 My 3 '54 40w

"Although no section of the book is devoted exclusively to producing, processing and utilizing the vegetable fats, much of this material is included in the discussion of the individual fats and will be found also in the literature references. While a few chemical engineers may feel that such an omission is a serious one, the book will be of outstanding value in its presentation of the newest fundamental data on which engineering operations must be based." G. W. McBride

+ Chem Eng 61:372 O '54 600w

Library J 79:915 My 15 '54 20w

"The book will be valuable not only to the food-manufacturing industries, but to others in which vegetable fats and oils are extensively used. It includes many tables of reference data and is fully indexed." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1234 Je 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:44 My '54

ECKLES, ROBERT BOWER, and HALE, RICHARD WALDEN. Britain, her peoples and the Commonwealth. 794p $6 McGraw

942 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc. 53-7118

"The authors begin their story centuries before Caesar and continue it down past the coronation of Elizabeth II. Because of the chapter arrangements it can also be easily used by classes who start their English history with 1688. Unlike many other works, special attention is paid to economics, social history and foreign affairs. The thorough treatment accorded both the Empire and the Commonwealth makes this work especially meaningful to American students of English history and present-day Commonwealth development." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:236 F 15 '54

"One of the best and most delightfully readable one-volume works on British history."

+ Current Hist 26:255 Ap '54 120w

EDELMAN, MRS LILY. Hawaii, U.S.A. [foreword by Margaret C. Scoggin]. 136p il $2.50 Nelson

996.9 [919.69] Hawaiian Islands—Social life and customs 54-9876

An informal account of the history, statistics, and various aspects of life in Hawaii. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 51:87 O 15 '54

Kirkus 22:446 Jl 15 '54 150w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 7 '54 40w

"We are badly in need of more books about the Hawaiian Islands presented with integrity and out of intimate knowledge of their inter-racial problems, economic growth, and historic traditions. Miss Edelman has made a beginning and in many ways it is a good one, but she has a tendency to overemphasize the importance of the similarity of Hawaiians to their Stateside contemporaries." D. M.

Sat R 37:85 N 13 '54 50w

EDES, MARY ELISABETH, and FRASIER, DUDLEY, eds. Age of extravagance [an Edwardian reader]. 373p $5 Rinehart

820.8 English literature—Collections. American literature—Collections 54-9864

An anthology of excerpts from the writings of some twenty English and American writers, concerning the customs and manners of London, New York, and San Francisco during the years 1900 to 1914.

Booklist 51:171 D 15 '54

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 21 '54 250w

Reviewed by P. O. Marsh

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 D 23 '54 750w

Kirkus 22:655 S 15 '54 130w

"All librarians may buy this collection and check it to be sure the old titles are available for re-reading." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:2206 N 15 '54 140w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 D 5 '54 200w

"Too young to have been Edwardians themselves, [the editors] have fallen in love with the period. Deliberately limiting their range, they are out to entertain, not to indict, and they follow up the Nicolson piece with a Lucullan aside, 'A Perfect Dinner' by Elizabeth Robins Pennell. Many of the selections in 'The Age of Extravagance' would hardly have pleased Mrs. Astor, but the book is apt for our leaner generations." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p10 N 14 '54 400w
New Yorker 30:223 N 20 '54 200w

EDEY, MARION. Early in the morning; introd. by John Mason Brown. 236p $3 Harper
B or 92 Poets—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 54-6703

Reminiscences of a happy childhood spent on a Hudson River valley farm and in Manhattan in the 1890's.

"Marion Edey, now in her seventies, has the rare gift of being able to re-enter the magic world of early youth and relive the long-ago yesterdays as though they were still today's." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:84 Ag '54 400w

Booklist 51:14 S 1 '54

Bookmark 13:216 Je '54 20w

"Engaging book of reminiscences." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:220 Mr 15 '54 150w

"For those who liked Period Piece and All done from Memory, here is a bit of Americana that matches the English autobiographies." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:856 My 1 '54 80w

"Many people write memories of happy childhood and such books are almost always agreeable—a modicum of sincerity suffices. But the pure, restrained and tender pages Marion Edey has written lift her book clear and high above the 'agreeable.' 'Early in the Morning,' the work of an impeccable stylist, is extraordinarily precise." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 16 '54 800w

"Since this is a book about children and not about grownups, there is little said about Howells and Mark Twain, who were such good friends of the Maitland Armstrongs... The Armstrongs, who had passed an almost perfect childhood on the Hudson, could not be expected to be impressed by anything in Manhattan. They were too sure of themselves to follow any fashion, and this quiet book is the truthful record of a lost world." Wayne Andrews

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 11 '54 600w

"'Early in the Morning' is not just a chronicle of some children in a gaslit era. It possesses a kind of magic, the kind that made Kenneth Grahame's 'Wind in the Willows' an excursion into the land extolled by Peter Pan. Marion Edey remembers it all—particularly her companionship with her brother Noel. She is so steeped in the past that she remembers every detail, how people looked and talked and laughed and cried. 'Early in the Morning' is a happy excursion into a beloved country, long gone." Kenneth Horan

+ Sat R 37:38 Ag 7 '54 360w

Wis Lib Bul 50:210 O '54

EDITORIAL directory, 1953 [ed: J. Galub]. 232p pa $12.95 Galub pub. co, 516 5th av. N.Y. 36

051 Periodicals—Directories

"The Editorial Directory provides data on publication, editorial staff, format, content, and reading public for over 2000 periodicals published in the United States and Canada. . . The directory has three major classifications: Business, Industrial, Professional Publications, Farm Publications, and Consumer Publications. Within these major classification there are subject groups, e.g., Architecture, Baking, and Business. An alphabetical index to the titles in each large classification, including a separate index to Canadian publications in the Business, Industrial, Professional classification, precedes the listings. The selection of periodicals emphasizes those in the business and industrial fields, with 176 pages devoted to the listings in this category, compared with 19 pages for farm and 32 pages for consumer publications." Subscriptions Bks Bul

"Because the Editorial Directory provides information not readily available elsewhere it is recommended for purchase by large public libraries, college and university libraries, and special libraries which have need for the type of material it contains."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 25:23 Ap '54 700w

EDLIN, SARA (BOUDIN). Unmarried mother in our society; a frank and constructive approach to an age-old problem. 189p $3 Farrar, Straus

362.15 Mothers, Unmarried. Lakeview home, Staten Island, New York 54-7309

"Mrs. Edlin's book offers a description of the work of the Lakeview Maternity Home on Staten Island, N.Y. where she has been director for many years; a discussion of maternity homes and shelters in general; and presents the problem of the unmarried mother in our society." Library J

Booklist 50:392 Je 15 '54

"Those concerned, primarily social and welfare workers, will find this study enlightened and experienced."

+ Kirkus 22:218 Mr 15 '54 140w

"She writes for the lay reader from accurate, first-hand knowledge. . . This stirring presentation is a real contribution toward enlightenment of the general public." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 79:1054 Je 1 '54 120w

"Sara Edlin's story is a beautiful true tale of kindness, warmth, and tolerance toward those young women who give children to society, to all, without benefit of marriage. Yet it is not a story to exact maudlin sympathy. It is told with dignity, purpose, and helpfulness that reveal the author's deep understanding and rare personality."

+ Nation 179:176 Ag 28 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 8 '54 50w

"Mrs. Edlin's book is a warm narrative including generalized remarks about present trends in handling the problem. Miss Young's book delves more deeply into the cause and the psychiatric problem, analyzing the situation in terms of the girl's family and background." S. R. Arnstein

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 20 '54 300w

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. Hound dog Moses and the promised land; pictures by William Gropper. [79p] $2.50 Dodd

54-9234

Story of an old hound dog named Moses who arrived at the pearly gates to find no admittance sign for dogs. But Moses was persistent and in time he won the sympathy of some rather famous animal lovers, including a man named Francis from Assisi, and the gate opened.

"Illustrated with drawings full of imagination and wit."

+ Bookmark 14:13 O '54 20w

"A nonsense fantasy with special appeal to dog lovers and newspaper men of any age over twelve. Both pictures and text combine toughness and sentimentality, caricature and the hint of a timeless design. Edmond's prose has artful ease. Mr. Gropper's bold pictures, in a striking combination of line and wash, offer Heaven and its people with bold patterns of strange trees and flowers, with a Victorian chair and parasol for St. Peter, with a chariot and winged horses to help Don deliver papers, and all in caricature style." L. S. Bechtel

EDMONDS, W. D.—Continued

 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p32 N 14 '54 270w

"The enchanting quality of the story gains much from the charming drawings of William Gropper." H. B. Lent
 + N Y Times p11 D 26 '54 150w

"The story, told with rare humor and familiarity, with imagination and understanding, maintains always a sense of reverence. Wonderful black-and-white and black-and-gray illustrations by William Gropper accentuate these qualities, and there is a text to make this a book that adults as well as children will enjoy." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:34 S 18 '54 170w

EDSALL, MRS FLORENCE SHUTT (SMALL).

Success and what it takes; new ways to know yourself and your world. 256p il $3.75 Morrow

371.425 Vocational guidance. Success 54-7105

"This is vocational guidance for adults. The book helps one in analyzing himself, setting up a program, and making alterations and constant evaluations as to progress, or the lack of it. It challenges a person to think, act, and respond positively and sensibly. Mrs. Edsall lists the techniques of job analysis and personality analysis, correlating the two. While she makes no rabid claims, she believes any person feeling out of place can at least see the way he ought to go, though he may need help in getting there." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 51:3 S 1 '54

Bookmark 13:234 J1 '54 50w

"If you are a young person and you wonder how to choose a career, or a bit older and you wonder how you got stuck where you are, Mrs. Edsall's pleasant non-technical book is meant for you. . . Moreover, she writes with insight and verve." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 23 '54 70w

"For the young who are trying to decide what field to enter, for those who may be thinking of changing their jobs, this makes a practical contribution."

+ Kirkus 22:148 F 15 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:125 My '54

EDWARD VIII, king of Great Britain [abdicated 1936]. Crown and the people, 1902–1953. 43p il $1.50 Funk

942.082 Coronations—Great Britain. Windsor, House of. Great Britain—Kings and rulers 54-7464

"Here the man who was once King of England shares warm memories and hopes for the future of the crown. He believes that Elizabeth has shown the essential instinct of capturing the imagination of the people and that in her reign the British crown will continue to prove its unique capacity for inspiring devotion." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 50:275 Mr 15 '54

"This book should help readers to understand this notable political service of the British royal house." P. J. Henniker-Heaton
 + Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 30 '54 750w

"A quiet, well-phrased, article-length essay on the Duke of Windsor's own experience as an heir, and after, and an appraisal of the British Monarchy as a living institution."

+ Kirkus 22:21 Ja 1 '54 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 7 '54 40w

EDWARDS, CHARLOTTE. Right place for love. 262p $3.50 McGraw

53-9012

Paul and Ann Beecham went to Marshville and took over the town paper in an effort to mend their badly strained marriage. In the course of their new life they found other marriages than their own almost broken, and in time they gained a new perspective.

Booklist 50:221 F 1 '54

"This is a dramatic story of interwoven lives which won't let the reader rest for a moment. Incidentally, it couldn't have happened anywhere but in the south. Mrs. Edwards is well known to the reading public thru her short stories in magazines. Her first novel should command attention." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 4 '53 350w

Kirkus 21:456 J1 15 '53 240w

"Except for occasional uneven spots in the writing, the story of the seven major characters is movingly and dramatically interwoven. To say it is a good first novel is underestimating its performance. It is a good novel." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 F 14 '54 320w

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

N Y Times p25 Ja 1 '54 450w

Springf'd Republican p3D D 27 '53 40w

EDWARDS, EDWARD J. Dark enemy. 248p $3 Longmans

54-10862

Gray Powers, a young doctor practicing in a Catholic hospital altho he is not of that faith, is the hero. When his adored wife is admitted to the hospital suffering from a cardiac condition, and pregnant, Gray is determined to save her life and sacrifice the child. But Ellen, firm in her faith, insists on having her child, and dies. A gentle Catholic priest is one of the chief characters.

"Dark Enemy is skilful but disappointingly lacking in substance." Riley Hughes

Cath World 180:152 N '54 220w

"Lots of anguish here, all through the 'tear-wet smiles of April', but there may be those who will find it ennobling."

Kirkus 22:346 Je 1 '54 150w

"Melodramatic and psychological, with the theme belabored in sermonettes, the book is also a vehicle for stating the Catholic viewpoint concerning many medical questions. Will have some popular appeal, especially among his Catholic audience. For general circulation in public libraries." R. J. Hurley

Library J 79:1400 Ag '54 120w

"With plot situations like this—all too familiar in the daytime radio and television serials—a less sincere author would surely have become mired in the maudlin sentiment that passes for drama on the air-waves. Happily, Father Edwards brings to his task a fine understanding of human beings under strain, a detailed knowledge of the hospital and medical world, plus a restraint in writing that keeps his people and their problems believable." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p10 S 5 '54 350w

EDWARDS, JONATHAN. Puritan sage [his] collected writings; ed. by Vergilius Ferm. 640p $7.50 Lib. pubs.

208.1

53-3143

An anthology of the writings of Jonathan Edwards, published to celebrate the 250th anniversary of his birth. The editor is professor of philosophy at the College of Wooster, Ohio. No index.

Reviewed by H. B. Parkes

Am Hist R 59:1035 J1 '54 350w

"The revival of interest in Jonathan Edwards, as indicated by a half dozen or more biographies of relatively recent date, gives this careful selection of his writings a special timeliness." W. W. Sweet

+ Ann Am Acad 293:193 My '54 440w

Booklist 50:90 N 1 '53

Christian Century 71:739 Je 16 '54 110w

"What emerges from these pages is a truly representative man of imposing stature, a pioneer of intellectual vigor, as well as a first-rate American writer. But more. The caricature that both Ola Elizabeth Winslow and Perry Miller did so much to correct is more fully disposed of through direct contact with the work as a whole, and the resulting experience of touching as it were the naked soul of Edwards with our naked soul." Emile Cailliet

+ New Eng Q 27:125 Mr '54 850w

"A fresh appraisal of a religious thinker whose great powers of mind have seldom been rightly understood." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 3 '54 50w

"In one of the worst-looking books of the decade—no margins at all, impenetrable photographs, and an ugly blue binding—Dr. Ferm has done us all an enormous service by collecting much of the work of America's first major writer. Here—in whole or in part, the text arbitrarily modernized or not—are most of the important writings, as well as such surprises as the wonderful treatise on spiders that Edwards wrote when he was eleven."

+ New Yorker 30:159 Ap 24 '54 160w

Reviewed by R. S. Brooks
Springf'd Republican p8C O 4 '53 550w

EDWARDS, WILLIAM B. Story of Colt's revolver; the biography of Col. Samuel Colt. 470p il $10 Stackpole co.

B or 92 Colt, Samuel. Revolvers 53-5351

"A Connecticut-born Yankee, Samuel Colt (1814-62), invented in 1836 the first reliable method for mechanical rotation of a revolver cylinder and for accurate alignment of the chambers with the barrel. He was also a sailor, a roving mountebank who demonstrated the remarkable effects of 'laughing gas,' inventor of waterproof cartridges and of a submarine battery that functioned amazingly well. . . William B. Edwards has given us the first really comprehensive biography of one of the most remarkable men of the nineteenth century, and an accompanying history of the firearms on which Colt's fame rests." N Y Times

Booklist 50:237 F 15 '54

"It should be noted that the weapon's history ends with Colt's death in 1862. This may prove disappointing to collectors and arms enthusiasts although most of the controversies relative to Colt weapons are confined to the early Paterson, Walker and Dragoon models, all of which are covered here. . . As biography, 'The Story of Colt's Revolver,' is far more comprehensive than Col. Jack Rohan's 'Yankee Arms Maker,' although not so well written. Technically, it adds little to Belden & Haven's monumental 'History of the Colt Revolver,' published in 1940." Hoffman Birney
N Y Times p14 Ja 17 '54 420w

"A definitive biography of Colt has long been needed, and the author has done an exhaustive job of researching his subject. For all that, however, 'The Story of Colt's Revolver' is not easy reading."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 21 '54 170w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:152 Je '54 240w

EELLS, WALTER CROSBY. Communism in education in Asia, Africa and the far Pacific. 246p $3 Am. council on educ.

370.19 Education. Communism 54-8068

"From 39 Near and Far East countries come interesting conclusions, after a three-year first-hand study of the Kremlin's influence on the schools, with only the Communist China chapter being based on secondary sources. Dr. Eells, SCAP Adviser on Higher Education, Tokyo, 1947-51, and with a wealth of previous educational experience, finds that 'the key to the increasing appeal of Communism in most of the countries covered by the study is undoubtedly the economic one.'" Library J

Booklist 51:164 D 15 '54

Foreign Affairs 33:156 O '54 40w

"Of particular worth to those in higher education dealing with foreign students, but recommended for all larger libraries." E. M. Oboler

+ Library J 79:1507 S 1 '54 140w

"Dr. Eells has not succeeded in furnishing information on Communist influence on education, but what he has to say about Communist activities amongst students and professors he could say about Communism among other groups to which he does not refer. Everywhere he learned that Communist literature and information were plentifully supplied from abroad to the intellectuals. Had Dr. Eells gone to some countries nearer to the United States, he would have found the same evidence of the existence of Communist cells and of Communist literature openly displayed in the main halls of universities." I. L. Kandel

Sat R 37:35 S 11 '54 850w

EHRlich, BETTINA (BAUER) (MRS GEORG EHRlich). Piccolo [story and pictures] by Bettina [pseud]. 64p $1.25 Harper

54-8948

A little book about Piccolo, the son of the famous donkey Cocolo and his mate Carmen. Piccolo proves to be a natural for the movies and is flown from his Massachusetts home to Italy where he not only makes a picture, but becomes a hero as well. Ages four to eight.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 19 '54 120w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 11 '54 150w

"A volume that can be shelved companionably with the Beatrix Potter books, this miniature about the son of the beloved donkey, Cocolo, has a different but as real a charm as have the three big books about Cocolo." V. H.
+ Horn Bk 30:426 D '54 160w

Kirkus 22:678 O 1 '54 50w

"What a gay, modern story, with just enough movie-making details to delight the very young. What wonderful little pictures woven all through the text, half of them in clear, gay colors. Thank you, Bettina, for a perfect stocking book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p5 N 14 '54 160w

"It will be a delight to read and show this book to small children who want action and fun in their stories." F. N. Chrystie

+ N Y Times pt2 p42 N 14 '54 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '54 70w

EICHLER, ALFRED. Death of an ad man. 251p $2.50 Abelard-Schuman

54-5235

Detective story.

"The author's skill is insufficient to create either a character or a deductive plot." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p20 F 21 '54 20w

"Background authentic but rather colorlessly presented." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 7 '54 50w

"If this is advertising, let's all go clam-digging. Unrequired reading." Sergeant Cuff
— Sat R 37:60 Ap 3 '54 10w

EINSTEIN, ALBERT. Ideas and opinions; based on Mein weltbild, ed. by Carl Seelig, and other sources; new translations and revisions by Sonja Bargmann. 377p $4 Crown

818

54-6644

"There have been three major collections of articles, speeches, statements, and letters by Einstein: The World As I See It, translated by Alan Harris, published in 1934; Out of My Later Years (1950), containing material from 1934 to 1950; and Mein Weltbild, edited by Carl Seelig, published in Switzerland in 1953, which contains certain new materials not included in either of the other collections. Ideas and Opinions contains in the publisher's opinion the most important items from the three above-mentioned books, ■ few selections from other publications, and new articles that have never been published in book form before." Publisher's note

EINSTEIN, ALBERT—Continued

Booklist 51:162 D 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

"An important collection, for a lasting market."

+ Kirkus 22:507 Ag 1 '54 100w

"The book will have wide appeal: especially in public libraries because of its popular character and in colleges and universities because of its scientific value; also recommended for high school students." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 79:1828 O 1 '54 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 3 '54 70w

"In this collection many facets of the mind and personality of the greatest scientist of our time are presented in a distinguished translation. A brief synopsis of the development of Einstein's principal physical theories, by Valentine Bargmann, Professor of Physics at Princeton, helps the reader to place Einstein's scientific explanations in the framework of his thought. But it is to be regretted that Einstein's statements on public issues do not always carry the date on which they were made." I. B. Cohen

+ N Y Times p20 O 17 '54 480w

"Here are opinions on friendship, freedom, Jews, politics, education, Nazis, atoms, Russia, American customs, pacifism, women, war, and, of course, science. He is stimulating when he lets off steam, but sometimes there is a deadly quiet about his anger. . . He is a master of irony, he can be witty, and he can sting. . . Whether or not one agrees with all his conclusions, there is no denying that his political philosophy, as expressed here, is enlightened, humane, and consistent."

+ New Yorker 30:187 O 9 '54 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 14 '54 90w

"Has the world ever before harbored a first-rate scientist who at the same time has also been prophet, moralist, reformer, and saint? 'Ideas and Opinions' will leave no doubt in any honest reader's mind as to where this great American stands on most of the burning issues of our fateful times." P. A. Schilpp

+ Sat R 37:15 D 11 '54 700w

EISENBERG, MRS HELEN, and EISENBERG, LARRY. Family fun book. 188p $2.95 Assn. press

790 Amusements 53-13437

Suggestions for games and other amusements which can be enjoyed by the family as a group. Index.

Bookmark 13:104 F '54 20w

Reviewed by F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 F 7 '54 30w

Reviewed by A. W. Kortharcer

J Home Econ 46:607 O '54 280w

"Recommended for public and school libraries." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 78:2213 D 15 '53 120w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 4 '54 40w

ELBOGEN, PAUL. Jealous mistress; tr. from the German by Ruth Lachenbruch. 345p $3.50 Random house

53-5025

"Jan Dram was no ordinary painter. He lived for his art and he considered himself above conventional ideas of morality. . . The painter thus wends his nonconformist, selfish way to success, neglects his children and finally has a tremendous success when ■ rich American sponsor displays his life's work.

Inspired by ■ similar incident in real life, Elbogen climaxes his novel by having the whole exhibit going up in flames." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 21:399 J1 1 '53 190w

"The author, an Austrian novelist and art critic living in Hollywood, has molded this material with ■ heavy hand. His characters, moreover, are static, bleak and one-dimensional." D. W. Gibson

— N Y Times p30 O 4 '53 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 10 '54 350w

"Wishing to castigate Nietzsche's concept of the Superman, Mr. Elbogen creates an unbelievable monster. . . His inaccuracies in taking Nietzsche to task for all our present ills, and in offering 'humility' ■ their antidote, are so evident that mere exposition of the thesis should sufficiently dispose of it." N. M.

— Sat R 36:49 S 19 '53 130w

ELBOW, MATTHEW HEATH. French corporative theory, 1789-1948; a chapter in the history of ideas. 222p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

331.88 Trade and professional associations 53-2964

"A useful monograph on the development of French theories of corporativism in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, concluding with the brief effort at application under Pétain." Foreign Affairs

"The investigation of the long history of a single intellectual theme is strewn with snares and pitfalls which are only partly avoided in this book. The ideas of each French corporatist are satisfactorily, if somewhat mechanically summarized. The development and expansion of corporative theory is skillfully traced. Caution is commendably displayed in not always inferring influence from similarities of opinion, and modesty in not claiming too much for the importance of corporative thought or decrees in French history. The chief criticism is that the author is insufficiently informed about the historical complexity in which the corporative thinkers were moving." H. T. Parker

+ — Am Hist R 59:696 Ap '54 240w

Reviewed by J. H. Meisel

Am Pol Sci ■ 48:598 Je '54 500w

Foreign Affairs 32:510 Ap '54 20w

"Dr. Elbow wisely confines his attention to its development in France. He writes of corporatism with sympathy, but in his closing pages does not hesitate to indicate some of its practical difficulties. His skillful condensation and interpretation of the writers who contributed to corporatism is clearly and simply written and is illustrated by good diagrams." + U S Quarterly Bk R 9:400 D '53 240w

ELDRIDGE, MRS CHARLOTTE BLAKLEY. Godey lady doll; the story of her creation with patterns for dresses and doll furniture. 209p il $4.95 Hastings house

391 Costume. Dolls. Godey's magazine 53-11685

This book is in two parts. The first tells briefly the story of the Victorian fashion magazine and relates how the author began and developed her hobby of dressing Godey dolls. The second part contains patterns and instructions for making the dolls, their dresses, and their settings—Victorian-age rooms and furnishings.

Booklist 50:272 Mr 15 '54

"A how-to-do-it book with an air. Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:208 F 1 '54 40w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 16 '54 30w

"A book for doll collectors and also one for people with nimble fingers who are in search of ■ hobby."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 24 '54 130w

ELECTROCHEMICAL SOCIETY. Modern electroplating. See Gray, A. G., ed.

ELICKER, VIRGINIA WILK. Biblical costumes for church and school; il. by Elva Droz Hamilton. 160p $3 Barnes, A.S.

391 Costume 53-8301

"How basic garments can be used or adapted to re-create character and period is shown in a practical volume with a fund of ideas and techniques for low budgets and inexperienced workers. Diagrams. Bibliography, references, index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:255 Mr 1 '54

+ Bookmark 13:83 Ja '54 40w

"Recommended as a help to many a mother, teacher, or PTA." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 79:628 Ap 1 '54 60w

ELIOT, GEORGE, pseud. of MRS MARY ANN (EVANS) CROSS. Letters; ed. by Gordon S. Haight. 6v vl-3 $20 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (52-12063)

The first three volumes of the six-volume edition of the letters of George Eliot. The edition when complete will contain 2760 letters and extracts from journals, nearly 2000 of them written by George Eliot. The years covered by these volumes: 1836-1861.

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 14 '54 550w

"The volumes present a portrait of George Eliot hitherto unavailable, bringing out in fascinating play of light and shade the development of her character and genius. Professor Haight's painstaking effort has produced a major work on this latest of the Victorian novelists to come into her own in our generation of gadgets, speed, and action." W. W. Cunningham

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 26 '54 750w

"A contribution to literary history, to letter writing and to a deeper interpretation of a novelist that readers once read and loved." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1513 S 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by George Dangerfield

Nation 179:333 O 16 '54 1450w

"I came to skim and stayed to read every word. The figure of George Eliot, as it slowly builds into shape from these letters, is not god-like nor even grand; we see her in all her vulnerability, her debilitating enthusiasms and her irremovable weakness. But I cannot recall having read any letters or diaries in which the idea of intellectual devotion is realized with such blend of common humanity and selfless austerity. To read these letters is to feel—these words do not come to me frequently or lightly—a sense of elevation and purification. It is to learn that the life of the mind can be a thing of glory." Irving Howe

+ New Repub 131:18 O 18 '54 2200w

"Mr. Haight, who has been at work upon the edition for more than twenty years, has drawn his material from no less than twenty-seven libraries and more than forty private collections. . . The reader must be forewarned against the discouragement which will almost overwhelm him as he pushes his way through the letters of George Eliot's early years. For she had not then escaped from the dreary evangelical piety of her upbringing and almost all the letters of her girlhood are addressed to a school mistress who doubtless savored (as the modern reader will not) the numberless Biblical allusions and quotations which flowed ad lib from the young woman's pen." S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p4 Ag 22 '54 1050w

"George Eliot was not that happy phenomenon, a great letter writer. No one will want to read her letters as we read those of Keats, or Byron, or Mozart, or Chekhov, for their charm, for the wisdom that seems inherent in their spontaneity. But she was a great spirit, and she could not put pen to paper without telling the truth, without being momentous and even dramatic. There is scarcely a casual brief note in the present three volumes that does not suggest an indomitable soul confronting a whole world, a whole culture." Lionel Trilling

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 22 '54 2100w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:132 O 2 '54 3350w

"The dominant qualities in the letters are intellectual and moral integrity, with unfaltering courage in saying and doing what she thought right." DeLancey Ferguson

+ Sat R 37:21 S 25 '54 1050w

"The editing of letters is an especially searching test of scholarship; yet it receives few bouquets, since what the reader demands is simply the unobtrusive removal of all obstacles to understanding. In Professor Gordon Haight (already known from his George Eliot and John Chapman) these letters have their ideal editor, sensitive, tireless, and blessedly concise in conveying his abundant knowledge." Kathleen Tillotson

+ Spec p685 N 26 '54 900w

"Professor Haight's editing is beyond praise. The notes are where one wants them, at the foot of the page. They give succinctly and adequately the information needed. The editor's knowledge is prodigious, but entirely unostentatious. At the head of each letter we are told whence the manuscript comes and whether all or part has been previously published. When some or all of a letter is in Cross we are told the volume and the page. There is a valuable chronological table of events in George Eliot's life and a brief account of each of her correspondents. The only help we miss is an index and for that we must wait until the editor's devoted labours are completed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p738 N 19 '54 3300w

"Readers will eagerly look forward to the next three volumes and, not least, to the promised index, since this edition is a happy hunting ground for scholars as well as excellent reading for us all." Joan Bennett

+ Yale R n s 44:298 winter '55 1500w

ELIOT, THOMAS STEARNS. Confidential clerk. 159p $3 Harcourt

812

54-5253

A play in blank verse "about a British financier who is as thwarted in his aspiration to have a son as he was in his youthful ambition to become a potter. The playwright employs the somewhat Victorian framework of his drama to promote his convictions on the isolation of the human being, the vanity of human wishes, and the necessity to accept, without rebellion, the terms that life imposes on the individual." (Booklist)

"For my money, the play—in book form as well as on the stage—is extraordinarily good fun, and it has its fair share of the higher qualities we expect of Mr. Eliot." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 193:82 Ap '54 490w

Booklist 50:274 Mr 15 '54

"A provocative verse play that is interesting to read."

+ Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 20w

"The verse is softened to the point where it can be readily spoken, but it has lost much of the power and imaginativeness of Eliot's poems. It is a wise, witty, elegant play, whose characters speak finely and shrewdly and yet always at a temperature level a couple of degrees below the average of fumbling but urgent humanity." Paul Engle

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 21 '54 480w

Christian Century 71:585 My 12 '54 320w

"The biggest question raised by this play is, Has Eliot in making his poetry natural enough for the stage dropped out of poetry altogether? This reviewer, as a minor or rather minimal poet himself, is humble enough to prefer that readers of this critique will now turn to the book and form their own answer to this question. Even should they decide that for once Eliot has fallen short both of his best and of his intentions, a few hours spent with Eliot are never wasted." P. J. Henniker-Heaton

ELIOT, T. S.—Continued

 Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 18 '54 900w

"The involution of the plot, absurdity piled on absurdity, adds to the sense of amused detachment. But what is tremendous is the poetical expertise. Never has Eliot's apparently effortless prosody been more precise, more pregnant. Subtle overtones and undertones give an essentially dull play whatever depth it possesses. He has achieved complete mastery of words, and his triumph is dust to the spirit. But this is a play to read, for even when he has little to say, he says it supremely well."

+ — Kirkus 22:49 Ja 15 '54 270w

Reviewed by George Freedley
 Library J 79:779 Ap 15 '54 30w

Reviewed by Helen Gardner
 New Statesman & Nation 47:373 Mr 20 '54 2250w

"In the theater all this may seem funny. To the reader—at any rate to this reader—it does not. It seems a silly device to bring about a few trite remarks about parent-and-son relationships and quite unworthy of a man with Eliot's undoubted wit and intelligence. Even if the audience finds it funny in the theater, we shall still think it another case of that mistaken condescension so often displayed by literary lights when they seek to write plays."

W. P. Eaton
 — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 7 '54 450w

Reviewed by Hugh Kenner
 Poetry 85:47 O '54 750w

"'The Confidential Clerk' appears to us to make for better reading than playing. Its plot complexities must require a slow emphasis to make them clear; it lacks passion, and its comedy is that of a serious man trying to be frivolous, but being only politely and mildly witty—overly delicate about an essentially delicate situation." Luther Nichols

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 14 '54 1050w

"The publication of The Confidential Clerk marks something of a climacteric in T. S. Eliot's poetic drama. Nobody has experimented more patiently with dramatic verse than Mr. Eliot and with this latest play he completes the elaboration of what might be called a form of serious farce, a form which is peculiarly his own invention. . . . With his latest play Mr. Eliot has half opened the door to a living poetic drama: is he to be the one to give the final push? If so others will follow and the work of creating an English verse theatre will pass from experiment to maturity."

Anthony Hartley
 + Spec p364 Mr 26 '54 2300w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
 Spring'd Republican p9C Mr 14 '54 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Mr 19 '54 600w

Wis Lib Bul 50:68 Mr '54

ELIOT, THOMAS STEARNS. Three voices of poetry. 39p $1.75 Cambridge

808.1 Poetry 54-3180

"In this short lecture recently delivered before the British National Book League, Mr. Eliot makes distinctions between three kinds of poetic expression: lyric, in which the poet seems to address himself alone; semidramatic, as in the monologue, in which the poet works with an audience in mind; and dramatic, in which the poet is forced to distribute his thought and feeling among characters in conflict." New Yorker

"Eliot's prose style is so lucid, and the thoughts behind it so carefully organized, that he seems to be dwelling here upon the obvious. But no modern critic has been able to treat this subject with equal perception or, for that matter, authority. . . . While there are examples from the work of other poets to support and illustrate Eliot's meaning, the most telling argument is a personal one: the reader's awareness that Eliot has written competently, if not masterfully, in all three voices." Mark Reinsberg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 30 '54 130w

+ New Yorker 30:103 My 29 '54 90w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling
 San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 13 '54 280w

"'Three Voices' has throughout the urbanity and the flickers of humor usual in his literary essays." W. T. S.

+ Sat N 37:28 D 4 '54 270w

ELKIN, BENJAMIN. Loudest noise in the world; il. by James Daugherty. 64p $2.50 Viking

54-8232

Prince Hullabaloo lived in Hub-Bub, the noisiest city in the world. The people here were the noisiest in the world, too, but the prince was not satisfied. On his sixth birthday he wanted to hear the loudest noise in the world, and the edict to that effect went forth. This picture-story book for ages four to seven tells what happened.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
 Atlantic 193:83 Je '54 80w

Booklist 50:302 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:162 Ap '54 30w

"A truly distinguished picture book—for young and old." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 11 '54 230w

"Author and artist build both fun and suspense to the last page of this beautifully designed book—and you'll never guess what happens in the end at the Prince's birthday celebration. It is a wonderfully satisfactory surprise." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54 100w

Horn Bk 30:92 Ap '54 120w

Kirkus 22:110 F 15 '54 90w

"Humorous reading for the youngest set. Could easily make a bid for the Caldecott." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:780 Ap 15 '54 50w

"Mr. Elkin, a teacher by profession and storyteller by avocation, spins his tale with a wonderful sense of timing and James Daugherty makes the book as good to look at as it is to hear. It's a fine one for parents to have around when their own little Hulla-Baloos get out of control." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 21 '54 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
 San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 16 '54 120w

"Not only the children will laugh long and loud over this delightfully absurd story. Their elders, too, will chuckle over it and over James Daugherty's vigorous, robust drawings." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 37:53 Mr 20 '54 110w

Wis Lib Bul 50:140 My '54

ELLACOTT, SAMUEL ERNEST. Wheels on the road; il. by [the author]. 76p $2.50 Roy pubs.

388.3 Transportation—Juvenile literature 54-5478

This book traces the history of transportation from the sledges of primitive man to the present day motor vehicle. British origin. For junior high school readers.

Booklist 50:456 Jl 15 '54

"In spite of very small print, predominantly British emphasis, and slight information given on one hundred 'developments' and 'innovations,' this small book with line drawings for each of the topics is of definite browsing interest to boys. Good index makes it of some reference value, as well." M. B. Snow

+ — Library J 79:1324 Jl '54 70w

"The story is briefly but comprehensively told in this small book intended mainly for youthful readers but surprisingly informative to at least this adult. It is illustrated with interesting drawings." Ruth Teiser

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 28 '54
150w

ELLENWOOD, JAMES LEE. One generation after another; with il. by Carl Rose. 182p $3 Scribner

301.42 [392.3] Parent and child. Family 53-12657

An American doctor, who is a father and a grandfather, gives advice on both sides of the problem of parents and children. No index.

"Non-authoritarian advice which is pleasant in tone, emollient in character."

+ Kirkus 21:527 Ag 1 '53 60w

"One wonders why this couldn't have been an article. Hardly enough material to warrant the book form." C. J. Roth

Library J 78:1533 S 15 '53 70w

Reviewed by S. R. Arnstein

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 10 '54
90w

"An excellent book that is recommended for anyone who wants a general treatment on 'bringing up' children. . . . Highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 50:24 Ja '54

ELLINWOOD, LEONARD WEBSTER. History of American church music. 274p il $6 Morehouse

783.09 Church music. Musicians, American 53-13402

"The volume is divided into three sections, approximately equal in length, devoted to surveys of the Colonial era, the 19th and early 20th centuries, and the contemporary scene. Several appendices of a miscellaneous character are included, of which the most valuable, from a historical point of view, is that containing a series of biographical sketches of American church musicians, most of whom are still active." Music Lib Assn Notes

"Within limits suggested the work is what would be expected of a thoroughly trained musician who is also a scholarly musicologist and a devout churchman. The opening chapters, on music in early America, lay a solid foundation which would support even a more inclusive structure." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 71:406 Mr 31 '54 170w

"In the light of Dr. Ellinwood's reputation as a creative scholar, this reviewer opened his attractive-looking History of American Church Music convinced that he would find in its pages the mature study this important area of our cultural development deserves. With genuine regret, he must report that he closed it unsatisfied. Dr. Ellinwood has written a disappointing book—useful because it fills a gap, it is true, but unimaginative in conception and pedestrian in execution." Irving Lowens

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 11:308 Mr '54
250w

"The author, both music librarian and clergyman, is peculiarly fitted to tell the story. His absorbingly readable narrative is supplemented in the appendices with repertory lists and biographical notes on outstanding church musicians." P. L. Miller

+ Sat H 37:39 Jl 31 '54 240w

ELLIOTT-BINNS, LEONARD ELLIOTT. Early evangelicals: a religious and social study. 464p $6.50 Seabury Press, Inc, Town Hall Annex, Greenwich, Conn.

283 Great Britain—Church history. Evangelism [53-3991]

"The book deals with the life within the Anglican Church prior to and alongside the Methodist revival. It is a history of the entire Evangelical Movement during virtually the whole of the eighteenth century. The entire discussion is set in a carefully drawn picture of the political, social, and cultural background. Special emphasis is given to the interplay between the movement and its background." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Historical scholarship is combined with a pleasant style in this close-up of the Evangelical party of the Church of England in its formative years. . . . The Early Evangelicals is a significant work on several counts. It rounds out a neglected area of church history, making plain the nature of a group that has contributed much to both religious vitality and humanitarian service. It sheds considerable light on two of the leading communions of England and America." R. T. Handy

+ Christian Century 71:1104 S 15 '54
700w

"It is the author's expressed aim to reveal the Evangelicals in their social and intellectual environment, and in this he succeeds very well, except when he strays outside the limits of what seem to be his true interests."

Times [London] Lit Sup p730 N 13 '53
800w

ELLIS, CECIL BYRNE. Fresh water from the ocean; for cities, industry, and irrigation. by [the author] and members of the staff of Nuclear development associates, inc; sponsored by the Conservation foundation. 217p il $5 Ronald

628.16 Sea water, Distillation of 54-6917

"There is much talk in the air about using the sea as a source of fresh water for cities, industries and even agricultural irrigation. This careful study, sponsored by the Conservation Foundation, should quiet some of it. The author analyzes the energy requirements and potentialities of various methods of distillation and desalting methods based on permeable membranes, ion exchange, etc. and concludes that coastal cities may be supplied in the near future with fresh water from the sea, but that de-salted water for irrigation is not yet in sight. Written for reading by both scientists and lay readers." Library J

Booklist 50:313 Ap 15 '54

Chem & Eng N 32:870 Mr 1 '54 20w

Eng N 153:81 S 2 '54 280w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:559 Mr 15 '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:28 Mr '54

ELLIS, MRS JENNIFER. Royal mother; the story of Queen mother Elizabeth and her family [Eng title: Elizabeth, the Queen Mother]. 219p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Elizabeth, consort of George VI, king of Great Britain 54-10509

An intimate brief biography of the Queen Mother Elizabeth of England. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Booklist 51:174 D 15 '54

Bookmark 14:30 N '54 10w

"While frank and engaging, the account avoids the oversentimentality so often present in books about royalty." N. E. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 18 '54
290w

"One thing is sure: this colorless portrait won't hurt any sensibilities in Buckingham Palace. A conventional, cliché-packed fairytale has all the trimmings."

— Kirkus 22:614 S 1 '54 230w

"Her story is a twentieth-century fairy tale, and Miss Ellis gives it the conventional, curt-sewing treatment. The popular biographer of royalty, who badly needs a new set of clichés, is still faced with the old dilemma—how to make kings and queens human in spite of privilege and taboo. Nevertheless Miss Ellis provides plenty of facts and anecdotes, familiar and unfamiliar, about the Queen Mother and her family, and the illustrations are a joy." Roger Pippett

ELLIS, JENNIFER—Continued

+ — N Y Times p12 O 31 '54 300w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7C N 28 '54
180w

ELLIS, WILLIAM DONOHUE. Jonathan Blair: bounty lands lawyer. 464p $4.95 World pub.

54-10451

The hero of this historical novel of the American frontier is Jonathan Blair, the lawyer from the East who defended the Ohio settlers' interests in The Bounty Lands (Book Review Digest 1952). In this volume Blair risks his life and reputation to establish the Mesopotamia territory on a sound financial basis.

"Ellis has tackled a large, complex, and important subject and has shaped it into a novel of vivid reality and sustained drama. . . This is a turbulent novel of a turbulent and crucial time, and it leaves a reader with new respect for the dollar bill." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 24 '54
350w

"Perhaps the best part of both Mr. Ellis' excellent novels lies in their homely, everyday characters, who are distinct, full-bodied, and genuine. 'Bounty Lands Lawyer' is not quick reading—and all the better so." W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '54
450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 D '54

Kirkus 22:549 Ag 15 '54 250w

"Crises occur in this admirable novel at the rate of several to a chapter, but not one seems contrived or overdrawn. Mr. Ellis has moved a long way from the bang!—bang!—bang!—three-men-fell-dead school of fiction. If he has yet to learn the subtler devices of character evocation he has developed out of the documentary form a story-telling method that is powerful, persuasive and attractive, too." James Gray

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 N 21 '54
450w

"This is a book of limited appeal. Only lawyers and bankers and other persons interested in money and people and history will want to read it, but they will like it. For good measure it even holds a romance." Carl Carmer

N Y Times p34 O 31 '54 450w

"'Jonathan Blair' is a better novel than 'The Bounty Lands,' although both books are important because they are able to tell, in the terms of a moving story of individuals, a part of the great, underlying story of America." Shirley Barker

+ Sat R 37:20 N 13 '54 450w

ELLMANN, RICHARD. Identity of Yeats. 343p $6 Oxford

821 Yeats, William Butler 54-12382

"In his biographical study, Yeats: the Man and the Masks [Book Review Digest 1948. 1949], Mr. Ellmann analysed the devious course of Yeats's personality and life. This new critical work presents him as a symbolist poet, and the author's aim has been to show that, complex and mutable though he might be, he kept the same poetic identity throughout his career." (Publisher's note) Index.

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 24 '54 240w

"A book essential to the understanding of Yeats." Jacob Korg

+ Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 30w

Reviewed by T. R. Henn

New Statesman & Nation 48:447 O 9 '54
600w

New Yorker 30:156 D 18 '54 130w

"As in his first book Mr. Ellmann makes good use of unpublished material to throw new light on the development of Yeats's thought and on the unending labour of the creative act. . . Mr. Ellmann's two books are to be commended to all who wish to know how it came about that the man whom the young Joyce saw as an old decadent came to be writing, thirty years later, the most 'modern' poetry of the time." Iain Hamilton

+ Spec p176 Ag 6 '54 2750w

"In spite of all the attraction of this material, and in spite of Mr. Ellmann's sensitivity and penetration, The Identity of Yeats remains rather an excellent prelude to an estimate of a great poet than itself such an estimate. Mr. Ellmann's emphasis is dictated by his wish to expound, and it ought to be stated bluntly that some of Yeats's poems that need most exposition, like the 'Ribh' poems, are not among his best poems; on the other hand, some of his very best poems, 'Among School Children,' 'Prayer for My Daughter,' 'The Circus Animals' Desertion,' need very little exposition at all. An emphasis on the abstruse gets the critical proportions wrong, yet so long as anything remains abstruse we shall not, perhaps, begin to criticize. Mr. Ellmann's book is to be welcomed both for its own sake and because its researches may enable a future, more detailed critic to take Yeats's symbolism for granted."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p554 S 3 '54
2750w

Reviewed by R. A. Brower

Yale R ns 44:291 winter '55 700w

ELLSBERG, EDWARD. Mid watch; a novel. 279p $3 Dodd

54-5576

"Victor Cushing, young naval engineer, torn between concern for his wife and the winning of an Excellency rating for the 'U.S.S. Manhattan,' becomes the center of a court-martial trial." Bookmark

Booklist 50:259 Mr 1 '54

"A gripping, realistic masculine story."

+ Bookmark 13:108 F '54 20w

"'Mid Watch' is a hearty, salty tale, packed with inside knowledge and boldly spun out full speed ahead. However, its publisher does an ill service to compare it to 'The Caine Mutiny,' for it penetrates no such psychological complexities. 'Mid-Watch' would scarcely have charmed Conrad, but it can intrigue less exacting readers by its emphatic detail and undeniable zest." Warren Beck

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 28 '54
330w

Reviewed by William McFee

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 11 '54
800w

"Though hardly a well-written Mr. Wouk's book, 'Mid Watch' is particularly effective for two reasons. First, its writer is a retired rear admiral who was himself an honor man at Annapolis. Second, it rips into situations omitted in 'The Caine Mutiny.' . . The weakness of Admiral Ellsberg's book is that his characters lack either depth or complexity, and consequently their emotional impact is interesting only in the sense that a mathematical problem would attract an engineer. Logic and knowledge do not necessarily produce drama." Murray Schumach

+ — N Y Times p23 F 28 '54 450w

"Although best known for his expert books on salvage, the author is by no means a novice at fiction writing." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 21 '54
120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:72 Mr '54

ELLSON, HAL. Summer street. 132p $2; pa 35c Ballantine

53-8522

This is the story of one summer in the life of young Michael Cargan, the summer he was sixteen years old and changed from a child to a man—with the help of the strange woman living across the street.

Booklist 50:56 O 1 '53

Kirkus 21:312 My 15 '53 150w

"'Summer Street' is not a beautiful story in essence, but Mr. Ellson handles it with sensitivity and compassion for underprivileged youth that must seek its answers in its own way."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 27 '54 190w

"A highly simplified and earnest little novel." Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p14 J1 26 '53 360w

"Remembering the beauty and the mystery of sex in adolescence as explored by such writers as Vardis Fisher in his 'In Tragic Life,' in Raymond Radiguet's 'The Devil and the Flesh,' or, more recently, by Jean-Baptiste Rossi in 'Awakening,' the present work serves chiefly to remind one of how much Mr. Ellison leaves out. How, by declining to explore farther than the facts in his case-worker's file, he omits all the color, the complexity, and the light. How what he writes are thus not really novels at all, for all their sincerity and their courage, but only sociologically accurate accountings. For all that, 'Summer Street' remains a readable item for hammock or end-table." Nelson Algren

+ — Sat ■ 36:15 J1 25 '53 800w

ELSBREE, WILLARD H. Japan's role in southeast Asian nationalist movements, 1940 to 1945; issued under the auspices of the International secretariat, Institute of Pacific relations. 182p $3.25 Harvard univ. press

959 Asia, Southeastern. Japan—Foreign relations—Asia, Southeastern. Nationalism and nationality 53-13171

"A study of the influence and strength of nationalist movements in Burma, Indo-China, Indonesia, Malaya, the Philippines, and Thailand before, during, and after the Japanese occupation. After describing how the Japanese encouraged native nationalist forces, the author draws the conclusion that Japan, like the colonial powers, waited too long to identify the interests of these countries with her own, thus losing the opportunity to establish hegemony and paving the way to their insistence on full independence. A bibliography of sources adds value for both reference and possible group study use." Booklist

Reviewed by L. A. Mills

Am Hist ■ 59:1020 J1 '54 200w

Reviewed by Tatsuji Takeuchi

Am Pol Sci ■ 48:587 Je '54 450w

Reviewed by Herbert Passin

Ann Am Acad 294:169 J1 '54 850w

Booklist 50:256 Mr 1 '54

"The book suffers from the compression imposed by the high cost of printing. The theme deserves a more extended study, which the author is well-qualified to undertake. In spite of the handicap, he has done something well worth doing." H. F. Angus

+ — Canadian Forum 34:17 Ap '54 440w

Foreign Affairs 33:168 O '54 50w

Reviewed by Guy Wind

Manchester Guardian p4 My 4 '54 150w

"This small volume is a most useful preliminary study of a political phenomenon which, in a somewhat different sense, is as timely and pressing today as it was during the war against Japan. Based in important measure on material presented to the Tokyo War Crimes Trials, the story it tells of Southeast Asian nationalism and the role of Japan therein suggests compelling, if implied, parallels with contemporary nationalist problems and paradoxes." J. F. Melby

+ Pacific Affairs 27:81 Mr '54 1100w

Sat R 37:35 Je 5 '54 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p495 Ag ■ '54 550w

U ■ Quarterly Bk R 10:221 Je '54 220w

ELTON, GEOFFREY RUDOLPH. Tudor revolution in government; administrative changes in the reign of Henry VIII. 465p $8.50 Cambridge

942.05 Great Britain—Politics and government. Great Britain—History—Henry VIII. 1509-1547 53-13334

"This book is a study of change in the methods and principles of English government in the sixteenth century, from the 'household' methods of the Middle Ages to the bureaucratic organization of a national monarchy. The most important decade, 1530-40, is given most concentrated attention, but the earlier and later phases are also touched upon." Publisher's note

"This is a work of the first importance for students of Tudor history." W. H. Coates

+ Am Hist R 59:361 Ja '54 500w

Reviewed by H. R. Trevor-Roper

New Statesman & Nation 47:290 Mr 6 '54 2300w

"A young scholar trained in the University of London has taken A. P. Newton's work to its logical conclusion in a first book of distinct promise, and has provided specialists in sixteenth-century history with material they will have to consider seriously in their studies of the period."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p39 Ja 15 '54 1000w

ELY, EDWARD. Wanderings; a mid-19th century seafarer's diary; ed. by Anthony and Allison Sirna. 217p $3.75 Hastings house

B or 92 Seafaring life 54-7598

Diary covering two years in the life of an American physician, diplomat, and adventurer. The time is from December, 1850 to 1852. Because of ill health Edward Ely gave up his physician's career to go to sea, and recovering later resumed his career. In India where he was practising, he was named American Consul. He died there in the midst of a cholera epidemic, at the age of thirty-one.

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 J1 4 '54 80w

"Edward Ely met adventure with zest, gallantry and humor. His journal, long hidden in an attic, proves that he was wise beyond his years." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p12 My 9 '54 360w

Reviewed by R. H. Dillon

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 4 '54 360w

"Edward Ely was a pious man, and his diary, personal and introspective, is rife with expressions of gratitude and supplication. But though the recital of events and weather long gone by may pall, there are also lively and colorful scenes in old New York and early California, as well as aboard ship, and a variety of characters." D. B. B.

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 320w

ELY, SIMS. Lost Dutchman mine; the fabulous story of the seven-decade search for the hidden treasure in the Superstition mountains of Arizona. 178p $3.50 Morrow

979.1 Lost Dutchman mine 53-10167

In and around Phoenix, Arizona, there has been for many years talk of a fabulous gold mine hidden somewhere in a wild region some fifty miles away. Many men have sought it, some have disappeared, twenty at least are known to have died in the search. The author of this book, along with an old friend, has gathered all that could be found out about the mine and its seekers, both legends and facts.

Booklist 50:257 Mr 1 '54

Kirkus 21:648 ■ 15 '53 130w

"Mr. Ely has gathered most of the facts about the mine into this book, but the arrangement of the material is sloppy and the narrative should have been edited more carefully. A straight-out chronological approach would have been better than the rambling reminiscences of the author, a sort of stream-of-conscious non-fiction. However, this is an interesting contribution to the Southwestern American shelf." R. H. D.

ELY, SIMS—Continued

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 3 '54
210w

"Sims Ely has written a succinct, fascinating, and entirely persuasive history of a single gold mine, the Lost Dutchman." Whitney Balliett

+ Sat R 36:27 D 12 '53 550w

"Historically and geographically correct, this book is a useful reference for casual readers and students." S. M. Neal

+ Springf'd Republican p4D Ja 3 '54
170w

EMERY, MRS ANNE. County fair [a 4-H romance]. 222p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

53-7887

"Fifteen-year-old Jane, a town girl, talented in music, longs to live on a farm. To get as close to farm living as she can she joins a 4-H Club, after promising her mother not to neglect her music, and makes new friends at the Township High School. She has a struggle to keep up with the organized activities of the club and also keep her promise to her mother." Library J

"A smoothly written, pleasant story for old prize winners at county fairs and for those getting a first picture of 4-H clubs as a sound and social feature of American country life." E. E.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p59 N 15 '53
180w

Kirkus 21:587 S 1 '53 120w

"A wholesome and well-written story for early teen-agers." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 79:76 Ja 1 '54 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 10 '54 30w

EMERY, MRS ANNE. High note, low note. 214p $2.50 Westminster press

54-5273

Another story of the Burnaby family for junior high school girls. The heroine this time is Jean, who is now a senior in high school. Jean's plan to devote more time to her music is interrupted by her new friend Kim, and by her fears about Jeff's possessiveness.

Booklist 50:422 Jl 1 '54

"As always, the Burnabys are a highly satisfactory family unit, helping one another in crises, facing problems wisely, having fun together." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 13 '54
160w

"Not a very original plot but presents an authentic picture of suburban high school life and good family relationships. For junior high school girls." C. A. Hulton

+ Library J 79:789 Ap 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 11 '54
40w

EMERY, CURTIS RAY. Modern volleyball. 144p il $2.95 Macmillan (N Y)

796.32 Volley ball 53-12736

"The first complete coverage of the advanced style of volleyball. An instructor's manual designed to interpret the game to men, women, boys and girls on all levels of development. Sections for Women, Class organization and Instruction. Glossary. Index. Diagrams." Library J

Booklist 50:115 N 15 '53

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:68 Ja 1 '54 30w

EMMETT, PAUL HUGH, ed. Catalysis; v 1, Fundamental principles, pt. 1; contributing authors, Herman E. Ries, jr. [and others]. 394p il $10 Reinhold

541.39 Catalysis (54-6801)

"The first volume published of an ambitious series, the purpose of which is to present on a professional level, a synthesis of all the accumulated knowledge of catalysis. The individual chapters are monographic reviews of specific subtopics and are closely keyed to accompanying bibliographies. Although the series as a whole will undoubtedly take on the status of a reference work, individual chapters will be useful to graduate chemists for orientation in specific areas of the field. Thus a working chemist who finds himself in need of information on relations between magnetic and catalytic properties will find Selwood's paper in the present volume a good starting point. The author index covers all of the cited papers." N Y New Tech Bks

"Volume I of the new text on catalysis is a heartening record of the progress that has been achieved in the science of catalysis during the last three decades and an indispensable base from which to proceed to chart the unknown future in the field." Hugh Taylor

+ Am Chem Soc J 76:5007 O 5 '54 500w

Chem Eng N 32:1066 Mr 15 '54 10w

"Judging the content and coverage of this first volume, the series promises to be one of the most valuable adjuncts not only to the petroleum chemist for whom it is written primarily but to anybody interested in the field of catalysis." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 61:347 D '54 150w

"The style of treatment is technical. The series will be of particular interest to graduate physical chemists." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1321 Jl '54 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:19 Mr '54

EMRICH, DUNCAN. Cowboy's own brand book; il. by Ava Morgan. 75p $1.50 Crowell

636.2 Cattle brands 54-5536

"In this little book Duncan Emrich, chief of the Folklore Department of the Library of Congress, introduces young buckaroos into the mysteries of American cattle brands. Aided by illustrator Ava Morgan, he explains briefly but clearly how these signs are composed of combinations of letters, figures and picture symbols—in various positions—and shows how to read them, with examples which are more fun to decipher than rebuses." N Y Times

Booklist 50:326 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 4 '54
50w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54
190w

Horn Bk 30:178 Je '54 120w

Kirkus 22:199 Mr 15 '54 50w

"Would more than please the boy of any age with the slightest interest in brands. It is a treasure mine of information." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 79:784 Ap 15 '54 80w

"If you want your own brand book you want it very much, whether at eight or at fourteen. So libraries that are kindly will bind one for reference use. Moreover, it is a delightful gift for any age person who rides through a season on a ranch. One hundred brands are pictured, and others discussed in the well written text." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 30 '54 110w

"Equipped with this unusual bit of Americana, the rawest tenderfoot will soon be talking knowingly of the Lazy Y, the Half Diamond L, the Walking X or the Tumbling Anchor." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 18 '54 120w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:221 N 27 '54 40w

ENGELHARD, GEORGIA. Peterli and the mountain; pictures by Madeleine Gekiere. 39p $2.25 Lippincott

Cats—Legends and stories 54-5586

"Once there was a real cat that climbed the Matterhorn. Peterli, the cat in this story, does likewise, starting off one day to look for field mice. And if he doesn't always land on his own feet, he is smart enough to manage to land on Emil's feet. That is why Emil is now the most famous guide in Zermatt." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 193:84 Je '54 50w
Booklist 50:326 Ap 15 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Mr 28 '54 110w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 13 '54 50w

"Mrs. Gekiere who is Swiss has made interesting and unusual pictures well suited to the book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:95 Ap '54 120w
Kirkus 22:152 Mr 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by V. A. Russell
+ Library J 79:562 Mr 15 '54 80w

"While their elders are reading of the conquest of Everest many small children will be delighted to hear or read about a cat who climbed the Matterhorn." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 7 '54 120w

"All that happens to Peterli sounds true as well as, often, hair-raising. The story-telling is a shade flat; after a great noise, after tons of ice and snow, big boulders and ten-foot icicles have crashed beyond the shelf on which Peterli huddles, the reader is grounded by: 'This is what mountain climbers call an avalanche.' Children will have sense enough to skip this sort of thing for the sake of the unusual and exciting story. Madeleine Gekiere's illustrations are simple, dramatic and witty; in fact, they couldn't be better." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 7 '54 120w

Sat R 37:26 Ap 17 '54 100w

ENGLE, PAUL, ed. See O. Henry Memorial Award. Prize stories of 1954

ENNES, HAROLD E. Principles and practices of telecasting operations. 596p il $7.95 Sams
621.3889 Television broadcasting 53-8626

"Addressed to engineers and technicians who are directly concerned with the broadcasting of television and to students who are preparing for this field, this book is outstanding for its detailed, concrete information on the technical side of television broadcasting. The early chapters contain the necessary background information on theory and basic techniques of television. Beginning with the third chapter, the material is specific and directly related to the daily work of television broadcasting technicians. Both studio procedures and those employed in on-the-spot broadcasting outside studios are covered. The author is Staff Engineer of Station WIRE in Indianapolis." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 50:93 N 1 '53

Chem & Eng N 31:4241 O 12 '53 10w

Library J 79:917 My 15 '54 20

N Y New Tech Bks 38:96 N '53

ENOS, GEORGE MAGEE, and FONTAINE, WILLIAM E. Elements of heat treatment; Bill Billett drawings by Frank Zozzora. 286p $5 Wiley

669.18 Metals, Heat treatment of 53-8222

"An introductory work written for engineers who have had no special training in metallurgy, but who require a knowledge of the fundamental principles and methods of heat treating. The material, based on courses given to first-year engineering students at Purdue University, includes background information regarding the properties of metals and alloys and metal forming operations. The actual heat treating processes are dealt with from the point of view of purpose, mechanics of the operation, effect on the structure and properties of the metal, and utilization of the finished product." N Y New Tech Bks

"Undoubtedly the primary use will be by college students, but the book can be recommended also to technicians in metal-working plants and elsewhere in industry where a basic knowledge of heat treating processes is essential." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 78:1850 O 15 '53 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 38:91 N '53

EPSTEIN, GEORGE. Adhesive bonding of metals. 218p $2.95 Reinhold

671.73 Adhesives. Metals 54-11651

"How to determine if an adhesive-bonded joint would be advantageous, what type of adhesive to select, how to employ the adhesive, and how to design the joint for optimum performance." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Chem & Eng N 32:2991 Jl 26 '54 20w

"Directed to engineers and technicians interested in the practical aspects of adhesion. . . You'll find a chapter on industrial adhesives—with a list of trade names and manufacturers—a discussion of special high temperature adhesives, and a chapter on bonding techniques." Chem Eng 61:378 O '54 50w

"This little book contains an unexpectedly thorough discussion of the properties of the currently available adhesives, the design of adhesive joints, bonding techniques, testing of completed joints, etc. It is intended for graduate engineers and technicians who need background and practical knowledge of the field, and it should serve such persons well." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:1895 O 15 '54 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:65 S '54

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL. First book of electricity; pictures by Robin King. 63p $1.75 Watts, F.

537 Electricity—Juvenile literature 53-8608

"What scientists think electricity is, how it is generated, how it flows through wires into our homes and is harnessed to light our lamps, heat our appliances and run our machines is explained. In addition, there are easy home experiments." Publisher's note

Booklist 50:225 F 1 '54

"An unusually clear presentation, with many helpful diagrams, of the ways in which electricity works, particularly in our homes." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:100 Ap '54 80w

Kirkus 21:584 S 1 '53 70w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 79:73 Ja 1 '54 20w

Wis Lib Bul 50:80 Mr '54

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL (MRS SAMUEL EPSTEIN). First book of words; their family histories; pictures by László Roth. 62p $1.75 Watts, F.

400 Language and languages—Juvenile literature 54-5947

In simple language and many diagrammatic pictures the authors tell the story of words and language from prehistoric picture writing to present day growth and change of words in English.

Booklist 51:179 D 15 '54

"Few subjects are of more interest than words, and this fascinating little book should both stimulate a child's interest in them and reveal a new use for his dictionary." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 14 '54 110w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL—Continued

"An excellent first text on the origins of speech and writing and the fascinating ways they have changed through the ages."

+ Kirkus 22:234 Ap 1 '54 70w

"The history fills a long felt need in junior high library collections." Elenora Alexander

+ Library J 79:2495 D 15 '54 90w

"This book is useful for reference as well as fascinating for reading." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:85 N 13 '54 120w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL.

Real book about submarines; il. by Manning deV. Lee. 222p $1.50 Garden City bks.

623.825 Submarine—Juvenile literature

54-5474

Traces the history and development of the submarine from the first one built in 1620 to the atomic-powered submarines of the future. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 50:345 My 1 '54

"An addition to the Real Books that meets a definite need, a factual text on modern submarine,—their history, the men who strove to achieve them, their operation today. It's a honey, one of the best in a succession of sound fact books from the inexhaustibly ambitious Epstein couple."

+ Kirkus 22:67 F 1 '54 180w

"Recommended for all libraries." Margaret McFate

+ Library J 79:789 Ap 15 '54 80w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer

N Y Times p16 Ag 1 '54 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16 '54 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 18 '54 190w

ERDMAN, DAVID VORSE. Blake, prophet against empire; a poet's interpretation of the history of his own times. 503p il $7.50 Princeton univ. press

821 Blake, William. Eighteenth century

52-13154

"The world of William Blake has brought forth some of the best scholarship of the last half century, but this world is so limitless that additional research and interpretation is always in order. This new study examines Blake's thought and art in relation to the history of his own times, a theme that has been subjected to much misinterpretation. Large sections of the book are devoted to the American and French Revolutions and there are numerous illustrations from the works of Blake relating to the text." Library J

"Highly recommended for collections of art and literature." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:379 F 15 '54 100w

Nation 179:36 Jl 10 '54 250w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 11 '54 20w

Poetry 84:364 S '54 150w

"The result of Erdman's investigations is a great amplification of our knowledge of the facts about Blake, and the correction of many errors into which previous critics had fallen. Mr. Erdman finds that one decade has been mistaken for another, a counter-revolution for a revolution, a cabinet change for a riot, an orphan asylum for a madhouse, a recruiting officer for an agriculturalist, and—most fundamentally—an indictment of war for an indictment of industry." S. F. Damon

+ Sat R 37:29 My 1 '54 850w

"What is a bias in Dr. Bronowski becomes a full-blown theory with Professor Erdman, who chooses to turn a blind eye to all that Blake ever wrote about the distinction between allegory and vision. Nevertheless, his book is a valuable contribution to Blake scholarship.

Although he can see only one colour in the picture, that one colour Professor Erdman detects unerringly."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Je 25 '54 650w

"David Erdman's 'Blake' has been hailed by Northrop Frye as 'by far the best study to date of Blake's historical allegory,' and Mr. Frye's judgments are not to be taken lightly. Unquestionably it provides enough new information of various kinds to become essential reading for all students of Blake, and it suggests a number of promising leads for those students to follow. No one has examined Blake's day-to-day relationships with his contemporaries more fully, nor seen so vividly the impact of Blake's London upon his work. . . There are a hundred places in which Mr. Erdman turns up interesting and suggestive facts, and there must be a dozen legends he punctures. This does not make for a readable book, however, and more important, it does not guarantee the worth of Mr. Erdman's interpretations." Martin Price

+ Yale R n s 43:631 summer '54 1100w

ERDMAN, LOULA GRACE. Three at the wedding. 275p $3 Dodd

53-10211

The wedding was at a fashionable church in a rich oil town in Texas. The three of the title were the bride's ambitious, managing mother who could not keep her husband; the gentle second wife of the bride's father; and the wife of a wealthy man whom people suspect wrongly of an affair with the groom.

Booklist 50:167 D 15 '53

"Good magazine fiction, recommended for the small public library." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 78:1530 S 15 '53 80w

"Three at the Wedding" is a quietly and simply written novel, with so sure a grasp of both subject matter and organization that only in retrospect does one realize the very considerable technical achievement of its six chapters. Beyond this, it is illuminating and satisfying as a story of individuals and of some of the many varieties of marriage."

David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 D 1 '53 380w

"This is a woman's tale to be enjoyed vicariously and to be examined with feminine delight in every romantic detail the author supplies so knowingly. Loula Grace Erdman understands what her audience wants and she also understands the people and places she writes about." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p21 Ja 31 '54 240w

Wis Lib Bul 50:31 Ja '54

ERICKSON, PHOEBE. Daniel 'Coon; the story of a pet raccoon; il. by [the author]. 179p $3 Knopf

Raccoons—Legends and stories 54-7478

Tacks Foster was twelve when he adopted the baby raccoon and raised him as a pet. Daniel was a lively pet, and later a useful one to Tacks. The scene of this story for grades four to six is a backwoods farm in Connecticut.

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 14 '54 80w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 90w

"Pet loving boys and girls will enjoy this account of the adopting and gentling of a baby raccoon. . . The author's knowledge of wild life in general and her lively and realistic drawings add greatly to the interest of the book." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 30:332 O '54 100w

"A family mystery, brisk and warm."

+ Kirkus 22:386 Jl 1 '54 100w

"Told with warmth and humor. . . Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 90w

"Boys under twelve who read well will enjoy every bit of this, and so will many of junior high age. It is even better written than this author-artist's delightful story of her farm childhood and her pony, 'Black Penny,' which appealed more to girls of the same age." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p7 N 14 '54 220w

"'Daniel 'Coon' is recommended for children who like animals, and, even more so, for children who are still afraid of them." Marjorie Fischer
+ N Y Times pt2 p32 N 14 '54 110w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 14 '54 40w

ERSKINE, MARGARET, pseud. See Williams, W.

ESKA, KARL, pseud. Five seasons; tr. by Robert Kee. 344p $3.95 Viking

54-9594

A novel about life in a small village in the Turkmen Republic under Soviet Russia's rule. The author, an anti-Nazi Austrian, spent ten years in Russia, part of that time in a labor camp in the Urals, part of it in exile in the central Asian country he writes about.

Kirkus 22:413 JI 1 '54 280w

"'The Five Seasons' is a first novel, but it is written with a hand already sure at modeling characters. . . This reviewer lived under the Soviet system for twenty-eight years, but he must confess that he has understood some aspects of Soviet life only after reading Karl Eska's novel." Mikhail Koriakov

+ N Y Times p4 S 19 '54 850w

"The theme of Mr. Eska's novel is familiar per se. The anti-Communist novel has become almost as stylized and familiar a genre as the mystery. Mr. Eska's work constitutes, in purely literary terms, a not particularly distinguished though always competent example of the genre." Frederic Morton

+ — Sat R 37:29 N 6 '54 700w

"In the march-past of commissars, thieves, forced laborers, secret police, distraught mothers and sullen children there are few really absorbing villains, nor are there any heroes—or even very likable people. The book's impact, as well as its conviction, comes from the author's own involvement in the horrors of which he writes: it is a cry, not only from the steppes of central Asia, but from the lower depths of Stalin's new society."

Time 64:107 S 27 '54 170w

ESKELUND, KARL. Vagabond fever; a gay journey in the land of the Andes. 240p il $3.75 Rand McNally

980 [918] South America—Description and travel 54-8902

The author of My Danish Father (Book Review Digest 1947) describes a trip thru Panama, Colombia, Ecuador, Bolivia, Peru, and Chile. He was accompanied by his Chinese wife, whose reactions to some of their hardships enliven the book.

Booklist 51:80 O 15 '54

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 12 '54 300w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 79:2463 D 15 '54 100w

"What he has to say of basic political tensions along the way is thin and elementary. He is much more informative and entertaining on bearing Chi-yun across a jungle stream than on the enigma of Haya de la Torre in Peru. In fact, looking back through the text, one wonders why Mr. Eskelund hasn't exploited his best material in one book called 'My Danish Father' and another called 'My Chinese Wife.' The answer is, he already has." Milton Bracker

N Y Times p34 O 17 '54 350w

ESSEX, HARRY J. I put my right foot in. 307p $3.75 Little

54-6883

Story of what happens to a young writer's first play from the time it is sold to a producer to its opening—and last—night on Broadway.

Kirkus 22:212 Mr 15 '54 130w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 79:1322 JI '54 50w

"Mr. Essex's approach, his style, his hard-bitten dialogue have much in common with the early works of Budd Schulberg and Jerome Weidman. He knows the boy from Coney Island—he grew up there himself—and he makes him come alive on every page of the book." Carol Field

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 13 '54 600w

"Mr. Essex's bitter story is written with simplicity, directness, and honesty, but although it is interesting, it has a wearying and depressing effect, mainly because neither the playwright nor his sad wife nor any of the other people involved are anything but cheap and pathetic, and either shrilly futile or silently futile."

— + New Yorker 30:135 Je 5 '54 70w

"The characters are utterly lifeless, and without definition. The action bogs down repeatedly and the entire book, with the sole exception of the view of the processes involved in getting a play on the boards, is unconvincing." R. J. Gleason

— San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 25 '54 450w

Reviewed by John Haverstick

Sat R 37:37 JI 17 '54 210w

"His first novel is full of the flavor of the legitimate theater and gives a vivid portrayal of problems involved in producing a Broadway show, and should appeal especially to men." J. C. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p8C JI 25 '54 70w

ESTES, CARROLL COX. Moon gate. 188p $2.75 Doubleday

54-6781

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 JI 4 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:251 Ap 1 '54 60w

"Soft-boiled in a pleasing-silly sort of way." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 13 '54 180w

"The best of Carroll Cox Estes' novels to date, despite a most disconcerting shift in viewpoint and character at the very end. It combines a markedly feminine damsel-in-distress story with an intimate picture of Dallas and a surprising amount of well-grounded legal technicalities, almost as if an Eberhart novel had come under the influence of Gardner; the blend is an odd and pleasing one." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p13 Je 20 '54 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 JI 25 '54 50w

"On balance, a plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:32 JI 17 '54 20w

Springf'd Republican p5C JI 4 '54 70w

ESTEY, NORBERT. All my sins [a novel of the life and loves of Ninon de Lenclos]. 374p $3.50 Wyn

Lenclos, Anne, called Ninon de—Fiction

54-6941

"Ninon de Lenclos was a French courtesan who lived all during the 17th century, beginning with the reign of Louis XIII when Paris was besieged and Richelieu and Mazarin were at the top of their power, and on during the reign of Louis XIV and the brilliant Court of Versailles. She lived for love, but she had

ESTEY, NORBERT—Continued

■ flair for young artists and helped such men of letters as Moliere, Racine, Corneille and many others reach the pinnacle of their fame." Library J

"Here is a story, sensation in itself, that could be told with wit and gayety. It is difficult, in a brief space, to suggest the cheap vulgarity with which it is treated here." Robert Molloy

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 23 '54 350w

Kirkus 22:241 Ap 1 '54 150w

"Interesting amours but read before buying heavily." Katharine Shorey

Library J 79:1058 Je 1 '54 80w

"In less intelligent hands this story might have been made merely erotic. That it is not, that it is an entertaining reminder that the art of making love is an art, is to the author's credit." John Neff

+ N Y Times p27 My 9 '54 500w

ETC: a review of general semantics. Language, meaning and maturity; ed. by S. I. Hayakawa. 364p $4 Harper

190 Semantics

53-11841

"ETC. is the official quarterly of the International Society for General Semantics. Its present and only editor, S. I. Hayakawa, author, lecturer, and one time Illinois Tech professor, has now prepared a volume consisting of articles chosen from back issues of ETC [1943-1953]. The 26 items in this anthology cover a wide range of topics and are of widely varying degrees of readability. All are concerned with some aspect of communication—from mass media to personal and private interpretations of signs and symbols." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Booklist 51:162 D 15 '54

"It is a rare person who would sincerely rejoice in each article in 'Language, Meaning and Maturity.' But it is an equally rare [and most unfortunate] human being who would not find memorable illumination somewhere here. My first place goes to Richard Dettering, for 'Psychology as Metalanguage.' In our highly verbalized and conformist society, it is very helpful to have our attention called to nonverbal communication and to the extensive role playing by means of it." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 7 '54 320w

"For all libraries." S. S. Smith

+ Library J 79:2323 D 1 '54 280w

Reviewed by Mario Pei

N Y Times p12 N 7 '54 350w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 8 '54 500w

ETHERTON, PERCY THOMAS. On either side of the equator. 253p il $3.75 Roy pubs.

910.4 Voyages and travels 54-10477

"A world traveler regales in suitable and seasoned fashion in this collection of remembered journeys, mostly centered in Asia. In the Heavenly Mountains he visits the descendants of Genghiz Khan, recalling Tartar history and admiring Kalmuk horsemanship . . . spends a night in an eerie and remote Buddhist monastery and happens upon midnight devotions and the outdoor cells of eternal supplicants; makes a pilgrimage to Ordam Padshah, a Moslem shrine visited by five white men before him in 900 years. He 'zeps' to Rio de Janeiro, learns about snakes at San Paolo, and about volcanoes at Paricutin." Kirkus

"Good natured, informative, a gentlemanly approach to far vistas."

Kirkus 22:507 Ag 1 '54 130w

"Col. Etherton is an excellent raconteur: his stories sustain suspense, and hold interest throughout." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:1596 S 15 '54 50w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 29 '54 50w

"If you don't mind the author's whisky-and-soda style, the disunity of his book, and some irritating tricks of journalism, not least of which is cliché after cliché, and you have a predilection for odd things in odd places, then Colonel Etherton is your man. One or two maps, however, would be ■ great help, as the author moves about ■ good deal and apparently expects the reader to be familiar with some very unfamiliar geography." B. W. Spec p339 S 25 '53 130w

EUSTIS, HELEN. Fool killer. 219p $2.75 Doubleday

54-5167

A story of the American midwest in the years following the Civil war. The hero-narrator is twelve-year old George Mellish who runs away from foster parents, and after many strange adventures at last finds a better home.

Booklist 50:277 Mr 15 '54

"A poignant, haunting novel, related in the boy's own idiom."

+ Bookmark 13:185 My '54 40w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 14 '54 360w

Kirkus 21:768 D 1 '53 240w

"The characters are an odd set but believable. The author shows skill in reproducing the speech of a twelve-year-old-boy, and this adds much to the enjoyment of the novel. Recommended." J. D. Marshall

+ Library J 79:385 F 15 '54 130w

"A smile-and-a-tear book that it is a pleasure to recommend."

+ Nation 178:204 Mr 6 '54 60w

"This haunting novel is a tender and completely adult story about an appealing child forced to learn difficult truths about the nature of good and evil. Miss Eustis has written a thoughtful and engrossing ■ book." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 7 '54 450w

"George tells the story, in a strangely evocative language as smooth as narrative poetry. There is in it, in fact, a great deal of folk poetry, as well as humor and emotion. Helen Eustis rates high praise for the way she has used this device, keeping to the boy viewpoint amazingly well, never missing a scrap of color or character, never overstepping her bounds. It is a story of high drama, and she underplays it, deliberately, with superb effect." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p5 F 7 '54 550w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 30:120 Mr 20 '54 900w

"The book is nearly as prodigal of amazing characters as one by Dickens and it rises to a climax as violent and breath-taking as Stevenson could have devised. Comparisons are not only inevitable, but welcomed by the author, whose book can stand them. One hopes that the special audience for which she has written this time—adults who have some of the child still in their hearts, and children with adult perceptions—will be large enough to do it justice." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 7 '54 450w

"Helen Eustis's 'The Fool Killer' is the only American novel concerned with the physical and emotional life of a boy that, in this reader's opinion, can be compared with J. D. Salinger's 'Catcher in the Rye.' Comparisons are invidious and, indeed, on the surface there is no apparent relationship between the two books." Harrison Smith

+ Sat ■ 37:20 F 13 '54 600w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 220w

EVANS, BERGEN. Spoor of spooks, and other nonsense. 295p $4.50 Knopf

133 Errors, Popular. Superstition 53-9461

A continuation of the author's earlier work The Natural History of Nonsense (Book Review Digest 1946) in which many of the pet beliefs and myths of men are shown up as false or based on insufficient evidence. Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:88 D '54 600w

Booklist 51:121 N 15 '54

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 7 '54 850w

"The worthlessness of all the things which have been 'dear to the illiterate, the ignorant, the untrained and the unbalanced' is exposed with implacable precision, and provides a highly entertaining odyssey through the wonderland of popular deceptions and delusions."

Kirkus 22:652 S 15 '54 150w

"Bound to be as popular as his Natural History of Nonsense, every reference librarian will want one to give him superior knowledge, and circulation librarians will need more than one copy to meet the demands of curious, intelligent readers who don't like to be fooled." Lee Ash

+ Library J 79:2097 N 1 '54 150w

"Mr. Mencken once remarked that he liked to hit someone over the head every day, 'preferably with a meat ax.' Bergen Evans specializes in notions rather than men but his temperament is much the same and he lets no low descending sun catch him before he has lambasted some Vulgar Error. As was also the case with Mr. Mencken his victims vary considerably in importance and perhaps in the degree to which they deserve demolition but his zest never deserts him." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 21 '54 420w

"Mr. Evans sometimes preaches. But this is, at least partly, the reflection of his passionate belief that the goblins will get us if we don't knock them down as fast as they show their heads. He is considerably more than a learned and witty parlor ikon-buster. In a few chapters, such as the one on marital relations and the one on America's bloody love affair with the automobile, he leaves the pattern of set-'em-up-in-the-next-alley almost entirely and concentrates on sustained, eloquent social criticism. Either way, sober or gay, he makes 'The Spoor of Spooks' worth reading, and you'll have a fine time reading it, whether you think cockroaches are durable or not." John Lardner

+ N Y Times p20 N 7 '54 800w

"Mr. Evans, who wrote an unusually entertaining and informative book on popular delusions, 'The Natural History of Nonsense,' has attempted a sequel and has suffered the not uncommon fate of appearing with his colors diminished, like a bad silk-screen print of a painting. . . . Aside from a lively vivisection of Kenneth Roberts, the dowagers' friend, and of Dr. J. B. Rhine, the parapsychologist, there is not much here to interest anyone past the Little Blue Book stage."

New Yorker 30:222 N 20 '54 120w

"Mr. Evans' light manner frequently conceals great seriousness. Along with harmless nonsense like believing in water-witching, we do indulge in much superstition that can do harm. Mr. Evans' skepticism is healthy, his prose sparkles, his commonsense is always in full charge. Readers will have fun with his book and maybe come away from it with some new ideas." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 10 '54 460w

"There are a few spots where one might quibble about a point of view or have doubts about the soundness of a statistic, but on the whole there is a feeling that the author has researched his material carefully. The book is a mine of off-trail but worthwhile information, a delight to read, and a welcome antidote to the sensational but wildly inaccurate articles that boost the circulation of so many popular magazines." Martin Gardner

+ Sat ■ 37:13 N 13 '54 650w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 21 '54 300w

EVANS, CERINDA W. Collis Potter Huntington. 2v 775p il maps $12 Mariners mus.

B or 92 Huntington, Collis Potter

"The life of Collis Potter Huntington, railroad magnate and financier who lived during the latter half of the 19th century and built railroads extending from East to West across America, and owned steamship lines which traversed over 20,000 miles of water route. . . . Of the seven transcontinental railroads in operation at the time of Mr. Huntington's death (1900), his were the only ones that never defaulted financially or underwent enforced reorganization." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by J. B. Frantz

Am Hist R 60:220 O '54 400w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p15 Mr 14 '54 80w

"An objective and thorough-going appraisal of the man and his achievements is much needed, for few figures in American life have, both during their lifetimes and later, received a greater amount both of uncritical praise and all-inclusive abuse than he. Unfortunately, the present work fails to perform that function." Oscar Lewis

San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 2 '54 800w

EVANS, DAVID (LEWIS ARNOLD, pseud). Sand against the wind. 379p $3.75 Dutton

54-5031

"This is the story of two French sisters who are twins. One is beautiful and the other, while having as lovely a face, is monstrously deformed in body. It is with Marie de Rochehault, 'The Crooked One,' as she is called, that the novel is concerned. Her life is revealed by a journal which she gives the local curate to read shortly after she knows she is to die. Her history is enough to appall the most hardened, for it shows in horrifying detail evil genius at work." N Y Times

— Kirkus 21:800 D 15 '53 150w

"An intense, moving, dramatic story, well written, highly recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 79:204 F 1 '54 140w

"This is a novel that quite possibly may be widely read, for it has the powerful combination of the exotic and the religious, but unless one likes one's fiction highly colored, it is likely to prove unconvincing and a little dull." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Mr 7 '54 400w

"Mr. Arnold has constructed a plot that verges on the melodramatic; it is saved only by his gift for making Marie believable." J. P. Quehl

+ — N Y Times p23 F 21 '54 280w

EVANS, EVA (KNOX) (MRS BORIS WITTE). Nothing is dripping on us. 308p $3.75 Little

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Witte, Boris 54-5127

Reminiscences of the happy marriage of ■ Methodist minister's daughter and a Russian baron, who is now proud of the fact that he is an American citizen.

Booklist 50:319 Ap 15 '54

Bookmark 13:158 Ap '54 30w

"This is probably pleasanter to read about than live through and offers easy entertainment."

+ Kirkus 22:53 Ja 15 '54 180w

"The adventures of this happy couple are probably more fun to read about than to have experienced. Recommended. Book will appeal to many types of readers, both young and old." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 79:449 Mr 1 '54 160w

"Mrs. Witte thinks that Boris with his ferment of ideas, his unpredictability, his wealth of stories of an adventurous life in Russia and Mongolia is a glamorous and exciting individual. So he is, but by token of her understanding and joyous participation in his plans, so is she. In telling of their life and the places they have been, she writes with humor and maturity and an insight not only into Boris' character but of the many people they have known." Rose Feld

EVANS, EVA—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p7 Mr 14 '54 800w

"There isn't a whiff of world problems, not a smell of social significance in this account of an out-of-ordinary married couple. It's a nice, warm, gay book." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p13 Mr 28 '54 320w

"It is written in a light-hearted vein and is good fun to read." G. A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 16 '54 250w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:134 My '54

EVANS, EVA (KNOX) (MRS BORIS WITTE). Story of Su-Su; pictures by Vana Earle. [29p] $2.50 McKay

Dogs—Legends and stories 53-11362

Picture storybook for ages four to eight. Su-Su was a championship dog who lived in a city apartment and always had The Very Best of Care. One summer when her mistress was away Su-Su went to the country to live, and found out how delightful it was to have a little freedom. After her mistress learned her lesson Su-Su was much happier.

Booklist 50:208 Ja 15 '54

Reviewed by Ruth Wales

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 12 '53 20w

Kirkus 21:693 O 15 '53 60w

"The story is enlivened by illustrations that are free and amusing and full of detail interesting to children. The design of the book, the spacing of print and drawings, add wit to the proceedings." M. F.

+ N Y Times p40 N ■ '53 60w

EVANS, JACOB A. Selling and promoting radio and television. 348p il $5.95 Printers ink

659.14 Radio advertising. Television advertising 54-3168

A step-by-step guide on the know-how for promoting radio and television. Analyses the salesman's preparation, the use of research and rating services, and servicing accounts. Appendix includes a sales check list which will help establish a Sales Profile of a station compared to other stations in the market. Index.

Booklist 51:56 O 1 '54

Reviewed by R. L. Vormelker

Library J 79:1517 S 1 '54 140w

EVANS, JEAN. Three men; an experiment in the biography of emotion; introd. by Gordon W. Allport. 297p $3.75; text ed $2.75 Knopf

132 Psychology, Pathological 54-12188

"'An Experiment in the Biography of Emotion' is case-writing at a serious social and scientific level, and in an exhaustive, if self-explanatory examination of three men follows the tack of their emotional processes and their intense inner conflicts which are in friction with their environment. Johnny Rocco, unwanted and unloved in a large family of small means, became an intractable trouble-maker and his unhappy history is followed through schools and clinics and courts, delinquency and 'disciplinary' measures. William Miller, after a solitary, orphanage childhood, grew up to migrant farm jobs and broken marriages, to robbing houses and haunting cemeteries, and finally to years of partial and total blindness in which no organic factors were involved. And Martin Beardson, under the influence of a class conscious mother, became anxious, fastidious and contemptuous in his youth, and now lives in one rooming house or another and preaches vegetarianism, pacifism and a continence he finds difficult to practice." Kirkus

"Her style is lucid, clear-cut, and incisive, giving to us a faithful portrayal of the environmental and personal factors that have conditioned the lives of these unhappy and mal-adjusted men." R. A. Bolt

+ Am J Pub Health 44:1214 S '54 270w

"This is superb writing—the work of a craftsman in story telling. Its theme is the tragedy of emotional impasse." Joseph Neyer

+ Am Soc R 19:613 O '54 500w

Booklist 50:373 Je 1 '54

"These studies, scrupulously researched and recorded, have a specific value for teaching and practicing psychologists, mental hygienists, etc. and are a fascinating, documentary for the more interested layman."

+ Kirkus 22:30 Ja 1 '54 270w

"Basing her stories on social service and police records and on personal interviews, the author transforms what might have been typical case histories into heart breaking pictures of three men constantly beset by the difficulties of adjustment to themselves and to society. In doing so, she combines remarkable objectivity, insight and compassion, and has in effect created a new literary form... Highly recommended for purchase by public and college libraries." Louis Barron

+ Library J 79:624 Ap 1 '54 100w

"Her book is an admirable example of reporting based not on impressionism but on thorough research. American reporters have often excelled in this. She is not choked by her information but has selected it brilliantly. She really does create her people and their background and the mixture of narrative and documentary check-up is very effective." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 48:583 N 6 '54 2400w

"What gives this book so sharp an impact is the realization implicit in every carefully chosen scene that, in our vulnerability, our longing for justice, for approval, for love, and in our despairs and our hopes we are bound in a common humanity." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 21 '54 800w

"Miss Evans has dramatized these three tales to the hilt, without once losing her firm, factual grip on her subject. Her empathy is deep, her prose resourceful." Reuel Denney

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 21 '54 850w

New Yorker 30:132 Ap 3 '54 120w

"You can find the stuff of 'Three Men' cramming the case-record files of many social agencies and probation bureaus, but you won't find it delineated with the finished artistry and reportorial skill that Jean Evans displays in this unusual book." Albert Deutsch

+ Sat R 37:20 Ap 24 '54 850w

Springf'd Republican p7C Ap 11 '54 320w

EVANS, JOAN. John Ruskin. 447p il $4.25 Oxford

B or 92 Ruskin, John

A one-volume life by an English scholar, who has made use of the knowledge gained as collaborator with Mr J. H. Whitehouse in the editing of the unpublished diaries of John Ruskin. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:106 N 1 '54

Reviewed by F. E. Faverty

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 19 '54 250w

"Joan Evans' book has the persuasive authority of her rich background—'I, too, am a Victorian'—as a distinguished historian of art and a co-editor of the soon-to-be-published Ruskin manuscript diaries. In addition to all that, she is something rare and wonderful in a biographer: she is an exasperated partisan." Riley Hughes

+ Commonweal 61:20 O 8 '54 1600w

"An excellent life that will interest the general reader of biography whether his field be art, Victorian literature, Freudian psychology, sociology, or Ruskin himself. The 'Conclusion,' an essay of 14 pages, is a masterpiece. For all libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 79:1584 S 15 '54 140w

"There is little new discovery in her book, but no one has written a more balanced account of this brilliant, unbalanced genius." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p6 S 17 '54 550w

Reviewed by Jacob Korg
Nation 179:217 S 11 '54 20w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 48:414 O 2 '54 850w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 28 '54 800w

"It is Ruskin's belated good fortune to have found such a biographer in Dr. Joan Evans, a prominent British art historian, who has recently been collaborating in the preparation of an edition of Ruskin's manuscript diaries. She admirably overcomes the many problems of understanding and statement in a solid and eloquent book." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p24 S 26 '54 1050w

"Dr. Evans' book, the fourth study published in the past six years, is probably the best of the lot, and because of the nice balance it strikes between, on the one hand, juicy information about the marriage, the incredible later affair with the insane Rosa La Touche and Ruskin's own manic-depressive psychosis and, on the other, a solid critical analysis of Ruskin's social and aesthetic views, it may prove to be the definitive biography for quite some time."

+ New Yorker 30:147 S 18 '54 200w

Reviewed by Evelyn Waugh
Spec p345 S 17 '54 800w

"Paradoxically it is what is oldest in the Ruskin story that is at this moment the freshest; and the present book may well, as Dr. Evans hopes (and as, twenty years ago, Professor Wilenski also hoped), serve to inspire the general reader with a wholesome interest in Ruskin, and send him at last in search of the original works of this most gifted, and most thwarted, of all Victorians."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 17 '54 1450w

EVANS, MURIEL NAOMI (ED NEWSOM, pseud). Wagons to Tucson. 276p $3.50 Little 54-6865

Historical novel of the western frontier, just after the Civil war. The story follows the course of a six-wagon train of settlers, soldiers, and adventurers, casting their lots together for fear of Indians.

Booklist 50:381 Je 1 '54

"For the western audience of say, Haycox, undifferentiated and undemanding."

Kirkus 22:161 Mr 1 '54 210w

Springf'd Republican p18D My 16 '54 110w

EVERHART, JOHN LAURENCE. Titanium and titanium alloys. 184p $3 Reinhold

669.732 Titanium 54-10402

"A brief but authoritative survey of titanium as an engineering material. Currently used production and refining processes are outlined in the first chapter. The rest of the space is devoted to matters of interest to engineers who are concerned with the design of engines, airplane structures, etc. Selected literature references are included. The first version appeared as 'Manual 82' in the May, 1952, issue of Materials and methods; this book represents a revised and considerably augmented new edition." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:1895 O 15 '54 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:63 J1 '54

EVERS, ALF. In the beginning; with pictures by Helen Sewell. [28p] $2 Macmillan (N Y)

213 Creation—Juvenile literature 54-4622

Tells the story of the creation, in brief text and pictures, for ages five to eight.

Booklist 51:114 N 1 '54

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 14 '54 30w

Commonweal 61:201 N 19 '54 10w

Kirkus 22:580 S 1 '54 80w

"Helen Sewell's stylized illustrations in grey, black, and shades of blue have a primitive childlike quality well suited to the text. A happy selection for home as well as public library. Will be welcomed by church-school workers." A. B. Martin

+ Library J 79:2252 N 15 '54 50w

"In a most moving, simple bit of prose, Mr. Evers has told small children about God's making the world, the sun and moon and stars, then making the creatures to live in it, and to love all its different parts and places. . . Helen Sewell matches its poetic simplicity with bold, imaginative designs." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 26 '54 250w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 7 '54 50w

EWALD, WILLIAM BRAGG. Masks of Jonathan Swift. 203p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

827 Swift, Jonathan A54-5610

Study of Dean Swift's use of impersonation as the device with which he heightened his ironical effects. The author also compares Swift's use of impersonation with that of his contemporaries, and with that of modern writers. Bibliography. Index.

"Scholarly, but enjoyable to the well-read general reader as well as the student of literature."

+ Booklist 51:57 O 1 '54

"As Mr. Ewald demonstrates with some subtlety, Swift's personae vary very greatly in the degree of independent life that Swift allows them. At one end of the scale is the fully developed fictitious character such as Lemuel Gulliver or Isaac Bickerstaff, at the other extreme are shadowy personae such as 'the Church of England man' whose 'sentiments' are only very slightly different from Swift's own. It is in dealing with these latter that Mr. Ewald is most successful and most original."

New Statesman & Nation 47:766 Je 12 '54 360w

EWELL, RAYMOND HENRY. Dining out in America's cities [the modern travelers' guide to good eating in America's principal cities]. 226p $3.50 Little 647.94 Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc—U.S. 54-6874

"The book, written by chemist, economist, and spare-time gourmet, Raymond Ewell, lists the restaurants which serve the best food in 102 principal cities (100 in the U. S. and Montreal and Toronto) most often visited by America's businessman. In typical economist style, Ewell has chosen those cities on the basis of their value of manufactures as listed by the U. S. Census. Several cities, such as Atlantic City and Miami Beach, are also included because of their reputation as convention and resort towns." (Chem & Eng N) Glossary. No index.

Bookmark 13:218 Je '54 10w

EWELL, R. H.—Continued

"For the traveling chemist in search of a good meal, in fact for any traveler, 'Dining Out in America's Cities' will give a high yield for the space it takes in his brief case. . . . The book is of more than passing interest to the chemical profession and the chemical industry—not only because Ewell is a chemist and chemical engineer, but because many of his 125 collaborators are members of the chemical profession, some 75 of them being members of the American Chemical Society." M. C. Summers
+ Chem & Eng N 32:2318 Je 7 '54 1250w

Kirkus 22:180 Mr 1 '54 70w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison
Library J 79:1596 S 15 '54 50w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p32 My 9 '54 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 3 '54 310w

Springf'd Republican p9C My 30 '54 60w

EWEN, DAVID, ed. European composers today; a biographical and critical guide. 200p il $4 Wilson, H.W.

927.8 Musicians

53-9024

"European Composers Today is a biographical and critical guide to more than a hundred European composers who have exerted the greatest influence upon, and who have been the richest contributors to, the music of the twentieth century. Since it is a companion volume to the previously-published American Composers Today [Book Review Digest 1949] it follows the pattern set by the earlier American volume. Composers who have been writing music after January 1, 1900, are included; consequently many of those represented in this volume are no longer alive, and a few belong to the traditions and backgrounds of the late nineteenth century rather than to those of the twentieth. Selection of composers for inclusion in the present book was based upon (1) the importance of their works; (2) the frequency with which these works are heard in the concert hall or opera house, over the radio, and on phonograph records; (3) the interest which the American music public has in these composers. Musicians of exclusively local significance have, then, been omitted." (Introd) Select bibliography.

Booklist 50:237 F 15 '54

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 25 '54 100w

"There is a good deal of new material here; and it is set down in the easy, facile way we have come to associate with the compiler. There are also the usual slips (e.g. Hank rather than Henk Badings) and omissions (e.g. Holst's Hymn of Jesus is not mentioned as being among the major works). Portraits of all but one composer." C. K. Miller

+ — Library J 79:557 Mr 15 '54 210w

"The use of adjectives of a general nature does not help in evaluating the actual content of music. Descriptions such as that concerning Britten's operas leave more than a little to the reader's imagination. . . . Nor is the book free from factual errors. In many cases it is difficult to determine the accuracy of dates, since nothing in the Introduction tells us whether the dates given in the list of 'Major Works' appended after each biographical sketch are composition, performance, or publication dates. . . . The area covered in this volume is important. We know, in terms of biographical data, too little about many of the young composers of Europe. Ewen has given us some useful information not hitherto easily accessible. No doubt we owe him gratitude for making certain material, gleaned at first hand in many instances from the biographees concerned, available to us. This is to be applauded, provided the results are definitive." Scott Goldthwaite

+ — Library Q 24:411 O '54 1200w

"One can't help feeling that the book attempts too many things for too many people, and that its avowed purposes are not only too broad but actually are impossible within the inherent limitations of a volume in dictionary format." F. C. Campbell

Music Lib Assn Notes 11:476 Je '54 550w

EWING, ALFRED CYRIL. Ethics. 183p $1.50 Macmillan (N Y)

171 Ethics

"Dr Ewing spends the first half of his book on theories of the standard of rightness, and then deals more briefly with the logical and epistemological topics that have occupied so large a proportion of recent discussion of Ethics in Britain and America." Hibbert J

"It is perhaps safe to say—a saying not intended to be invidious—that this is the best brief introduction now available to the general subject of moral philosophy." T. V. Smith
+ Ethics 64:242 Ap '54 330w

"The style throughout is a little dull, and logical points are perhaps put with insufficient precision for the beginner. These faults are compensated, however, by the seriousness and honesty of thought which always characterize Dr Ewing's work. A welcome feature is the use of important contemporary events to illustrate moral issues." D. D. Raphael

+ — Hibbert J 52:206 Ja '54 900w

"The book can be recommended particularly as a stimulating summary of much of recent ethical inquiry, and therefore would be admirably suited to serve as a final reading in an introductory ethics course." Richard Kuhns
+ J Philos 51:336 My 27 '54 800w

F

FAATZ, ANITA JOSEPHINE. Nature of choice in casework process; introd. by Virginia P. Robinson. 141p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

361.3 Social work

53-8729

"This volume is addressed to those who are professionally concerned with the common base on which rests the process of helping in all social casework. Imbued with Rankian analytic approach and holding a functional concept of the helping process, the author examines the nature of choice, which she construes as an essential part of the common base. In the first, and shorter, of the two Parts into which the book is divided, there are traced the steps taken in the last twenty years in the search for the therapeutic factor in casework. . . . Part II explores the functional process of giving and taking help." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The book is an interesting, well-organized presentation. . . . All caseworkers, however, can appreciate the fact that Miss Faatz, who has expressed in writing some challenging ideas about the importance of relationships and about the form and control of the helping process, makes a real contribution to the development of the profession. The profession, like the individual, cannot grow without 'struggle.'" B. I. Davis

+ Social Forces 32:312 Mr '54 700w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:463 D '53 200w

FABBRO, MARIO DAL. Furniture for modern interiors; a progressive architecture book. 207p il $7.50 Reinhold

749.245 Furniture

53-12490

"This work is primarily a pictorial survey of outstanding examples of modern furniture produced by professional designers throughout the world. In the first section, furnished rooms or 'groups' of modern furniture, such as dining room tables and chairs, are shown. In contrast, the second part is devoted to individual pieces. In both parts the illustrations include photographs and line drawings. Also, in both parts some information is given on dimensions and details of the pieces shown. This last-mentioned feature makes the book useful to handicrafters who wish to build duplicates of the pieces." (N Y New Tech Bks) List of designers. No index.

Booklist 50:274 Mr 15 '54

N Y New Tech Bks 39:22 Mr '54

FABIAN, ROBERT. London after dark [an intimate record of night life in London, and a selection of crime stories from the case book of the author]. 237p il $3.50 British bk. centre

364.1 Crime and criminals—London, Scotland Yard 54-10613

"In which the 'world's best detective' tells, in short, dramatic story-chapters, the absorbing story of his years as head of Scotland Yard's Vice Squad." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 50:371 Je 1 '54

"Read this book and learn the essential dignity of a superb law enforcement system." W. M. Krogman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 9 '54 390w

Christian Century 71:877 Jl 21 '54 90w

Kirkus 22:277 Ap 15 '54 100w

"One only wishes that the usually level-headed Fabian were not given to rash generalizations." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p18 My 30 '54 80w

"Tremendously good reading." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 1 '54 600w

"First-rate stuff." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 37:29 Je 5 '54 20w

FABRE, LUCIEN. Joan of Arc; tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins. 367p il $5 McGraw

B or 92 Jeanne d'Arc, Saint 54-9709

A translation from the French of a book first published in 1947. It tells the whole of the life story of Joan of Arc. The author, who died in 1952, was an industrialist, as well as a poet, essayist, playwright, and novelist. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:129 N 15 '54

Cath World 180:v D '54 100w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 O 31 '54 450w

"A distinguished, forceful and vivid biography, one might say an unafraid one, which will hold the attention of all, regardless of one's own approach to Joan, and will undoubtedly take an honored place among the memorable contributions to her story." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 61:170 N 12 '54 700w

"In searching for the keys to the enigmas, this becomes a valuable political and religious study as well. A scholar's book that sheds more light on France and St. Joan and the tragic injustice done her."

+ Kirkus 22:554 Ag 15 '54 150w

"The author's affection for his subject and his vivid accounts of character and action make what is essentially a work of authentic and detailed scholarship as readable as a novel." Jacob Korg

+ Nation 179:470 N 27 '54 40w

"It paints her against the backdrop of her time. She was surrounded by a crowded company, and, great or little, these, too, are set down with considerable skill. . . . To some these characterizations will be the best part of the book, but to me the account of her trial and jailing—with its concomitant explanation of how she came to 'recant'—is the most important, just as her actual burning is the most unforgettable. The first proves that brain washing is not a new invention, the second that cruelty is older than today." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p7 S 19 '54 650w

"The general tone of petulance and bias is not improved by anachronistic references to 'collaboration' and 'resistance forces.' Gerard Hopkins has translated all this into the best English possible under the circumstances, and has also condensed it somewhat, for which we may be grateful."

— + New Yorker 30:174 O 23 '54 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 21 '54 180w

"In some respects seems superior to almost any previous work about the Maid of Orleans that has been presented in English. M. Fabre, who died in 1952 shortly after finishing this volume, devoted a large part of his life to studying the whole Joan d'Arc episode, and thus his book has a richness of detail that is found in few others." H. B. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 3 '54 250w

"Erudite, often beautiful, and always moving, it is a remarkable commemoration of one of those lives that gild and make sweet the European memory."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O 22 '54 850w

FAGRELL, ELSE. Lost birthday; il. by Julie K. Howard. 124p $3.50 Caxton ptrs.

54-8635

"The real heroine here is the dog Patch. The place, a sheep station in New South Wales, Australia, where 7-year-old Myee with her friend Aileen, lose themselves in the bush on the night of their joint birthday." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 22:33 Ja 15 '54 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Davis

Library J 79:705 Ap 15 '54 60w

"Miss Fagrell who knows Australia, calls up the smell of wattles and blue gum, the taste of bunya-bunya nuts and tea made in a 'billy,' the sound of screeching cockatoos and bleating sheep, smells, tastes and sounds that are 'different' for most young readers. But the fright of the two little lost girls, the love of a dog for her mistress and the rejoicing of a worried family, are the same the world over and engagingly presented by Miss Fagrell."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 13 '54 90w

FAIN, WILLIAM. Lizard's tail. 309p $3.50 Knopf

54-5978

Character study of Robert Macy, middle-class, thirty-four year old American who is attempting to find some meaning or purpose in his life. The scenes of the novel are laid in New York and North Africa.

Kirkus 22:319 My 15 '54 190w

"A rambling, sophisticated novel, with marked appeal to 'upper middlebrows,' especially those resident in New York and Connecticut." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:1309 Jl '54 140w

"William Fain conveys the characters and atmosphere of his grisly vision with great skill and fascination. He can make you see, feel, and smell anything he wants you to, very often when you would rather not. His writing is lucid, simple, almost reportorial. This calm, unemphatic style magnifies the strange, hallucinatory effect of the more violent and macabre episodes and is slightly overwhelming when Mr. Fain deals with the facts of life, or, anyhow, a certain kind of life." H. P. Porter

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 15 '54 400w

"Mr. Fain's first novel is not really successful, but it is interesting and sometimes quite funny."

New Yorker 30:67 Jl 31 '54 200w

"A first novel, not quite brilliant but genuinely clever. . . . If you can take in your stride a few paprika dashes of pretty broad sophistication you will find it highly entertaining and frequently wise." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 16 '54 550w

FAIN, WILLIAM—Continued

"This novel of sharp contrasts and straight-faced satire is far more plausible and amusing than its surface plot would suggest. Where everything is incongruous, Mr. Fain seems to suggest, nothing is so very unreasonable, the most outrageous oddities are in fact prosaic." Kenneth Fearing

+ Sat R 37:58 S 11 '54 400w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 5 '54 190w

FAINSOD, MERLE. How Russia is ruled. 575p

$7.50; text ed $5.75 Harvard univ. press

354.47 Russia—Politics and government.
Communist party (Russia) 53-6029

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This study, solid and highly competent, should take its place, if it has not already done so, as a leading work in its field." R. H. Fisher

+ Am Hist R 60:108 O '54 360w

"This volume will be a lasting contribution, even if one or another chapter becomes progressively obsolete because of changes in the structure of the Soviet Union." W. W. Kulski

+ Am Pol Sci R 48:541 Je '54 600w

"Professor Fainsod's book is one of the most important studies on the Soviet Union ever published in the United States. It must be admired for its wealth of material and for its balanced judgments." Waldemar Gurian

+ Ann Am Acad 292:201 Mr '54 350w

Booklist 50:232 F 15 '54

"Well-planned study."

+ Current Hist 26:125 F '54 80w

+ Foreign Affairs 32:340 Ja '54 40w

"One of the author's sources has been the testimony of Soviet subjects who have left the Soviet Union, both during and since the war. If carefully used, this source can and does throw valuable light on the practical operation of the system, its impact on the individual, and the nature of discontents. So many writers on Soviet affairs either accept refugees' statements at their face value or discount them all as the product of prejudice. It requires knowledge, patience, and courage to evaluate their testimony. This rare combination of qualities Mr. Fainsod possesses, and this adds greatly to the value of his book." Hugh Seton-Watson

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 30 '54 500w

"A thoughtful and well-documented study of the 'anatomy of Soviet totalitarianism,' this volume towers above the scores of similar books published in recent years. Among the many virtues of this monumental work are its dispassionate approach and the great amount of fresh material its author has been able to uncover in Soviet publications and in interviews with refugees from the Soviet Union."

+ Nation 178:116 F 6 '54 280w

"There has long been a need for a comprehensive study of the development, structure and domestic impact of Communist rule in Russia. In How Russia Is Ruled, Professor Merle Fainsod of Harvard University's Russian Research Center comes about as close to meeting this need as Soviet secretiveness permits. . . In view of the thoroughness with which he has treated incentives and repression as levers of power, it is the more regrettable that he has given only scant attention to the coordinate matters of indoctrination and ideology. . . It is unfortunate, too, that the organization of the book entails a certain amount of repetition and back-tracking. . . But perhaps there is no way to avoid a sense of repetition in the parts of such a book. By comparison with its value as a contribution to scholarship, considerations of this kind become minor." Leo Grulio

+ — Pol Sci Q 69:135 Mr '54 850w

Reviewed by Courtenay Hemenway
Social Educ 18:329 N '54 600w

Reviewed by David Footman
+ Spec p334 Mr 19 '54 280w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:90 Mr '54 290w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian
Yale R n s 43:462 spring '54 220w

FAIR, ELIZABETH. All one summer [Eng title: Landscape in sunlight]. 281p $3.50 Funk

53-10795

Light novel of life in an English village near the sea. Among the chief characters are the vicar, his managing wife, and their pretty daughter Cassandra. The vicar's wife has two chief ambitions: to run the annual Fete, and to get Cassandra married, but Cassie manages quite well for herself.

Booklist 50:145 D 1 '53

"A neatly fabricated novel cut out of light cloth makes a small tapestry of English village life."

+ Kirkus 21:459 Jl 15 '53 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 O 25 '53 140w

"Miss Fair has a fluent but not gossipy manner, and her book should please anyone with an absorbing interest in village affairs."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p361 Je 1 '53 40w

FAIR, ELIZABETH. Bramton Wick. 244p $3.50 Funk

54-6355

A comedy of manners played out in a small English community. Among the characters, many and varied, are the two Cole sisters, whose love affairs provide the central theme of the book.

Booklist 50:321 Ap 15 '54

"This is English pastorate at its palest pastel."

— Kirkus 22:82 F 1 '54 120w

"Miss Fair's second novel is light English social comedy in the same pattern as her earlier 'All One Summer.' But she has more nearly hit her stride in this new novel. Her writing is more sure, her characterizations more fully developed, and she has abandoned the attempt to crowd the story with eccentrics for the sake of incidental humor."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 25 '54 290w

"All in all, Miss Fair has her work cut out. But she is an expert decoder of signals, with a fine sense of selection and a nice ear for ironic overtones. She has written a pleasant comedy of English rural manners, shrewd and witty and sub-acid and up-to-the-minute with the news of what is going on inside the Bramton Wick stockade." Roger Pippett

+ N Y Times p24 My 1 '54 600w

FAIR, ELIZABETH. Julia comes home [Eng title: The native heath]. 259p $3.50 Funk

54-9732

Julia Dunstan, an English widow, inherits Belmont House in northern England, and goes there to enjoy village life. With her she takes a cousin who has had a "hard life;" her husband's nephew; and an elderly complaining nurse. Julia's effort to arrange her own living and take a hand at playing the "lady of the manor" turns out well for all of them.

Booklist 51:132 N 15 '54

"Placid pastorate."

Kirkus 22:502 Ag 1 '54 180w

"Written with gentle humor and kindly understanding, this book will be a favorite among Trollope, Mitford, and Thirkell fans. Recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 79:2329 D 1 '54 120w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p6 Jl 6 '54 20w

"Miss Fair's witty and well-rendered dialogue carries the story past any sketchiness of plot or thinness of matter to a satisfactory conclusion, with the outcome left, as it often should be, to the reader's imagination. Most readers will soon be willing collaborators. This 'Julia Comes Home' is not a book to split the sides, but it does what Johnson said Garrick had power to do, and praised him for doing—it makes its gentle contribution to 'the public stock of harmless pleasure,' and for that we owe Miss Fair our gratitude." Evelyn Eaton

+ N Y Times p49 N 7 '54 280w

"Both intelligent and entertaining." Kingsley Amis

+ Spec p126 J1 23 '54 200w

"A witty, friendly novel." S. M. Neal

+ Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '54 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p437 J1 9 '54 90w

FAIR, GORDON MASKEW, and GEYER, JOHN CHARLES. Water supply and waste-water disposal; with a chapter on water chemistry, by John Carrell Morris. 973p $15 Wiley

628 Water supply engineering. Sewage disposal 54-9504

"Sets forth important advances which reduce water sanitation to an orderly process of calculation. A feature of the book is a special chapter on water chemistry by John Carrell Morris of Harvard University." Chem & Eng N

Chem & Eng N 32:3788 S 20 '54 20w

"Graduate engineers will find the book useful as a reference on topics off the beaten path." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:2217 N 15 '54 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:76 S '54

FAIRBANK, JOHN KING. Trade and diplomacy on the China coast; the opening of the treaty ports, 1842-1854. 2v 489:88p maps ea $7.50 Harvard univ. press

382 China—Commerce. China—Foreign relations. Harbors—China 52-12260

"The product of many years' research in original Chinese documents which were preserved by the Manchu Dynasty in Peking, as well as in the day by day records of the early consuls, this is a history of the opening of the treaty ports (1842-1854) that brought China into the modern family of nations. It is a story of Western profit-seeking and of the varied Chinese efforts to defend themselves from it, an account of the setting up of a treaty system which dominated China for many decades." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Technical matters, notes, bibliography, and glossary, are contained in volume two.

"Like most of Fairbank's scholarly works, this study and its separate volume of notes and data are solid additions to the edifice of Western historical scholarship on China. Over the past twenty years the author has worked in Chinese, Japanese, and Western sources to piece together one of the most intricate puzzles in modern history." D. F. Lach

+ Am Hist R 60:110 O '54 750w

Am Pol Sci R 48:588 Je '54 100w

"An excellent account. . . The general reader, if he can be induced to look into a work that seems highly specialized, will be rewarded by a beautifully drawn picture of the early negotiator for the Manchu Court, Chi Ying, whose effort was to bring the British barbarian under civilized control by a real sugar plum or two (p. 105) but chiefly by the sugar plums of trade." C. F. Remer

+ Ann Am Acad 294:158 J1 '54 700w

Canadian Forum 34:187 N '54 360w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 7 '54 70w

FAIRBROTHER, NAN. An English year [Eng title: Children in the house]. 243p $3.75 Knopf B or 92 53-9462

"A mother of two boys emerging from infancy runs the English farm while father is at war. Between coping with childhood temperaments and farm problems, the author muses at length about the arts, particularly about painting and music, to relieve ennui." Library J

Booklist 50:396 Je 15 '54

Bookmark 13:234 J1 '54 40w

Reviewed by Eleanor Holliday

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 26 '54 60w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '54 380w

Kirkus 22:300 My 1 '54 110w

"Only possible flaw is so little sympathetic description of nature setting; this reviewer expected at least a touch of Claire Leighton from the title and sectional headings (seasons). On second thought, Mrs. F. shows virtuosity in her selection, for she is an urbanite in the country and writes of what she knows. Highly recommended." Karl Brown

+ Library J 79:1049 Je 1 '54 160w

New Statesman & Nation 47:418 Mr 27 '54 360w

"Miss Fairbrother has the English gift of writing about the English countryside; and yet, she tells us, she grew up almost as a slum child in a northern manufacturing town, and wonders if her own sons will have a childhood as exciting as hers. . . Miss Fairbrother's is the perfect winter book, to be given away in great quantities at Christmas as long as one copy is kept not far from the bedside-table for reading when the summer seems despaired of." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 6 '54 410w

"Miss Fairbrother can be rather painfully bright, as when she exclaims of Renoir's 'Parapluies,' 'I have fallen completely in love with the young girl in the middle,' but in her steadier moments she is a most engaging companion, and sometimes even an arresting one. On the whole, the book is a very agreeable diversion."

+ New Yorker 30:101 Je 19 '54 180w

"One of those leisurely English personal accounts that can fairly be set beside such classics as Naturalist Gilbert White's The Natural History of Selborne and Novelist George Gissing's The Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft. Nan Fairbrother does not so much write as compose, in model sentences and paragraphs. She describes the natural world about her in fresh images."

+ Time 63:114 Je 7 '54 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p364 Je 4 '54 420w

FAIRCHILD, BYRON. Messrs William Pepperrell: merchants at Piscataqua. (American historical association. Publication) 223p il $3.50 Cornell univ. press

923.873 Pepperrell family. New England—Commerce 54-8449

A history of the Pepperrell family in New England, from the arrival of the first William Pepperrell from Devon, circa 1675, to 1775 when his great-grandson closed his Boston house and went "home" to Nova Scotia. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by E. S. Morgan

Am Hist R 60:118 O '54 440w

"Mr. Fairchild's interesting book is more than family or social history. By his own plan, it is essentially a 'business history.' It is to this aspect of the rise of the Pepperrells that he has devoted the most effort and it is here that he dug up the most new material. But it is here that he must be commended for his daring, if not complimented on his success. For he has attempted to write business history of a rather unusual sort—a 'show room' sort of business history based on no ledgers, journals or consecutive records of any sort. . . However, different readers look for different things in a book. Those not especially interested in the structural or institutional growth of the New England colonial economy will yet find in Mr. Fairchild's scholarly, if impressionistic, study of the rise of the Pepperrells a fascinating sample of New England family and social history." J. M. Price

+ New Eng Q 27:269 Je '54 1050w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 14 '54 40w

FAIRCHILD, BYRON—Continued

"The interest of 'Messrs. William Pepperrell: Merchant at Piscataqua' as a study of pioneering by which maritime enterprise became, in only two generations, the means to substantial social and material betterment is obvious. Mr. Fairchild has both delved widely and explained clearly; his book is—as befits a publication of the American Historical Association—an example of sound and well documented scholarship." W. M. Whitehill

+ N Y Times p6 J1 25 '54 700w

FANCHIOTTI, MARGHERITA. Bow in the cloud; il. by Moyra Leatham. 226p $2.75 Oxford

54-2192

"A child's eye view of the great Flood and life aboard the Ark is what Miss Fanchiotti has attempted here. . . Taking as her framework the brief biblical account, she fills in the human interest gaps: What did people say about Noah while he was building the Ark? How did the animals behave? What stages of hope and despair did the passengers pass through while the endless waters swirled?" N Y Times

Booklist 50:456 J1 15 '54

"The writing is superb. One of the year's most distinguished books." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 J1 25 '54 140w

"It is told matter-of-factly and with humor, yet always reverently. An original and unusually good piece of writing with bookmaking and illustrations to match." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 30:248 Ag '54 130w

Kirkus 22:338 Je 1 '54 120w

"Recommended." L. E. Cathon
+ Library J 79:1324 J1 '54 80w

"Exciting, beautiful, surprising, this rare book lifts the spirits of one watching for writing of distinction, and for original subject matter. . . The many pictures, with their humor, strength, action, will also prove alluring. It is a final touch of delight to us, to find such a book dedicated to Helen Waddell." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 6 '54 400w

"Miss Fanchiotti tells the story seriously. She does not strive for the archness that degenerates into silliness and triviality. The tale steadily mounts to a climax of joy and affirmation as the waters recede and traces of land reappear." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p20 J1 11 '54 160w

"The whole has a candor and an innocence appropriate to that time when the world was young. For children in the nine-to-thirteen-year age group." A. O. Murphy

+ Sat R 37:34 Ag 21 '54 110w

FARALLA, DANA. Black Renegade. 224p $3 Lippincott

Horses—Legends and stories 54-6103

Story of a boy and a renegade horse living in Georgia at the turn of the century. The characters are the same as those in The Magnificent Barb (Book Review Digest 1947) but the two are separate stories. For adolescents.

Booklist 50:344 My 1 '54

"'Black Renegade' is a stallion. Now it requires courage to mount another child on still another ferocious steed—courage and fresh gifts. Savingly, Dana Faralla has both, one rejoices to say, and has followed her success with 'The Magnificent Barb' by another lyric equine tale." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 13 '54 250w

"Fans of Walter Farley's Black Stallion series will enjoy it; the romance between Kevin's older sister and the Black's owner gives an added appeal for girls." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 30:260 Ag '54 80w

Kirkus 22:129 F 15 '54 130w

"Recommended for adolescents." E. H. Speer
+ Library J 79:993 My 15 '54 80w
Wis Lib Bul 50:218 O '54

FARBER, EDUARD. Nobel prize winners in chemistry, 1901-1950. 219p il $5 Abelard-Schuman

925.4 Chemists 53-10371

Lists chronologically the fifty-three Nobel prize winners in chemistry from 1901 to 1950, giving for each a biographical sketch, the recipient's description of his prize-work, and an evaluation by the author. Portraits. Index.

Booklist 50:312 Ap 15 '54

Chem & Eng N 32:1267 Mr 29 '54 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 78:1928 N 1 '53 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 39:58 J1 '54

FARJEON, ELEANOR. Silver curlew; il. by Ernest H. Shepard. 192p $2.75 Viking

54-9316

A retelling of the old English folk tale Tom Tit Tot. This version is about a miller's family and the King of Norfolk who married one of the miller's daughters. For ages 8 to 11.

Booklist 50:345 My 1 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 5 '54 90w

+ Horn Bk 30:174 Je '54 100w

"If you're looking for one, here's a real fairy tale with magic spells, animal spirits, and a flowing turn of phrase that recreates its seaswept, moon-swept setting. . . Sure fire for reading aloud too."

+ Kirkus 22:114 F 15 '54 130w

"Highly imaginative fairy tale based on the old English story of Tom-Tit-Tot. . . Recommended for ages 8-11." E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 79:1064 Je 1 '54 90w

"Miss Farjeon does not waste words. There are moments of beauty and excitement and sadness in this book, and moments when (in the climax of preparations for the royal christening) it is uproariously funny, but it is always beautifully balanced and elegantly written; and it never flags. Can one ask more of any book?" Pamela Brisbane

+ Manchester Guardian p8 J1 14 '53 120w

"Here is timeless old England, with the delightful queer old words for its food, its flowers, its palace; its creatures, given in such lists and such talk as only this writer can command. . . Mr. Shepard's multitude of pictures—from the elegant, colorful procession on the jacket to the tiniest sketch of the silly king put to stand in the corner by his old Nannie—are woven into the story with his familiar skill and humor." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 16 '54 290w

"Delicately beautiful descriptions and short lyric poems are combined with passages of sheer nonsense and spontaneous fun. Ernest Shepard's illustrations mirror perfectly Miss Farjeon's every mood. A distinguished book for the imaginative child." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 29 '54 180w

"An expertly told and illustrated full-length fairy tale, whose blend of earthy gaiety and poetic mystery should delight girls of from nine to eleven." K. T. Kinkad

+ New Yorker 30:210 N 27 '54 30w

"Not only will middle-age girls find this book a delight to read themselves but the rhythmic cadences of the prose are just as delightful for reading aloud." A. B.

+ Sat R 37:63 My 15 '54 180w

Wis Lib Bul 50:216 O '54

FARLEY, WALTER. Black Stallion's sulky colt; il. by Harold Eldridge. 248p $2 Random house

Horses—Legends and stories 54-7011

A sequel to The Blood Bay Colt (Book Review Digest 1950). It tells of Alec Ramsay's courageous struggle to train Bonfire, a problem colt, son of the Black Stallion. He was successful when Bonfire, Alec driving, won the Hambletonian. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 51:68 O 1 '54

Bookmark 14:14 O '54 10w

"Walter Farley writes with a warm understanding of horses and the men who train and ride them. He deserves his top-favorite position with horse story readers between the ages of 10 and 16." G. E. D.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 14 '54 120w

Kirkus 22:394 J1 1 '54 120w

"Recommended as an additional good horse story for ages 10-15." Katharine Maxon

+ Library J 79:2500 D 15 '54 90w

"The author's ninth book since 1941 offers his usual combination of human and horse emotion. It offers the inside view and the information that will make more interesting any reader's next look at the flying sulkies, whether at a country fair, on TV, or at that great race for the biggest purse of all." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p8 O 17 '54 150w

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger

N Y Times p44 O 24 '54 150w

FARNSWORTH, MRS FRANCES JOYCE (GREENWOOD). Winged moccasins; the story of Sacajawea; il. by Lorence F. Bjorklund. 189p $2.75 Messner

Sacajawea—Juvenile literature 54-6765

"After a century of comparative obscurity, Sacajawea, the Shoshone Indian girl who served as guide and interpreter to Lewis and Clark, is the subject of intensive historical interest. This story of her life, based on facts established by two independent investigations, gives an account of her famous journeys to the Pacific and her later years." N Y Times

Booklist 50:363 My 15 '54

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 D '54

"A book beautifully and sympathetically written. . . Highly recommended." E. M. Malone

+ Library J 79:993 My 15 '54 80w

Kirkus 22:122 F 15 '54 150w

"The author has portrayed a great personality whose restless urge to see beyond the hill-tops made her a true pioneer. An appealing biography for older girls." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p28 My 16 '54 150w

Wis Lib Bul 50:218 O '54

FARRELL, CLIFF. Follow the new grass. 244p $2.75 Random house

54-5382

Western story.

"A top notch Wyoming western." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 11 '54 20w

Kirkus 22:84 F 1 '54 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 14 '54 30w

"Good first novel." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p29 Je 6 '54 30w

FARRINGTON, SELWYN KIP. Fishing the Pacific, offshore and on; il. by Lynn Bogue Hunt. 297p $10 Coward-McCann

799.1 Fishing—Pacific ocean 53-12349

"Farrington, foremost authority on sea-fishing, covers the Pacific Coast from British Columbia to Chile, including New Zealand, Australia and the Philippines. He has opened up new big-game fishing grounds, and brings up to date material on tactics, places, boats, guides and equipment. Includes surf fishing. Profusely illustrated." Library J

Booklist 50:235 F 15 '54

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:68 Ja 1 '54 60w

"Unfortunately, few of America's twenty million anglers will ever get a chance to try those waters. Mr. Farrington gives us the next best thing: details of some of the biggest battles plus ninety-six pages of photographs—many of them extraordinary—to show the skeptics." Nathan Aleskovsky

+ N Y Times p16 F 7 '54 170w

"Next to Ernest Hemingway, Farrington is perhaps the world's best known deep sea fisherman. So this book is the work of an expert." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 13 '53 150w

FARROW, JOHN. Story of Thomas More. 242p il $3.50 Sheed

B or 92 More, Sir Thomas, Saint 54-11147

In this life of Sir Thomas More the author makes no pretense of writing a biography, but attempts only "to tell a story in general terms of a man and his friends and his enemies, his time and circumstance." Selective bibliography. No index.

"Characteristically armed with both a jest and a prayer. The whole rich story is effectively told here in a welcome addition to the increasing library of books about a most attractive saint." R. M. Ames

+ Cath World 180:236 D '54 250w

"The book is written in a sprightly, engaging, and vivid style and is an immense joy to read. It is the story of a person of extraordinary charm, whose learning was matched by his holiness. It is a story of tenderness and violence and tragedy and, above all, a story of courage and unfaltering loyalty to conscience, and will prove a delight to the general reader as well as to the historian." J. A. O'Brien

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 28 '54 230w

"When dealing with such an interesting historical personage as Sir Thomas More even an indifferently written book such as this makes good reading. . . A good picture of the unusual human qualities of the man is drawn. Not all will agree with the author's estimate of More's political career."

+ — Kirkus 22:704 O 1 '54 210w

"Going back to original sources, the author has been particularly successful in presenting a fresh picture of the main events of the time and of the familiar figures that dominated it. . . Recommended for the general as well as the Catholic reader." B. M. Libaire

+ Library J 79:1584 S 15 '54 200w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p22 D 5 '54 10w

FATIO, LOUISE (MRS ROGER ANTOINE DUVOISIN). Happy lion; pictures by Roger Duvoisin. (Whittlesey House bk) [28p] $1.95 McGraw

54-6732

Picture story book about a happy lion in a French zoo, and what happened when the lion took a walk thru the village. For ages four to eight.

Booklist 51:21 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 S 12 '54 100w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '54 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p38 D '54

"A witty story and some irresistible pictures."

+ Commonweal 61:205 N 19 '54 20w

FATIO, LOUISE—Continued

Horn Bk 30:326 O '54 80w

Kirkus 22:481 Ag 1 '54 60w

"Roger Duvoisin's illustrations and a happy little parable of a story make this an outstanding picture book." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 79:1659 S 15 '54 110w

"In a gay, simple story, appealing to ages four to seven for a look-and-listen book, children will meet a most characterful lion, and will laugh at the changes in his expression, and the humorous doings in the town." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 5 '54 220w

"A lion on the lam is a fine inspiration to youthful dreams of glory, especially if it is as amiable a creature as the happy lion of this picture book." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 22 '54 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinead

New Yorker 30:202 N 27 '54 30w

"The illustrations, broad in scope and large in perspective, have delightful detail and a quality of humor as ingratiating as that of the story." Elizabeth Nesbitt

+ Sat R 37:66 N 13 '54 130w

FAULKNER, GEORGE H. Gentlemen and rebels; with il. by Harve Stein. 223p $3 Little 54-8312

Nine sketches emphasizing important moments in the lives of some of the leaders of the American Revolution. Among them are John and Samuel Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Nathanael Greene, and Lafayette. For ages twelve and older. The stories are rewritten from material used in plays for radio and TV for The Cavalcade of America.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 194:97 D '54 40w

"The scenes are lively, colorful, and impressionistic, relying heavily on imagined dialog, quick dramatic shifts, and author asides to the reader. Sometimes trickily theatrical, sometimes realistically moving, the kaleidoscopic vignettes show flickering but often revealing glimpses of Revolutionary heroes in the making." V. I.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p44 N 14 '54 200w

"Mr. Faulkner has contrived an admirable variety of presentation. . . His prose is rich in quotation and allusion. He believes that history should be, among other things, readable, and he has made 'Gentlemen and Rebels' eminently that. I doubt that the browsing junior reader will find a more repaying book amid this season's offerings." T. M. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 11 '54 200w

Kirkus 22:396 J1 1 '54 70w

"Should appeal to readers in upper high school grades." Ann Nelson

+ Library J 79:2259 N 15 '54 30w

"Junior high classes could easily make their own plays from this book, checking further in Revolutionary material, fact and fiction, for costumes and background." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2 p8 N 14 '54 400w

FAULKNER, HAROLD UNDERWOOD. Visual history of the United States; il. by Graphics institute. 199p col maps $5 Abelard-Schuman 973.084 U.S.—History—Pictorial works 53-10368

"Quarto in which simple text is adapted to two-color pictographs, statistical charts and maps of varied effectiveness made by the Graphics Institute Art staff. Sources, index." Bookmark

Booklist 50:295 Ap 1 '54

Bookmark 13:128 Mr '54 50w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 18 '54 40w

"Recommended for supplementary reading for high school social studies classes." E. H. Speer

+ Library J 79:789 Ap 15 '54 80w

"As a whole the book is an interesting and worth-while experiment if not a fully successful one."

+ Nation 178:488 Je 5 '54 210w

"I must admit that my initial reaction to this volume was a hostile one, if only because complete reliance on visualization certainly tends to oversimplify what is after all very complex material. Let us acknowledge, however, that there is some value in the format, especially as a reference tool: the handy statistics are right there under your eyes—no need to fumble through indexes and appendices. Such a volume should not be used as a substitute for a detailed written text by an historian of the first rank, but I am sure it was not intended to be. The lazy, the hurried, and the harried, all those people who barely have time to glance at a chart but wish to seem well-informed, will also find this book essential." W. M.

Sat R 37:48 Ap 17 '54 230w

Wis Lib Bul 50:71 Mr '54

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. A fable. 437p $4.75 Random house 54-6651

"Forsaking Yoknapatawpha County, Mississippi, and the whole South, which has been the scene of all his other novels, Faulkner takes us to the Western battlefield in the spring of 1918. Forsaking the novelist's world of probable actions and plausible characters, he imagines that the Passion of Christ is re-enacted by a corporal in the French army determined to redeem the world from evil. War is evil, and the corporal tries to stop the war." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The novel as a whole seems to me spurious and unreal—a heroically ambitious failure." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:79 S '54 900w

Booklist 51:14 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:8 O '54 20w

"The intentions of the artist (particularly his principal one of eternalizing time on a single plane) have a grandeur to them; and the hints of his original conception as they appear fitfully here attest to its original majesty. But for most readers—and this book will probably be the most unread best-seller of 1954—the author's intention alone will clearly not be enough." Riley Hughes

Cath World 180:150 N '54 320w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 1 '54 650w

"This fable has some magnificent descriptions, particularly of the pour and flow of crowds, descriptions in which Faulkner's virtuosity with the adjective results in such thoughtful phrases as 'the invincible, oblivious tomorrow.' It has oblique humor, skillful symbolism, tragic irony. But, in the opinion of this reviewer, it does not rank with Faulkner's best work, such masterpieces as 'As I Lay Dying,' 'The Sound and the Fury,' and 'The Bear.' Here the homiletics get in the way of the drama; the game of the symbolism becomes too much an end in itself." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 5 '54 1150w

"There is little doubt that it will be widely read for a year or two, but I cannot believe that it will weigh any heavier in Faulkner's account with Posterity than Mark Twain's book on Joan of Arc weighs in his." Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 60:443 Ag 6 '54 1450w

"Creatively, it is an extraordinary achievement with its underlying commentary on an unready world. Practically, it is difficult reading, and often obscure."

Kirkus 22:402 J1 1 '54 150w

"Highly recommended." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 79:1400 Ag '54 140w

"This remarkable story centers on the origin, development, and aftermath of the mutiny of a French regiment in the trenches one Monday night in May, 1918. Its intellectual and to some extent its emotional force arises from the fact that Faulkner has chosen to project his story through a modern and ironic version of the ministry, the betrayal, the passion, the death, and the resurrection of Jesus Christ." Carlos Baker

+ Nation 179:115 Ag 7 '54 2100w

Reviewed by L. A. Fiedler

New Repub 130:18 Ag 23 '54 2000w

"Except for the Yoknapatawpha cycle as a whole—now consisting of a dozen books—'A Fable' is Faulkner's most ambitious work. It contains some of the most powerful scenes he has ever conceived. . . . There is something murky in Faulkner's theology, as at times in his style, and there is something confused in the lesson of the book. . . . I have set down my reservations, thinking of Faulkner's talent, his daring, and his great aims in this book. Perhaps I expected too much of it, though it offers a great deal. Its many readers will wonder and argue about it for a long time to come." Malcolm Cowley

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 1 '54 1600w

"Whatever its 'sources,' if such these be, Faulkner has stamped 'A Fable' as his own. His method of delayed revelation is present in extreme form, and will make difficult reading for some and exciting reading for others. His style, at times very demanding of the reader, rises often to magnificence. His handling of the novel's complex ideas is of necessity not simple and in many passages requires especially close attention. But in spite of difficulties which will seem formidable to the hammock reader, 'A Fable' is rewarding. It is one of the important works of our major novelist." Carvel Collins

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 1 '54 2250w

"'A Fable' is a bad small novel, absurdly distended in scale. Its failure, unlike the failure of a major work, is therefore neither very interesting in itself nor very important, except for the sorry fact that a man of genius has wasted so much pell-mell vitality on it." Brendan Gill

— New Yorker 30:78 Ag 28 '54 900w

Reviewed by Lewis Vogler

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 8 '54 900w

"Some of these episodes of war are excellent. One of Faulkner's gifts has always been that of narrative power. Even when his stories are difficult to follow, they are interesting to read, and the new novel uses his familiar techniques. . . . It is on the last level [that of religious symbolism and mysticism] that the novel fails. Its failure, it seems to me, throws a significant light not only on Faulkner's earlier career but on that whole famous 'lost generation' of American writers to which his youth and apprenticeship belonged." Maxwell Geismar

+ — Sat R 37:11 Jl 31 '54 700w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 550w

"The Christ-corporal dies, the Passion Week is played out. Faulkner has paralleled the greatest story in man's experience, but he has failed to use it to philosophical or dramatic advantage. His labyrinthine asides (including a fine story about a great horse and the devout thieves who raced it) will incline even the most intense Faulkner fan to wonder if the distinguished Mississippian hasn't mistaken the bayous of living for the river of life. Above all, Faulkner has failed to differentiate between a pointless war and a needful one. The general makes his final point, and when he does, he takes man—and Faulkner—right back to where A Fable started: ' . . . Man and his folly . . . will prevail.'"

Time 64:76 Ag 2 '54 950w

Wis Lib Bul 50:210 O '54

"In spite of considerable emphasis on suffering, disaster, and destruction, A Fable is a bland book, its ironies seldom powerful and its reassurances too frequent." Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 44:viii autumn '54 1800w

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. Reader; selections from [his] works. 682p $5 Random house

54-5959

An anthology composed of one complete novel: The Sound and the Fury; three novellas: Go Down, Moses; The Wild Palms; and The Hamlet; nine stories; and episodes from Light in August, and Requiem for a Nun.

Booklist 50:358 My 15 '54

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 18 '54 320w

Kirkus 22:79 F 1 '54 150w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Jl 11 '54 370w

"A very big and very readable collection of [Faulkner's] work. . . . To read him again is an experience something like shock, a shock of renewal. It is to gain the pleasure of knowing that his work stands, strong, firm and, as he would say, enduring." Irving Howe

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 4 '54 1750w

"An estimable anthological introduction to Yoknapatawpha County. The selections [were] assembled by an unidentified but canny hand."

+ New Yorker 30:139 Ap 17 '54 80w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Sat R 37:11 Jl 31 '54 850w

FAVIELL, FRANCES. Dancing bear; Berlin de profundis. 246p $3.50 Norton

54-12568

A report, in fiction form, of the life in Berlin during the years 1946 to 1949. The author is an artist and the wife of a British official stationed in Berlin. In particular she tells of her friendship with one German family, the Altmanns.

Booklist 51:103 N 1 '54

"It is a dramatic story, written with the conviction of one who knows from personal experience how people in Berlin have fared and of the spiritual and physical problems which they have had to face. Mrs Faviell is to be complimented especially in one respect. She has left her readers free to form their own impressions of the implications of what has happened." T. N. Brewis

+ Canadian Forum 34:167 O '54 210w

"Berlin's emergence from chaos provides the backdrop of Mrs. Faviell's story, told with the historian's rigorous objectivity and the magic touch of a great writer. She has painted the most vivid panorama of those fantastic years in which politics built a wall between misery and abundance and when it took the resourcefulness of the Berliners and the human feeling of the Americans and British to pierce or to scale the barrier." El. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 N 4 '54 1100w

Kirkus 22:472 Jl 15 '54 250w

"Full of the sadness, squalor, and unquenchable vitality which have distinguished Berlin's post-war struggle for existence." T. C. F. P.

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 1 '54 120w

"Beautiful and haunting book. . . . There are many fascinating portraits of German characters in this book. . . . It is the story of the Altmann family which constitutes the core of the book, and Miss Faviell tells that story with the artistry of a good novelist. Indeed in its structure, the development of characters, the march of tragedy and the suspense, 'The Dancing Bear' reads like a novel." W. L. Shirer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 26 '54 850w

Reviewed by Frances Keene

N Y Times p3 N 14 '54 200w

New Yorker 30:167 O 16 '54 130w

FAVIELL, FRANCES—Continued

"Miss Faviell's painter's eye catches the significant detail every time, and her notable talent for writing gets the whole story down on paper wonderfully well. The result is a horrifying narrative, but a profoundly moving one. Best of all, though she never forgets—and does not let the reader forget—that German megalomania brought on the whole disaster, and may again if the rest of the world does not take care, she is willing as well to admire wholeheartedly the characteristics of greatness that she also finds in the German nation." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 O 4 '54 600w

Time 64:106 O 4 '54 480w

"Democrats everywhere, whether in the old or in the new world, ought to be grateful to the author for having recorded the daily life and the sturdy, matter-of-fact endurance of the men, women, and children of Berlin. It is an heroic chapter of contemporary history. She sees it all personally; and if, for example, it is irritating when she talks about 'my refugees'—meaning the unfortunate Germans whom she succoured and supported—this is a failing which can be well understood in the abnormal circumstances of those tragic years."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Je 18 '54 450w

FEARING, KENNETH. Generous heart. 256p $3 Harcourt

54-5981

Story of the members of a fund raising masquerading as philanthropists under the title The Generous Heart. organization known as Campaign Consultants, who become involved with a gang of crooks

"Here again are all the best Fearing ingredients: The skillfully economical construction of plot, the gradual awakening of suspicion between friends and lovers, the shift in narrator from chapter to chapter, the trick that Fearing may have learned from William Faulkner and that he has so effectively domesticated for his own purposes." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 11 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:81 F 1 '54 210w

"Plot extravagant, complicated, absurd. Might interest those who like incredible whodunits. Otherwise not recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 79:622 Ap 1 '54 80w

Nation 178:448 My 22 '54 200w

"The largest of the ethical problems which Mr. Fearing seems to suggest gets itself lost in the shuffle of lethal melodramatics. But there's nothing at all wrong with the drive of the narrative nor with the nasty little pockets of uncertainty with which he has equipped it. A first-rate contemporary thriller." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 11 '54 200w

"It is interesting to see the way Mr. Fearing, author of The Big Clock, always seems to be intent on writing a straight suspense story, a pure entertainment, only to find a certain moral force creeping in, willy-nilly. The Generous Heart is his most unpleasant, even at times flesh-crawling, story. . . . It ends a little trickily and patly, mystery fashion, and it contains one or two romantic love sequences that clash seriously with its dominant mood of horror. Yet for all this oddly ill-assorted horror and hummer, it is finally a bitter indictment of hypocrisy." John Brooks

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 11 '54 600w

"Mr. Fearing, who is also a well-known poet, writes with an enthusiasm that sometimes verges on abandon, but neither the people nor the incidents in this item are apt to stir you very deeply."

New Yorker 30:151 Ap 10 '54 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 23 '54 60w

"The world of 'organized moaning and licensed panhandling' is a reasonably fresh area for the satirical skulduggeries of which he is capable. But the maniacs and morons here assembled (the beginning is unexplained, the middle is unbelievable, the ending is unendurable) are not deserving of his time—or yours." Charles Lee

— + Sat H 37:35 Ap 17 '54 200w

FECHER, CHARLES A. Philosophy of Jacques Maritain. 361p $5 Newman press

194 Maritain, Jacques

53-10462

"This is an exposition, by a non-philosopher for non-philosophers, of the philosophy of Maritain. . . . The book is divided into three parts: 'The Man', 'The Philosopher', 'Conclusion'. The first part covers again some of the data contained in Mme. Maritain's books of memoirs. The second part, which is the body of the book, surveys in twenty-two chapters the teaching of Maritain on the philosophy of nature, logic, metaphysics with its various subdivisions, ethics, politics and economics, philosophy of society, of history, of culture, esthetics and the specifically religious dimension of Maritain's thought. The final part assesses Maritain's relations to Thomism." (Commonweal) Bibliographical note. Index.

"The perfect Maritain critique could be written by a professional philosopher who was also a popular stylist. Until that golden day dawns, we can be happy that Mr. Fecher has given us an interesting, competent and thoroughly admirable précis of Maritain's life and writings." J. B. Sheerin

+ Cath World 179:238 Je '54 280w

"It is not pleasant to criticize this substantial study. . . . There are three areas in which I object to Mr. Fecher's presentation. First, his treatment of Maritain is mechanical. . . . Second, Mr. Fecher has located wrongly the central significance of Maritain. . . . Third, Mr. Fecher has represented M. Maritain's changed attitude to non-Thomists, such as Bergson, as due to the mellowing which is alleged to come with advancing years. This is intolerable." J. V. Mullaney

+ Commonweal 59:534 F 26 '54 1350w

"Charles Fecher introduces the exposition of Maritain's philosophy with a brief survey of his life and intellectual history. These chapters are by far the most successful in the book. . . . Since Maritain is one of the most influential Catholic intellectuals of our day the major part of the volume is devoted to his thought. The exposition suffers from an uncritical attitude toward the Thomist tradition and the Aristotelianism which Thomas Aquinas expounded and sought to complete from the standpoint of the Christian faith." Reinhold Niebuhr

N Y Times p21 Ja 17 '54 650w

U S Quarterly Bk 10:200 Je '54 240w

FEI, HSIAO-T'UNG. China's gentry; essays in rural-urban relations; rev. and ed. by Margaret (Park) Redfield; with six life-histories of Chinese gentry families collected by Yung-teh Chow and an introd. by Robert Redfield. 289p il $5.75 Univ. of Chicago press

301.44 [323.3] China—Social conditions. Sociology, Rural 53-11440

Seven essays on the structure of Chinese society. In his introduction Robert Redfield says: "This book is made from articles contributed by Fei to Chinese newspapers in 1947 and 1948. During that autumn of 1948 he dictated to my wife a rough translation of these articles, stopping as he did so to talk over with her the substance of the dictation and in part rewriting and enlarging the text in the course of these discussions. . . . This book is published without any participation from him in its production since the days when he dictated its substance to my wife." Appended are six case histories from a study of the gentry by Yung-teh Chow. Index.

"This is interesting reading. It gives a number of promising insights into Chinese culture, but by no means can it be considered a landmark." R. F. Spencer
+ Am Anthropol 56:914 O '54 1050w

"Chow deserves our hearty congratulations on having given to the Western reading public and scholarly world this intimate picture of the most discussed class in China. It is to be hoped that Chow will soon prepare all the life-histories in his collection for publication as a separate book." F. L. K. Hsu
+ Am J Soc 59:502 Mr '54 750w

"The life histories are selected presumably for their typification of strategic roles. It is not always easy in such cases to separate the idiosyncratic from the general. Like literary sources they are to be used with caution, but used with caution they are valuable. The book is well worth reading, but it is sad reading, for in it we can see what is lost." M. J. Levy
+ Ann Am Acad 291:205 Ja '54 650w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 S 27 '53 10w

Foreign Affairs 32:682 Jl '54 20w

"While these rather theoretical sketches present a quick interpretative survey, the second half of the book makes available six life-histories which were collected in Yunnan province during 1943-46. These biographies consist largely of statements recorded from the subjects themselves (a scholar, a military commander, a bureaucrat, a merchant, a gangster, and a 'reformer'), with the comments of many others in their communities. The details of their careers and the evaluations of their character and vicissitudes are thus recorded from several different angles. These vignettes have the inimitable detail and pungency obtainable only through interrogation by insiders on the spot, and in themselves make this volume a useful contribution." J. K. Fairbank
+ Pacific Affairs 27:184 Je '54 1000w

FEIKEMA, FEIKE. See Manfred, F. F.

FEININGER, ANDREAS. Face of New York; the city as it was and as it is; photographs [with] text by Susan E. Lyman. [160p] $5 Crown

917.471 New York (city)—Views 54-11181

"A pictorial history. It consists of around a hundred old prints and early photographs depicting various familiar landmarks (the Battery, Broadway, Central Park) at various periods in the city's development and about as many camera studies by Mr. Feininger of the same scenes as they appear today. . . The captions by Miss Lyman, a member of the staff of the Museum of the City of New York, are commendably brief and to the point." New Yorker

Kirkus 22:716 O 15 '54 150w

"An attractive, reasonably priced addition to the iconography of Manhattan Island. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 79:2322 D 1 '54 40w

"Like all poetic photographers, Mr. Feininger is at his best when in love with his subject. Judging from his shots of the Central Park apartment houses and of the Washington Square art exhibit, he does not like to stroll too far north of the Battery. Mr. Feininger's admirers, and he has a great many, may wish he had snapped only his personal preferences. But such as it is, this is a rewarding album, pleasantly combining unobtrusive scholarship and artistic skill." Wayne Andrews
+ N Y Times p50 D 5 '54 320w

"On the whole, a very satisfactory book and, at five dollars, something of a bargain."
+ New Yorker 30:243 D 4 '54 100w

"[This] is thoroughly lively history (it amounts to that) and some magnificent photography in its own right. . . The one fault is that the pages are not numbered, which makes it difficult to find what you want when you want it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p35 D 9 '54 140w

"Unhappily, the pictures are not generally up to the Feininger standard, failing to match often times as well as they should and often, when they least should, allowing present-day New Yorkers to mug right into the camera when they should be trying to be part of the street scene." John Haverstick
Sat R 37:22 D 4 '54 50w

FEININGER, ANDREAS. Successful color photography. 271p il col il $4.95 Prentice-Hall

778.6 Color photography 54-5671

"Preliminary discussions of the physics of light and color introduce an expert's advice on use of color film in creative photography. The practical pointers are valuable but equally important is the author's emphasis on adding artistry to technique." Booklist

Booklist 51:35 S 15 '54

Reviewed by Irving Desfor
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 24 '54 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

"Invaluable and definitive text."

+ Kirkus 22:300 My 1 '54 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 28 '54 300w

Reviewed by Frederick Ruther
Springf'd Republican p9C S 26 '54 210w

Wis Lib Bul 50:206 O '54

FEININGER, ANDREAS. Successful photography. 249p il $3.95 Prentice-Hall

770 Photography—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 53-5731

A home course in the mechanics, techniques and applications of photography. The author is a Life staff photographer. Index.

Booklist 50:395 Je 15 '54

Reviewed by R. V. Hamm
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F 28 '54 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 D '54

Kirkus 21:757 N 15 '53 200w

"Well worth buying for any photographic collection." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 79:777 Ap 15 '54 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 31 '54 40w

"The book covers photography in eight parts—from its principles through its techniques (including processing) to the author's concept of photography's purpose and how the amateur might grasp this purpose. Most amateurs, he feels, expect too much too soon. Mastery of technique is the first requisite and that takes time. There are no shortcuts. If any exist, they probably lie in the reading of such books as this." D. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 7 '54 330w

Reviewed by D. E. Scherman

Sat R 37:19 Mr 27 '54 550w

Springf'd Republican p5D F 21 '54 100w

Wis Lib Bul 50:130 My '54

FEIRER, JOHN LOUIS. Advanced woodwork and furniture making. 400p il $4.95 Bennett

684 Cabinet work. Woodwork 54-7429

"Instructs the amateur who has access to power tools in furniture making, woodfinishing and special projects. Many photographs and diagrams. Index." Bookmark

Bookmark 13:129 Mr '54 20w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 79:559 Mr 15 '54 80w

"The book is suitable for use as a text in vocational school courses and in less formal courses offered to groups of adults interested in handicrafts. It will have some utility also for the basement mechanic who wants a well-illustrated introduction to machine woodworking. Unfortunately for this class of reader there is no discussion of the currently popular combination machines."

FEIRER, J. L.—Continued

+ — N Y New Tech Bks 39:23 Mr '54

FEIS, HERBERT. China tangle; the American effort in China from Pearl Harbor to the Marshall mission. 445p $6 Princeton univ. press

327.73 United States—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations—United States 53-10142

For descriptive note see Annual for 1953.

"This is a brilliant and absorbing dissection of the tangle of misconceptions, cross-purposes, frustrations, and intractable facts in which our wartime China policy became involved. Dr. Feis surveys comprehensively the now voluminous record of how policy was formed and developed, using the archives of the State and War Departments and the papers or testimony of a great number of responsible individuals. The resulting narrative is clearly and vividly written, well documented as a basis for further research, and as purposely dispassionate and objective as seems possible for a mortal historian so close to violent controversies." J. K. Fairbank

+ Am Hist R 59:379 Ja '54 500w

"The theory that a conspiracy within the American government brought about the loss of China finds no support in these carefully written pages. No single American or Chinese is harshly treated, though clashes in concept and personality are not concealed. The note on which the excellent book closes is really its theme. Let us study again the record. But we need not make excuses either to ourselves, the Chinese people, or the rest of the world, for having pursued the purposes in China that we did." C. M. Wilbur

+ Ann Am Acad 292:214 Mr '54 460w

"The China Tangle, though written too closely from notes to have an absorbing narrative quality, is an important contribution to scholarship and to our political life. It certainly rises to the dignity of the author's purpose to 'reconcile us in the task ahead of redeeming our purposes in China.'" M. A. Fitzsimons

+ Commonweal 59:630 Mr 26 '54 900w

"Excellent study."

+ Foreign Affairs 32:344 Ja '54 80w

"One day the Chinese and Russian versions of our debacle will be published. But we may always rely with confidence on this masterly book. Its reliability derives from Feis's wise willingness to judge each episode in its own setting of time and place and thus to affirm that 'even as meadow and mountain look different in every passing hour of day and night, so does the land of historical decision.'" H. F. Graff

+ Pol Sci Q 69:140 Mr '54 380w

Reviewed by Jules Menken

Spec p562 My 7 '54 900w

"Dr. Feis has produced the best available narrative on the shaping of American foreign policy, and has shed new light on the Stilwell imbroglio, the wartime conferences, Sino-Russian relations, and tensions within China."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 9:455 D '53 230w

FELDER, HILARIN, bp. Jesus of Nazareth; tr. by Berchmans Bittle. 353p $4.75 Bruce pub.

232 Jesus Christ—Person and offices 54-87

"The late Bishop Felder, after concluding one of his lectures on the nature and mission of Christ at the University of Fribourg in Switzerland, was approached by a well-known scientist who said: 'We educated people hunger for Christ, and know so little about Him; give us another book which is written more from the positive angle, and which is not too expensive.' This volume, destined for the mature Catholic, is a more than adequate answer to that request. The original work referred to is the famous Christ and the Critics." Commonweal

"It is a masterpiece of Christological literature, notable not only for its erudition but also for a warm, personal devotion to Christ. The only comparable study of Christ, to the best of my knowledge, is Karl Adam's Christ Our Brother."

+ Cath World 179:239 Je '54 250w

"The present volume, ably translated by Father Bittle, is a splendid contribution to apologetic literature on a theme already treated by such authors as Grandmaison, Arendzen, and Vonier. Despite the facility with which the author discusses the personality, messiahship, interior life, divinity, and early historical evaluation of Jesus in Johannine and Pauline Christologies, one still feels that he is most effective in his abbreviated survey of rationalistic criticism." R. P. Mohan

+ Commonweal 59:455 F 5 '54 650w

FELSEN, GREGOR. Anyone for Club scouts? [il. by Paul Galdone]. 150p $2.25 Scribner

54-5923

When the Scott family moved to a new neighborhood they found it a quarrelsome place. Scotty and his parents at once set about forming a Cub Scout Den and the boys soon learned to join in. For ages 8 to 11.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:233 Ap 1 '54 120w

"Will be popular with eight- and nine-year-olds. The story also has same value for a good citizenship unit for this age group." E. C. Alexander

+ Library J 79:992 My 15 '54 50w

"Paul Galdone's lively sketches and Mr. Felsen's fine boy characterizations help to make up for the wooden adults and the promotional tone of the book." Miriam James

N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '54 140w

FENICHEL, OTTO. Collected papers; first series [ed. by Hanna Fenichel and David Rapaport]. 408p $6.50 Norton

131.34 Psychoanalysis (53-13291)

"Otto Fenichel, who died in 1946, was one of [the] group of intrepid explorers in European psychoanalysis in the Nineteen Twenties and Thirties. These essays reflect his alert eye, his friendly fair-mindedness, and his keen ability to put his finger on the central issue in a controversy." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by Waldo Frank

Nation 179:236 S 18 '54 20w

"In these days when so much of the energy of psychotherapeutic movements is unfortunately devoted to the guild functions of defining dogma and erecting stockades, it is refreshing to read papers from one of the most fertile and expansive periods in the history of psychoanalysis." Rollo May

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 31 '54 750w

"In every part of Fenichel's writing, the reader will be impressed by the teaching values inherent in his briefest clinical note, and the broad clinical background on which his psychological and technical essays are built. For students, the technical hints throughout the collection will be most useful. Herein may be observed that blend of intuition and logic which enables one to convert the irrational into reason. To Fenichel, psychoanalysis was both an art and a science, but he never took the extreme position in either direction."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:226 Je '54 200w

FENISONG, RUTH. Miscast for murder. 221p $2.75 Doubleday

54-9484

Detective story.

Booklist 51:134 N 15 '54

"Dramatic elements and fair puzzle, but sadly subpar for this author." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 29 '54
30w

Kirkus 22:414 J1 1 '54 70w

"Miss Fenisong, whose often pleasant mysteries have generally featured Lieutenant 'Grid' Nelson and his household, seems bent in this artful coil rather upon exhibition of his sensibilities than his capacities as a detective. This could be the consequence of having at core a mystery so slight that it vanishes almost as soon as the cast is complete." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 22 '54 120w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 37:37 S 25 '54 30w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, comp. Circus parade; stories of the big top; il. by Lee Ames. 174p $3 Knopf

54-9183

Contents: Jenny and her pets, by Don Lang; Cat man, by Charles Coombs; Tinker of the Big Top, by Esther Van Sciver; Breakfast with a hero, by C. R. Brink; Barnum's first circus, by Laura Benét; Doctor Dolittle's circus, by Hugh Lofting; Oscar at the circus, by Mabel Neikirk; The bear, by Ruth Manning-Sanders; The trained kangaroo, by Bob Barton; "Mis", by Noel Streatfeild; Mr. Tidy Paws, by F. C. Sayers; The daring young man on the flying trapeze, by Edward Fenton.

Reviewed by A. R. Semrad
Chicago Sunday Tribune p40 N 14 '54 80w

Kirkus 22:386 J1 1 '54 60w

"All circus lovers, and they are of all ages, will enjoy this. Recommended for any library looking for additions to its short story or circus collection." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 79:1663 S 15 '54 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 10 '54 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 14 '54 50w

"This is a good book to add to Miss Fenner's collections of stories about horses, baseball, and the sea." F. L. S.

+ Sat R 37:76 N 13 '54 70w

FENTON, CARROLL LANE. Prehistoric world; stories of animal life in past ages; with drawings by the author; color plates by James E. Allen. 126p $2.75 Day 560 Paleontology—Juvenile literature

54-5884

"Descriptive stories of representative animal life from the earliest Paleozoic sea-dwellers down through the Era of Mammals." Library J

Booklist 50:326 Ap 15 '54

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 130w

Kirkus 22:199 Mr 15 '54 80w

"Recommended for all natural history collections." Anne Jackson

+ Library J 79:635 Ap 1 '54 80w

"An easy-reading, brief informational book, this is a very adequate introduction to its subject." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 28 '54 120w

Wis Lib Bul 50:183 J1 '54

FENTON, CARROLL LANE, and FENTON, MILDRED (ADAMS). Our changing weather. 110p il $2.50 Doubleday

551.5 Weather—Juvenile literature 54-5903

Presents the fundamentals of wind, clouds, rain and heat, in simple language for young readers. Illustrated with both photographs and drawings.

Booklist 50:383 Je 1 '54

Bookmark 13:164 Ap '54 10w

"Diagrams and photographs help to make the subject very understandable and rather exciting." R. E. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 13 '54 50w

Kirkus 22:199 Mr 15 '54 100w

"Recommended for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 79:1064 Je 1 '54 70w

"A handsomely made book, its generous pages give good space for the many dramatic photographs, very well printed, and the well drawn diagrams. The text is purely factual, its lure being entirely in the fascinating subjects well chosen and titled in the contents. It may well serve also as an introductory book for teenage or adults."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 16 '54 90w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 30:219 N 27 '54 30w

"Children and parents alike will enjoy this book and profit from reading it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16 '54 50w

"Although designed primarily for junior readers, this well-written book contains so much valuable information that it should be interesting also to many adults." H. B. H.

+ Springfield Republican p7C Je 13 '54 80w
Wis Lib Bul 50:217 O '54

FENTON, CARROLL LANE, and PALLAS, DOROTHY CONSTANCE. Birds and their world; il. by Carroll Lane Fenton. 94p $2.75 Day

598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature 54-10453

A study of birds for grades four to seven. Takes up structure, flight, habitats, ranges, migration, feeding and nesting habits, etc.

"Readable, informative, and well illustrated."

+ Booklist 51:139 N 15 '54

"The authors have cleverly combined stories and explanations in an excellent introductory book." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 14 '54 40w

"It is a compendium of accurate data about birds in general written by two experts." R. E. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 11 '54 30w

FENTON, CHARLES A. Apprenticeship of Ernest Hemingway; the early years. 302p $5 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Hemingway, Ernest 54-7968

"This book is a definition of the process by which Ernest Hemingway transposed ■ conventional talent into an artistic skill. It is based on the premise that his extraordinary position warrants close investigation of a period that lasted no more than half a dozen years. . . The principal instrument of his literary apprenticeship was journalism. Hemingway was a working newspaperman, both intermittently and for long intervals, during the years between October, 1916, and December, 1923. Other factors contributed to the nature and importance of this apprenticeship, including war, travel, sport, and a variety of vocational and literary associations." Pref

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 194:85 J1 '54 60w

Booklist 51:12 S 1 '54

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 16 '54 450w

Kirkus 22:223 Mr 15 '54 200w

"Recommended to public and university libraries—for content, not for style, which is Ph.D. English." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 79:978 My 15 '54 140w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

New Repub 131:19 N 15 '54 1650w

FENTON, C. A.—Continued

"Like many books stemming from graduate work, Mr. Fenton's study rests more on research than critical analysis; the result is that aside from an occasional tendency to prove what is already well known, it is refreshing, and as far as it goes, convincing." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 6 '54 300w

"Mr. Fenton's effort to document the course of Hemingway's apprenticeship is conscientious, thorough, unimaginative, and dull; in short, a perfectly scholarly effort. . . The total effect of Mr. Fenton's labors is really quite a remarkable one. He manages to do with apparent ease what the most hostile among Hemingway's critics have never succeeded in doing even after taking great pains. He has managed to make Hemingway seem dull and his career commonplace. One has continually to remind oneself that the lifeless clod he is writing about is really the author of some of the most important novels in our language. It would appear, therefore, that Hemingway is still safe from scholarship. At least he has succeeded in eluding Mr. Fenton altogether." J. W. Aldridge

— + N Y Times p4 J1 11 '54 1050w

New Yorker 30:102 My 29 '54 240w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 24 '54 650w

"It is continuously informative and interesting, avoiding the sensational, carefully charting out the moves by which the artist was made. . . And the writing, always the writing, some of it wretched, some careless and cynical, but all of it contributing to the hammering out of a memorable style on the anvil of the young man's heavy-duty Corona. Mr. Fenton, in short, has given us a valuable and useful book." Carlos Baker

+ Sat R 37:14 My 29 '54 650w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 6 '54 600w

FERGUSON, GEORGE WELLS. Signs and symbols in Christian art; with il. from paintings of the renaissance. 346p $10 Oxford

704.948 Christian art and symbolism 54-13072

A history of the origin and use of signs and symbols in Christian art, especially Renaissance religious painting. Richly illustrated in color and in black and white. Index and bibliography.

Booklist 51:168 D 15 '54

"Ferguson has brought a dead language back to life. He writes simply and clearly." John Evans

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 19 '54 420w

"Superb volume." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 71:1433 N 24 '54 270w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 2 '54 90w

"An extraordinarily beautiful and useful book. . . For clergymen, both Protestant and Catholic, who are interested in liturgies and symbolism, for architects and artists and for all devotees of art this is an unusually valuable volume."

+ Kirkus 22:723 O 15 '54 270w

"A good book of reference for the general reader." S. L. Faison

+ Nation 179:492 D 4 '54 20w

Reviewed by A. B. Saarinen

+ N Y Times p4 D 5 '54 220w

"The author has merely done a skilful re-writing of the hagiologies and the superficial data of Christian symbolism as commonly available in the Bible and elsewhere, rather than a penetrating, scholarly or resourceful examination of them as related to Renaissance art. In other words, the book is filled with facts obtainable in any good library as well as excellent reproductions of many beautiful and pertinent pictures unobtainable elsewhere; but its title is a generalization which could mislead readers." R. H. Hagan

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 28 '54 450w

Time 64:129 D 6 '54 20w

FERGUSON, FRANCIS. Dante's drama of the mind; a modern reading of the Purgatorio. 232p $4 Princeton univ. press

851.15 Dante Alighieri 52-13147

"Though Dante was very specific about the occupants of both hell and purgatory, it is a radical error, says Ferguson, to read these parts of the Commedia as expressions of private spite or political animosity, and every sensitive reader must agree with him. Going far beyond that rather obvious statement, Ferguson finds in the 'Purgatorio' the clearest exhibition of the pattern of Dante's thought and of the intricate but carefully integrated plan on which the whole poem was constructed, and, further, the structure of his conception of the operation of divine grace and what may be called the psychology of salvation." Christian Century

"I read this book about nine months ago, when it was fresh from the press, and was so impressed by its original treatment of an old theme that I have put it aside to read again when and if I ever return to a serious study of Dante."

+ Christian Century 71:337 Mr 17 '54 170w

"The book lives up to its subtitle. It is truly ■ 'reading'—that is, it combines the immediacy of the lecturer's spoken word with the reflectiveness of the critic. . . The book is rich in incidental essays, all of which are provocative and some of which are valuable indeed." Paolo Milano

+ N Y Times p4 J1 4 '54 440w

"Here and there students of the 'Comedy' may have their reservations. The point stressed rather solemnly by the author that we must keep in mind the distinction between 'Dante speaking as the author and Dante the Pilgrim' seems to me a little unnecessary. . . Such matters, however, are things that trouble the reader only if he regards Mr. Ferguson's essay solely as a work of scholarship. Its intention, as I understand it, is not, however, precisely that, and viewed simply as 'a modern reading of the Purgatorio' I found it illuminating and instructive. It is not, to be sure, easy reading; but the Mountain was not easy to climb either." T. G. Bergin

+ Yale R n s 43:150 autumn '53 700w

FERGUSON, HARVEY. Conquest of Don Pedro. 250p $3.50 Morrow

54-7104

Don Pedro was a frontier town in New Mexico territory in the years just after the Civil war. Leo Mendes, a New Yorker, came there in search of health, and started in business. As time went on he became a respected citizen and married a niece of a wealthy landowner. When he learned that his young wife had fallen in love with a Texan of her own age, he quietly resumed his itinerant life.

Booklist 50:389; 420 Je 15 '54; J1 1 '54

Bookmark 13:237 J1 '54 50w

"Mr. Ferguson knows his New Mexican landscape from the inside, but he scarcely has ■ bowing acquaintance with New Mexico's Catholic people and their language. Such phrases as 'go to confessional' and 'the Virgin of Guadalupe, that purely Mexican deity,' are just two of many ineptnesses." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 179:474 S '54 200w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 27 '54 350w

"Beautifully written, vividly pictorial."

+ Kirkus 22:269 Ap 15 '54 150w

Nation 179:77 J1 24 '54 230w

"It is gratifying that a book like this should, through its selection by the Literary Guild, be assured of a wide audience. In his fine, clear prose, Harvey Fergusson has carved from the raw material of the Southwest a notable work of art, as Willa Cather did in 'Death Comes for the Archbishop.' With 'The Conquest of Don Pedro,' the fourteenth of his published works, one of America's finest writers comes triumphantly into his own." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p1 Je 27 '54 800w

"Mr. Fergusson has long been a leading novelist of the Southwest. This simply told story measures up to the high standards of his other novels. It captures the flavor, character and significance of historic New Mexico." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p4 Je 27 '54 650w

"Mr. Fergusson, ■ chatty, motherly writer, is evidently well informed about the history, manners, and domestic customs of the Southwest."

New Yorker 30:72 J1 10 '54 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 28 '54 550w

"Like any true novel about the Southwest, this one is infused with a mystique of landscape, a vision of some private truth behind the surface reality. Harvey Fergusson is a poet in the way all the best novelists are: he is preoccupied with the intensity and variety of immediate personal experience. So you may say that 'The Conquest of Don Pedro' explores life in New Mexico just after the Civil War. . . But it is life Fergusson explores, not the news-reel of history. That is why this excellent novel belongs alongside 'Death Comes for the Archbishop.'" Lon Tinkle

+ Sat R 37:14 J1 3 '54 750w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5C Ag 22 '54 80w

FERM, VERGILIUS TURE ANSELM, ed.
Protestant credo [contributors: Gaius Glenn Atkins and others]. 241p $5 Philosophical lib.

284 Protestantism 53-7907

Ten essays on the essentials of the Protestant faith. Contents: My Protestant heritage, by G. G. Atkins; The joy of a good conscience, by C. H. Moehlman; Affirmative Protestantism, by F. J. McConnell; The credo of an unregenerate liberal, by M. S. Enslin; Resources and realities, by J. T. McNeill; A Protestant conception of religious authority, by J. C. Bennett; An anthropological approach to the origins of Protestantism, by F. W. Buckler; The promise of Protestantism—whither and whether, by H. N. Wieman; Can Protestantism come of age? by F. H. Ross; Beyond Protestantism, by Vergilius FERM.

Booklist 50:290 Ap 1 '54

"The book as a whole does not seem to fulfill the purpose set forth in the editorial preface. [It] is ■ symposium the ten contributors to which are all well known scholars and writers. There is not a name on the list that is not known to readers who have a reasonable degree of familiarity with recent and current religious literature. The authors who come nearest to giving a comprehensive view of the fundamentals of the middle-of-the-road Protestant position are Gaius Glenn Atkins, Bishop F. J. McConnell and John T. McNeill." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 71:240 F 24 '54 1050w

"Excellent for laymen, and useful too for ministers."

+ Kirkus 21:736 N 1 '53 160w

Springf'd Republican p5C Ja 31 '54 400w

FERMI, LAURA (CAPON) (MRS ENRICO FERMI). Atoms in the family; my life with Enrico Fermi. 267p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Fermi, Enrico

54-12114

Entertaining, informal and informative biography of one of the foremost theoretical physicists of our day, written by his wife, an Italian-Jewess for whose sake partly, Fermi hurriedly left his native land and came to America just before World war II broke out.

"Mrs. Fermi has an extremely interesting story to tell, and she has told it with intelligence, skill, and an attractive common sense of feeling. I shouldn't be surprised if this turns out to be one of the very rare instances in which a University Press publication finds its way to the best-seller list." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 194:88 D '54 600w

Booklist 51:1; 13 S 1 '54

Bookmark 14:56 D '54 30w

"To most of us, great scientists seem more machines than men, minds remote from the laughter or the grief of everyday life. In this simply written, tender, but amusingly unimpressed human picture of her husband, Laura Fermi has made all scientists human." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 17 '54 500w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '54 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 D '54

"Admittedly not an 'inside story,' it is something more than that. By reporting and going beyond many of the incidents that made headlines later, it is an intelligent woman's wise view of the very human things that change our world. Valuable for a lay public."

+ Kirkus 22:613 S 1 '54 300w

"Highly recommended." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 79:1886 O 15 '54 140w

"We get a housekeeping woman's charming chatter of Fermi, his friends, his work. This war-time laboratory was no holiday resort, and the comforts were few—barracks living, isolation, prison-like security regulations, lack of water, and the press of the same people day after day. . . Mrs. Fermi is fine when she is reacting to the people and things around her and pretty awful when she invades politics. I think she does her husband a disservice in interpreting his political views." Earl Ubell

+ Nation 179:467 N 27 '54 950w

"Even if this volume were not so readable, it would still have historic significance in days to come. Imagine how pleased we should be if Christopher Columbus had had a wife along to set down all the revealing human incidents of the voyage; Mrs. Fermi has written a similar record of one of the chief Columboes who have brought all of us irrevocably across strange seas into a new world." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 131:18 N 1 '54 900w

"The Americanization of the Fermi family was fated to proceed in a weirdly un-American climate of secrecy, censorship and surveillance by secret intelligence agents. Laura Fermi's sensitive and tolerant account of this chapter in her life will give readers a warmly subjective experience of the combination military cantonment, frontier town and concentration camp that was Los Alamos."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk ■ p5 O 31 '54 950w

Reviewed by R. E. Lapp

N Y Times p4 O 17 '54 950w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 9 '54 550w

"Laura Fermi, her story told and told well, emerges as a perceptive writer uniquely qualified to comment on some of the human aspects of nuclear research." John Pfeiffer

+ Sat ■ 37:12 O 30 '54 1050w

FERMOR, PATRICK LEIGH. Violins of Saint-Jacques; a tale of the Antilles. 178p il $2.75 Harper

53-10668

"A tale of the creole island of Saint-Jacques in the Antilles. . . It was here that Berthe de Rennes came as a young governess to the children of her cousins, the Count and Countess Serindan. . . But a disaster impends when Josephine, at 18 falls in love with Marcel Sciocca whose oiled hair and gold teeth and thickening body are only the physical indications of an unspeakable vulgarity. Carnival night is celebrated in a flourish of festivity at a fabulous ball in which the grotesque of the masques, the shrill, sweet strains of the Count's violins, the heady exhilaration of champagne and rum lead up to the challenge to a duel and Josephine's escape with Sciocca. And as Berthe follows her by boat, a volcano bursts, the island is burned in the blaze which destroys all save the faint sound of the Count's violins." Kirkus

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 193:72 My '54 220w

Booklist 50:278 Mr 15 '54

Bookmark 13:159 Ap '54 30w

"An island idyll which has wit and grace and a scintillant sense of color, and a rather special fascination."

+ Kirkus 21:449 J1 15 '53 210w

"A lush, heady mixture which has a nice satirical strain. For the discriminating. Author wrote The Traveller's Tree. Highly recommended for medium and large fiction collections." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 79:204 F 1 '54 110w

"It seems to me that Mr. Fermor's realistic fantasy is a perfectly successful small masterpiece." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 20 '53 240w

"It is written with deliberate, sometimes overconscious artifice, scattered with French and native words and adorned with litanies of picturesque names. He has a fine visual imagination, shown to the full in the description of the fiery destruction of St. Jacques as seen from a small schooner. Yet, in spite of the loving erudition, the delight in exotic sights, sounds, faces and dresses and the skill with which he builds up to his grand climax, for me it remained little more than a splendid spectacle." Antonia White

+ New Statesman & Nation 46:738 D 5 '53 240w

"The style is turbaned blackamoor, a decorative concentration upon those picturesque oddities that look romantic in antique shops. It is the right style for a book that gets its best warmth when describing coats of arms, or coaches arriving, or the ancestral livery and gold earrings worn by the Count's Negro servants. . . Mr. Fermor writes so expertly that one wishes his unflinching prettiness of touch were accompanied by the carefree gaiety it seems to need." Gerald Sykes

+ N Y Times p5 F 21 '54 450w

"The Violins of Saint-Jacques is excellent as a nostalgic account of a graceful, colourful, feudal way of life, a surprising survival into this century even in a remote West Indian island; it includes an impressive description of volcanic disaster; but it remains a tale of travel rather than a novel. None of the characters captures our concern and we care little when the island with all its inhabitants finally sinks beneath the sea."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p829 D 25 '53 220w

FERNAU, FRIEDRICH WILHELM. Moslems on the march; people and politics in the world of Islam; tr. from the German by E. W. Dickes. 312p maps $5 Knopf

956 Civilization, Mohammedan. East (Near East)—Politics 53-9463

"The book acquaints the reader first with the historical background of Islam, and then discusses at length the contemporary problems of the Islamic world." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 51:59 O 1 '54

Christian Century 71:1337 N 3 '54 600w

Reviewed by H. B. Ellis

Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 8 '54 170w

Current Hist 27:128 Ag '54 200w

Foreign Affairs 33:157 O '54 30w

Kirkus 22:300 My 1 '54 200w

"It is quite rare today to read a book on the Near East which shows no appreciable bias in its political conclusions, but attempts to let the facts speak for themselves. Mr. Fernau's book seems to me to belong to that rare category." John Mish

+ Library J 79:1049 Je 1 '54 140w

Reviewed by D. M. Friedenberg

New Repub 131:20 Ag 30 '54 1700w

"This is a much better book than one might expect from its title. . . Before he has gone beyond a chapter or two, the discerning reader is certain to make the pleasant discovery that what he has before him is a popular yet thoroughly competent and balanced guide to the problems and prospects of the Moslem world." E. A. Speiser

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 6 '54 750w

"For me the most interesting parts of the book are the accounts of the birth of modern Turkey and Pakistan and of the strong tides that are running in Iran. The chapters on Turkey and Pakistan have a definitive quality. The author writes of Iran only at the flood tide of Mossadegh. He writes of an Egypt in fast transition. He treats the relations of the Arabs and the Israelis superficially. Hence these parts of the book add little to contemporary discussions." W. O. Douglas

N Y Times p10 Je 13 '54 600w

"A good background work." R. N. Frye

+ Sat R 37:20 J1 3 '54 700w

"The author's emphasis is not on Moslem resurgence as such but on the prevailing unrest among the Moslems. Alongside traditional Islamic solidarity there are various divisive factors which are bound up with the dual constitution of Islam as a church and a state. Mr. Fernau is well aware of the resulting strains and stresses, and he has persuasively conveyed that awareness to his readers. Having said this, in justice to the author, this reviewer is now free to register one major reservation. By posing his problem in terms of the over-all Moslem expansion, Mr. Fernau has necessarily placed much weight on the underlying unity of Islam, although he is not blind to the forces that make for disunity, as has just been indicated. I would submit that such an approach is mistaken and misleading." E. A. Speiser

+ Yale R n s 44:144 autumn '54 550w

FERRARI, MRS ERMA PAUL. Careers for you; il. by Clifford Johnston. 160p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

371.425 Vocational guidance 53-10007

Information on selecting a career for high school age. Partial contents: Is it worth your life?; Will you suit the job?; Will the job suit you?; How much education?; Where to find out about occupations; Where are the jobs?; The employer has his say; Careers in church vocations; Christian faith on the job. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 50:186 Ja 1 '54

"The author has had long experience in work with young people, particularly in vocational counselling. For Protestant young people and their leaders."

Kirkus 21:731 N 1 '53 120w

"Sound and comprehensive vocational guidance information. . . Recommended for school and public libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 79:76 Ja 1 '54 60w

FERRISS, HUGH. Power in buildings; an artist's view of contemporary architecture; drawings by [the author]. 102p $8.50 Columbia univ. press

724.91 Architecture—U.S. Architecture, Modern 53-12306

An American "artist of architecture," who is a disciple of Piranesi, has brought together some of his drawings of famous buildings and explained in the text his theory of power in architecture.

Reviewed by Alfred Mell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 15 '53 200w

"Affirmation is the mood of the holiday season, and this stimulating book by Hugh Ferriss, artist and architect, is in tune with the season." Herbert Lippmann

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 27 '53 370w

"A book of sketches and comments [which] will appeal to all kinds of professionals who have long been delighted by Ferriss' pencil and by his gift of gab. . . [Ferriss] is so greatly interested in 'powerful' architecture that if he tried to sketch a birdhouse it would end up looking like Boulder Dam. Now the trouble is, of course, that most modern architecture (of the post-war vintage, at least) is not like that at all. Most modernists undoubtedly feel that buildings like Lever House, the younger Saarinen's General Motors Center, or Mies van der Rohe's glass towers in Chicago call for the delicate draftsmanship of a Matisse or a Paul Klee rather than the flamboyance of a new Piranesi. . . Still—there is little question that he is the most impressive artist in this particular game. And even if his drawings impress rather than move you his anecdotal history of the past three decades of architecture in the United States is full of quiet fun." Peter Blake

+ — N Y Times p43 S 27 '53 500w

"Challenging and unusual volume."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 10:37 Mr '54 240w

FERSEN, NICHOLAS. Tombolo. 241p il $3 Houghton

53-9252

"At the end of World War II a conglomeration of human derelicts—gangsters, black-marketeers, prostitutes, and German and American Negro deserters—used Tombolo, an almost impassable area of marshy, forest and quicksand in Tuscany, as a hideout. This novel depicts with brutal, shocking vividness the incredible bestiality and utter depravity of these dregs of humanity." Library J

"A violent, somewhat disjointed narrative, an episode of the later days of the Italian campaign of 1944-45." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 4 '54 300w

Kirkus 22:41 Ja 15 '54 210w

"Powerful, tensely dramatic, stark realism, but buy with discrimination." R. W. Henderson

Library J 79:450 Mr 1 '54 140w

"Several times 'Tombolo' approaches the status of a good novel; it never quite attains it."

Nation 178:408 My 8 '54 180w

"Mr. Fersen is a most promising novelist. Perhaps he will have to cut down on the melodrama some day, and also on his occasional cardboard characters like the German captain. But with this particular subject neither is very damaging." Mary Scrutton

+ — New Statesman & Nation 48:302 S 11 '54 200w

"Situations such as that were not uncommon throughout Europe at the close of the war, and Mr. Fersen has painted a valid picture."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 28 '54 320w

"Though Mr. Fersen's command of English is admirable, he is not sufficiently at home in the American idiom to write a novel in which most of the dialogue is among Southern and Mid-western American Negroes, and he often has them mouthing a hybrid patois that is at times ludicrously unreal. As a result of this, and of the naive oversimplifications by which he builds all his characters, the story seldom becomes more than a gratuitous portrayal of brutality." Jerome Stone

— + Sat ■ 37:32 Ag 28 '54 300w

Reviewed by Kingsley Amis

Spec p267 Ag 27 '54 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p605 S 24 '54 270w

FESCHOTTE, JACQUES. Albert Schweitzer, an introduction; with two addresses by Albert Schweitzer [tr. by John Russell]. 130p $2 Beacon press

B or 92 Schweitzer, Albert 54-13056

"The author, long a close friend of Schweitzer, gives over the first half of the book to a short biography of the philosopher, theologian, musician, and doctor. He then undertakes a summary of the thought of Schweitzer, which he defines as an ethical mysticism based on a reverence for life. Two recent addresses by Schweitzer [Childhood recollections of old Colmar; The problem of ethics in the evolution of human thought] are appended." Booklist

Booklist 51:106 N 1 '54

"His plan, like that of Seaver, is to devote the first half of his book to biography and the second to a summary of Dr. Schweitzer's work as theologian and musician. So far as the first half goes this method does very well. . . When M. Feschotte turns to Dr. Schweitzer's thought, however, he is much less successful. The precis of the ideas behind The Quest of the Historical Jesus is not only inadequate but, to some extent, misleading. This fault is partly rectified by the inclusion of one of Dr. Schweitzer's own essays on the developing place of ethics in human thought, but the reader is left with the feeling that this book would have accomplished more of its purpose had it concentrated on a sympathetic interpretation of the subject's life."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Ag 6 '54 450w

FESTINGER, LEON, and KATZ, DANIEL, eds. Research methods in the behavioral sciences: contributing authors: Robert C. Angell [and others]. 660p $5.90 Dryden

301.01 Social sciences—Methodology 53-12195

"This advanced textbook examines current procedures of research in those social and psychological disciplines which are becoming known as the behavioral sciences, the sciences concerned with the study of man in his social relations. Throughout, the book intends to deal with the logic of method rather than with isolated techniques. Since the contributors are almost all social psychologists, they dwell, naturally enough, on the problems, data, and procedures of their own field, with occasional attention to sociology, and virtually none to the materials distinctive of social anthropology." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

"This is the right book at the right time. With the aid of some sixteen authors, Festinger and Katz have produced an excellent volume and an intriguing textbook. There comes a time in any human endeavor when it becomes necessary to evaluate the available results, to summarize the technique thus far developed, and to meet the existing problems. The authors of Research Methods do not attempt a survey of research up to date in the behavioral sciences, but they do justice both to the evaluation of the available research methodology as well as to the realization of methodological problems." Jiri Nehnevajsa

+ Am Soc R 19:230 Ap '54 700w

U S Quarterly Bk R 10:102 Mr '54 300w

FEUILLE, FRANK. Cotton road. 320p $3.50
Morrow

54-10303

Fictional account of a little known phase of the Civil war. The South had cotton to sell, but could not get it thru the Union blockade; the English mills were idle for want of raw cotton. This story describes how a crippled Southern lad joined forces with a young Englishman to take a wagon train over the Cotton Road to the last possible weak spot in the northern blockade.

Booklist 51:132 N 15 '54

Bookmark 14:34 N '54 20w

"This book sheds light on a little known chapter of history; it is a pleasant and readable if somewhat juvenile adventure."
+ Kirkus 22:548 Ag 15 '54 180w

"Undistinguished writing. Quite suitable for young adults." J. L. Ross

Library J 79:1890 O 15 '54 70w

"This historic event is little known even in Texas and has been overlooked by the writers of the state's schoolbooks. At last, Frank Feuille, who heard the facts from his grandfather, has told the story in a first-class novel that combines the flavor of pure history and the excitement of high romance and international intrigue." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p41 N 28 '54 280w

FIELD, S. S. American drink book. 282p il
$6.50 Farrar, Straus

663.2 Liquors. Wine and wine making
53-9118

"Traces the drinking habits of Americans from the time when rum, fetched up from the West Indies by windjammer, was the staple tippie of our male citizenry, through the change to whisky, which made profitable use of our home-grown grain brought in by Conestoga wagons from Kentucky, to the modern days of mixed concoctions served in cocktail lounges to mixed company. History is called ■ witness that what was said and done in taverns and ordinaries had a not inconsiderable influence in producing the set of rebels who won our independence, and that British restrictions on free trade in rum were no less responsible than the tax on tea for the loss to King George of this part of his dominions." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja ■ '54
260w

Kirkus 21:419 Jl 1 '53 100w

"What ■ contribution to Americana and what suggestions for food and drink! . . . The style is half of this useful volume. But it is a book to linger over." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 78:2217 D 15 '53 30w

"A handsome volume, variously and amusingly illustrated. . . . Take it all together, here is a book well worth the kindly attention of untirred drinking men." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p19 D 20 '53 400w

"The subject of wines is for the most part well and accurately covered. . . . As for faults, the volume has two in particular. The author is inclined to be cute . . . and it is weighted to an eyebrow-lifting degree toward the subject of rum." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 15 '54
480w

FINE, AARON. School bus picnic; il. by [the author]. [30p] $2.25 Holt

54-5737

Picture-story book about the day the bus broke down on the way to school so the children had a picnic while Gus, the driver, and a neighboring farmer fixed the bus.

Kirkus 22:59 F 1 '54 50w

"This lighthearted story with its blue, green, and yellow illustrations can easily be read by second- and some first-graders. Good, too, for reading aloud." E. C. Alexander

+ Library J 79:780 Ap 15 '54 70w

"The text and illustrations are carefully blended, with words turning corners and going up and down hill alongside the yellow and blue bus. It's a technique that may well lure a lazy reader to turn each page eagerly. The illustrations, liberally splashed with yellow, blue and green, have a touch of the freshness and simplicity that is more often found in children's paintings than in those by adults." Pat Clark
+ N Y Times p28 My 9 '54 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 16 '54
30w

Springf'd Republican p11C My ■ '53
30w

FINEBERG, SOLOMON ANDHIL. Rosenberg case: fact and fiction. 159p $2.50 Oceana

